We are sorry to record the death of one of the emigrants, Mr. Daniel Wade, of Buxton, C. W., who expired very suddenly on Friday night last, of disease of the heart.

Among the passengers who sailed on Monday, was J. W. Duffin and family, of Geneva, and J. D. Harris of Cleveland. The city dailies have been making quite a time about this matter, but lest there be any mistake about it, we will say that we learned of but two men from this city, who left in that company.

To the Ministers of the New England Annual Conference of the A. M. E. Zion Church.

According to the regulation of the General Conference, the Superintendent of the First District will commence his parochial tour through the New England Conference District, in November, as follows:

Boston, Nov. 1st—from thence visit the other places in the following order: Nantucket, New Bedford, Providence, Worcester, Springfield, Hartford, Middletown, New Haven, Bridgeport. If it is essential for the Superintendent to visit any of the Home Mission appointments, the Missionaries in charge of these appointments are requested to inform him by letter, directed in care of Rev. J. F. Loyd, Providence, R. I., before Nov. 15th, or not any later, as it will be inconvenient to make any arrangement after the above date.

Each Elder or Preacher in charge are particularly requested to give immediate notice to their congregation, and be prepared to meet him in accordance to the order of the General Conference.

It being impossible to give the precise date when he will be at each place, the Elders or Preachers in charge will be further informed by letter, at least one week previous to his visit, in season to give further notice to their congregations.

Wm. H. Bishop,
Superintendent of the First District of the A. M. E. Zion Church.

Newark, Oct. 21st, 1861.

The Gerrit Smith Lands to be Peopled.

The caption heading the present article, though perhaps already familiar to most of our readers, comprizes more real importance than is fully realized by many whom it should mostly interest. It is a fact, unfortunately to us, not heeded, that the inflow of emigration into this country is making day by day, every foot of land more and more valuable, giving a corresponding power and importance to the enterprising foreigner, whilst we, tardy and inactive, suffer the means within our reach to pass from our hands to add a weight in the scale that balances against us.

It is a fact that we are submitting to unnecessary embarrassments, prolonging and augmenting our complaints, whilst fertile fields, rich, abounding in their seasons with earth's choicest blessings, are quietly passing from our possession into that of more grateful and willing hands, yielding to their owners the coveted privileges and enjoyments to which we have too long been unfortunate strangers. Now, devotion to a principle has led us to follow up the prospect of that solid improvement upon these lands which are necessary to secure that basis of success which we believe must form the essential character of the colored man in this country—independence. In doing so, we have discovered, to our regret, that large tracts have been bought up for taxes by watchful and enterprising Vermonters, who are crossing over and settling in Essex and Franklin counties upon excellent farms, lost to us by our indifference, occasioned by the most deplorable ignorance. "Why," says our correspondent in Essex, "a person that has not visited this place within the last six years will scarcely recognise it to-day—the Vermonters are cute and prompt; they watch for bargains, steal timber, and are making the forest fairly vocal with the axe and the plow."

Whilst the spirit of improvement gives us joy we are not anxious that these lands shall be peopled to our detriment and loss. If it be true that they are valuable to them they are so to us—and it is for this reason that we have determined to urge this most important enterprise before the people. The fact is the "Gerrit Smith Lands is to be peopled;" if not by us who have held them so long to no profit, why then by others whose enterprise has directed their eyes to these places, and whose wise Providence is grasping every advantage in this country to strengthen and build up an influence in this country, however seemingly remote may be the period of its consummation.

We have devoted much of our time and means to the promotion of this object, and we do not regret it. We shall continue to do so, so long as the cheerful expression which has encouraged our hope shall continue ours. We shall stop short of no reasonable sacrifice which its successful pursuit may demand to prove the sincerity of our interest until the aromatic woods and picturesque mountains of the Adirondacs, so justly termed by the "Tribune's" correspondent, the Switzerland of America, shall become musical with sounds of peaceful industry where once the nimble deer desported and the lordly beast prowled for his prey.

MR. BEECHER ON FREMONT AND CONTRABANDS

On Sabbath morning the following remarks of the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher were made, not in the sermon, but upon giving out a notice of meetings of ladies in the congregation, for the purpose of providing hospital stores for our armies, and particularly with reference to furnishing stores for the hospitals of St. Louis:

The poor West seems destined to neglect. We remember the fate of Kansas, when the cause of liberty was imperiled there. And now, in turn, the same cause hangs in suspense in Missouri. When right and justice are to be established, it would almost seem as if that were a reason for our Government to disown them. And I cannot but express my solemn conviction that both our Government, and in a yet greater degree the community, have done great injustice to the cause in Missouri, in the treatment which has been bestowed upon that noble man, Gen. Fremont. I have narrowly watched the course of things, not unacquainted with the reality of facts in the case; and it is my settled judgment that, partly from private ambition, partly from political reasons, and partly from calculating aspirations of rivals, the most unjust influences have been permitted to issue against this heroic man. My faith in his administrative ability is not a whit less than in 1856. For aught that we can see he is second in military capacity to none of the able generals that are now serving their country. It has wisely been thought not fit for public journals to criticise the administration of our generals, or the plans of the Administration, in advance, nor until the whole results have been disclosed. It is impossible for men remote from the field, ignorant of the mingled political and military reasons that shape conduct, ignorant of the trials and difficulties of the limitations and restraints of armies, to judge correctly or criticise justly. But why is this moderation observed toward Gen. McClellan, and toward Gen. Anderson, in Kentucky, and his successors, but vociferously violated in the single instance of Gen. Fremont? For the Army of the Potomac no stint is given to means and implements. Missouri, if not neglected, is yet tardily supplied with a penurious hand. Every step is made matter of many-voiced criticism in a spirit that shows that there is a foregone judgment, and that men are anxious to find reasons for purposes which they have already formed. Either let Gen. Fremont alone to work out the proper results of his campaign, or, if it is proper to subject him, at each step, to such abusive investigation and report, let the same liberty be indulged in the case of our other Generals. Not one word of the Army of the Potomac, and its noble leader; not one word of the Army of Western Virginia, and its indefatigable and cautious General; not one word of the management of affairs in Kentucky, under the administration of the noble Anderson, who has laid his health upon the altar of fidelity to his country; but against Fremont incessant, insidious, and unreasonable complaint. It is a shame; and there ought to be an indignation in the community that shall bring this trifling with the public interests committed to this man's hands to an end. His field is larger than that of any other army. His means are less. He has had neither the sympathy nor the help that he had a right to expect. And if this campaign shall fail in his hands, it is my solemn conviction that the public interests will have been sacrificed for the sake of putting out of the way a dangerous rival.

In the evening, prefacing a collection for the American Missionary Association, which was to be specifically employed for the religious and secular instruction of the one thousand eight hundred emancipated slaves in and around Fortress Monroe, Mr. Beecher said:

General Butler called them "contrabands," and all people seemed relieved, and snapped at the expression as if it was a very felicitous thing. My friends, it is one of the great disadvantages of the position in which the North are placed that they dare not say "Freemen" and "Liberty" in this conflict. The South have this particular advantage; that they know that they are fighting for Slavery, and say so. They are not complicated in that regard. Their issue is simple, and, though selfish and monstrous, they have the advantage which comes from simplicity and manly frankness. The North are in a position in which they do not dare to say that they are fighting for liberty. We are. We are not fighting directly for emancipation; but we are fighting for that Constitution and for those institutions which we believe will inevitably bring liberty, in the process of time. I am well aware of the embarrassments in which government is placed. I would not say a word, nor exert an influence, to complicate matters, or make their fearful responsibility more onerous. I would lighten their hands by every just, generous sentiment, and every charitable construction; but I must be allowed, and I think it is proper and right, to say that it is not inconsistent with the soundest policy, and with the truest construction of duty, for the President, for the members of his cabinet, and for the generals of the army, to say that they shall give every constitutional advantage in this struggle to liberty, and that the animus with which they go forth is the maintainance of Constitutional Laws, because they embody essentially the spirit of liberty. Every attempt to dodge, and equivocate, and get around this question, every attempt to be sensitive in favor of Slavery, and to make allowances in that direction, is very bad policy, to say nothing about justice and higher considerations. And we never shall carry this conflict victoriously through until men cease to have the sacred words of liberty stick in their throat, and make long circuits and periphrases when they come to that question; and I thank God that there is one man who dares to speak out upon it. That man, with whose name the cause of liberty was so intimately associated in the campaign of 1856, seems destined still to be identified with the progress of that sacred cause. He alone, of all our generals, seems to have had that far-seeing wisdom which springs from the very spirit and love of liberty. How simple and clear are his utterances. He alone dares to call slaves by their own odious name—Slaves—a word which the Constitution would not utter, and which men sensitive of shame do not love to speak. He alone has declared that the slaves of men found in arms against their country shall become freemen. Mark it: Not, with verbal dexterity, "contrabands;" not men without name, anomalous, nondescript; but, as if inspired from on high with the very spirit of religion, and acting according to its most undoubted inspirations, Fremont has declared that slaves shall become free men. The heart and conscience of the whole North responded to that touch. Therefore Fremont will never be forgiven.

Letter from Paterson.

Paterson, Oct. 19th, 1861.

Mr. Editor:

Your paper, with its pleasant face, comes regularly "bobbin around" among the people of this vicinity. Its pictures of Anglo-African and Anglo Caucassian Civilization in New Jersey, though the colors are spread pretty thick, are things we know how to appreciate. So

"Lay on Macduff,
And d——d be him that cries enough."

After considerable trouble Zion Church is once more favored with regular services, and the Rev. Brothers Treadwell and Scudder have been instrumental in drawing full houses. The Sabbath School connected with the church is under the superintendence of Mr. J. Stephens; Miss J. Jackson, and other self-denying ladies, assisting as teachers.

In the death of Mr. Harry Thompson, an aged citizen, for many years a member of the Zion, who died on the 8th inst., the church has lost one of her most consistent members. His uncomplaining course during years of affliction, his peaceful disposition, and the regularity of his attendance at divine service, were often the subject of remark, and won the universal respect of all who knew him.

We have also been called upon to mourn the loss of Miss Louisa, daughter of Mr. Jas. Ackerman. She was nearly fourteen years of age, and was a girl of remarkable intelligence and great promise.

Occasional.

THE BRIDGE STREET SABBATH SCHOOL CONCERT AND EXHIBITION.

An immense audience greeted the children on Tuesday evening, at their exhibition.

The pulpit was filled by the Rev. Messrs. White, C. H. Thompson, Samuel M. Giles of New Bedford and R. H. Cain, Pastor of the Church. The children were very tastefully clad, and did all they could to make the affair a success, and if the amount of applause bestowed by the congregation was an evidence that their efforts were appreciated, then we may pronounce their endeavors triumphant.

Much of the credit of the exhibition rightfully belongs to the Rev. Mr. Cain, for his labors to advance the children, has been unremitting.

While it may seem invidious to make a distinction in the performance of the children, yet we must say that the efforts of Master W. F. Branaugh, Master A. and Miss C. Wilson, Miss M. A. Brown, Miss C. Anderson, Master W. Jones, Miss R. Smith, and Master H. Wilson, who each read original compositions, were very fine.

The speaking and solo singing of Miss Brown and Master Branaugh, were greeted with the most tremendous applause.

After the exhibition, about four hundred of the audience passed to the basement, where the ladies had prepared a very fine repast. Never have we witnessed a more agreeable company, everybody seemed to be in the best possible humor, and between the marching and singing of the older portion of the audience and the childish sports of the younger, everything passed off as pleasantly as could be desired.

The only drawback, perhaps, was that the ladies had not prepared a sufficiency of edibles, for the audience made clean work of them; indeed we did not know but something serious would happen, so anxious was the struggle of the gentlemen for the apple dumplings.

THE COLORED ORPHAN ASYLUM.

We spent a few moments at this noble institution, a few days ago, and were much pleased at the facts that we learned while there.

The number of children there now, numbers 245, which is quite an increase on all former reports.

The health of the children is remarkably good, there being no cases of illness among them at present. There has been but, three deaths in the institution since September, 1860, and one of these was sick at the time he was admitted.

The amount of bread eaten by the children, each week, amounts to upwards of a ton. Of beef they eat one ton per month, but the amount of fish, vegetables, &c. destroyed by these little ones, we did not learn.

The amount of monies accruing to the Asylum from various sources, is about sixteen thousand dollars, annually.

SAD ACCIDENT.

Mrs. Mary P. Taylor was burned to death on Friday night last, at her residence, No. 71 Sullivan Street.

The manner in which this accident occurred, cannot be explained, as the deceased raised no alarm.

She was a member of J. W. B. Smith Tabernacle, of the Order of Love and Charity, a large number of the members of which, attended her funeral.

Gen. Lane in Defence of the Kansas Brigade.

The following is an extract from a speech made in Leavenworth, by Gen. Lane, on the evening of the 9th inst., who, on coming forward, was received with rapturous applause. He began by saying:

I have come here to-night not to make a speech to you, but to have a plain talk about Kansas matters, and matters relating to the best interests of the country. This is a period in our history when every man is called upon to act and to act cautiously. It is not expected that every man will join the army, but those who remain at home are not to forget that they may be called upon to act for those in the field. I ask every Kansas man who is here to give his protection to the Kansas soldier. I am uttering no words for myself—it is for the soldier who fights your battles.

Two months ago the Kansas Brigade was organized. I was put at the head of it with the respect, the confidence, aye, the love, of every man in that command. Every day since it entered the field it has been actively engaged for the protection of Kansas and the Government. It has not been whipped—it has not surrendered. Why is it that these creatures at the Fort sneer at it? They abuse the Kansas Brigade because it has not surrendered to the enemy. They sneer at the Kansas Brigade because we have never engaged the enemy without whipping them like the devil.

Go to Nevada, where 56 of the Kansas Brigade met and defeated 200 rebels; go to Ball's Mills, where 130 Kansans whipped 35 traitors; go to Dry Wood, where 400 men under Montgomery for two hours fought 7,000 of the enemy, and drove them back from your soil; go to Morristown, the deathbed of our gallant Johnson, where 400 of the Kansas Brigade drove 600 traitors from their entrenchments; go to Osceola, one of the strongest natural points in Southern Missouri, we met a greatly superior force, beat it, and took and destroyed more than $1,000,000 worth of property. Go to these fields, and tell me why the Kansas Brigade is sneered at.

Our sin is that we have never been whipped. The brigade is conspired against. The last Sabbath was desecrated by a conspiracy at the Fort, between Robinson and Prince, to destroy it. They were guilty of treason baser than Price. [Great cheering.] I have come here to talk plainly to you. [Cries of "That's right," "Let us have it."] What is the charge they make against the Kansas Brigade? We are jayhawkers.

I stated in Washington that the Institution of Slavery could not survive the march of the Federal army—that there would be an army of one color marching into the Slave States, and another color marching out. I said further, that confiscation must follow treason, as thunder follow's the lightning's flash.

Confiscated property goes to the Government, and this rule has been adopted by my brigade. If we are jayhawkers, we are jayhawking for the Government.

Now if—oh! the dirty puppy—if that creature Prince, or that still dirtier creature Robinson, can find an instance of a violation of this rule in my command, the guilty man shall be hung.

But they say we steal slaves—great God! Lieut.-Col. Blunt, of Montgomery's regiment, has just returned from the interior of Missouri, and they tell me he comes back with more slaves than white men. ["Good," "Good," and cheers.] Secessionists get no slaves from the Kansas brigade. When a Union man comes to my camp to recover slaves, I tell him to look upon the camp as naked ground. "Resort to the same measures that you would if I were not here." If he fails to recover his slaves we give him a certificate—as a voucher to the Government—that such a man lost a slave by the march of the Kanas brigade.

Slavery disappears before my brigade. [Applause.] I guess that's true. [Renewed applause.] But it disappears on the principle I have laid down. I venture to say if I were to tell Montgomery or Blunt, or Stewart or Williams or Bowles, "you shan't take those slaves," the reply would be—"slaves are men, and you shan't make me nigger-catcher for traitors." [Great cheering.]

Is there a man here who would act as slave-catcher for Price? I wonder if that dirty dog Prince would do it? This is the sin, this is the charge against us. We march to crush out treason, and let Slavery take care of itself. If they don't want Slavery to perish, let them lay down their arms, or do the other thing—keep Lane's Brigade out of Missouri. [Rapturous applause.]

In my opinion, this war will never be successfully carried out so long as an army marches through Slave States as a boat goes through a flock of ducks. They fly up on its approach, and nestle as soon as it has passed. The boat is safe, and so are the ducks. When you march through a State, you must destroy the property of the men in arms against the Government—destroy, devastate, desolate. This is war.

Take the Union man by the hand, but lay waste the property of traitors. Why is so much sympathy shown to traitors, and none to Union men? Hundreds and hundreds of Union men have followed the Kansas Brigade to escape the clutches of traitors. Did you ever hear this puppy Prince say a word about Major Dean, who was robbed and driven from his home by traitors?

Not a word of sympathy for such men. But let a slaveholder lose a nigger and the very air resounds with cries for the return of the fugitive. ["Shame, Shame."] Now I'll tell you what I want of you. We'll do your fighting. We'll try and not surrender. We ask the people of Kansas to stand between us and the cowardly traitors who stand in our war

Why, here's a paper—great God, that it should come from Kansas—The State Journal—what a pity that it should be published in Lawrence—it says that my Adjutant, Marcus J. Parrott, is getting up a petition to dissolve the Kansas Brigade—to dissolve the only force that can protect Kansas. I venture to say that if Mark is industrious he can get every secessionist in Missouri to sign it. I cannot believe it, but if he has I pity him. [Laughter.] But I do not believe it. Besides, the evidence is against it, for I never knew this Lawrence Journal to publish one truth.

But the Kansas Brigade is to be dissolved because it built forts and organized forces at Humboldt, Lerop, Neosho Falls, Verdigris, Walnut Creek, Fall River, Turkey Creek—seven forts on your frontier, where the people, instead of being stampeded and driven from the State can rally for your defence.

Is it because Matthews invaded Humboldt? Four days before that raid I ordered a fort to be built there, but for some reason it was not done. But who followed Matthews and killed him? My order book will show that I ordered Lieut.-Col. Blunt to pursue Matthews to Arkansas, and he did pursue him till he slew him. Blunt marched down into the Cherokee nation; he followed Matthews to his den and killed him.

AN EXAMPLE MADE.

We find the following account of the manner in which disturbers of religious worship are treated in Elmira, in the Daily Gazette, of that place:

Willis Shrewsberry, an inhabitant of Slabtown, was arrested a few days ago on a warrant issued by the Police Justice, on complaint of the Trustees of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, located in Slabtown aforesaid. The prisoner when arrested was taken before his honor, G. L. Davis, Esq., (the Police Justice being at the time sick and unable to attend to business.) The complaint set forth that the prisoner stood in the door-way of the church while the congregation were in the act of prayer, and commenced cursing and swearing in the most profane manner. Being remonstrated with by the members, he declared his determination to keep on swearing and they might continue on praying. The prisoner called a jury, and the evidency substantiated the complaint. The jur found him guilty, and the court imposed on him a fine of $20 and imprisonment in the county jail thirty days.

HOW GREAT THE CHANGE.

The Erie (Pa.) American of the 8th inst. says:—

John Brown, jr., was in town last week, accompanied by a few stalwart recruits.—He is a noble, genial and accomplished man—with a heart warm and throbbing for all humanity. Like his lamented father he hates the accursed tyranny in which his father fell a sacrifice. How rapidly we make history! Two short years ago, John Brown invaded Virginia to put down the Slave-power by force of arms. He was overcome by Federal force arrayed against him, was put to an ignominous death, and the North said Amen! Now the armies of the North, tens of thousands strong, invade Virginia for substantially the same purpose—to put down the rebellious Slave-power! John Brown, jr., goes to complete the work of his father—and the son is approbated as the father was reprobated! Henry A. Wise took the life of John Brown, sr., and the people applauded Wise—John Brown, jr., seeks the life of Henry A. Wise and the people applaud Brown! What was Treason in the Father is Patriotism in the Son! The Government commissions the son to do what, but a few months ago, it assisted in hanging the father for attempting to do! Two years ago the Government helped Wise hunt Brown—now it empowers Brown to squelch Wise! Slavery drives the people to rapid conclusions, don't it!

Captain Brown's company is now more than filled, and is in camp at Cleveland. Marching orders are daily expected.

BOSTON ITEMS.

Professor W. T. Johnson gave a John Brown exhibition at the Joy Street Church, on the evening of the 15th instant, which was well attended and gave general satisfaction.

On the same evening at Rev. Mr. Grimes Church there was a sacred tableaux, which was witnessed by a very respectable audience.

At Mr. Grimes Church on the evening of the 16th, there was quite a lively time occasioned by statements of returned emigrants from Hayti, who had been invited to address the people of Boston in regard to said island. Owing to a discussion springing up the meeting was adjourned to the the evening of the 22d.

A Bazaar was held during the week past in the basement of Mr. Grimes Church, for the benefit, we believe, of said Church.

BALTIMORE AFFAIRS.

A colored man was rescued from the police by members of the Boston Artillery, on the 6th inst. He had been arrested for striking an officer, it is charged, who was about conveying him off, for singing and hurraing with the soldiers.

Twelve colored men escaped from Campbell's jail, on Pratt Street, on the 14th inst., by seizing the colored jailor and locking him up in a small room. Through the aid of Col. Creager of the 2nd Maryland regiment and others, they were recaptured.

A coroner's inquest was held on the body of Rebecca Dembey, on the 16th inst., at her residence in Orchard St. Verdict: "Death from natural causes." Deceased was subject to hemorrhage of the lungs and heart disease.

On the evening of Oct. 4th a colored man in the employ of James Price, milk dealer, visited Jones' Falls, near the Belvidere Bridge for the purpose of fishing. By an accident, he fell into the water, and was drowned. An inquest was held, and the jury rendered a verdict of accidental drowning.

Perry Kennard, convicted on the charge of rape, was hung at Towsontown on Friday, the 11th inst.

Execution of a Female Slave at Annapolis.—A member of the Massachusetts Twenty-first writes to the Worcester "Spy' as follows:

On Friday last we witnessed the public execution of Mary Naylor, a mulatto, for the alleged murder of her master nearly a year ago. It was half-past twelve when the procession issued from the jail, the condemned woman leaning upon the arm of the sheriff; the jailor and her two spiritual advisers, who had remained with her the greater part of the night, accompanied her to the gallows. She ascended the steps of the scaffold with composure and firmness, and after prayer had been offered, she spoke to the crowd as follows:

"On the scaffold I stand, to-day, convicted on December 10th last, of murder of my good master, and on July 13th, 1861, my death penalty was signed. Now, my friends, before God and man, I declare I am innocent! My master raised me more as a daughter than a servant. I would have rather died than murdered him. My master taught me how to pray, for he was a man born of the spirit of God—a pious man. The act of which I am condemned I never done, nor did I ever think of doing such a deed. Oh no! he was good and kind to me! I look to my blessed Saviour and my God, for he knows that I am as innocent of this crime as the angels in heaven. This mystery is as much a one to me as to you. I have said what is true, and I want you all, and the world, to know that I am innocent. Now, farewell."

She then, with two ministers, sang a hymn, her voice being distinctly heard above theirs: and bidding the sheriff and jailor good bye, the rope was adjusted, the white cap drawn, and in a moment Mary Naylor was launched into eternity.

"Ode to Negro Liberty."—The pastor of the church in Dayton, Ohio, where Vallandigham attends, the other day gave out the beautiful hymn:

> My country, 'tis of thee,
> Sweet land of liberty,
> Of thee I sing.

Whereupon, Vallandigham wrote the pastor a scurrilous letter, roundly abusing him for introducing an "ode to negro liberty" into religious exercises.

ATTEMPTED INSURRECTION IN MISSOURI.

A special dispatch to the St. Louis "Republican," dated Jefferson City, the 7th inst., says:

"Information has been received here, that about three weeks ago, a slave insurrection was attempted in Jasper county, and that about 85 of the negroes were killed, and a number of others were to be hanged. The discovery of the plot proved that the insurrection was wide-spread, and that the slaves intended to murder their masters and perpetrate all manner of barbarities.

Mr. J. Willis Menard will please accept our thanks for his kind offer to get up a club for our paper in Chatham, C. W. We would suggest that his co-operation with our able correspondent, Mrs. Mary A. S. Cary, who has already sent us several subscribers, would propably result in giving us a fine list in that town.

Army Correspondence.—Interesting letters have reached us, too late for this number, from our correspondent, G. E. S., Bladensburg, Md., and J. V. Gibbons, now at Darnestown, Md. They will appear in our next.

SUMMARY.

The Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph says:

We learn from the best authority that John May, a young, light-colored mulatto, who formerly worked in Yancey's barber shop, and who went as cook in Capt. McNulty's cavalry company, and with them captured at Lexington, Mo., has been carried off and sold as a slave down on Red River, Arkansas. This intelligence comes in a letter from him to his friends in this place. The "peculiar institution" which cherishes in its bosom men of the principle which permits them to do a deed like the foregoing certainly ought to be preserved.

The number of colored persons in the New England States was as follows, at the periods named:

	1850.	1860.
Maine	1,356	1,195
New Hampshire	520	450
Vermont	718	582
Massachusetts	9,064	9,454
Rhode Island	3,670	3,918
Connecticut	7,693	8,542
Total	23,021	24,141

A small colored, lad residing in Chester, Pennsylvania, while playing at the packet wharf, below Edgmont Street on Saturday, the 5th instant, fell overboard and was drowned before assistance could reach him. His body was found about two hours after the occurence, and an inquest held over it by Coroner Long, and a jury empannelled for the purpose.

On the morning of the 16th, in Philadelphia, a colored man named Lewis Spencer, sprang into the Delaware, near Arch street wharf, and was drowned. His body was not recovered.

PERSONAL.

Mr. R. Lewis Perry was ordained on the 9th inst., at a council called by the Second Baptist Church of Ann Arbor, Mich. It is understood that Mr. Perry will soon resign his pastoral charge of said church, to labor as a missionary of the African Civilization Society in Central Africa.

The Albany Times of October 4th says: "The Rev. Samuel Streeter, octogenarian and colored preacher, died on Wednesday. He was in the 84th year of his age. Sammy was a well known character, and had a very wide circle of acquaintances. He had considerable influence with the colored people of the city."

A citizen of New York, recently deceased, named C. B. Noon, among other bequests, leaves one of $200 to his "faithful friend and servant, Mary Thomson, a colored woman," and another of $100 to the American Bible Society."

ARRIVALS AT MRS. PLANT'S

BOARDING-HOUSE, BROOKLYN.

Mr. and Mrs. Saunders, Philadelphia.
Mr. Attison, and Mr. Morrison, Baltimore, Md.
Mr. Wm. Moore, Norfolk, Va.
Also, Dr. M. R. Delany, Chatham, C. W.

MARRIED.

Francis—Morton.—In New York city, on Tuesday evening, the 15th inst., by the Rev. David Stevens, Asa Francis, jr., of New York city, to Miss Isabella Morton, of Washington City, D. C.

DIED.

Smith.—In Williamsburg, Oct. 16th, Miss Catherine D. Smith, only daughter of the late Jacob and Julia Ann Smith, aged 12 years, 8 months and 7 days.

"The morning flowers display their sweets,
And soon their silken leaves unfold;
As careless of the noon-tide heats;
As fearless of the evening cold.

Nipped by the wind's unkindly blasts,
Parched by the sun's directed rays;
The momentary glories waste,
The short-lived beauties die away."

Wade.—In this city, Oct. 18th, of disease of the heart, Daniel Wade of Buxton, C. W., aged 35 years.

Hughes.—In this city, of consumption, Geo. H. Hughes, aged 28 years and 8 months.

Taylor.—In this city, Oct, 18th, being accidently burned to death, Mary P. Taylor, aged 38 years and 10 months.

Special Notices.

GRAND NUPTUAL FEAST.

There will be a Grand Nuptual Feast given at the 28TH STREET UNION CHURCH, near 8th Avenue,

ON THURSDAY EVENING, OCT. 31ST,
FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE CHURCH.
Admittance 25 Cents.

NOTICE.

All members of the Annual Conferences of the A. M. E. Zion Church who have taken shares in the stock of the Book Concern of said church, are hereby informed that the payment is now due, and they are requested to make remittances to the Treasurer, Rev. Jos. P. Thompson, Hudson, N.Y., through the mail or by express.

N.B. All who have not taken shares can do so by forwarding the amount of $10 to the Secretary, at New Bedford, Mass.

Samuel M. Giles,
Secretary of the Board,

New Bedford, Oct. 18th, 1861.

FUNERAL SERMON,

OF GEORGE H. HUGHES, ESQ.

A discourse on the death of George H. Hughes, Esq., of this city, subject—"The dying Christian—will be delivered by Rev. J. N. Gloucester, at the Shiloh Church, cor. Prince and Marion Sts., on Sabbath evening next, at half-past seven o'clock.

NOTICE.

To the Gentlemen and Ladies of the city and vicinity of New York; most respectfully we solicit your company at 162 W. THIRTIETH ST. on

MONDAY, OCT. 21ST TO 25TH,

Daily, from 4 to o clock, P.M., to attend

A GRAND

MEN TAL FEAST
AND FAIR,

To be held by the undersigned Ladies of the 2nd A.M.E. Bethel Church, under the Pastoral charge of Rev. Wm. M. Watson.

The profits of the Fair to aid the Trust[illegible] liquidating the indebtedness of the [illegible] Church. The Ladies will have [illegible] on hand a variety of Goods both [illegible] and ornamental, which they will [illegible] offer for sale at low prices to suit the time and a Refreshment Table flowing with every variety of the season.

An exquisite Pianist will preside at the Pianoforte.

ADMISSION SIX CENTS.

THE FAIR WILL CLOSE ON THURSDAY EVENING, OCT. 31ST, WITH A GRAND TEA FESTIVAL.
ADMITTANCE 25 CENTS.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS:

Mrs. M. Ricks	Mrs. A. Wright,
Mrs. S. Houseman,	Mrs. M Bailey,
Mrs. J. Houseman,	Miss A. Ward,
Miss E. Johnson,

Miss S. Williams, Sec.

AGENCY
FOR TROY AND VICINITY.

James R. Benham is the regularly appointed Agent for the Anglo-African for Troy, Lansingburg, Waterford and vicinity. All orders or communications for the paper may be left with Mr Benham on board of the steamer "Cornelius Vanderbilt."

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delsart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

A MASS MEETING

To consider measures with reference to a settlement of the

GERRIT SMITH LANDS,

will be held, agreeable to adjournment, at Prince Street Hall, on Monday evening October 28, 1861. The public are invited to attend. The meeting will be addressed by a person who has resided three years upon his grant.

Charles L. Reason, Ch'mn.
J. H. Townsend, Sec'y.

Jeremiah Powers,	James P. Miller,
Chas. B. Ray,	A. Roberts,
Peter Vogelsang,	Theo. Giles,
Henry Ross,	Wm. H. Leonard,

James R. W. Leonard.

LECTURES.

The Rev. Alex. Crummell, of Liberia, W.A., is prepared to deliver the following Lectures, either singly or as a course, during the months of November and December:

1. The customs, genius, and characteristics of native tribes in Western Africa.
2. The growth of civilization along the Western Coast of Africa.
3. The progress and prospects of the Republic of Liberia.

Letters are to be addressed to Rev. A. Crummell, 217 Sullivan Street, New York. 12—4t

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½	A. M.
3	P. M.
7½	P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn. 13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. Eli N. Hall, Pastor, cor. DeKalb and Hudson Avenues, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

10 4t.

FIRST COLORED AMERICAN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH,

Rev. L. Tilmon, pastor, worship in the Hall, 194 Green Street, between Amity and Bleecker Streets. Hours of worship: 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.; 3, P. M.; and 7 1-2, P.M. 11—1y

Residence of the Pastor: 120th St., Harlem.

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor. Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

12—1y

ATTENTION COMPANY!

File right! Forward, march to 178 Prince St., on Monday evening, October 28th, at 7½ o'clock.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

POCKET WATER-FILTER
AND
DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weighs one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing

DAY & CO.,
13-13t. Box 464 P.O., Newark, N. J.

LODGINGS.

MRS. TOWNSEND CAN ACCOMMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, 99 West 27th Street. Terms moderate. 13-1t.

A GREAT BARGAIN!

An Enterprising Colored man with a cash capital of 75 or 100 dollars, can buy the good will and fixtures of a in Grand Street, Williamsburg.

BILLIARD & LAGER BEER SALOON

For full particulars apply at 130 Fifth St., near Grand. None but Cash and Enterprise need apply. 13-tf.

FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKING,
SHIRT MAKING, EMBROIDERING, AND QUILTING.

Mesdames F. A. Hamilton, O. A. Newton, and Miss A. M. Hamilton,

187 Navy Street, Brooklyn,

Ladies' and Childrens' dresses cut and made in the most fashionable style and warranted to [illegible].

SHIRTS of all patterns made, and plain sewing executed with [illegible] neatness; and durability of work guaranteed. Orders for EMBROIDERING promptly attended to, and QUILTING executed with dispatch.

Public patronage is respectfully solicited. 12-tf.

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS. CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET,
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. Ramsey.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Pease call and examine the premises

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly Richardson) Respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms, her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry makes it a very desirable place

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this or any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made.

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

Don't Forget,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y, Williamsburg.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS. The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co. N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 East 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

JUST PUBLISHED
"THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE IN LIBERIA"

The Anniversary address, on the 26th July, 1860 in Cape Palmas, Liberia, by the Rev. Alex. Crummell, B.A.

For Sale at the Anglo-African Office, 48 Beekman St., New York. Price 15 cents. 8 4t

PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE
BY
MRS. W. S. WILKINS & Co
610 PINE, ABOVE SIXTH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA 7-13t.

LADIES' FURNISHING STORE.
CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
Ready-Made and Made to Order, By
MRS. S. WILKINS & CO.,
610 Pine, above Sixth Street, Philadelphia.
7-13t.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 166 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

TO LET.—THE UPPER PART OF HOUSE 277 South Fourth St., Williamsburg, consisting of front and back parlors, and a large bedroom, with the back basement. Rent nine dollars a month, to be paid strictly in advance. Inquire on the premises, or at this office.

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf.

A SCHOOL WANTED.—A YOUNG LADY, a graduate of one of the High Schools of this State, and who is fully qualified as a teacher, is desirous of obtaining a school where the salary would not be less than $200 a-year. Address Thos. Hamilton, 48 Beekman St., N.Y.

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION. THE UNdersigned respectfully announces that he is now prepared to give instruction in the Art of Singing. He will be at home at 187 Navy Street, Brooklyn, on Monday evening, and at Zion Church, N. Y., on Thursday evening, of each week. Ladies or Gentlemen desiring instruction, will please apply immediately. Singing schools taught and private instruction given on moderate terms.

3tf. ROBT. HAMILTON,

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. Fortes, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 26 Mulberry Street, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and the public, that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 66 Sullivan Street, New York. 4-1t

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St. N. Y

MRS. E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 Sullivan Street, New York.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

By Mrs. Mary Johnson, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies,	$2,50
" " Gentleman,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

y13t,

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER,
219 Centre Street, New York.

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts., 2 tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk, Street. Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with

Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.

BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker St
between Broadway & Crosby St. 4t.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

P. A. [illegible]
Corner of [illegible]
[illegible]
COMMISSION [illegible]
[illegible]
A FRESH AND PURE ASS[illegible]
OF
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS
GENUINE
LUBIN'S EXTRACT
AND OTHER PERFUMERY,
FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH
BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRAN-
DIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES,
FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA
SEGARS, &C., &C.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS
carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S
VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR,
FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH,
AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Gray.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea-voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hair-brush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off, always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S
STRENGTHENING PLASTER.
AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR
LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT,
SPRAINS, BRUISES, &c., &c.

Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly servicable.

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent relief from its use, as it keeps a continual heat, acting as a gentle counter irritant, removing the inflamation of the stomach without breaking the skin. Persons engaged in sedentary pursuits should use these Plasters constantly, as they give strength to parts weakened by constant sitting and stooping.

For STRAINS and SPRAINS they are [illegible], affording relief immediately and without fail.

For RHEUMATISM there is no external application equal to them, promoting the general circulation, and

PREVENTING A RETURN [illegible]
of the excruciating pain.

These plasters are prepared with [illegible] the best material, and to prevent [illegible] the originator is placed on [illegible] purchasing ask for BADEAU'S [illegible] that the name BADEAU [illegible] you will be deceived.

P. A. WHITE, [illegible]

Poetry.

THE LIGHT OF HOME.

The light of Home! how bright it beams!
  When evening shades around us fall,
And from the battle flaps it gleams,
  To love and rest, and comfort all;
When wearied with the toils of day
  And strife for glory, gold and fame,
How sweet to seek the quiet way,
  Where loving lips will lisp our name
    Around the light of home.

When through the dark and stormy night,
  The wayward wanderer homeward flies,
How cheering is that twinkling light
  That through the forest gloom he spies!
It is the light of home. He feels
  That loving hearts will greet him there;
And softly through his bosom steals
  The joy and love that banish care
    Around the light of home!

The light of home! how still and sweet
  It peeps from yonder cottage door—
The weary laborer to greet—
  When the rough toils of the day are o'er.
[illegible] the soul that does not know
  [illegible] blessings that the beams impart,
The cheering hopes and joys that flow,
  And lighten up the heaviest heart,
    Around the light of home.

NOT LOST FOREVER.

Not lost forever! though on earth we've parted;
  Not lost forever though we meet no more:
They do not wander lone and broken hearted
  Who see Heaven's radiance on the further shore.

Not lost forever! every gentle token,
  That memory wins me from the far away,
Shall fill my soul though all the ties are broken,
  With tender grace that never can decay.

Not lost forever while around me springing
  The violets weep, the roses blush and bloom;
And summer birds, in summer woodlands singing,
  Flood with soft music all the tranquil gloom.

There will be meaning in the stars, the flowers,
  The grand and solemn voices of the sea,
Telling of happy dreams, and happy hours,
  Of life and sunshine, which it caught from thee

Not lost forever! thou shalt still be near me,
  Through every future, and in every clime;
When cares oppress, or gentle memories cheer me,
  Thou shalt be near me, dearest, all the time!

POWER OF IMAGINATION.

Some years ago a ship from Spain arrived in the port of Manilla. Among the passengers was a young doctor from Madrid, who had gone from the Philippines with the design of settling in the colony, and pushing his fortunes by means of his profession. On the morning after he landed our doctor sallied forth for a walk on the Pasco. He had not proceeded far, when his attention was attracted to a young girl, a native, who was walking a few paces ahead of him. He observed that every now and then she stooped her head towards the pavement, which was straightway spotted with blood. Alarmed on the girl's account, our doctor walked rapidly after her, observing that she still continued to expectorate blood at intervals as she went. Before he could come up with her the girl had reached her home, a humble cottage in the suburbs, into which she entered. The doctor followed close upon her heels, and summoning her father and mother, directed them to send immediately for the priest, as their daughter had not many hours to live. The distracted parents, having learned the profession of their visitor, immediately acceded to his request.

The child was put to bed in extreme affright, having been told what was about to befall her. The nearest priest was brought, and everything was arranged to smooth the journey of her soul through the passes of [illegible]ory. The doctor exerted his skill to the utmost, but in vain; in less than twenty-four hours the girl was dead. As up to that time the young Indian had always enjoyed excellent health, the doctor's prognostication was regarded as an evidence of great and mysterious skill. The fame of it soon spread through Manilla, and in a few hours the newly-arrived physician was beleagured with patients, and in a fair way of accumulating a fortune. In the midst of all this, some one had the curiosity to ask the doctor how he could possibly have predicted the death of the girl, seeing that she had been in perfect health a few hours before?

"Predict it," replied the doctor, "why, sir, I saw her spit blood enough to kill her half-a-dozen times."

"Blood! how did you know it was blood?"

"How! from the color; how else?"

"But every one spits red in Manilla."

The doctor, who had already observed this fact, and was laboring under some uneasiness in regard to it, refused to make any further confession at the time, but he had said enough to elucidate the mystery. The thing spread throughout the city, and it became clear to every one that what the new "medico" had taken for blood was nothing else than the red juice of the buyo, and that the poor girl had died from the fear [illegible] caused by his prediction. His [illegible] fled from him as speedily as [illegible] congregated; and to avoid the ridicule [illegible] awaited him, as well as the indignation of the friends of the deceased girl, our doctor was fain to escape from Manilla and return to Spain in the same ship that had brought him out.

WANTED, A PLACE.

During breakfast one day, Lord Eardley was informed that a person had applied for a footman's place then vacant. He was ordered into the room, and a double-refined specimen of gentry greatly detested by his lordship, made his appearance. The manner of the man was extremely affected and consequential, and he determined to lower him a little.

"Well, my good fellow," said he, "you want a lacky's place, do you?"

"I came about an upper footman's situation, my lord," said the gentleman, bridling up his head.

"Oh, do ye, do ye," replied Lord Eardley; "I keep no 'upper servants;' all alike, all alike here."

"Indeed, my lord," exclaimed this upper footman, with an air of shocked dignity, "what department, then, am I to consider myself expected to fill?"

"Department, department!" quoth my lord, in a tone of inquiry.

"In what capacity, my lord?"

My lord repeated the word "capacity," as if not understanding its application to the present subject.

"I mean, my lord," explained the man, "what shall I be expected to do, if I take the situation?"

"Oh you mean if you take the place. I understand you now," rejoined my lord. "Why, you are to do everything but sweep the chimneys and clean the pig-sties, and those I do myself!"

The "gentleman" stared, scarcely knowing what to make of this, and seemed to wish himself out of the room; he, however, grinned a ghastly smile, and after a short pause, inquired, "What salary does your lordship give?"

"Salary! Salary," reiterated his incorrigible lordship; "don't know the word, don't know the word, my good man."

Again the gentleman explained, "I mean what wages!"

"Oh, what wages," echoed my lord.—"What d'ye ask—what d'ye ask?"

Tripp regained his self-possession at this question, which looked like business; and considering for a few minutes, answered—first stipulating to be found in hair-powder, and, on state occasions, silk stockings, gloves, and bouquet—that he should expect thirty pounds a year.

"How much—how much?" demanded his lordship rapidly.

"Thirty pounds, my lord."

"Thirty pounds!" exclaimed Lord Eardley, in affected amazement, "make it guineas and I'll come and live with you;" then ringing the bell, said to the servant who answered it, "Let out this 'gentleman,' he's too good for me."

OUR CROCODILE.

BY MRS. L. M. CHILD.

I have read of a Hindoo woman who belonged to a sect that worshipped crocodiles. Believing the hideous animals to be gods in disguise, she took one into her dwelling, and petted it till it was tame enough to feed from her hand. She felt sure that the presence of this disguised deity would bring blessing on her house. The monster grew in size, and devoured more and more, till one day it ate up her child. Her idolatry was not at all changed by this event. She maintained that the ugly deity had brought blessing on her house. Exultingly she asked: "What honor or benefit could have been conferred on my child equal to that of being eaten by a god, and thus becoming part and portion of his sacred form?"

This is the extremest case of infatuated idolatry I have ever known, except that which has been manifested in the unlimited indulgence and submissive tenderness of the United States government toward its pet crocodile, Slavery. The ravenous beast has become so odious in the eyes of the rest of the world, that nation after nation have driven him from their shores, considering it well worth a large expenditure of money to get quit of a monster it cost so much to support, and whose violent behavior brought all its protectors into danger and disrepute. Though this movement of the nations proved a good business transaction, besides adding immensely to the sum of human happiness, the United States has persevered in a totally different policy. It continued to feed its pet with pap; it constantly widened its range; it tightly enclosed within its reach millions of men, women and children, for it to grind in its bloody jaws; if a few of its wretched victims escaped, servants were sent to drive them back at the point of the bayonet; and the humane were forbidden to interfere in their behalf on peril of fine and imprisonment. Thus pampered, the gormandizing monster grew ever stronger and stronger, more and more rapacious, and withal very sly and treacherous to the hand that forstered it so carefully. But the huger and more violent it became, the more deferentially it was treated. So the great, wide-jawed brute has gone on increasing in bulk and rapacity, ever lying in wait in our midst, mounted on logs of its own color, crawling about in all sorts of invisible places, changing its element as suited its convenience, and, whether on land or water, grabbing everything it wanted. It will devour our children if it continues to be petted. But then, is it not a god? Will not our children be blest if they be incorporated with it, part and portion of its divine being? Its keepers have of late given us reiterated assurances that it would be so, and have earnestly recommended us to consent to have them devoured.

But there is a large and ever increasing class who consider this doctrine a baneful superstition. Few of them dare to speak of expelling the monster from our domains, and those who have done so have been exposed to constant thrashings from its far-reaching tail. But many have ventured to suggest that it would be a wise precaution to set bounds to its mischief by fencing it in. It required a great deal of courage to urge the expediency of such a measure. They did it in terms of polite expostulation; they agreed to leave a very wide area for it to drag its slime over undisturbed, with a hundred thousand babies a year for it to eat, besides millions of grown men and women, who should be diligently driven back if they attempted to escape. Notwithstanding these liberal terms, the mere proposal to limit its ravages has thrown the bloody monster into such a furious rage that it plunges about in the most frantic manner, crunching our people and our ships in its ruthless jaws. The eagle of United States watches those ferocious proceedings, but hesitates to pounce. His portrait represents him with arrows in his claws, but he lays them aside and puts on velvet gloves when he approaches the precious pet. Perhaps it will get over its wrath and graciously consent to be petted again. It is such a valuable creature, and brings us so much honor, it would be a pity to hurt it.

WOMAN.

Great, indeed, is the task assigned to woman! Who can elevate its dignity? Not to make laws, not to lead armies, not to govern empires; but to form those by whom laws are made, armies led, and empires governed; to guard against the slightest taint of bodily infirmity, the frail yet spotless creature, whose moral, no less than physical being, must be derived from her; to inspire those principles, to inculcate those doctrines, to animate those sentiments which generations yet unborn, and nations yet uncivilized, will learn to bless; to soften firmness into mercy, and chasten honor into refinement; to exalt generosity into virtue; by a soothing care to allay the anguish of the body, and the far worse anguish of the mind; by her tenderness to disdain passion; by her purity to triumph over sense; to cheer the scholar sinking under his toil; to console the statesman for the ingratitude of a mistaken people; to be compensation for friends that are perfidious—for happiness that has passed away. Such is her vocation.

The couch of the tortured sufferer, the prison of the deserted friend, the cross of the rejected Saviour—these are theaters on which her greatest triumphs have been achieved. Such is her destiny; to visit the forsaken, to tend to the neglected when monarchs abandon, when counsellors betray, when justice prosecutes, when brethren and disciples flee, to remain unshaken and unchanged, and to exhibit in this lower world a type of that love, pure, constant and ineffable, which in another we are taught to believe the test of virtue.—Blackwood's Magazine.

DEATH WATCH.

The cause of the noise called the Death Watch, which has produced so much alarm and terror in the superstitions of all ages, has been the subject of much speculation. It is now satisfactorily ascertained to be produced by some little beetles belonging to the timber-boring genus "Anobium." The species which has been most observed, is the "a Tessellatum." It is a brown beetle, about one fourth of an inch in length, inhabiting old timber, and very common in old houses, where it may be heard in warm weather, during the whole day. More commonly, however, it is only heard when there is a perfect silence, and this serves to add to its alarming effect. Their ticking seems to be a call to each other, which, perhaps, answers for them the same purpose that its light does to the female glow-worm; and if the call is not answered, it is soon repeated in another place. It is thus produced:

Raising itself upon its hind legs, the insect beats its head upon its place of position with great force; and its strokes are sometimes so powerful as to make a considerable impression upon any substance softer than wood. The general number of strokes in distinct succession, is from seven to nine or eleven. The noise exactly resembles that produced by tapping moderately with the nail upon table; when familiarized, the insect will answer very readily the tap of the nail. It is difficult to be discovered on account of its diminutive size, and from its being so imbedded in the substance of ceilings, old chairs, bedsteads, &c., which are its frequent residence.

This insect is not to be confounded with another of a different Genus, the "termes pulsatalis, which makes a sound like the ticking of a watch, and continues its sound for a long time without intermission.

SUICIDAL WOMEN.

Unwise above many is the man who considers every hour lost which is not spent in reading, writing, or in study; and not more rational is she who thinks every moment of her time lost which does not find her sewing.

We once heard a great man advise that a book of some kind be carried in the pocket to be used in case of any unoccupied moment. Such was his practice. He died early and fatuitous!

There are women who, after a hard day's work, will sit and sew by candle or gas light until their eyes are almost blinded, or until certain pains about the shoulders come on which are almost insupportable, and are only driven to bed by a physical incapacity to work any longer. The sleep of the over-worked, like those who do not work at all, is unsatisfying and unrefreshing, and both alike wake up in weariness, sadness and languor, with an inevitable result, both dying prematurely.

Let no one work in pain or weariness.—When a man or woman are tired they ought to lie down until they are more fully rested; when with renovated strength the work will be better done, done the sooner, done with a self-sustaining alacrity.

The time taken from seven or eight hour's sleep out of each twenty-four is time not gained, but time more than lost; we can cheat ourselves, we cannot cheat nature. A certain amount of food is necessary to a healthful body, and if less than that be furnishd, decay commences the very hour. It is the same with sleep, and any one who persists in allowing themselves less than nature requires, will only hasten their arrival at the madhouse or the grave.—"Hall's Journal of Health."

FRENCH REGIMENTAL BARBER.

A peculiarity of the French army is the regimental barber, who nearly always serves his apprenticeship on the cheeks of his brothers in arms; and it is a rough apprenticeship as far as the cheeks are concerned. We would not wish our worst enemy to come under his razor and try his lightness of hand. Before entering the service he was probably a mechanic, a carpenter or mason; his good conduct has obtained him the important post of barber, and henceforth he wields scissors and razor with more vigorosity than success. This post is one of the most envied in the regiment, and the man who holds it is no little proud of it. In the first place, he receives a monthly pay resulting from small stoppages of the soldiers; next, he has permanent leave till ten o'clock, P. M.; and lastly he is exempted from a good deal of duty. But it must not be supposed that the office is a sinecure; the barber is responsible for all the heads of his company: if the beards are too long, or the hair beyond the regulation length, he is responsible for it. There are the regulations, he must carry them out to the letter; hold an inspection, and shear his comrades as close as possible, frequently much against their will.

There are men very fond of their hair, that natural ornament of man. The smart soldier would like to wear his hair long, perhaps that a young lady's hands may ruffle his curls, but the regulations are pitiless. Said a worthy corporal once: "From the moment that the hair is seizable by the hand, it requires to be cut." All sorts of schemes are naturally employed by the natty trooper to save his hair; he wets it every morning, or fastens it down with cosmetics. But his labor is in vain; the officers are up to the tricks, and the delinquent and the responsible barber generally get four night's guard-room. The old foxes do not have recourse to these clumsy methods, but pretend to be deaf, thus obtaining from the surgeon-major, permission to wear long hair. Review days are terrible to the barber, for in less than two hours he must have two hundred beards, without counting the hair-cutting. He should be seen then, with his sleeves tucked up to the elbows, armed with his tremendous razor which he has not found time to set; the soldiers lather themselves beforehand, and seat themselves one after the other on the bench of punishment. The thing is done in a twinkling—the strongest beard cannot resist, and the bristles that decline to be cut off are plucked out; the cheek may bleed but that is a very slight affair, for what is a scar after all to a soldier? The barber is a conscientious man; if he cut off the tip of an ear, for instance, he is very careful to restore it to its legitimate owner. The troopers fear the razor, but ridicule the barber; they call him the butcher or the flayer, though in a low voice, for if he were to hear them, he holds vengeance in his hands. In all the regiments that have fought in Algeria, the barber has a tortoise shell for a soap-dish.

There are multitudes of legends current in the army of which the barbers are the heroes. First among them is that of Barber Plumepatte, who belonged to a cavalry regiment. This barber, who by the way was very clever, possessed a most vindictive character. Punished one day most severely by his captain, he swore to revenge himself, and said openly he would kill the man. These threats soon reached the captain's ears, and he sent for Plumepatte. "You have sworn," he said to him, "that you would kill me; it is boasting on your part, for you would never dare to do it. Stay, I will give you a fine chance; bring out your tools and shave me." The terrible Plumepatte was completely disconcerted; he set to work, but did not dare to carry out his threats. Never, on the contrary, had he made so clean a shave. On another occasion, when in the field, the barber of a line regiment was summoned to shave the commander-in-chief. We can imagine whether the poor fellow's hand trembled; in fact, when the operation was finished, the general's face was one mass of blood. The unfortunate barber, horrified at what he had done, trembled in all his limbs, and began apologizing as well as he could.—"Stay," said the general, "there is a Louis for you. If your hand had not trembled in shaving your general, you would not have been a true soldier." In action, the barber becomes a fighting man like the rest; the troops, blackened by gunpowder, neglect their beard and hair. "When you find water in Africa you drink it, and do not amuse yourself by dissolving soap in it," say they. It happens, however, at times, that the regimental barber is a real shaver, understanding his trade, and who exercised it honorably before being called out. In such cases there is rejoicing in the sqadron. The troopers like being shaved by this rare man who never makes any gashes, whose razor, ever carefully sharpened, causes them no pain. The non-commissioned officers give him their custom; he becomes their favorite, an indispensable man, and they will even go so far as to allow him a little familiarity. After all, though, Louis the XI., made his barber prime minister.

"There Shall be no Pain There."—This promise is one of the golden clusters that grow on that vine planted for the healing of the nations, the Bible! How blessed a promise of the life that is to come is this one, those only can know who have walked long and frequently under the shadows of weariness and suffering.

"Nor pain there," to struggle with and endure; no burdens laid upon the eager spirit, which the weak frame cannot sustain; no work, under which heart and strength fail, and which is at last laid mournfully aside; no long hours of fever and restlessness; no overtasked brain and nerves in the homestead of those whom God shall number as his jewels!

So, be comforted ye that mourn! Green and shining rise the banks beyond the dark valley, and sweet healing is in the winds that wander off from the meadows, freighted with blossoms fairer than the roses and lilies of earth!

Take through your pilgrimage this promise—let it be a new incentive, and strength, and comfort to you—"There shall be no pain there?"

A Compassionate Judge.—A very learned and compassionate judge in Texas, on passing sentence on John Jones, who had been convicted of murder, concluded his remarks as follows:

"The fact is, Jones, the court did not intend to order you to be executed before next spring, but the weather is very cold; our jail, unfortunately, is in a very bad condition; much of the glass in the windows is broken; the chimneys are in such a dilapidated state that no fire can be made to render your apartments comfortable; besides, owing to the great number of prisoners, not more than one blanket can be allowed to each; to sleep sound and comfortable therefore is out of the question. In consideration of these circumstances, and wishing to lesson your sufferings as much as possible, the court, in the exercise of its humanity and compassion, hereby orders you to be executed to-morrow morning, as soon after breakfast as may be convenient to the sheriff and agreeable to you."

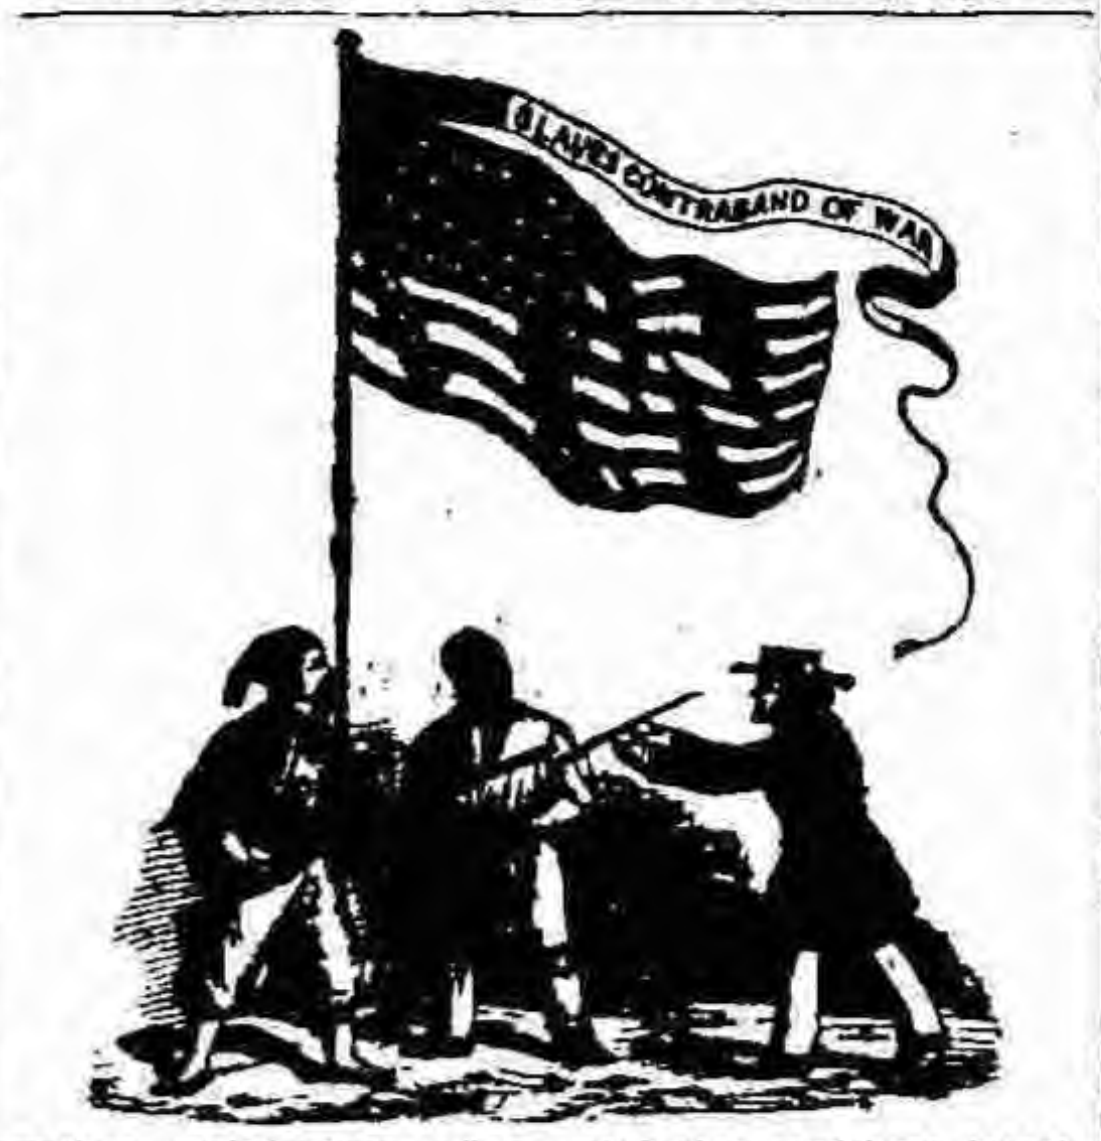
Smart Salmon.—Some years ago a case was on trial at the Supreme Court of Maine, and in one of the eastern counties, in which the plaintiff sought to recover compensation for alleged injury to his fishing privilege, occasioned by an erection of a mill dam by the defendants. The testimony on the part of the plaintiff was clear and conclusive, and it was supposed the case would be submitted to the jury without the production of any witnesses by defendants. But after some consultation, their counsel finally called on old rough, weather-beaten fisherman, who was interrogated as to the habits of the salmon, and the effects of the dam. He stated, with other things, that he had known salmon to go right up over a dam that is fifteen feet perpendicular.

"What is that, Mr. Witness? Do I understand you to say that salmon go over a dam fifteen feet perpendicular?"

"Why, sartin! Your honor don't know no more about them ar fish than a child. Why, look here, yer honor, I live on a p'int o' land 'at makes out into the river so, (drawing a map on the witnesses' box,) yer see, the salmon coming up have to come clear round this here p'int. Wall, your honor, the fish coming up the river, spiteful-like, when they get agin my house, leap clear across, right over my house, and barn, a hundred and fifty feet at least, your honor. I've picked up fat ones, your honor, too heavy to fetch across, many a time."

The court had listened in mute astonishment, but the next moment the peremptory order, "Mr. Sheriff, put that man out," was heard, above bursts of laughter.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, Diptheria and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, Diptheria, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the Original Inventor of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we Challenge the World to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. for washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

MRS. WINSLOW'S
SOOTHING SYRUP.

Every mother should be prepared to act in the capacity of both nurse and physician to her children she can, if she will, discharge these duties much better than any one she can employ. If she does not, she ought to know that there is a Medicine prepared by an old nurse and female physician which has stood the test of many, many years, and is the most perfect thing on earth for children teething; it also cures Wind Colic, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, and is sure to regulate the bowels. We say to every mother, do not let your own prejudices, or the prejudices of others stand in the way of the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP certainly does, as the name implies, "soothe" the little sufferer into a quiet, natural sleep, from which it awakes invigorated and refreshed. And for the cure of diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Wind Colic, &c., we have never seen its equal.

We have always been, and still are, opposed to the practice of drugging infants. This article has no deleterious effects whatever, and from our own experience (we speak advisedly) we have every confidence in it, and can heartily recommend it to all mothers. Take our advice—use it—and you will as strongly recommend it to others as we have to you.

When we say that MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP acts like a charm, we do but reiterate the language of every person who ever used it for their children, for all diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery and Diarrhœa, Wind Colic and Cholera Infantum. It will produce quietude and rest, relieve all suffering, and the infant will awake invigorated and refreshed, and not with the dull and stupefying effects of preparations of opium.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States.

During the thirty years of unprecedented and increasing popularity of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, innumerable "Cordials" and other nostrums, prepared by pretended M.D.'s, have sprung up and lived but a mushroom existence, the SOOTHING SYRUP has been constantly increasing in popularity, and become a household word, and for the health of their children, by the use of her invaluable article.
THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS THANK
MRS. WINSLOW

PRICE 20 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

For sale by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St., N.Y.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt: at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangemen of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat o sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

Price, 25 Cents per Bottle.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.
Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of troject.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.
All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.
Price.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00
CONTENTS;
Embellishment.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
Music.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson's Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause,—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly.
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.
Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. Contents: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs. Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden, Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

ife of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North-west Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid, single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 294 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes in one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and, his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth, $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price, only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual!
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
00 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet, and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred [illegible]

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. I. NO. 14. NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 2, 1861. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

The Weekly Anglo-African
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY,
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
No. 48 BEEKMAN STREET NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT HAMILTON, 48 Beek

Poetry.

The Present Crisis.

When Gen. Fremont proclaimed to the Rebels of Missouri, "their slaves, if any, are Free Men," millions said to each other, "This is what we have waited for. This trumpet gives no uncertain sound." The eloquent Wm. H. Channing wrote joyfully to a friend: "My faith is that, as a nation, God finds us worth saving, and that we shall be saved. His glorious will be done! Let us try to do it!" His hopeful words at once brought to mind the following noble lines by James Russell Lowell:

When a deed is done for Freedom, through the broad earth's aching breast
Runs a thrill of joy prophetic, trembling on from east to west;
And the slave, where'er he cowers, feels the soul within him climb
To the awful verge of manhood, as the energy sublime
Of a century bursts full-blossomed on the thorny stem of Time.

Through the walls of hut and palace shoots the instantaneous throe,
When the travail of the Ages wrings earth's systems to and fro,
At the birth of each new Era, a recognizing start,
Nation wildly looks on nation, standing with mute lips apart,
And glad Truth's yet mightier man-child leaps beneath the Future's heart.

For mankind are one in spirit, and an instinct bears along,
Round the earth's electric circle, the swift flash of right or wrong;
Whether conscious or unconscious, yet Humanity's vast frame,
Through its ocean-sundered fibres, feels the gush of joy or shame;
In the gain or loss of ONE race, ALL THE REST have equal claim.

Once, to every man and nation, comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side;
SOME great cause, God's NEW Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight,
Parts the goats upon the left hand, and the sheep upon the right,
And THE CHOICE GOES BY FOREVER 'twixt that darkness and that light.

Hast thou chosen, O my people, on whose party thou shalt stand,
Ere the Doom from its worn sandals shakes the dust against our land?
Though the cause of Evil prosper, yet 'tis Truth alone is strong;
And albeit she wanders outcast now, I see around her throng
Troops of beautiful, tall angels, to enshield her from all wrong.

We see dimly, in the Present, what is small and what is great;
Slow of faith how weak an arm may turn the iron helm of Fate;
But the soul is still oracular—amid the market's din,
List the ominous stern whisper from the Delphic cave within!
"They enslave their children's children, who make compromises with Sin!"

Slavery, the earth-born Cyclops, fellest of the giant brood,
Sons of brutish Force and Darkness, who have drenched the earth with blood,
Famished in his self-made desert, blinded by our purer day,
Gropes in yet unblasted regions for his miserable prey;
Shall we guide his gory fingers where our helpless children play?

'Tis as easy to be heroes as to sit the idle slaves
Of a legendary virtue carved upon our Father's grave;
Worshippers of light ANCESTRAL make the PRESENT light a crime,
Was the Mayflower launched by cowards? Steered by men behind THEIR time?
Turn those tracks toward Past or FUTURE, that make Plymouth Rock sublime?

THEY were men of PRESENT valor—stalwart old iconoclasts;
Unconvinced by axe or gibbet that all virtue was the Past's.
But we make THEIR truth OUR falsehood, thinking that has made US free,
Hoarding it in mouldy parchments, while our tender spirits flee
The rude grasp of that great IMPULSE which drove THEM across the sea.

NEW OCCASIONS TEACH NEW DUTIES! Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still, and onward, who would keep abreast of Truth;
Lo, before us gleam her camp-fires! we OURSELVES must Pilgrims be,
Launch our Mayflower, and steer boldly through the desperate winter sea,
Nor attempt the Future's portal with the Past's blood-rusted key.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Head-quarters Hooker's Division, near Bladensburg, Maryland,
Oct. 17th, 1861.

MR. EDITOR,

This division is composed of Sickles' and Cowden's Brigade, formerly Hooker's Brigade. General Hooker has been raised to the dignity of General of Division.

On last Sunday morning General Sickles reported himself here in our camp to the Commander-in-chief. He was accompanied by a portion of his staff and a mounted escort of 12 men, and looked like a Spanish brigand that we see represented on the stage of a theatre, with his huge moustache, plumes and boots. His Brigade lies about 5 miles to the eastward of us, and is expected to encamp with us very shortly. Six companies of the 1st Indiana cavalry joined our Brigade to-day, they are a fine looking body of men and splendidly mounted and caparisoned. Our camping ground is a most magnificent one; our camp lies in the form of a crescent, about one mile south of Bladensburg, the extreme right resting on the famous dueling ground, the left on the line of the Baltimore and Washington Railroad. The health of the Brigade has been excellent, there have been but five deaths in two months in this army of between five and six thousand men, three by accident and two by disease.

On last Tuesday General Hooker reviewed the Brigade of General Sickles—on Wednesday General Cowden's. I did not get an opportunity to see the former—the latter was a military pageant. All the regiments were drawn up in line, the army wagons and ambulances to the rear; the regiments comprised the 1st Michigan, 2d New Hampshire, 26th Pennsylvania, and 1st and 11th Massachusetts, and while my eyes were dazzeled with the imposing display, the regimental bands were charming my ears with their melodies. Although standing upon a soil poluted by slavery, my heart was lifted up and this painful reflection which ever burdens [illegible], was momentarily soothed, that man must be a demon that resists successfully the charms of the divine art.

As the most opposite emotions were experienced by me on the following occasion, I will give you an account of it It was a painful case; a private of the 1st Michigan regiment secured a furlough to visit his family. Full of expectation he prepared himself for the passage, but accidentally fell under the wheels of the car that was to bear him home, was fatally injured and was buried yesterday with military honors. The circumstances of the case, the solemn dirge-like music, the slow measured dead-march, made the obsequies painfully touching; but imposing ceremonials have a strange fascinating influence over us all. I have often wondered why the soldier delights to increase the solemnities of a death: they say it is "Honor to the departed Brave." The soldier's business is to deal in carnage and blood, and these honors are a happy way to preserve a due regard for the value of human life.

While about closing the last paragraph, a man who is dignified with the title of sheriff rode into camp with a posse of five persons, and seized a little boy about 15 years of age, a fugitive from slavery. He dared not attempt to take [illegible] boy with his posse, but secured a sergeant and a guard to escort them over the lines and to prevent his rescue. So you see it required 13 men to take one boy of 15 years. Great Heavens, how many men would it require to re-enslave ten thousand full-grown men. But we did all in our power to aid him, but the vigilance of the guards outwitted us. Poor Frank was surrendered up, and now swells the list of the thousands sacrificed upon the altar of the "jealous God of Slavery." We resort to another method now, we hurry the panting fugitive to the Virginia side, and urge him to enter the Federal lines from that direction. But, my dear sir, it is hard to elude the vigilance of Federal man catchers.

The soil upon which our camp is situated belongs to a Mr. McGill, and when the Brigade first commenced its encampment here, he commanded all persons living upon his large farm not to sell one cent's worth of produce to the troops; thus inviting depredations by the soldiers. But a few weeks sufficed to strip his farm of everything eatable, corn, tomatoes, cantelopes, beans, &c. He left his home and joined another farm belonging to him, near Marlborough, leaving the only personal and portable property behind, in the shape of two chattels, persons, Washington and Diana.

These poor creatures had nothing to eat, and had to live upon the bounty of the camp. I took Washington with me in my own tent, and engaged him to act as body servant to an officer. About a week after I had thought he had found the society of his comrades in treason, Mr. McGill returned, Dianah had vanished; not a vestige of her was left, not even an old hood or hattered shoe. Washington was found comfortably seated in his tent. Mr. Secesh said, "Come along, Washington, you have been here long enough;" but Washington was not so easily sucked in; he would "neber let no strange man own him." A sergeant's guard was called to convey him to his detested chains, when lo! Washington had vanished like so much thin air. They hunted and called, called and hunted, but the subtle Washington would not take upon himself the much coveted entity of blood, bones and sinew, and he is to-day awaiting that inevitable hour when the decree shall go forth from Capitol Hill proclaiming "Liberty throughout all the land to all the inhabitants thereof." I learn from undoubtful source that passes are issued to Maryland slave-holders to cross over to the Virginia side to search for runaway slaves, while non-slaveholders are denied the privilege of visiting their friends in the camps. This makes the friends of humanity tremble for their cause. How can the American people expect the support of the civilized world, while they thus prove themselves the cringing votaries of the hell-born system? We hear it whispered that the Southern Confederacy will, as the last resort to secure a permanent dissolution, and to save the necks of their leaders, declare their slaves free. From a philosophical point of view this is clearly a probability. To whom would the four and a half millions, scorned and rejected by the Northern Confederacy, owe allegiance? I shall give my life to him who enfolds the scroll of emancipation, no matter who he may be, Northerner or Southerner. Did you read the speech of Bulwer? Reproduce it. He breathes the words of inspiration. But we are in the midst of doubts and fears, and must labor hard and wait for the rapid march of events. In my next I shall try to say something in regard to the Anglo.

G. E. S.

Headquarters of the 9th Regt., N.Y.S.M.,
Gen. Bank's Division, Darnestown, Md.,
Oct. 12th, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:

I need not tell you of our march through Maryland and into Virginia, nor of the devastation that met the eye at every point, nor of our long and tiresome marches of days and nights, of our surprises, skirmishes and so on, but that more directly concerns you and I, and our people everywhere.

After leaving Camp Cameron in Washington, on the 11th of June, we took up our line of march for the Potomac and Monocacy Junction. About every other house on our line of march we found deserted. But what struck me most was to see the singular conduct of the slaves towards us, they ran from us as though we were the plague—but I have since ascertained that their owners have instructed them that the Northerners came to take them, and sell them for their own benefit. And some of the slaves believed their masters; but there were others that did not, and those would follow the regiment until they got a birth as cook or officer's servant.

The colored [illegible] churches on the whole line of our march were closed with the exception of Quin's Chapel, (Methodist,) in Frederick. They had orders to discontinue their services, but as the Union troops occupy Frederick, they have not obeyed the orders but continue their services.

The colored people of Frederick have more advantages of education than they do in any part of Maryland, Baltimore not excepted. They have eight colored churches, Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and a great number of them belong to the Catholic church. But still slavery casts her dark and gloomy mantel over all of this.

After six weeks marching and camping we arrived at Sandy Hook, opposite Harper's Ferry, and there we lost our first men in a skirmish. The rebels had evacuated Harper's Ferry five days before we got there. But they left a picket-guard behind them, but they also left in double quick as they saw our troops advancing. We continued our line of march on the Maryland side of the Potomac to Williamsport, and from there, on the 14th of July we crossed the Potomac into Virginia. We were then under that rebel General Patterson. And let me remark here that the Wisconsin regiment was two miles in the advance of the New York Ninth, when they fell in with the rear guard of the rebels retreating towards Martinsburg. They had a fight at the falls—and with the rebel prisoners they took fourteen colored men in uniform, and armed to the teeth, fighting the Union troops, one they killed outright and three others were wounded. They were not slaves but free black men that were pressed into the rebel service; and before we got to Martinsburg we got forty colored men who had deserted from the rebel ranks and came over to us. Some were barbers, shoemakers, carpenters and waiters, and were forced to leave their families and join the rebel ranks—many of them left at the first opportunity and come to us, but how disappointed they were when they found that they could not fight in our ranks against their oppressors!

When we entered the city of Martinsburg we saw that desolation had spread its broad hands over everything and everywhere—famine, pestilence and death walked boldly from house to house. The Union troops entered Martinsburg twenty-five thousand strong, and occupied the city for a week, we then took up our line of march for Bunker Hill, and there I commenced my work. We left Bunker Hill for Charleston, and whilst on our march the rebels passed us on a road running parallel with ours, but General Patterson would not let us give them battle. So, as you know, General Johnson passed us without either of us striking a blow. We entered Charleston and what a sight presented itself, hundreds of colored men and women in the streets with their children; some in their mother's arms, some of the men armed and shouting and thanking God that we had come at last to free them. Most of their masters had ran off at our approach and left all behind them. The slaves had helped themselves, and now stood ready with open arms and shouts to receive their deliverers, who they believed had come for the sole purpose of freeing them. But what pen can describe the revulsion of their feelings when they were told that we came "not to free the slaves, but to preserve the Union as it was, with its millions of suffering slaves!" why, Mr. Editor, when the slaves heard that they cursed the Union troops in their hearts, and some with tears in their eyes begged us not go away for now they had committed themselves against their masters—and if we went away their masters would come again and do worse than kill them; I could not bear the sight of their disappointment, so left them and visited the Court House where that murderous crew tried the noble John Brown; I visited the prison that held the hero, and looked at the old gallows in the prison yard that was honored by having so illustrious a character die upon it—and visited the very spot that the hero was hung upon. I thought the shade of that venerable hero stood beside me and said, "the hand of Providence appears to move slowly but it moves; so wait patiently, the clouds are lifting, the signs are standing forth in bold relief." Here let me add, that the land they hung him on belonged to an old colored man named John Welcome, and this same John Welcome owned the horses and the cart that the hero rode upon to that fatal tree; and I also add that this same John Welcome drove the horse and cart himself to the murdering. The only piece of cannon they had on that memorable day, is now in Philadelphia, in possession of the Pensylvania Regiment of three months volunteers. They captured it the day we entered Charlestown and have since left [illegible] and returned home bearing the [illegible] cannon with them as a trophy. We left Charlestown after campaigning for a weeks and then entered Harpers Ferry, remained there two weeks and again crossed the Potomac and entered Sandy Hook. Nothing worthy of note occurred until I reached Buckiestown. There two slaveholders entered the 29t Regiment of Pensylvania Volunteers and gave Sergeant Stark of Company G. and Corporal Harry Millard, five dollars each to catch two slaves for them that were then in the camp cooking; they succeeded in doing so, when the colored men interfered, but were driven off with the swords and pistols of the captains.

I shall in my next letter, give the condition of our people here.

JOHN V. GIVENS.

AN ADDRESS

Delivered before the Ladies' Literary Circle of Troy, N. Y., by Allen M. Bland, Esq., and published by request.

MRS. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

Whatever may be the opinions of this auditory in relation to the literary advantages offered by this age we know not. Whatever improvements this audience may have, and are still still making for their own advancement, we are positively ignorant. While mankind retains its right to think, it will ever hold to various ideas, and it will be found a thing impossible by whomsoever tried, to reduce every one to the same routine of thought upon one, to say nothing about a plurality of subjects.

We may be right, and we may be wrong, but evidently upon a great and vital subject so diversified are our thoughts, that hardly a half dozen persons seem to accord upon it. We refer to the subject of education.

Some conclude that the simple attendance upon a teacher for a few years, constitutes education—others that it is superlative folly to waste the morning of life, cooped up in a school-house, harassing the brain in the perusal of studies, which from an untenable conclusion, will bring to its possessor no certain and abundant return.

Then we have still another class, who endorse a half-way policy, content with a superficial surface acquaintance with a dozen things, but in reality knowing nothing at all of the beautiful and the useful.

This class forcibly reminds one of a bubble upon life's heaving bosom, of a feather floating upon the breezes of heaven, or of a bark, if you please, tossing upon the angry billows, only the more certain of wrecking upon the fatal rock.

Then a fourth class who turn everything to an account, who are fond of study, fond of reflection, fond of the unspeakable pleasure which the soul enjoys when its aim is an intimate relationship with all subjects within the compass of human cogitation. This latter class is the salt of the earth. These are they who continually keep unsheathed and bright, the world's intellectual falchion.

We stand to-night in the presence of an association professedly organized for mental improvement, which I presume has taken Excelsior as its Shibboleth, and which will never pause in its onward march until each brow shall have been crowned with the garlands, education wreaths for the untiring and laborious seeker after knowledge.

Such being an acknowledged fact it is highly proper that we briefly discuss that which best suits the intellectual palate.

In this age of gratituous learning, when upon every square we can find an imposing edifice erected at public cost, for the benefit of all concerned, it is a sin to be ignorant.

I verily believe that to whom much is given, much is expected.

All cannot be writers, every one is not expected to excel in oratory.

The world demands not a Philosopher, Chemist, Mathematician, Rhetorician, Geographer, Historian, in each individual member, but it expects, yes, more has a right to hold to strict accountability each of us for the talent nature has so generously lavished.

Measured by this rule, who of this company has made a single effort to discipline the mind upon the most simple study? What has this Circle done? What has been its success?

We may be allowed to remark, and speak directly to this Society, that all beginners, such as you are, are very apt at the outset to overlook gross errors, to turn their back upon glaring imperfections, and at the same time striving to obtain a mental footing, only allowable to those, who after perseverance and industry, are accounted worthy to have their names written among the learned and wise. To be all this is the work of time.

The road leading to perfection is simple and straight. As we journey along its broad path we are continually being wooed and won, and ever and anon, as we experience mental thirst, can we stoop and drink from the numberless fountains bubbling in the beautiful sunshine of intellectual triumph.

We do not believe so much in one's being unable, from solid stolid ignorance, not to understand a thing, as we believe in a want of proper application, and a knowledge of the course to be pursued.

We are daily rubbing up against individuals, to judge them from their actions, are soft enough to think that many studies can be mastered at the same time, that is to say, with a single bound they can see from the beginning to the end. This is all fudge, and the one that will follow this discipline for five years, will at the end of that time, in practical intelligence, be less than Zero.

Prof. Davies, a very learned star, in the mathematical galaxy, in his "Grammar of Arithmetic," lays it down as a rule, an underlying principle, never to be lost sight of for a moment, that all our knowledge of numbers depends upon our learning one thing at a time.—Says another, "no man can jump over a mountain, but step by step takes him to the other side."

If this is true of numbers, it is equally so of every thing else.

If the members of this Circle really and sincerely crave to have a peep into the paradise education has created, the world over—if these ladies would lay their mental foundation stones deep and immovable, they must commit to memory, and act upon this rule: "learn one thing at a time." This is our advice.

The strongest evidence that we can find to sustain this rule, is in the creation, for God spent seven days in the construction of this world.

Granting that a knowledge of the English alphabet has been attained, the first thing which engages the attention is Orthography.

Dr. Bullion defines it to be "the nature and power of letters, and the just method of arranging them into syllables, and words." Smith calls it "word making."

We think it nothing more nor less than the arrangement or classification of our letters, so as to form words correctly. Each of these letters which help to form words, has its own particular sound and sphere, and never can be used only in certain positions.

When we have an intelligent conception of Orthography, we have laid a foundation upon which to build; our ideas enlarge, and we gradually emerge from a knowledge of nothing (if we are allowed the expression) to find ourselves masters of one well-fought field.

Just in proportion, however, as we can spell words properly, will we be able to read intelligently, and he who is fool enough to wish to read ere he can spell simple words, will blunder along all the way through life, and his conceit, his ignorance, with his unwillingness to learn one thing at a time, ever present, always upon the increase, will keep the mind anxious and at the mercy of every adverse wind.

No one but a truly good reader has the faintest conception of the paradise which opens before him as he reads the useful and profitable.

Those numberless facts of history, of philosophy, with the other branches of learning become as familiar to him as the tales of nursery or the stories of Mother Goose.

Let no one young or old who wish at least to be able to read, content himself with smattering knowledge of what a combination of letters will pronounce.

Some have been accustomed to take a word from the beginning, and without pausing to collect breath, run it through to the end with a view as we suppose to economy.

The practice is fatal. Every syllable has its own legitimate pronunciation, and cannot be made to represent anything else.

Hence the imperative necessity of properly spelling and properly pronouncing each syllable.

To give the finishing touch to our spelling, pronouncing, reading, penmanship we must have an acquaintance with the grammar of our language. As well might a man with no knowledge of navigation undertake to direct the course of a ship, as for one of us to expect excellence in our attainments and the grammar unstudied. Grammar is the anatomy of language. The anatomist reduces the body to fractional parts, and lays bare to the gaze the various parts of the system. The grammarian reduces the sentence, or rather unhinges it, and what seems difficult, and hard to be understood, is to him pleasure upon the one hand, and profit upon the other.

There is no study so readily measured, none more full of reasons, none so well adapted to the understanding of everything in letters, and by which we are borne along so smoothly, and unconsciously in our transitive state.

Then if we turn the attention to geography, what a world of beauties seem to have their existence in this study!

The entire world, just think of it, lies within the grasp of it.

This interesting and profitable study embraces three departments, viz.: natural, political and astronomical.

Natural geography includes a description of the solid and fluid parts of the earth's surface, the atmosphere surrounding us, and animal and vegetable life.

Political geography takes up the various countries and governments into which man has divided the earth, including in this connexion every thing pertaining to man as a social being, his customs, laws, religion, habits, manners.

Astronomical geography considers the earth as a planet, discusses the imaginary lines upon its surface (latitudenal and longitudinal) and takes note of its two revolutions around the sun, the former producing day and night, the latter effecting a change of seasons. From a good knowledge of this study (geography,) which includes countries, mountains, valleys, plains, capes, islands, peninsulas, promontories, isthmuses, oceans, seas, lakes, rivers, gulfs, bays, straits, channels, sounds, we augment a store of information sufficient to engage the attention for half a century.

We have not said a single word about mathematics as to its great and overshadowing importance, for no one dares to pronounce against it, as it exercises kingly dominion over every other study.

We might go on and speak of physiology, geology, and other studies entering into a finished education, but it is not germain to the occasion, as we are but in our infancy.

But as essential as these are, and as highly conducive to our comprehension of life and the ends of our creation, we are stronger of the opinion that orthography, reading, penmanship, numbers, geography and grammar, should in the start claim and show, as they must, our undivided attention.

We would have this Circle a literary association, in its broadest sense. Reducing the thing to its lowest terms, if we had the influence, we would convert it into a school, and would have its members lay aside every excuse which would serve to shield them from bearing their part upon each returning meeting.

We would advise the Circle to spell, read, write compositions, cipher and study grammar.

We have thus in a brief and unjointed manner, said a few thoughts, which we trust you will appreciate. Had we had more time it would have afforded us unbounded pleasure to have produced something more interesting.

Such as we have give we unto thee, trusting that the bread now cast upon the waters may be seen, and gathered after many days.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN REV. DR. KING AND DR. LIVINGSTONE.

Buxton, C. W., Sept. 2, 1861.

SIR—In last week's "Globe," there was a letter from Dr. Livingstone to Mr. Hannah, Glasgow, in which he alludes to one, that he wrote to me in February last, and which came to hand a few weeks ago. I wrote to Dr. Livingstone on the 13th of September, 1860, concerning the propriety of sending skilful laborers from Canada to teach the native tribes on the coast, establish legitimate commerce, and put an end to the slave trade on the coast. I believe firmly that it is the only way in which the slave trade can be abolished on the coast of Africa.

An armed naval force cannot do it. Notwithstanding the vigilance of the British cruisers 40,000 negroes were torn from Africa last year, and sold in Havana and other Spanish ports in the West Indies. Christian settlements on the coast under British protection would raise a moral barrier that would put an end to the slave trade. These settlements would be the nuclei of large agricultural districts for raising cotton and sugar, supplying England with both of these at a less price than it can now be raised by slave labor. Enclosed I send you a copy of Dr. Livingstone's letter for publication. The Doctor is not very sanguine about the project.

I remain, yours truly,
WM. KING.

On board "Pioneer,"
15th Feb. 1861.

The Rev. William King:

My Dear Sir—I am sorry that I cannot give the encouragement you desire in reference to colored people coming from Canada to Africa to cultivate cotton and sugar. Some of them carry the prejudice against color wherever they go, and though many are no doubt superior to that silly nonsense, it would prevent the cordial intercourse with their less enlightened African brethren which is indispensable to successful settlement. Were people of color to come from a healthy climate, they are liable to be attacked and cut off by African fever as Europeans. I entertain therefore serious doubts as to the propriety of recommending those who have escaped from slavery trying to emigrate to Africa—though if they could cultivate cotton and sugar, they would no doubt in the course of time, benefit both Africa and themselves.

Wishing you every success in your present most worthy undertaking,

I am, &c. &c.,
DAVID LIVINGSTONE.

The Rev. WM. KING,
Buxton, Canada West.

I DON'T COMPLAIN.

"I'm a poor, miserable creature, [illegible] Mrs. Pinfeather to a sympathising [illegible] bor," and always expect to be. [illegible] goes right with me. I never [illegible] anything I undertook, and [illegible] But I don't complain!

"First and last, I [illegible] any disease you ever heard of, [illegible] I've had, or expect to have. [illegible] Last year I had the [illegible] creeturs, and I expect [illegible] in a consumption [illegible] I don't complain!

"I believe there never was a family [illegible] hard to get along with than mine. [illegible] always something to pay. The boys [illegible] to fighting in the streets, [illegible] clothes, and I [illegible] girls dont help me [illegible] Jane—she is always [illegible] ing about something [illegible] know who she takes [illegible] ever my troubles [illegible]

"I'm always [illegible] me dreadfully [illegible] dinner it [illegible]

"Every[illegible]

"I used to believe in human friendship, but I don't now. If I had I should be sure to lose him. My children dont care any*thing* about me. But I don't complain!

"They say that everybody was born for some purpose. It's my conviction that I was born to be a martyr. But I don't complain!

"I never expect to take my comfort in living. I never get a moment's rest. I'm on my feet all day, and half the time I can't sleep nights. But I don't complain!

"Very likely you wont see me again. I feel I am liable to go any minute. It's hard to leave a young family all to themselves in this 'vale of tears.' But if it should happen, I shan't complain!"

Mrs. Pinefeather stopped to take a pinch of snuff, and her friend, bursting into tears, exclaimed that "was the long-sufferingest woman she ever did see."

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 2, 1861.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

A NOBLE PROPOSITION.

ROBERT HAMILTON Esq.,

Dear Sir:—I congratulate you at the appearance once more of the Anglo-African,—a paper that gained, for the time it existed, more prestige than any other that had preceded it.

Now sir, the glorious question is, "Shall it live? I call it glorious, from the immense importance of the hour that is now upon us.

It will live if we bring our patriotism, our love for the truth, not to a boiling, but a moderate heat. Let each brother and sister, father and child, do what they can—take stock in it at a fair premium. The premium to be paid in Hallelujahs when its work as a Journal for Freedom is over.

Sir, I propose to unite with some in investing Five Dollars to begin with; what will others answer? I propose no plan upon which it is to be paid, but leave that to your better judgment—but I suppose you need the money as soon as you can get it, I therefore pay immediately. Now who will be the next customer,—if not for five, for four—for three—for two—for one! for fifty cents? Keep in remembrance, friends, that this stock pays glorious in premiums, however small be the investment. Yet you must still remember, that greater the investment, more glorious the premium!

Now sir, I believe I have said enough; perhaps more than enough—for, after all, all that is requisite is but for the people to know your need, and they are ready to nobly respond.

Yours in behalf of the good cause,
J. N. GLOUCESTER.

The following are responses to the above proposition, including Mr. Gloucester's subscription:

J. N. Gloucester,	$5
H. Highland Garnet,	1
Miss Mary A. Chambers,	1
Ezekiel H. Dias,	1
"A Friend,"	1
Robert H. Vandyne,	1
Miss Susan Tindall,	1
Austin Steward,	25

EDWARD'S FERRY.

Bewilderment and dismay seized the Northern mind on learning the particulars of the sad slaughter, if not murder, at Edward's Ferry. That a frightful blunder had been committed was evident, so too was it evident that the blunderer was of highest rank, otherwise he would have been singled out and punished. But the blunder really lies beyond mere generalship, and is not the last of its kind which will happen until its cause be removed. Look at the facts.

On the 20th of October, scouts were sent across the Potomac from Edward's Ferry, who advanced four or five miles, even to the vicinity of Leesburgh, without encountering the enemy in any force, and seeing only a small encampment beyond Leesburgh.

On the 21st inst. a brigade, commanded by General Baker, crosses the same Ferry, climbs the banks of the river a hundred feet high, reach a small clearing on the heights, and are hemmed in by a continuous fire from the enemy hid in the woods, several hundred slain, and the balance driven down the bank into the river, compelled to swim for their lives.

Seventeen hundred Federal troops went into action, and only a few more than one thousand escaped. The majority of the slain were Massachusetts men.

The immediate causes of this disaster were the ignorance of the parties who ordered the advance—ignorance of the nature of the country and ignorance of the position and numbers of the enemy.

But why this ignorance? It is easily accounted for: this portion of the Potomac has been noted, not to say distinguished, during the war, for sending back fugitive slaves. The news from the Upper Potomac, under Paterson, and Banks and Stone has been stereotyped during the last four months: "All quiet on the Potomac, a number of fugitive slaves were sent back to their masters by General Banks, &c.

Had these fugitives been retained in the Federal ranks, they would have given the needed information of the nature of the country; and as scouts they would have also betrayed to our officers the strength and the whereabouts of the enemy—and the blood of Massachusetts men would not now be crying from the ground of Virginia. General Banks has shown himself an expert slave-catcher: let him be appointed to the office of United States Marshall! Let the Government pick up some grim subaltern, with a heart beneath his ribs, and replace him in Banks' position as a major-general.

Fremont Triumphant!

Facts speak louder than words. After condemning the emancipation policy of Fremont, and even after determining to remove him on account of that policy, the Administration have been forced to adopt it as part of the programme of the great Naval Expedition. Secretary Cameron, in his order to the military commander of this expedition says: "You will, however, avail yourself of the services of any persons whether fugitives from labor or not, who may offer them to the National Government, you will employ such persons in such services as they may be fitted for, either as ordinary employees or, if special circumstances seem to require it, in any other capacity, with such organization in squads, companies or otherwise as you deem most beneficial to the service. You will assure all loyal masters that Congress will provide just compensation for the loss of the services of the persons so employed, &c." Of course disloyal masters, under this rule, will lose the services of their slaves (which simply is a paraphrase for the slaves, themselves) without compensation. The skies brighten! Hurra for Fremont and Emancipation! That's the ticket! Wonder if Abraham Lincoln will modify this order of Secretary Cameron so as to square it with the Act of Congress, or as folks will say—Mrs. Lincoln's views?

Passing—for Colored.

Jim Crow Rice of dirty memory, was the first white man in these latter days, who essayed to pass for colored. Then came the minstrels, and the song-wrights, and their melodies catching the public ear, and capturing the public heart, so that throughout the white North the mid-night air became vocal with the voices of young men of the dominant race singing the refrains, the love-songs or the woes of the black man of the South. Young ladies caught the infection, and did not hesitate to identify themselves with Lucy Neil and the entire dusky sisterhood from Maryland to Alabama.

And so caste-hate was mined and uprooted; its very fibres were torn out from the public heart and replaced by soft humanizing influences. Whatever may be the true side of *the question debated by philosophers from Aris*totle to St. Thomas of Aquinas, and thence to Sir William Hamilton—whether the mind can entertain two ideas at the same moment of time—it is beyond all cavil and dispute that but one passion can occupy the the soul in regard to a given object. A man cannot hate and love, despise and cherish the same object at the same time. The negro melodies displaced negro hate. It is no argument against this view, that manifestations of prejudice of the bitterest kind marked and still marks the conduct of many whites during this transaction. The devils will tear and rend the bodies of those whom they are forced to leave: no revolution can be effected without commotion.

Besides the general removal of caste-hate, there are not awaiting special or individual manifestations in the same direction. We are indebted to the Haytian Emigration movement for not a few. The Herald tells us that among the emigrants who recently left this port there were several white women, the wives of colored emigrants, and one white man, the husband of a colored emigrant. We call this "passing for colored" with a vengeance, for they exchange citizenship of the American Republic for caste-ship in Hayti—if they claim to be white on their arrival! For the Constitution of Hayti, Title 11, Sec. 37, says:—

"No white man, whatever be his nationality shall be permitted to land on Haytian territory, with the title of master or proprietor, nor shall he be able in future to acquire there either real estate or the rights of a Haytian."

Nay the very head and front of this movement, the principal editor of our knotty cotemporary the Pine and Palm, although an Englishman, speaks in his columns as glibly of "our people"—meaning the colored people—as if he were a genuine Anglo-African, and not the impossible hybrid of an endogenous and exogenous plant which the name of his paper indicates.

Au reste, the world moves: American prejudice is going, going and will soon be—gone! The slaves themselves, are now the objects of deepest solicitude: both sides of the belligerents are learning the value of them as men: and there will soon be bids for them as men—American men, American citizens. With diminished prejudice, it will be the fault of our own people if they do not advance and take their places as good and equal citizens of the Republic.

BY A CONTRABAND.

Sim Cameron came, Sim Cameron went
To overturn Johnny the path-finder bent,
But when he got west and tried him a fall
He swallowed Fremont, proclamation and all.

EASILY PLEASED.—The telegraph announces that General McClellan was delighted at the prowess of our troops at Edward's Ferry.

A WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING.—The Hon. N. Wolfe a be-petted Kentuckian, told our merchants in the Exchange the other day, that Kentucky would go fully for the Union "when Congress passed a law to exclude the discussion of slavery from its proceedings." He also said that "Kentucky had 181,000 slaves, whose value was two hundred and fifty millions of dollars"—which is the modest price of nearly one thousand four hundred dollars for each man woman and child. Who bids?

Brooklyn Affairs.

A lecture on Africa, by Dr. Delany, was given in the Third Baptist Church, Eastern District, on Thursday evening, October 24th. Preparatory to the lecture, Rev. B. N. C. Worrick was chosen Chairman, and Mr. S. N. Geers, Secretary. The Chairman then introduced the Doctor, who said that it was not his intention to get the colored people of this country to emigrate to Africa, but to impart information. All people, he said, were not adapted for Africa. People who were not enterprising and beneficial to society here were not fit for Africa. None should go but those who could help to develope the intelligence and resources of the country. He gave an interesting account of the social condition of the natives, showing their habits, customs and morals, and spoke particularly of the great respect paid to woman, especially the aged. "I should judge," said he, "that they far excel even the people of this enlightened country in morality and virtue." His advice to the young men was timely and appropriate; in fine, the lecture was highly intellectual and instructive, and we felt ourselves well paid for our attendance. The house was filled with an audience who seemed to appreciate the great ability of the lecturer. We learned from the Doctor that he is soon to leave this country for Africa, the land of his adoption, where we wish him much success. We procured for ourselves a copy of his report of his explorations, and shall endeavor to give it a faithful parallel. At the close of the meeting a vote of thanks was tendered the Doctor for his interesting and instructive lecture.

S. N. GEERS.

In the proceedings of the city Court appears the following:

Van Wagner and McDonough vs. McCaffrey.—The defendant had levied on property in a store in Williamsburgh, on an execution issued against McDonough, a colored man and physician. The property it appeared belonged to the wife of the Doctor, and this was an action of replevin. It was shown that the property had been bought and paid for by the lady, two years before the judgment was obtained. The jury found for the plaintiff, and assessed the value of the property at two hundred dollars.

Philadelphia Affairs.

MR. EDITOR:

The regular monthly meeting of the Church Anti-Slavery Society was held on Tuesday evening, the 22nd ult., at the Reformed Presbyterian Church, Cherry street, east of Eleventh. The meeting was considerably larger than usual, which, of course, during these times, is ominous of good to our cause. Another very important item is the fact that the meeting was largely interspersed with the leading and representative families of color belonging to this city. Our people have long been direlect to duty and interest in this direction, but it is hoped that war—this great purifier, and definer's fire of this as well as every other age, will eventually bring us up to the standard of true elevation.

Mr. S. Young, Esq., was called to the chair by the temporary absence of the Rev. Dr. Church, (the regular chairman.) The Rev. Mr. Johnston, as I was informed of the Old School Presbyterian Church, opened the meeting with prayer.

A note was then read from the Chairman (Rev. Dr. Church,) expressive of his regret for unavoidable absence, and expressing the desire that the meeting might be favored with the best of consequences, &c.

By reading the minutes of the last meeting it occurred that agreeable to announcement, Professor A. M. Green had been invited to address the meeting on the Duty of the colored people of the North in relation to the great rebellion. At eight o'clock Mr. Green was introduced, and proceeded with great ability to reason not only the propriety but the practical necessity of colored men taking an active part in this war against the aggressive power of the mighty dragon of the nineteenth century American slavery. Mr. Green argued that viewed from whatever stand point every honest man must conclude that this war is one that has been inaugurated by the labors of abolitionists and anti-slavery men in a moral contest against their great evil; men have avowed it to be their purpose to bring the two elements to a hand to hand struggle; the efforts of our party for thirty years have been to array the North against the South on this question of slavery. And though the government denies the responsibility to be incurred by acknowledging the true issue; yet it also denies that it had any thing to do with inaugurating it. It is just as emphatically true that the government cannot control the issue involved in this war as it is true that it could not for thirty years control the moral conflict kept up on this same question. It was our duty from very many considerations elaborately presented by Mr. Green to bear an honorable part in the great contest.

When Mr. Green closed, an opportunity was afforded for any remarks that might be offered on the question of the evening. A white gentleman present, whose name I learned at the time, but have since forgotten, took the floor, and strongly opposed Mr. Green's position. He claimed that the Government was even worse, if possible, than ever it was, for now that it could justly, by availing itself of the war power, emancipate every slave in the South. But instead of doing so, it fled from it as a man would flee from deadly poison. He said he had neither sympathy nor faith in the Government; and until the war-making power became honest enough to emancipate, enfranchise, and wash its hands of the injustice done to black men in the country, it was not fit for Christian men, white or colored, but more especially the latter, to touch, taste or handle. The gentleman argued in this strain at some length. Mr. Isaiah C. Wears was called on, and in his usual very forcible manner dissented from Mr. Green. He made many allusions to the meanness of the Government, and thought men would feel like sheep; that *colored men could not be spar*ed at such a time, and in such a cause. He said the South were more practically a fighting people than the North; that they were undoubtedly the superiors of the Northern whites in this respect, and the Northern whites were our superiors as much as the South was theirs; it could readily be perceived that we were therefore of all people the least prepared to go into this great slaughter house of the Government. He agreed, however, with many points Mr. Green had raised, and was pleased with his treatment of the subject; he believed this would be a long war, and that no doubt thousands of colored men would see service in this war before rebellion was put down. Several other gentlemen, white and colored, participated on both sides of the question, which kept up quite a friendly and spirited meeting till a late hour of the evening. Just before adjournment, Mr. Green arose and said he had taken the main point suggested by those who expressed themselves as opposed to his position, and he was willing to give them the consideration they deserved. But he said his opponents admitted too much that was argument for him; he said:

1. They had admitted it it was a war between North and South.
2. That these two sections were naturally at war on the slavery question.
3. That the South openly admitted that she was fighting for the uninterrupted extension of the slavery power.
4. That they were the best fighters.
5. That we, the colored people, were the poorest fighters of either of the disputants.
6. That it would probably be a long war, and we would be called into it after a while.

He said he would ask those gentlemen whether it was not our duty in view of the first four admissions, to enlist with the North if honest in our ancient doctrines on the slavery question? And whether in view of their three last admissions, it was not a positive necessity to counsel strenuous preparatory efforts among our people? The subject was continued till the next meeting, the second Tuesday in November.

VERITAS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN:

Sir—The following is a copy of a letter I sent to the "Pine and Palm," the editors of which had taken the liberty of publishing my name, but had not the manliness to give the letter an insertion. I therefore ask that you will give it room in your liberal paper.

Phila. Oct 28, 1861.

TO THE EDITORS OF THE PINE AND PALM:

Gentlemen—I see in your last issue that Mr. J. B. Smith has used my name as trying to basely misrepresent him in a report of a lecture he delivered in the Wesley Church in this city some short time ago, and as you have seen fit to publish my name, I claim to be heard in self-defence.

He says that he will not condescend to notice what I said, and yet he replies to the matter, not that I did not tell the truth, but as he says, "Poor fellow, he wants to show that he is opposed to emigration." Now, Mr. Editor, my opposition to any scheme gotten up to distract the minds of the colored people does not ebb and flow as money is bid for the advocacy of said scheme, as my friend Smith's does, I am not to-day found advocating an emigration to the coast of Africa, and upon a little larger bid found to-morrow advocating an emigration to Hayti; and more than that, I should never be found telling the people that I knew Hayti was the place for us, and representing that I had been there, as Mr. Smith has done in going through Pennsylvania.

I acknowledge I have been to both California and Australia, and recently to Illinois, but never emigrated to either; and I was not influenced to go by hired agents. I went to those places not as an emigrant, but I went to better my condition, and did not endeavor to persuade the colored people to emigrate, nor the Colonization Society or Haytian Emigration Society have not got money sufficient to pay me to compromise the people I am identified with. I claim this as my country, and if I choose to go any where away to better my condition, I will do it without being bought.

I certainly thank my friend Smith for the sympathy he expresses for me, "Poor fellow," as he calls me. I know that I am poor, but, my friend, your Haytian dollars, worth only eight cents, can't buy me as yet. Nor has it ever occurred to me that J. B. Smith will ever go to Africa or Hayti while this country will produce a living for him in lecturing or preaching.

Respectfully yours,
GEO. W. GOINES.

By a note from our friend Mr. J. A. T., we learn that Miss E. T. Greenfield, "The Black Swan," gave a grand concert in Philadelphia a few evenings since, which was a very fine affair. It was given in the Sansom Street Hall, and was attended by over three thousand persons. Indeed so great was the crowd that many could not find ad*mittance* to the Hall.

Miss Greenfield was assisted by Miss Sedgwick, Madame Brown and Mr. Thomas Bowers.

The programme consisted of selections from the most celebrated authors.

The execution of these selections our friend represents as being faultless. Indeed from their well-known ability this was to be expected. The audience testified their satisfaction by continued applause and by a shower of bouquets, Mr. Bowers coming in for one of them.

This evidence of appreciation by their own citizens must certainly be very gratifying to the artists as it is a most splendid testimony to their ability.

Forlorn Hope for Hayti.

We call special attention to the following item:

A concordat has been published between the Pope and the President of Hayti. It creates an Archbishopric of Hayti and four Bishoprics. The Pope is to nominate, and a special article allows the selection to be made from the white race.

As our readers will admit, we have generally had very little to say, as editors, about Haytian emigration, although we have given a definite opinion on the subject; but if the above be true—which there is every reason to believe it is—we will no longer stifle an honest opinion.

We never have favored the emigration movement, though as co-workers in our general elevation, we have not opposed those who favored it, as propounded by the exponents of the Cleveland Convention Platform. We had rather, with our present view of the condition and prospects of the Anglo-Africans of America—especially the United States, see them remain where they are, believing that to them has risen in the political firmament, never again to set till the fall of all existing commonwealths and empires which now control the destinies of man upon earth.

"The day-star of gladness"

But anti-emigrationists as we are, if a part of our people will emigrate, we have always favored—and we are certain that we speak the sentiments of the intelligent minds, generally, whether emigrants or not—their going where they had the opportunity of self-government, directing and controlling their own affairs, without subserviency to the whites. We repeat, that these are sentiments which should govern and control every colored person who desires to emigrate, otherwise they had better stay where they are.

What then, is implied, nay, what is de*finitely expressed in this* most portentious concordat or agreement between Geffrard, whom we are persuaded is a wise statesman? Why, that the controlling religious influence must be white, which requires nothing more but time, to make the entire political influence also white, when the liberty of the black race must be at an end. Will our brethren never be made to understand, that the security of a people's rights consist in their controlling their own political destiny? Why do we clamor and contend for the right of suffrage, franchise, and all that, here in America, if it be not to have a part in the controlling of our political destiny, without which there is no safety for us?

What becomes of the recommendation and laudation by Mr. James Redpath, and still worse, his hired counterparts of the "great and good Geffrard," the inflexible friend of his race? What confidence is there to be reposed in such men?

Once for all, from this time hence, if the above statement proves true, we shall ever set our foot upon Haytien Emigration, as one of the most monstrous and infamous schemes, ever set on foot by white men for their own personal benefit, and the Haytien Government as the most imbecile, degrading, pretentious, that were ever set up as national defenders of a people's rights.

Anniversary of two Chester County (Pa.) Sabbath Schools.

On Saturday, Oct. 5th, the anniversary ex*ercises took* place of the Sabbath School attached to Union Church, at Chatham, and an auxiliary, meeting at the house of Mr. Levi Taggart, at West Grove. The morning was clear and pleasant. The schools assembled at the house of Mr. Taggart, and were favored by the presence of Rev. Messrs. Bolyn, of Chatham, Lewis Porter, of Christiana, Del., and Lewis P. Hood, of Lancaster, Pa., and a large number of spectators. The grove was about a mile distant from the place of assembling, and although the number of conveyances on hand was large, it was decided that a procession be formed to walk to it. In forming the procession the assistance of Messrs. P. S. Porter and Wm. Wilson, of the 15th Street (N. Y.) Sabbath School, (who were in that neighborhood to listen to the funeral sermon of Mr. Samuel Porter) was kindly asked and given. Two very fine banners, with suitable inscriptions, were displayed on the occasion. On reaching the entrance of the grove an appropriate hymn was raised by Rev. Mr. Bolyn, and sung by the whole line of the procession till the platform was reached. Mr. Porter then commenced the regular exercises by singing and prayer, after which recitation and singing by the scholars were gone through in a creditable manner. Of the performers we can recollect only the names of Masters Lot Jacobs, Steamer and Cole. A Scripture piece was well rendered by Miss Eliza Lee, and in which she took two little girls by the hand, and in a very impressive manner presented them to the Saviour.

During a recess the scholars and teachers partook of a fine repast, consisting of roast beef, roast poultry, ham, cheese, cake, pies and a great variety of other delicacies, after which the spectators, numbering between two and three hundred, sat down to a similar repast for which no charge was made; this was arranged by several families bringing with them wash-tubs full of edibles of all kinds which were placed on the tables as fast as they needed replenishing. One fine feature of the affair was that no drink appeared on the tables except cold water.

After the recess the audience were again called to order by Rev. Mr. Hood, who afterwards delivered a thrilling address, replete with historical facts in relation to the progress of the colored people of this country in religion and education, and which had a fine effect upon, particularly, the white portion of the audience.

He was followed by Rev. Mr. Porter, who made a very interesting statement in regard to the colored people of Delaware, in which State he has resided for over forty years.

Mr. Peter S. Porter was then called upon to address the audience. He spoke of having visited Sabbath schools in the Northern States and in Europe, and contrasted the condition of the people in those countries with that of those of the Southern States, where but few Sabbath schools existed, and showed that if Sabbath schools had existed generally in the South for the benefit of children of every condition and complexion, there would have been no rebellion. He also tendered much wholesome advice to teachers and scholars in regard to the use of rum and tobacco, and cautioned them of the bad effects of the use of profane language. At the conclusion of Mr. Porter's remarks Mr. Wm. Wilson closed the exercises with singing and prayer. The procession then reformed and marched again to that portion of the grove where the tables were placed, and after partaking of refreshments, were dismissed by the singing of a doxology.

On the following day most of the company were again brought together to hear the funeral sermon of Mr. Samuel Porter, father of the Superintendent of the Chatham School, a notice of which I herewith furnish your paper.

P. S. P.

THE GERRIT SMITH LAND MOVEMENT was fairly considered and commenced on Monday evening last at Prince Street Hall, agreeable to notice. The Chairman, Mr. Charles L. Readon opened the meeting with a brief history of the circumstances by which these lands have fallen to our possession, together with an able and interesting allusion to the physical and mental development consequent in agricultural pursuits.

Mr. J. Powers spoke of the propriety of this movement, particularly at this time, when, he thinks, the times so earnestly recommends it.

Much interesting information was given by Messrs. Charles B. Ray and John Roberts, who have visited these lands.

Interesting remarks were also made by Messrs. J. J. Luille, Thomas Dowing, and Thomas Wright. A committee of five consisting of Mr. Charles B. Ray, Jeremiah Powers, J. J. Luille, John Roberts and James R. W. Leonard was appointed to prepare a constitution for the organization of a "Gerrit Smith Land Association," the object of which shall be to effectually carry forward this mark, after which the meeting adjourned to meet next Monday evening at the same place.

Those having grants are particularly invited to attend, as many of the lands have been sold for taxes and will soon be past redemption.

SECRETARY CAMERON'S INSTRUCTIONS RELATIVE TO FUGITIVE SLAVES.

The following order was sent out with the commanders of the forces accompanying the expedition:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Oct. 14, 1861.

SIR—In conducting military operations within States declared by the proclamation of the President to be in a state of insurrection, you will govern yourself, so far as persons held to service under the laws of such States are concerned, by the principles of the letters addressed by me to Maj.-Gen. Butler on the 30th of May and the 8th of August, copies of which are herewith furnished to you. As special directions, adapted to special circumstances, cannot be given, much must be referred to your own discretion, as Commanding-General of the expedition. You will, however, in general avail yourself of the services of any persons, whether fugitives from labor or not, who may offer them to the National Government; you will employ such persons in such service as they may be fitted for, either as ordinary employees or, *if special circumstances seem to re*quire it, in any other capacity, with such organization, in squads, companies, or otherwise, as you deem most beneficial to the service. This, however, not to mean a general arming of them for military service. You will assure all loyal masters that Congress will provide just compensation to them for the loss of the services of the persons so employed. It is believed that the course thus indicated will best secure the substantial rights of loyal masters, and the benefits to the United States of the services of all disposed to support the Government, while it avoids all interference with the social systems of local institutions of every State, beyond that which insurrection makes unavoidable, and which a restoration of peaceful relations to the Union, under the Constitution, will immediately remove. Respectfully,

SIMON CAMERON,
Secretary of War.

Brig.-Gen. T. W. Sherman, commanding expedition to the Southern coast.

Are there Any Contrabands in the great Naval Expedition?

The correspondent of the New York "Times," writing from the expedition, in that paper of the 26th ult., states that one thousand fugitive slaves would accompany the expedition.

The correspondent of the "Tribune," writing from the same quarter in the paper of the 28th, remarks:

We, the fleet, are not without our disappointments. We had hoped to take on board at this fortress at least six hundred "contrabands," whose duty it should be hereafter to wield the shovel and the hoe, and do such other duties as the exigencies of the campaign might demand, but the fates are against us, and but about eighty of the colored people are to be obtained. The dissappointment is not a slight one, especially to those of the soldiers who will have to do the valient duty with the agricultural implements aforesaid, instead of our seeing the same services performed by the gentlemen of another complexion.

The "Herald's" correspondent say, in the paper of the 29th, that it was designed that five hundred should be taken on board, but the design was not carried out,

A dispatch to the associated press published in the paper of the 29th, reads:

Commodious barracks are being erected for the "contrabands," none of whom are to go with the expedition. General Meigs has directed Quartermaster Tallmadge to provide for them in the way of shelter and clothing as well as has been customary with good masters in Virginia.

Another newspaper correspondent writes that there were about seven hundred taken aboard.

The "Tribune" of the 28th, in an article on the expedition, speaking of the steamship Matangas, says:

She carries only one hundred soldiers, but takes about five hundred "contrabands" of the stock accumulated at Fortress Monroe, who are, with over five hundred others in the fleet, to be put to work on fortifications and other heavy field world.

Another correspondent reduces the number to seventy.

There appears to be a very great discrepancy in your statements, gentlemen correspondents?

AN HAYTIAN EMIGRANT DROWNED.—On Tuesday, 25th ult., Coroner Schrimer held, at the Bellvue Hospital dead house, an inquest on the body of Jared Washington, who purposed leaving in one of the vessels that sailed last week for Hayti. It is supposed that he fell overboard on the eve of the departure of the vessels, but his body was not recovered until the day of the inquest. It was reported that he had over three hundred dollars in his possession before leaving for the vessel, but we have not learned of any money being found on him when discovered. The coroner's jury was "accidental drowning."

MOVEMENTS OF SUPERINTENDENT CLINTON.—In a letter just received from Mr. Clinton, he says, "I will leave Bellefonte on the 2nd of November for Pittsburg, and will commence from that point to make my pastoral visits in the Allegheny Conference District. My post office address will be Pittsburg, Pa."

GOD BLESS FREMONT!—Since the publication of Mr. Cameron's letter to Gen. Sherman, we may without impropriety relate an anecdote of Gen. Fremont. A few days ago a Missourian came to him with ample certificates of his fidelity to the Union, asking permission to search through the camp for three slaves whom he believed to have been taken into the service of one of the Illinois regiments. The General politely declined, saying he could not allow any one to examine his camp for any purpose, except by regular authority of law, and then the applicant went away. After he had gone, Fremont turned to the gentleman with whom he had previously been talking: "I dare say," said he, "these persons may be here; but if they are, they have come expecting to find a refuge, and I will never violate the confidence they have reposed in me, so long as my name is John C. Fremont."—N. Y. Tribune.

HAYTIAN EMIGRATION IN CANADA.

The Chatham (C. W.) Argus states that there was quite a stir among some of the colored people in Chatham, because of the arrival of a returned emigrant from Hayti a few days since, with very discouraging reports. Hundreds of emigrants want to return, but cannot; climate severe upon emigrants—numbers died; street fights among women common; people addicted to thieving; the messenger would have left the Island if he had been obliged to crawl away; it is a fine country, but Canada is better; as there the poor are driven about like slaves by the wealthy, &c., &c.

DELAWARE BARBARISM.

In the Court of Quarter Sessions the following cases, in which the defendants were colored, were heard and disposed of:

State vs. Henry Davis, charged with stealing four chickens from Wm. M'Cally, of Willow Grove. Found guilty of stealing two; sentenced to pay 50 cents restitution money, to be whipped with 12 lashes, and sold to pay costs.

State vs. Phebe Jane Brinklow, charged with stealing 30 pounds tallow of Jas. Hallett, of Milford; sentence—$2 70 restitution money, 12 lashes and sold.

State vs. Phebe Jane Brinklow, charged with stealing one silk and one calico dress of James Hallett, of Milford; sentence—$10 75 restitution money, 12 lashes and sold.

State vs. Wm. Thorn, charged with the larceny of five gallons shelled corn of George H. Shockley, of Murderkill Hundred; sentence—50 cents restitution money, 12 lashes and sold.

State vs. Chas. H. Bowman, charged with stealing $74 of Thos. Carrow, of Smyrna; sentence—$113 18 restitution money, 20 lashes and sold for restitution money and costs.

COTTON MEETING IN BIRMINGHAM.—A meeting had been held in Birmingham relative to the cotton supply, and in advocacy of the establishment of cotton industry in Africa as the means of destroying the Slave-trade. Rev. H. Highland Garnet was among the speakers, and advocated the introduction of colored families from America into Africa.

"CURSES LIKE CHICKENS COME HOME TO ROOST."

The Cairo correspondent of the "Tribune," remarks in a letter from that point, dated Oct. 26th:

Up to this date many slaves—but I do not know how many—have come to our several camps. There has been no settled policy pursued concerning them. In many cases they have been given up to their masters, though well known to be Secessionists, while, in other cases, if the slaves were young and smart, the soldiers or officers kept them for their own use, but after a while they disappeared, I cannot tell whither. If ever there was a Gordian knot which the wit of man was bid to untie, this, concerning the whole question of slavery, is one. When one puzzles himself about it he recalls to his mind the picture of the chariot and the uplifted sword.

I have taken pains to talk to many soldiers on this subject, and, as it is a vital point, I will briefly state what they give me as their sentiments. And I find their expressions uniform, no matter whether they voted for Lincoln, Douglas, Bell, or even Breckinridge. They say they do not want the negroes liberated among us. On this point they are emphatic and warm, and they add, "Let them stay where they are." Of course the reply is, that no one North opposes this arrangement, and the real question is, "What will you soldiers do, rather than see the Government broken up?" They say, without considering the difficulties, "The negroes ought to be carried out of the country;" and add, "America is for white men, and not for negroes." By such replies, it is seen that their minds are not yet settled upon any solution, and they must be asked the question again. At last—and they are no more backward, I believe, than well-informed men—they come out and say that this Government is worth more than all the negroes that ever did or ever will live.

Colonel Broadhead, of First Michigan Cavalry, issued the other day the following order:

The commanding officer is surprised and mortified to learn that negroes, the servants of officers, have dared to parade this camp in the uniform of soldiers.

The honorable distinction which the soldier's uniform confers, and of which every true soldier is justly proud, cannot, and in this command shall not, be so dishonored and degraded.

The negro hereafter found wearing the uniform of the soldiers of this regiment will be stripped at once, and, if within the encampment, summarily ejected.

The Louisville "Journal" of Tuesday, says that a slave belonging to Jeff Offord, a secessionist of Spencer County, made his escape and delivered himself up at Camp Sherman on Monday. The officer of the Camp handed him over to the Provost Marshall, who under orders from Gen. Sherman returned him to his master.

A Washington dispatch of October 26th, reads:

Some of the Maryland slave owners in the vicinity of Annapolis complain that many of their slaves have secreted themselves on board the vessels of the coast expedition. Several slaves were found on board the ships and were returned to their owners.

Testimonial to Rev. Theodore Bourne, for Services Rendered to African Christian Civilization.

Office of Turkish Missions Aid Society, 7 Adam-st. Strand, London, 26th March, 1861.

To Rev. Theodore Bourne:

My Dear Sir:—As instructed by the Committee, I forward officially to you the Testimonial Address signed by the friends in London, who have felt the deepest interest in your public object and your personal exertions. In returning to America, you carry away with you the testimony of God's blessing upon your public object and philanthropic labor, in having been permitted to be instrumental in the organization of the British "African Aid Society," which will work in connection with the American Civilization of Africa Societies for the benefit of the Negro race.

I only add, Reverend and dear sir, that you carry away with you, on your return, the cordial esteem and Christian affection of many more besides those friends whose names appear on the Testimonial paper. We all wish you a safe and prosperous voyage, and pray God to open up before you increasing opportunities for ministerial usefulness and philanthropic exertion.

In the name of the Testimonial Committee,

George Royds Brich, Hon. Sec'y.
Gerard Ralston.

Reverend Theodore Bourne came to England in 1859, on behalf of an increasing portion of the free people of color in the United States, who are desirous of going to Africa and other tropical regions, for the double purpose of ameliorating their own condition, and promoting the elevation and best interests of their brethren.

He has succeeded in making the cause advantageously known in various quarters, and to persons of various classes, and more especially among the religious world—the merchants and manufacturers connected with the cotton interest, and likewise the West Indian proprietors, who desire that a portion of the colored Americans alluded to may be attracted to those regions.

Some of his friends, possessing a knowledge of these facts, which have been recognized by the Committee of the African Aid Society in the subjoined resolution, have, in consequence, concluded to invite the co-operation of friends of Africa towards a Testimonial in his favor. They trust that this mark of approbation will convey to Reverend Mr. Bourne their sense of his diligent and faithful labors for the oppressed Negro race, and will be gratifying to him, not merely during his stay in this country, but after his return to America, where he may be engaged serving the cause, and aiding in the selection and dispatch of emigrants, whether to Africa or the West Indies.

Thos. Hodgkin, M. D.
J. W. Richardson.

African Aid Society, 7 Adam St., Strand, C. W., London, Nov. 12th, 1860.

The Secretary presents his compliments to the Reverend Theodore Bourne, and has much pleasure in handing him the following extract from the minutes of the meeting of the Committee of the Society, held on the 8th inst.:

"Resolved, That a donation be contributed towards a Testimonial to the Reverend Theodore Bourne, if his friends should originate and support such an expression of their esteem."

Lord Alfred S. Churchill, M.P.,
Chairman of the Committee.

London, Dec., 1860.

We cordially concur in the above proposal for a testimonial to Mr. Bourne, as the expression of our personal esteem, and in token of our high appreciation of his services in the promotion of his important object.

(Signed,)
Rev. Sam. Minton, M.A.
" Jas. Baldwin Brown.
John Campbell, D.D.
Rev. John Waddington, D.D,
" Henry Jones, M.A.
" Geo. Royds Birch, Sec. Turkish Mission Aid Soc.
Gerard Ralston.
Rev. Joseph Kidger Tucker.
" Octavius Winslow, D.D.
" George Smith, Sec'y Congregational Union.
Rev. Arthur Tidman, D.D., Sec'y London Missionary Soc.
Rev. Thomas James, Sec. Colonial Missionary Soc.
Charles Making,
Richard Barrett,
Boddington & Co.
Rev. Henry Richards, Secretary Peace Society.
Wm. Tweedie.
Norton Shaw, M.D., Sec. Royal Geographical Soc.
George Yonge, Secretary British Jews Society.

INTERESTING FROM HAYTI.

Advices from Hayti extend to October 19th.

According to the "Opinion Nationale" a partial change had occurred in the Cabinet of President Geffrard. The Portfolio of Justice had been intrusted to a former member of the Legislative body.

The Haytian Government is strenuously laboring to encourage agriculture. In a recent address to the Chamber of Representives the President had said:

"The most sanguine hopes might be indulged in regard to the future prosperity of the Republic.

Much interest was excited in the island, arising out of the case of the Captain and crew of the American bark "William," which was wrecked on the coast during a severe gale last spring. Captain Pelleter, the commander, together with all the men, were seized as they were cast ashore, loaded with heavy irons, and carried to Port-au-Prince, where they were confined in subterranean dungeons. The unfortunate men were, notwithstanding the protests of the American Consul, and the remonstrances of the several European Consuls, confined five months without trial. On September 5, the form of a trial was had, when, without any witnesses having been heard on either side the Captain was condemned to be shot, and the pilot and one of the sailors, an American, were sentenced to four years in the chain-gang. The remainder of the crew, to the number of eight, had, through the importunity of the French Consul, been set at liberty. The vessel and cargo had, in the meantime, been confiscated, thus reducing the family of the condemned mariner to ruin.

Capt. Pelletier has written a letter to the Havana papers setting forth his case, but omitting to mention the grounds upon which his prosecution was founded. He only says "they were as baseless and gratuitous, as they were repugnant to his sentiments and character."

At the latest accounts the sentence against Capt. Pelletier had not been executed, though the execution, notwithstanding the formal protest of the American Consul was expected to take place at once,

The bark William is mentioned in the "Amerrcan Lloyds" as a vessel of 232 tons burden, built in 1847, and owned in New York.—N. Y. Tribune.

SACREDNESS OF SLAVERY.

In every compromise upon the subject of slavery, and in all legislation to conciliate the South, property in slaves has been regarded as peculiarly sacred. This tradition still holds good at Washington. It we may credit the following, the Administration, acting through its military officers, entertains the idea that slavery is too holy to be touched, even for the purpose of saving the country:

"A slave belonging to Jeff. Offord, a secessionist of Spencer county, made his escape and delivered himself up at Camp Sherman on our fair grounds. The officers of the Camp handed him over to Mr. Dent, our Provost Marshal, who, under instructions from General Sherman, returned him without reward to his owner."—"Louisville Journal."

If the "son" of a rebel had escaped, and desired to join our army, how gladly would he have been received! If the "horse" of a rebel had come within our lines, how quickly he would have been seized and used for our purposes! But the "slave" is not treated either as a person or as property. The vilest institution upon which the sun ever shone, the primal cause of the rebellion, and the one great iniquity for which God is now dealing with the nation, is treated by Administration as if it were the only really sacred thing in the land—not be touched but on pain of death! Is it any wonder that we are defeated in our plans, and that our hosts stand still as if paralyzed by some invisible power?—"Independent."

Horrible Murder on Board an American Ship.—At the Thames Police Court, yesterday, Wm. H. Hawkins, a black man, late steward of the American ship Lammargier, was charged with the wilful murder of Capt. Adams, off the coast of Devonshire, The Lammargier sailed from London for Callao twelve days ago. On Sunday morning last the captain was foully murdered off the Start, and the ship put back immediately. Mr. Ross, surgeon, said that he had examined the body of the deceased captain. There was a very large wound over the right frontal bone, which was battered in; also over the right parietal and right temple bone, which were battered in, and the brains protruding. There were two fractures communicating with each other. He had also examined a chopper on board. It was a new one, and had been washed, but he could trace human blood and hair upon it. Mr. Myers, an American, the second officer of the ship Lammargier, deposed to the captain and steward having words after the vessel sailed, and to the steward's eye being marked, as if he had been struck. The steward, at breakfast time on Tuesday week, said, "I'll give you all a chance to get back to London." He told the steward that whatever secrets he might have he had better keep them to himself. The chief officer said to the steward, "The captain is a strange man; if you get to the right side of him you will be all right." The steward said, "I am a strange man, too; no one on board this ship knows me yet." On Sunday morning last the captain was found in his cabin murdered, and the blood oozing from his head, which had been cut open with a hatchet. The steward was immediately secured and put in irons. Mr. Selfe decided that he must have the Secretary of State's warrant before he could proceed further with the case, and remanded the prisoner.

Manchester Guardian, Oct. 4.

A Tall Jump and a Tall Shot.—A member of John Brown's Company of sharp shooters, now in camp on the Heights, did a pretty feat in the way of gymnastics and rifle-shooting not long since. He was hunting in Pennsylvania, and getting on the track of a deer, managed by fast running and short cuts, to reach a certain point just as the deer did. But althoug the two were only some two or three rods apart, a "root fence," some five feet high, intervened. The hunter, without stopping, made a leap, cleared the fence, and while in the air brought up his rifle, fired and brought down the deer. This story, fishy as it may seem, is attested in such a way that its truth is not to be doubted. Capt. Brown has in his Company many men who were born with rifles in their hands, if their experience is anything to judge of such a fact by.—Cleveland Leader.

Clothing for the Freedmen at Fortress Monroe.—A special correspondent of the New York "Tribune," writing from Fortress Monroe, under date of October 28th, says:

It gives me pleasure to record an instance of timely and well-directed philanthropy worthy of imitation. This morning Quartermaster Tallmadge received a letter from Caroline Pennock, dated at Howellsville, Delaware County, Pennsylvania, notifying him that she had forwarded a box of clothing, comfortables, and other similar articles, which she desired that officer to distribute to the negroes, known as "contrabands," at such times and in such manner as in his judgment would be the object of the donor's well-conceived charity the most good. Simultaneous with this agreeable notification came the box, both of which Quartermaster Tallmadge has acknowledged, assuring Mrs. (or Miss?) Pennock that he will be the cheerful and faithful administrator of a benevolence at once timely and practical. It is to be hoped that this will be a hint to others, and that the "contraband," who, in some respects, are indeed a peculiar people, will, through Quartermaster Tallmadge, in whom they recognize the best of "masters," receive other donations of "clothing, comfortables," &c.

BALTIMORE AFFAIRS.

On Sunday noon, Oct. 13th, a colored man named Jackson, residing on Chestnut Street, was stabbed in the right cheek, it is alleged, by a soldier named John Roberts, for refusing to move from the centre of the walk in front of the Colored Church on East Street. Roberts was arrested, but afterwards released for the want of evidence against him.

Dr. Greentree, coroner, held an inquest on the 18th ult., over the body of an aged colored woman, who suddenly died in a house on Biddle Alley, the jury rendering a verdict of "death from causes unknown." She was upwards of eighty years of age.

ANGLO-AFRICAN WAR ITEMS.

In a letter dated Oct. 26th, from the Cairo correspondent of the Tribune, appears the following: A "contraband" came into Camp Holt, on the Kentucky shore, last night under the following circumstances: It seems that the slaveholders, both of Kentucky and Missouri, are rapidly disposing of their negroes to Southern traders, and any one sees that if this practice is long continued there will be little cause for difficulty in these States. This negro, learning that he was sold, and that this morning he was to start for "Alabam," by the directions of a friend, came to the camp-fires of our teamsters, and, on being hailed, said he was a Union man, when they took him in. The friend referred to is a widow woman living in Blandville, 20 miles distant, who, on account of her principles, has suffered all sorts of insults, and has been repeatedly robbed, and is now about to be driven from her home, where she has long lived comfortably, but, with a defiant spirit, she conferred secretly with this negro, and he escaped.

The Dayton Empire of 2nd ult. contains the following item: Jim Griffith, the colored waiter who accompanied Capt. Gunckel to Kentucky, returned home last evening, along with the other waiters. Owing to threats made in that region, pursuant to instructions from Gen. Buckner, it was not deemed safe for free colored waiters to remain in that part of the State, as they are in danger of being seized and sent off down to the extreme South! It seems that the Confederates have determined to make contrabands of all free negroes found in Federal Camps, and will confiscate them!

Mrs. C. J. H. Nichols writes from Quindaro, Kansas, to the Columbus (O.) Field Notes, over date Sept. 28th: Fremont's proclamation—it should not be modified. Every body endorses its wisdom in this region; it must come to that before we win. The slaves are leaving Missouri in untold numbers. More than 80 have passed this place within a few days.

The Cambridge, (Md.) Herald says: The devil is to play with the negro slaves and secessionists in the vicinity of Vienna. They appear equally crazy—the negroes running North and the whites South;—improving their conditions with revenge! Negro slaves are almost daily escaping.

Our readers will recollect reading several weeks ago an unprovoked assault upon a colored man by a member of a military company at Leesburg, Ohio, in which the man was badly beaten with clubs—shot in the jaw, and left on the ground for dead. We have learned that although arrests were made the parties were immediately released for want of evidence.

SUMMARY.

A colored man, named Jacob Hamilton was hung by a mob on the 11th ult., at Smyrna, Del. It appears that an outrage was committed on the two daughters of a man by the name of Cloak, living on the outskirts of said town, by parties unknown. Suspicion fell on Hamilton; he was seized by the mob, and at half-past 9 in the morning in the presence of hundreds of spectators, including two hundred females, he was hung on a tree. The body was allowed to hang until four o'clock in the afternoon, when it was cut down, and a coroner's jury was empanelled to inquire into the manner in which the man had come to his death. After a post-mortem examination a verdict was rendered to the effect that the deceased had died from the effects of strangulation, the result of hanging inflicted by some person or persons unknown to the jury! It is probable that every man concerned in the hanging was well kown to the jurors, most of whom were doubtless upon the ground at the time.

Miss Evelina Colbert, a lady about forty years of age, was murdered by one of her female slave at Waterloo, Va., on the 14th ult. Miss Colbert attempted to correct the slave for some cause, when the girl seized a piece of fence rail, felled her to the ground, and then choked her to death. The slave confessed the deed.

A colored man named Franklin Armwood was badly stabbed by an Irishman on the 30th of Sept. at Union Springs, N. Y.

At Cleveland, (O.) on the 1st ult., a colored boy, by the name of Liverpool, had a hearing before the Mayor on the charge of placing obstructions on the track of the Central Ohio Railroad. He was required to enter into bail in the sum of $500 for his appearance at the next term of the Court of Common Pleas, to answer the charge. Failing to give the security, he was committed to jail.

The libel case against Jas. F. Babcock of the New Haven Palladium, for publishing as a news item the statement that Geo. W. Bishop of that city had been arrested in Philadelphia for kidnapping a colored boy and selling him South—a story which afterward proved untrue—was tried in the Superior Court at New Haven on the 15th ult. Verdict for defendant, with costs.

The Union Baptist Church (colored) of Chatham, C. W., Philip Patterson Clerk, caution the public against T. Y. Jones, who carries a certificate with the town seal upon it, and is asking aid for said church, but who is not a member of it, and refuses to account to it.

A colored woman named Eliza Strouder died very suddenly in Trenton, N. J., on the 6th ult. She had been sick for a year, and at the time of her death was sitting up and conversing in a lively strain. The verdict of the jury was that she came to her death from natural causes.

In Norwich, Ct., a few days ago, C. W. Treadway was knocked down, run over, and seriously bruised by a runaway horse.

Sugar in Liberia.—The sugar planters of Liberia are anticipating a large increase of profits, by the introduction of water-power for grinding the sugar cane. The water-power is so abundant and convenient that cattle can almost entirely be dispensed with. The staves for the sugar hogsheads and barrels that have hitherto been imported from the United States in shooks, are now being made by the Liberians out of their own wood. One of their writers and farmers thinks that Liberia is destined to rival Louisiana; only wants the banking capital in order to advance in wealth as rapidly.

ARRIVALS AT MRS. PLANT'S

BOARDING-HOUSE, BROOKLYN.

Isaiah B. Williams,
James O. Williams, of Baltimore, Md.
Mr. Horace Harley, Bridgeport, Conn.
Mr. Wm. Ward, Richmond, Va.

MARRIED.

Stokely—Taylor.—In St. Philip's Church, October 24th, by the Rev. William Johnson Alston, Mr. William L. Stokely, of New York city, to Mrs. Elizabeth F. Taylor, formerly of Philadelphia, Penn.

Special Notices.

MASONIC

DIRECTORY,

FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W.G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light, No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Tuesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka No. 15, Norwich, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery. No. 14, Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, New York City.

NOTICE.

All members of the Annual Conferences of the A.M.E. Zion Church who have taken shares in the stock of the Book Concern of said church, are hereby informed that the payment is now due, and they are requested to make remittances to the Treasurer, Rev. Jos. P. Thompson, Hudson, N.Y., through the mail or by express.

N.B. All who have not taken shares can do so by forwarding the amount of $10 to the Secretary, at New Bedford, Mass.

Samuel M. Giles,
Secretary of the Board.
New Bedford, Oct. 16th, 1861.

AGENCY

FOR TROY AND VICINITY.

James R. Benham is the r[illegible] arly appointed Agent for the Anglo-African [illegible] Troy, Lansingburg, Waterford and vicinity. All orders or communications for the paper may be left with J. Benham on board of the steamer "Cornelius Vanderbilt."

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delsart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

A MASS MEETING

To consider measures with reference to a settlement of the

GERRIT SMITH LANDS,

will be held, agreeable to adjournment, at Prince Street Hall, on Monday evening November 4th, 1861. The public are invited to attend. The meeting will be addressed by a person who has resided three years upon his grant.

Charles L. Reason, Ch'mn.
J. H. Townsend, Sec'y.

Jeremiah Powers,	James P. Miller,
Chas. B. Ray,	A. Roberts,
Peter Vogelsang,	Theo. Giles,
Henry Ross,	Wm. H. Leonard,

James R. W. Leonard.

LECTURES.

The Rev. Alex. Crummell, of Liberia, W.A., is prepared to deliver the following Lectures, either singly or as a course, during the months of November and December:

1. The customs, genius, and characteristics of native tribes in Western Africa.
2. The growth of civilization along the Western Coast of Africa.
3. The progress and prospects of the Republic of Liberia.

Letters are to be addressed to Rev. A. Crummell, 217 Sullivan Street, New York. 12—4t

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. Eli N. Hall, Pastor, cor. DeKalb and Hudson Avenues, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7½ "	P. M.

10 4t.

FIRST COLORED AMERICAN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. L. Tilmon, pastor, worship in the Hall, 194 Green Street, between Amity and Bleecker Streets. Hours of worship: 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.; 3, P. M.; and 7 1-2, P.M. 11—1y

Residence of the Pastor: 120th St., Harlem.

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor. Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

12-1y

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½	A. M.
3	P. M.
7½	P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn. 13-1y.

ATTENTION COMPANY!

File right! Forward, march to 178 Prince St. on Monday evening, November 4, at 7½ o'clock.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

For Sale—A Beautiful Picnic Grove, at Glencove, L. I.—The owner has been asked by respectable colored people in that vicinity and in this city to offer for sale the above Grove. It is offered to colored persons and the public generally. It extends from West to Middle Avenue, and has a fine view of the Bay, and is near the landing. Inquire of Mrs. R. BONNER, No. 54 West 29th-st., cor. 6th Avenue. 14—13t

Apartments to Let—or Lodgings furnished to a few gentlemen, at No. 311 Spring Street. Inquire on the premises, 14—tf

To Let.—The Room on the Second floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston-st., or of the Janitor 225 West 15th-st.

POCKET WATER-FILTER
AND
DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weighs one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing

DAY & CO.,
13-13t. Box 464 P.O., Newark, N. J.

FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKING,
SHIRT MAKING, EMBROIDERING, AND QUILTING.

Mesdames F. A. Hamilton, C. A. Newton and Miss A. M. Hamilton,
187 Navy Street, Brooklyn.

Ladies' and Childrens' dresses cut and made in the most fashionable style and warranted to fit.

SHIRTS of all paterns made, and plain sewing executed with neatness; and durability of work guaranteed. Orders for EMBROIDERING promptly attended to, and QUILTING executed with dispatch.

Public patronage is respectfully solicited. 12-tf.

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS. CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS.
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 19-tf.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET,
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. Ramsey.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Pease call and examine the premises

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

Mrs. S. Plant (formerly Richardson) respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG
Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as
BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS
of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made
MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.
Don't Forget,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.
First Premium for Misses and Children's
HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.
The Clergy supplied at a discount.
KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS
For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co. N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.
Apply to L. TILMON, 70 East 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

JUST PUBLISHED
"THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE IN LIBERIA."
The Anniversary address, on the 26th July, 1860 in Cape Palmas, Liberia, by the Rev. Alex. Crummell, B.A.
For Sale at the Anglo-African Office, 48 Beekman St., New York. Price 15 cents. 8 4t

PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE
BY
MRS. W. S. WILKINS & Co
610 PINE, ABOVE SIXTH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA 7-13t.

LADIES' FURNISHING STORE.
CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
Ready-Made and Made to Order, By
MRS. S. WILKINS & CO.,
610 Pine, above Sixth Street, Philadelphia.
7-13t.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS
Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

St. Philip's Church.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

To Let.—The Upper Part of House 277 South Fourth St., Williamsburg, consisting of front and back parlors, and a large bedroom, with the back basement. Rent nine dollars a month, to be paid strictly in advance. Inquire on the premises, or at this office.

Lodgings.—Mrs. Lane can accomodate a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate 9 1t.

Clocks, Watches, Jewelry and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf.

A School Wanted.—A Young Lady, a graduate of one of the High Schools of this State, and who is fully qualified as a teacher, is desirous of obtaining a school where the salary would not be less than $200 a-year. Address Thos. Hamilton, 48 Beekman St., N.Y.

Musical Instruction. The undersigned respectfully announces that he is now prepared to give instruction in the Art of Singing. He will be at home at 187 Navy Street, Brooklyn, on Monday evening, and at Zion Church, N. Y., on Thursday evening, of each week. Ladies or Gentlemen desiring instruction, will please apply immediately. Singing schools taught and private instruction given on moderate terms.
3tf. ROBT. HAMILTON,

New Sailor's Home. Charles M. Fortie, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 26 Mulberry Street, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

Wanted at Tilmon's Agency, No. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

Mrs. E. Clarke, is happy to announce to her friends and the public, that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 66 Sullivan Street, New York. 4-1t

DENTISTRY.
BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St., N. Y

MRS. E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 Sullivan Street, New York.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING
By Mrs. Mary Johnson, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies,	$2,50
" " Gentleman,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

y13t.

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER,
219 Centre Street, New York.

The Best Dressing for the Hair during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts., 2 tf.

Boarding and Lodging on the East Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk Street, Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.
The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with Ice Creams, Fruit, and other Delicacies.
BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker St
between Broadway & Crosby St. 4t.

Warranted to Cure a Headache in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

P. A. WHI[illegible]
Corner of [illegible]
GENERAL
COMMISSION MERCHA[illegible]
KEEPS CONSTANTLY ON HAND
A FRESH AND PURE ASSORTMENT
OF
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS
GENUINE
LUBIN'S EXTRACTS
AND OTHER PERFUMERY,
FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES,
FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA SEGARS, &c., &c.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS
carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S
VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR
FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH, AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Gray.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea-voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hairbrush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off, always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S
STRENGTHENING PLASTER.
AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR
LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT, SPRAINS, BRUISES, &c., &c.

Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly serviceable

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent relief from its use, as it keeps a continued heat, acting as a gentle counter irritant, removing the [illegible] of the stomach without breaking the skin. Persons engaged in sedentary pursuits should use these Plasters constantly, as they give strength to parts [illegible] by constant sitting and stooping.

For STRAINS and SPRAINS they are [illegible], affording relief immediately and without [illegible].

For RHEUMATISM there is no [illegible] tion equal to them, promoting the [illegible] tion, and

PREVENTING A R[illegible]

of the excruciating pain.

These plasters are prepared [illegible] the best material, and [illegible] the originator [illegible] purchasing ask for BADEAU'S [illegible] that the name BADEAU is [illegible] you will be deceived.

P. A. WHIT[illegible]

Poetry.

O Pity the Slave Mother.

I pity the slave mother, careworn and weary,
Who sighs as she presses her babe to her breast;
I lament her sad fate, all so hopeless and dreary,
I lament for her woes, and her wrongs unredressed.
You may picture the bonds of the rock-girded ocean,
But the grief of that mother can never be known,
O who can imagine her heart's deep emotion,
As she thinks of her children about to be sold.

The mildew of slavery has blighted each blossom.
That ever has bloomed in the path-way below:
It has froze every fountain that gushed in her bosom,
And chilled her heart's verdure with pitiless woe:
Her parents, her kindred, all crushed by oppression;
Her husband still doomed in its desert to stay.
No arm to protect from the tyrant's aggression—
She must weep as she treads on her desolate way.

O, slave-mother, hope! see—the nation is shaking!
The arm of the Lord is awake to thy wrong!
The slave-holder's heart now with terror is quaking
Salvation and Mercy to Heaven belong!
Rejoice, O rejoice! for the child thou art rearing,
May one day lift up its unmanacled form.
While hope, to thy heart, like the rain-bow so cheering,
Is born, like the rain-bow, 'mid tempest and storm.

THE UNKNOWN PAINTER.

One beautiful summer morning, about the year 1630, several youths of Seville approached the dwelling of the celebrated painter Murillo, where they arrived nearly at the same time. After the usual salutations, they entered the studio. Murillo was not yet there, and each of the pupils walked up quickly to his easel to examine if the paint had dried, or perhaps, to admire his work of the previous evening.

"Pray, gentlemen," exclaimed Isturitz angrily, "which of you remained behind in the studio last night?"

"What an absurd question!" replied Cordova; "don't you recollect we all came away together?"

"This is a foolish jest, gentlemen," answered Isturitz; "last evening I cleaned my pallette with the greatest care, and now it is as dirty as if some one had used it all night."

"Look!" exclaimed Carlos, "there is a small figure in the corner of my canvass, and it is not badly done; I should like to know who it is that amuses himself every morning with sketching figures sometimes on my canvass, sometimes on walls, and it is not badly done. There was one yesterday on your easel, Ferdinand."

"It must be Isturitz," said Ferdinand.

"Gentlemen," replied Isturitz, "I protest—"

"You need not protest," replied Carlos, "we all know you are not capable of sketching such a figure as that."

"At least," answered Isturitz, "I have never made a sketch as bad as that of yours; one would think you had done it in jest."

"And my pencils are quite wet," said Gonzalo in his turn. "Truly, strange things go on here during the night."

"Do you not think, like the negro, Gomez, that it is the Zombi who comes and plays all these tricks?" said Isturitz.

"Truly," said Mendez, who had not yet spoken, being absorbed in admiration of the various figures which were sketched with the hand of a master in different parts of the studio, "if the Zombi of the negroes draw in this manner, he would make a beautiful head of the Virgin in the Descent from the Cross."

With these words, Mendez, with a careless air, approached his easel, when an exclamation of astonishment escaped him, and he gazed with mute surprise on his canvass, on which was roughly sketched a most beautiful head of the Virgin; but the expression was so admirable, the lines so clear, the contour so graceful, that compared with the figures by which it was surrounded, it seemed as if some heavenly visitant had descended among them.

"Ah, what is the matter?" said a rough voice. The pupils turned at the sound, and all made a respectful obeisance to the great master.

"Look, Senor Murillo, look!" exclaimed the youths, as they pointed to the easel of Mendez.

"Who has painted this—who has painted this head, gentlemen?" asked Murillo, eagerly. "Speak, tell me." He who has sketched this Virgin will one day be master of us all. Murillo wishes he had done it. What a touch! What delicacy! What skill! Mendez, my dear pupil, was it you?"

"No, Senor," replied Mendez, in a sorrowful tone.

"Was it you, then, Isturitz, or Ferdinand, or Carlos?"

But they all gave the same reply.

"It could not, however, come here without hands," said Murillo, impatiently.

"I think, sir," said Cordova, the youngest of the pupils, "that these strange pictures are very alarming; indeed this is not the first unaccountable event which has happened in your studio. To tell the truth, such wonderful things have happened here, one scarcely knows what to believe."

"What are they?" asked Murillo, still lost in admiration of the head of the Virgin by the unknown artist.

"According to your orders, Senor," answered Ferdinand, we never leave the studio without putting everything in order, cleaning our pallettes, washing our brushes, and arranging our easels; but when we return in the morning, not only is everything in confusion, our brushes filled with paint, our pallettes dirtied, but here and there sketches (beautiful sketches to be sure they are,) sometimes of the head of an angel, sometimes of a demon, then again the profile of a young girl, or the figure of an old man, but all admirable, as you have seen yourself, Senor."

"This is certainly a curious affair, gentlemen," observed Murillo, "but we shall soon learn who is this nightly visitant. Sebastian," he continued, addressing a little mulatto boy about fourteen years of age, who appeared at his call, "did I not desire you to sleep here every night?"

"Yes, master," said the boy, timidly.

"And have you done so?"

"Yes, master."

Speak then; who was here last night and this morning before these gentlemen came? Speak, slave, or I shall make you acquainted with my dungeon," said Murillo, angrily to the boy, who continued to twist the band of his trowsers without replying.

"Ah you don't choose to answer," said Murillo, pulling his ear.

"No one, master, no one,' replied the trembling Sebastian with eagerness.

"That is false," exclaimed Murillo.

"No one but me, I swear to you master,' cried the mulatto, throwing himself on his knees in the middle of the studio, and holding out his little hands in supplication before his master.

"Listen to me pursued Murillo. "I wish to know who has sketched this head of the Virgin, and all the figures which my pupils find every morning here on coming to the studio. This night in place of going to bed, you shall watch; and if by to-morrow you do not discover who the culprit is, you shall have twenty-five strokes of the lash. You hear—I have spoken it; now go and grind the colors, and you, gentlemen, to work.' From the commencement till the termination of the hour of instruction, Murillo was too much absorbed with his pencil to allow a word to be spoken but what regarded their occupation, but the moment he disappeared, the pupils made ample amends for this restraint; and as the unknown painter occupied all their thoughts, the conversation naturally turned to that subject.

"Beware, Sebastian, of the lash," said Mendez, "and watch well for the culprit; but give me the Naples yellow.

"You do not need it, Senor Mendez you have made it yellow enough already; and as to the culprit, I have already told you that it is the Zombi?,'

"Are these negroes fools or asses with their Zombi?" said Gonzalo, laughing, "pray what is a Zombi?"

"Oh, an imaginary being of course. But take care, Senor Gonzalo," continued Sebastian, with a mischievous glance at his easel, for it must be the Zombi who has stretched the left arm of your St. John to such a length that if the right resembles it, he will be able to untie his shoe-strings without stooping."

"Do you know, gentlemen," said Isturitz as he glanced at the painting, that the remarks of Sebastian are extremely just, and much to the point.'

"Oh, they say that negroes have the face of an ape and the tongue of a parrot,' rejoined Gonzalo, in a tone of indifference.

"With this distinction," observed Ferdinand, 'that the parrot repeats by rote, while Sebastian has judgment in his remarks."

"Like the parrot by chance," retorted Gonzalo.

"Who knows," said Mendez, who had not digested the Naples yellow, "that from grinding the colors, he may one day astonish us by showing he knows one from the other."

"To know one color from another, and to know how to use them, are two very different things," replied Sebastian, whom the liberty of the studio allowed to join in the conversation of the pupils; and truth obliges us to confess that his taste was so exquisite, his eye so correct, that many of them did not disdain to follow the advice he frequently gave them respecting their paintings. Although they sometimes amused themselves by teazing the little mulatto, he was a great favorite with them all; and this evening, on quitting the studio, each, giving him a friendly tap on the shoulder, counselled him to keep a strict watch, and catch the Zombi for fear of the lash.

It was night, and the studio of Murillo, the most celebrated painter in Seville—this studio, which during the day was so cheerful and animated—was now silent as the grave. A single lamp burned upon a marble table, and a young boy, whose sable hue harmonized with the surrounding darkness, but those eyes sparkled like diamonds at midnight, leaned against an easel. Immoveable and still, he was so deeply absorbed in his meditations, that the door of the studio was opened by one who several times called him by name, and who, on receiving no answer, approached and touched him. Sebastian raised his eyes, which rested on a tall and handsome negro.

"Why do you come here, father?" said he, in a melancholy tone.

"To keep you company, Sebastian."

"There is no need, father, I can watch alone."

"But what if the Zombi should come?"

"I do not fear him," replied the boy with a pensive smile.

"He may carry you away my son, and then the poor negro Gomez will have no one to console him in his slavery."

"Oh, how sad!—how dreadful it is to be a slave!" exclaimed the boy, weeping bitterly.

"It is the will of God," replied the negro with an air of resignation.

"God!" ejaculated Sebastian, as he raised his eyes to the dome of the studio, through which the stars glittered; "I pray constantly to Him, my father, (and he will one day listen to me,) that we may no longer be slaves. But go to bed, father, go, go, and I shall go to mine there in that corner, and I shall soon fall asleep. Good night, father, good night."

"Are you really not afraid of the Zombi, Sebastian?"

"My father, that is a superstition of our country. Father Eugenio has assured me that God does not permit supernatural beings to appear on earth."

"Why, then, when the pupils asked you who sketched the figures they find here every morning, did you say it was the Zombi?"

"To amuse myself, father, and to make them laugh; that was all."

"Then, good night, my son;" and having kissed the boy, the negro retired.

The moment Sebastain found himself alone, he uttered an exclamation of joy. Then suddenly checking himself, he said "Twenty-five lashes to-morrow, if I do not tell who sketched these figures, and perhaps more if I do. Oh, my God, come to my aid!" and the little mulatto threw himself upon the mat which served for a bed, where he soon fell fast asleep.

Sebastain awoke at daybreak; it was only three o'clock; any other boy would probably have gone to sleep again; not so with Sebastain, who had but three hours he could call his own.

"Courage, courage, Sebastain," he exclaimed, as he shook himself awake; "three hours are thine—only three hours; then profit by them; the rest belong to my master—slave. Let me at least be my own master for three short hours. To begin, these figures must be effaced," and seizing a brush, he approached the Virgin, which, viewed by the soft light of the morning dawn, appeared more beautiful than ever.

"Efface this!" he exclaimed, "efface this! No; I will die first. Efface this—they dare not—neither dare I. No—that head—she breathes—she speaks—it seems as if her blood would flow if I should offer to efface it, and that I would be her murderer. No, no, no, rather let me finish it."

Scarcely had he uttered these words, when, seizing a palette, he seated himself at the easel, and was soon totally absorbed in his occupation. Hour after hour passed unheeded by Sebastain, who was too much engrossed by the beautiful creation of his pencil, which seemed bursting into life, to mark the flight of time. "Another touch," he exclaimed, "a soft shade here—now the mouth—Yes, there! it opens those eyes—they pierce me through!—what a forehead! what delicacy! Oh, my beautiful——" and Sebastian forgot the hour, forgot he was a slave, forgot his dreadful punishment—all was obliterated from the soul of the youthful artist, who thought of nothing, saw nothing, but his beautiful picture.

But who can describe the horror and consternation of the unhappy slave, when, on turning suddenly round, he beheld the whole pupils, with his master at their head, standing beside him!

Sebastian never once dreamt of justifying himself, and with his palette in one hand, and his brushes in the other, he hung down his head, awaiting in silence the punishment he believed he justly merited. For some moments a dead silence prevailed; for if Sebastian was confounded at being caught in the commission of such a flagrant crime, Murillo and his pupils were not less admonished at the discovery they had made.

Murillo having with a gesture of the hand, imposed silence on his pupils, who could hardly restrain themselves from giving way to their admiration, approached Sebastian, and, concealing his emotion, said in a cold and severe tone, while he looked alternately from the beautiful head of the Virginia to the terrific slave, who stood like a statute before him.

"Who is your master, Sebastian?"

"You," replied the boy, in a voice scarcely audible.

"I mean your drawing master," said Murillo.

"You, senor," again replied the trembling slave.

"It cannot be; I never gave you lessons," said the astonished painter.

"But you gave them to others, and I listened to them," rejoined the boy, emboldened by the kindness of his master.

"And you have done better than listen; you have profited by them," exclaimed Murillo, unable longer to conceal his admiration "Gentlemen, does this boy merit punishment or reward."

At the word punishment, Sebastian's heart beat quick; the word reward gave him courage, but fearing that his ears deceived him, he looked with timid and imploring eyes toward his master.

"A reward senor," cried the pupils in a breath.

"That is well; but what shall it be?"

Sebastian began to breathe.

"Ten ducats, at least," said Mendez.

"Fifteen," cried Ferdinand.

"No," Gonzalo, "a beautiful new dress for the next holiday."

"Speak, Sebastian, said Murillo, looking at the slave, whom none of these rewards seemed to move, "are these things not to your taste? Tell me what you wish for; I am so much pleased with your composition, that I will grant any request you may make. Speak, then; do not be afraid."

"Oh, master, if I dared——," and Sebastian, clasping his hands, fell at the feet of his master. It was easy to read in the half-opened lips of the boy, and his sparkling eyes, some devouring thought within, which timidly prevented him from uttering.

With the view of encouraging him each of the pupils suggested some favor for him to demand.

"Ask gold, Sebastian."

"Ask rich dresses, Sebastian."

"Ask to be received as a pupil, Sebastian."

A faint smile passed over the countenance of the slave at the last words, but he hung down his head, and remained silent.

"Ask for the best place in the studio," said Gonzalo, who, for the last come pupil, had the worst light for his easel.

"Come, take courage," said Murillo, gaily.

"The master is so kind to-day," said Ferdinand, half aloud, "I would risk something—ask for your freedom, Sebastian."

At these words Sebastian uttered a cry of anguish, and, raising his eyes to his master he exclaimed, in a voice choked with sobs, "the freedom of my father!—the freedom of my father!"

"And thine also," said Murillo, who, no longer able to conceal his emotion, threw his arms around Sebastian, and pressed him to his breast.

"Your pencil," he continued, "shows that you have talent; your request proves that you have a heart; the artist is complete—From this day consider yourself not only as my pupil, but as my son, Happy Murillo! I have done more than paint—I have made a painter."

Murillo kept his word, and Sebastian Gomez, better known under the name of the Mullatto of Murillo, became one of the most celebrated painters in Spain. There may yet be seen in the churches of Seville the celebrated picture which he had been found painting by his master; also a St. Anne, admirably done; a holy Joseph, which is extremely beautiful; and others of the highest merit.

* * * * * * *

In one of Cassimir de la Vigne's dramas we met with an expression which struck us forcibly. It was said of Don John, who was ignorant of his birth, that perhaps he was a nobody; to which he replied, "That a man of good character, and honorable conduct, could never be a nobody. We consider this an admirable reply, and have endeavoured to prove this truth by the foregoing example.—If it is gratifying and noble to bear with honor the name of one's father, it is surely more noble to make a name for one's self; and our heart tells us that among our young readers there is more than one who will exclaim with ardor, and with a firm resolution to fulfil his promise, I, too, shallmake a name,

MEMENTO MORI.

Of all the rumors of incredible atrocities, of foolish outrage, of those worst acts of cowardice that are born of cruelty, and of barbarism that just stops short of cannibalism, to which the expedition of John Brown into Virginia two years ago gave rise, the story that the skin of his son was taken from his body and tanned seems the most unnatural, and the most improbable, and was therefore received with the least attention, notwithstanding its positive assertion. Are not these the United States, a land of common schools and churches, and is not this the Nineteenth Century of the Christian era? was the instinctive response which we all made to a statement so revolting to the spirit and culture of our time, our country and our race. But read this letter from a General in the United States Army, now serving in Virginia, to a friend in this city—a witness on this point as impartial as he is distinguished:

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.

What parent on reading the annexed extract, can fail to reflect on the lesson it suggests? How important that when the parent has departed, the example left behind may be such as the child may be thankful for. To watch for and train the budding thoughts of an artless child is one of the noblest offices that father or mother can fill. Truly it has been said that "out of the mouths of babes and sucklings" strength has been ordained. What could give greater strength to that widowed heart, than such a scene with her little daughter.

She knelt at the accustomed hour to thank God for the mercies of the day, and pray for his care during the coming night; then as usual came the earnest "God bless dear mother"—but the prayer was stilled, the little hand unclasped, and a look of agony and wonder met the mother's eye as the words of hopeful sorrow burst from the lips of the weeping child. "I cannot pray for father any more!"

Since her little lips had been able to form that dear name, she prayed for a blessing upon it; it had followed close after mother's name, for he had said that that must come first, and now to say the familiar prayer, and leave her father out. No wonder the new thought seemed too much for the childish mind to receive.

I waited some moments that she might conquer her emotion, and then urged her to go on. Her pleading eyes met mine, and with a voice that faltered almost too much for utterance, she said—

"Oh, mother, I cannot leave him all out let me say "Thank God that I had a dear father once! so I can still go on and keep him in my prayers."

And so she always does, and my sick-en-heart learned a lesson from the loving ingenuity of my child. Remember to thank God for the mercies of the past, as well as the blessings of the future.

CAMP AT——, Virginia, Oct. 5, 1861.

"To show the refinement of Virginia gentlemen, I inclose to my friend, the Rev. B. N. Martin, Professor, New York University, a piece of the skin of the thigh (tanned by those gentlemen) of the son of John Brown, who was killed at Harpers Ferry.

This is a fragment of the skin which, thus prepared, was distributed in pieces over the Southern country, and was presented to my present Aid in Richmond last April by a Capt. Sommers of the Confederate States Army, and a friend of the doctor who has the skeleton, and who flayed and tanned the skin,

My Aid informs me that every preparation was made to treat the remains of John Brown in the same way, by having them thrown from the car before reaching Baltimore, and substituting a false coffin; but that the plan was frustrated by the sickness or finching of the railroad conductor.

——, Brigadier General."

Professor Martin has shown us this bit of the human remains prepared by some skilful texidermist in Virginia. It is a minute portion only, for though there are many superficial inches of cuticle on the body of a man of ordinary size, the number of persons in Virginia who coveted a bit of so precious a relic was very many. A ruder barbarism carries the scalp of a slain enemy at the girdle, makes a drinking-cup of his whitened skull, or strings the teeth or finger-bones into an engaging necklace; but John Brown Jr., was not the prize of the bow and the spear of any single warrior; a whole Commonwealth claimed him as its own. Mere savages, if they use the human tissue of the slaughtered foe at all, can only eat it—a wasteful use of such precious material. Science enables them in Virginia to refine upon this barbaric extravagance. Learned Professors, skilful in the arts, lend their knowledge to the public service, and feed the patriotism of the State with bits of epidermis, imperishably prepared, of the dead to be worn as amulets and mementos to keep ever green the memory of a sweet revenge and the duty of a citizen to a Christian State. They may laugh in Virginia at the untutored ignorance of the savage who can only rattle the dried scalps and bones of those he has slaughtered, while they point to the curiously tanned skin of their dead enemy as the evidence of the march of civilization and refinement in that ancient and proud Commonwealth.

N. Y. Tribune,

HOW HE STARTED THEM.—A Methodist preacher, whose hearers were in the habit of going to sleep over his preachings, bought a tin whistle, and one Sunday, when he saw a goodly number under the somnolescent influence, he drew forth his whistle and blew a shrill shriek. In an instant the whole congregation was awake and upon their feet, staring at the minister, at one another, and wondering what in the name of human nature was to come next.

"You're a set of smart specimens of humanity, ain't you?" said the divine whistler, as he slowly gazed around on the astonished assemblage. "When I preach the gospel to you, you all go to sleep; but the moment I go to playing the devil you're all wide awake, up and a coming, like a rush of hornets with a pole in their nest."

"Air you a preacher, sir?" he inquired slitely sarkastically.

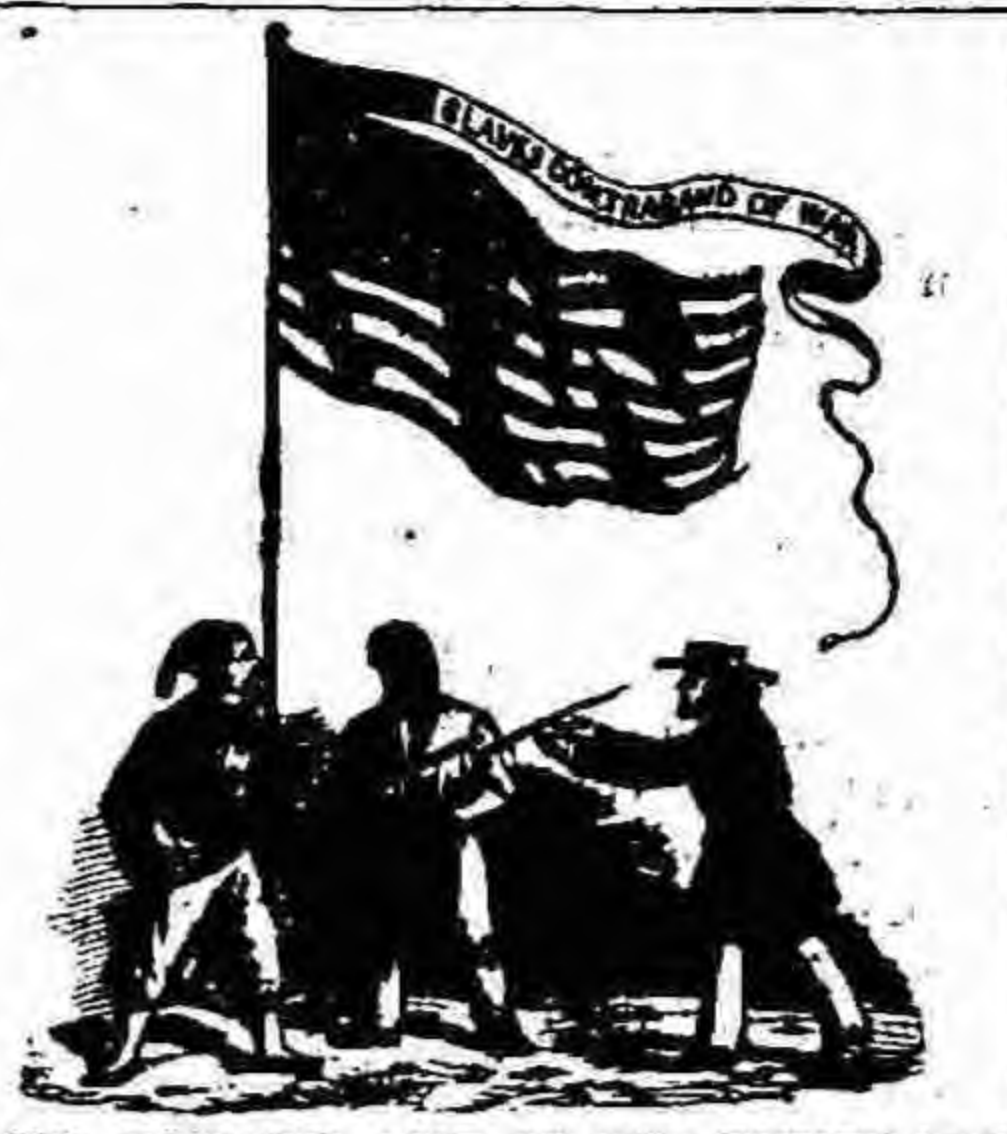
"No, sir. But I bleeve in morality. I likewise bleeve in meetin houses. Show me a place where preachers is never seen, and I'll show you a place where old hats air stuffed into broken winders, where the children air dirty and ragged, where gates have no hinges, where the women air slip shod, and where maps of the devil's 'wild land' air painted upon men's shirt bosoms with tobacker juice! That's what I'll show you. Let us consider what the preachers do for us before we aboose 'em."

MISCLELANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. for washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

Every mother should be prepared to act in the capacity of both nurse and physician to her children she can, if she will, discharge these duties much better than any one she can employ. If she does not, she ought to know that there is a Medicine prepared by an old nurse and female physician which has stood the test of many, many years, and is the most perfect thing on earth for children teething; it also cures Wind Colic, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, and is sure to regulate the bowels. We say to every mother, do not let your own prejudices, or the prejudices of others stand in the way of the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP certainly does, as the name implies, "soothe" the little sufferer into a quiet, natural sleep, from which it awakes invigorated and refreshed. And for the cure of diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Wind Colic, &c., we have never seen its equal.

We have always been, and still are, opposed to the practice of drugging infants. This article has no deleterious effects whatever, and from our own experience (we speak advisedly) we have every confidence in it, and can heartily recommend it to all mothers. Take our advice—use it—and you will as strongly recommend it to others as we have to you.

When we say that MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP acts like a charm, we do but reiterate the language of every person who ever used it for heir children, for all diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery and Diarrhœa, Wind Colic and Cholera Infantum. It will produce quietude and rest, relieve all suffering, and the infant will awake invigorated and refreshed, and not with the dull and stupefying effects of preparations of opium

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States.

During the thirty years of unprecedented and increasing popularity of MR S. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, innumerable "CORDIALS" and other nostrums, prepared by pretended M.D.'s, have sprung up and lived but a mushroom existence, the SOOTHING SYRUP has been constantly increasing in popularity, and become a household word, and for the health of their children, by the use of her valuable article.
THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS THANK MRS. WINSLOW

PRICE 20 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

nor sale by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St., N.Y.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes of people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb hat grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equral in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangemen of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat o sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body, from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is erfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.
Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions.

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.
All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, ilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS;

EMBELLISHMENT.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend,
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blydon.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship.—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brindas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell,
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne,
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Frethington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson' Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause,—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly.
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York.

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo, B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs. Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden, Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs. M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass. One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

ife of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation. 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence. 1776, 4. The Articles of Association 1775, With notes showing their bearing on salvery, and the relative powers of the State and National Government. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; the Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the Northwest Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid, single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00,

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 294 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel between decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and, his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth, $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness, Price, only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Deat Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
00 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet, and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred tofacornsedvtt and mode s.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. I. NO. 15. NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 9, 1861. PRICE FOUR [illegible]

The Weekly Anglo-African.
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY,
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
No. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

HAYTIAN EMIGRATION.

MR. EDITOR:—It is such a satisfaction to me to know that the colored Americans own one paper—to know that there is one journal in the land willing to open its columns to the other side of the Haytian scheme, that I am willing to excuse your compositors to almost any extent, for indifference to the orthography and syntax of my very long letters; but for the better understanding of your readers, and from dread of a flash of light from the south star, I must respectfully insist upon the plain rendering of my words, and the words of others when I give them. In my last, your printer makes Simon refuse to answer the people in the meeting here, when it should be "They" (the people) should not answer him.

You know, sir, that anti-slavery custom has always been "a free platform" upon which an opponent could object to the doctrine set forth; being conscientious themselves, they could afford to be generous to others; judge then our surprise, when refused a like privilege.

Redpath's fibs (falsehoods) are rendered "files;" feeble is called "bable," veritable "meritable;" wax fat and kick means I know not what in print; in manuscript I said: "sure of their pay, they wax fat and kick &c. &c. But one cannot afford to find fault when times are so stirring.

What could have wrung from him the admission, that it is but right that our people should look with suspicion on this movement, to be found in "Notes on Emigration," in the Pine and Palm? What an aisel somebody must be! Is not that a discovery to make at this stage of the advocacy! Who told Mr. Redpath that suspicion was "natural." Some one of the colored travelling agents I dare affirm. Well, really the matter is at last getting into "ship shape."

But sir, though with no intention of forestalling you, allow me to look again at those "Notes" and I there learn, that the world of mankind is entreated to hold, until the Haytians prove that their scheme is not akin to old colonization. Are we to await until another lady goes to Hayti on a secret mission? I for one, hope they may succeed, but I see no reason why the people should wait.

I fear the verdict of that jury will never come. Death has done his work too surely among the emigrants, to hope for a responsible verdict; besides, we have a much better jury in America; I mean the hundreds and thousands, in the United States and Canada, unfavorably by the reflex influence of this movement; I want no better evidence of the fatal character of the recoil, than that worse than "tosh" of the N. Y. Tribune, upon the colony of 392, which is said to have sailed on the 19th, and which is so approvingly quoted by Mr. Lawrence.

* * * * * * *

What an everlasting muddle is this whole affair at present, for, turn as one will, up, like Banquo's ghost, comes that deprecatory appeals in the face of the fact, that just one number before, the Palm, forgetful of its wise determination to try to be very civil, very respectable indeed, did in the same paragraph, change into a "vehicle of vulgar abuse," and, terms redolent with the odor of Tartar and colored women, which, with the discriminating olfactories of Haytian agents when away from Hayti, means one and the same, defy the united colored people, and, also that since then, did sneeringly tell them to wait till Lincoln should petition them.

Well, I'll give it up for the present, for Wm. J. Watkins is expected here to lecture upon Hayti;—free speech among the colored citizens of Chatham, will be stifled it is confidently supposed, from the signs and there is a determination expressed by all (but a handful of Haytian, who are afraid to go since Mr. Jones spoke of the fever,) to maintain free speech here as in times past.

"William J. Watkins is coming," say children on the street; "William J. Watkins is coming," said a man with big whiskers intensely Haytian, to another with no whiskers, at all, but intensely opposed; William Wells Brown damaged the cause,—which by interpretation, means that Mr. Brown did not utterly disregard the twinges of conscience in his advocacy "so a man better qualified will discuss with you until you are tired," said the handy men here, and on Sabbath, notices were handed in to the several churches. At the Princess street Methodist, at the First Baptist, at the Rev. Staffords, and the Union, the pastors and people being strongly opposed, notices were not read; the pastor of the B. M. E. Methodists, Rev. C. H. Pearce, read the invitation, however, and thereupon spoke strongly against the scheme; calling attention, at the time, to the wording of the notice also, which set forth that Mr. Watkins would lecture in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening; that the public and congregation were invited, but that if opponents of the scheme wished discussion, which in this region means to reply to the speaker, or state their views—they could call a meeting the next evening.

By the bad census, which all but the noodles who took the same, say is father under than over the number, fourteen hundred and seventy-five at least, out of the the fifteen hundred in Chatham, oppose the movement—these said fifteen hundred nearly, are virtually gagged. Elder Newman and other emigrants say that public meetings—meetings for free discussion, are not permitted in Hayti, but we had never supposed that this cause was in such desperate plight, as to require the suppression of free speech in Canada, until Mr. Spencer came, and now that Mr. Watkins is coming.

There is a law in this country to regulate the holding of political meetings, it has no reference whatever to meetings of this kind; yet the promoters of these Spencer, Watkins, Redpath meetings, fully believe they can stretch it over this particular gathering, hence we are told that "it is to be called according to law," as if free speech is not according to law, and that constables will be appointed to arrest any one bold enough to dissent.

When colored men attempt to play the servile to white men, they do not seem to know when or where to stop;—set such at doubtful work, and they will be found to go farther and work harder for less pay—for they never get as much wages for an equal task,—and in the Haytian scheme is no exception. Well, we'll see what we shall see, and now meetings pay, and excitement, it is time to try those sweet potatoes.

How the sweet potatoes from Hayti are found to be by New Yorkers, I know not, but Mr. W. W. Brown told people here, that they grew to an enormous size in Hayti—and so "delicious—such great big fellows too; they would exceed belief. I rather suspect that the potatoes, banannas and the fire without the trouble to kindle, took the most of our emigrants out. I know to a certainty, that one party here, (friend Thornton,) the largest man in this County of Kent, one who Mr. Redpath and his entire corps of help could not coax to "Paradise," was eloquent upon the bananna theme to a friendly crowd at the anti Haytian meeting; he was confident that once in Hayti, all to do would be to lie out under trees, and let those great banannas drop in the mouth; eat in abundance, go to sleep; awake when the nap was finished; turn over, open mouth and catch other banannas, and so to the end. One good old lady, from the East, was not so certain about the fruit, but she "always did like sweet potatoes," and as she had heard that they grew over there without "planting or tending," she must go to Heigh-tie to get some." Old Uncle—from Buxton, just wanted to go over there to get his heel warm,—he had lived in Canada well nigh onto twenty years, and had never had his heel warm, so he must go along with the children to Hayti to get his heel warm just once.

You remember, years ago, those stories about the "roast pig" of Liberia, ready dressed and cooked, and how the delusion did not find believers; in this scheme the Haytian hog, being "lean and active," will not do for the roaster, so we have the sweet potato in its stead, and that other equally improbable story, namely that the Haytian General Agent, James Redpath, is a colored brother. A large number in Buxton believed that at one time, and so thoroughly satisfied was one impressible little woman with five young hopefuls, upon the point—for she "had heard the letter read," as had a number, that when told, that he is only a little bit of a white man, who in his public career though without any known merit, except having published letters against Hayti and Haytians which he never has disowned, just two years before publishing the "Guide" —very anxious to be the man to monopolize, and embody the anti-slavery sentiment of the hour, to the exclusion of black men and white men, who had claims, and who had labored and suffered in the cause before he was born, when told that, and that he was now promoting a scheme which he does not claim to be anti-slavery that he was not going to live out there, the poor little feathers fell, and eventually her husband had to go to Hayti alone.

Our poor ignorant people sir, are the victims of every delusion. Rev Mr. Pearce said on that notice, that the devil is ever watching till our people get a little settled and he then comes around to unsettle them again, and so it appears; the promoters of this scheme, say they should be "unsettled" I know slaveholders assume to know what is best for the negro, but it is simply impertinence when men claiming to be abolitionists talk in the same strain. Depend upon it no true anti-slavery man does that. In future numbers, I will seek to show the similarity between this scheme and old colonization, no one else undertaking so to do; also to vindicate Canadian Emigration, Africa civilization, and emigration to Van Couvers Island, Jamaica and other British dependencies, from any similarity to this movement.

MARY A. SHADD CARY.

Chatham C. W. Oct. 28, 1861.

SECESSION SYMPATHISERS IN NOVA SCOTIA.

MR. EDITOR: In looking over the columns of the "Nova Scotian" of the 30th September, I noticed an article over the signature of "Haligonian," from which it appears that the author has grown very restive on account of the blockade of Southern ports by the Federal Government. In the communication he says—"But it does seem to me that something ought to be done to elicit a feeling in Nova Scotia as to the high handed acts which are being perpetrated in the so miscalled United States, upon our people and property." My interpretation of these lines is that "Haligonian" ignores the judgment of the European Governments in acknowledging the independence of the United States. Again "Haligonian" says that "British vessels and property are daily seized, and sailors sent to prison while entering the ports of the seceding States."

Now, my opinion is that it is only that swarm of outlawed bees which infests the British colonies (of which "Haligonian" is beyond doubt a member), that would show so much dare-devilism as to commit a breach upon the law of any nation with impunity. Again he says the Reciprocity Treaty is sufficient to open Southern ports to accommodate his banditti.

I think that the said Reciprocity Treaty was no more intended to open and keep open ports for the special accommodation of "Haligonian" than it was for the special benefit of Southern pirates.

Again hear him—"A party who obtained power on the principle of despoiling their Southern brethren of their property guaranteed as sacred to them by the Constitution." Now, Haligonian, I should like you to tell us what Constitution you mean. Do you mean that of the United States? If so, what do you know about that document. Sir, in honest candor, I doubt whether you ever saw it, for if you ever saw a copy of it in Nova Scotia, it is more than I ever did during my whole life, which was spent in Nova Scotia up to August, 1860. What will "Haligonian" think when I tell him the word slave is not to be found in that document, nor has the system been recognized by the Federal Government from the acknowledgment of its independence to this day? Now, Haligonian, where is your guaranteed rights?

Sir, the Federal Government gave to every State the right to make its own laws.

Now, as to slaveholding being a right, I would say, it is not a constitutional, but an assumed one.

A portion of article 4, sec. 2, of the Constitution reads thus:

"The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States."

Now, pray, friend Haligonian, how many white Americans have been slaughtered, in every conceivable way, in the South, only just because of Northern birth—male and female, young and old? In Texas alone were murdered, in various ways, in 1860, not far short of 100 North Americans, amongst whom was one minister of the gospel, who was hung last June because he sympathised with the slaves.—Was that a violation of the above cited rights or not?

Now, "Haligonian," let me reach your disease by a homœpathic pill, in the shape of a few questions.

Are you not aware that hundreds of families in Nova Scotia live the year round by the slave trade, either directly or indirectly? At Barrington, for instance, resides an old man, Mr. C—, who receives from the South some $1,500 yearly, directly from a plantation; at Cape Canso there are a Mrs. G. and a Mrs. C., both receiving their money from the South. How many vessels have been built along the Nova Scotia shores expressly for the slave trade? What captain was it that owned and sailed a brig in the slave trade for nearly two years, till on his way from Congo River to Cuba, being closely pursued by a British cruiser, made fast 212 slaves by wrists and ancles to the best anchor's cable, and run the whole down to prevent detection? Was this not the work of a Haligonian? The pirate Hicks who was hung in New York in 1860, was on board at the time, and according to his own confession, had a hand in that masterpiece of all horrors, and in which Haligonian delighteth.

I was in the cars—not three years since—on the road between Halifax and Windsor, and listened to a Nova Scotian captain whose home is in Hants county, relating the sad loss he had sustained in the loss of one of his floating hells engaged in the slave trade. The slaveholders' rebellion has clogged up the course a little, and hence all this filthy spew has found an outlet from the troubled stomach of "Haligonian."

Sir, I might name some startling facts amongst the seemingly most religious in Haligoniandom, had I time and space. It was only in the year 1859 that a minister in that land charged his God with the foulest of all crimes upon earth, in stating (while at a tea-sipping with his friends) that God created all Africans on purpose to labor all their days for the white man! What a calculation this is! Why create over 50 colored to work for every one white man?

Look on the geography at the land of the colored race; then count their numbers, and see if you can make the above calculation consistent. You need, sir, the assistance of a more able pen than yours to state your grievances.

A can only recommend (for the special assistance of Haligonian) Apolyan, whose ability in circumvention of crime of every magnitude conceivable was great, and highly appreciated by all those who, like Haligonian, prefer keeping their worthless names concealed from honest men.

JOS. SMITH,
Rose Court, New Haven, Conn.
Oct. 22, 1861.

THE WHITE LADY.

INTRODUCTION.

During a lengthened residence in Germany, I insensibly fell into the habits of the country; one of them being that of visiting an inn every night, where I drank my choppin and smoked my pipe. Among the usual guests were several who especially attracted my attention; for they had been formerly court servants, and I thought it very possible that they might possess some curious anecdotes about those sinks of iniquity, the smaller German courts of fifty years ago. Nor were my expectations deceived; for I heard the following story from one of them, which made so deep an impression on me, that I carefully noted it down at the time. I have let the old gentleman speak in the first person, in order that there might be no alteration on my part, which was to be deprecated, as the stories are facts, and the events really occurred at the Court of H——, not very many years ago.

THE WHITE LADY.

You all know, as well I, that our late most gracious master was at length left with only one daughter, as his sons died, one after the other, at an early age. Through this, the throne devolved on a collateral branch, who, thirty years ago, would not have been even thought of ever being able to pay their debts; but man proposes and God disposes.

At the time, however, of which I am now speaking, the princes were still living, and the royal family flourishing. But, although every one of us knew that one of the princes would eventually mount the throne, the whole court paid much less attention to them than it did to the Princess Marie.

I was, at that time, only a footman, and had to follow behind whenever the young lady went out walking with her governess. I was always well pleased at it, though I felt very nervous at times; for the child gave way to the most extraordinary fancies, and was, at the same time, on such friendly terms with everybody, that a number of children and even grown-up persons would follow us.

Our troubles, however, were incessant. At one moment she would give away everything she had upon her person, then she saw a stream, and wished to bathe, or a grass-covered terrace, and wanted to roll down it. Mademoiselle de Noel might well say, that this was all very improper; and I occasionally was forced to interfere, and remind her of her gracious father. The child would entreat so prettily, and dance round us, and flatter, and play all sorts of mad tricks, that at last we were compelled to yield one thing, to keep her from doing all the rest. When we reached home again, I used to receive plenty of abuse; but the next time Marie would do just as she pleased; for even the Duke himself, could refuse her nothing when she looked at him with her gentle brown eyes, or threw her arms round his neck and kissed him.

All this may be very charming in a child; but when the Princess grew up, and became daily more beautiful, it caused her much sorrow that she was forced to put those restraints upon herself which she would never learn. She wore one dress to-day and another, to-morrow, and fancied herself most charming in each; in the same way, she imagined that she could change her lovers as she pleased, as if she did not know that the poorest girl and a princess are equal in two things—in their last journey, and in their first love. The difference of rank, of course, has a great deal to do in the matter; all of you, I dare say, when you were young, thought that you could make love to any pretty girl; but not one of you would have dared to talk about such things to a princess, even if you were convinced that she was dying of love for you.

At court, though, there are always people enough who will run any risk, and try to seize the whole hand, when a princess wishes to have a whim, and only offers a single finger.

Thus it came, then, that the Princess Marie, before she was seventeen years of age, had had all sorts of intrigues, and acquired through them a considerable amount of chagrin.

I do not know the details intimately, for I was no longer near her person, having been appointed porter at the old palace in the residence; the duke and the princes, however, resided in the new palace. Still, things of this nature are talked about among servants, if only in whispers; for no one dared or would speak openly about it, for we all loved the Princess too much; she was always a kind mistress to us, and troubled herself about us, if matters did not go as well with us as they should.

I could see it all, for, if she had any sorrow on her heart, she would sit at the window and look out into the garden like a caged bird; the tears would then course down her burning cheeks, and her heart would try to burst from her bosom. Poor thing! when I saw her in this state, I could not have betrayed her to the Duke, even if she had done much worse, or he had questioned me himself.

We all entertained the same sentiments, and, strange to say, the ladies of the court as well. These women are assuredly to be pitied, for envy gnaws incessantly at their hearts; and yet they screened the Princess, through her kindness and condescension to them.

In the town itself, not a word was said about it; the citizens would have esteemed it simple calumny; and although they often grumbled about the Duke, especially about his love for sporting, yet I would not have advised anybody to say a word against the Princess, for he would certainly have repented it.

What the Duke thought about it all, I never clearly discovered; he probably entertained his own views on th subject. Still he must have been acquainted with it; for when a too scandalous affair occurred, and at the same time, it was stated that the Princess would be shortly affianced to a crowned head, he certainly said nothing further, but he placed her again under strict surveillance, and she was forced to live in the old palace with the first lady of the bedchamber.

Nothing more was heard for months, and her life was made bitter enough to her; for at that day there was a deep moat round the old palace, and the only road led over a bridge past me, and I knew every one who came in and out, and indeed had to write their names in a book.

At the same time, too, the court was very quiet. The Crown-prince had died very suddenly, and although the other two young gentlemen were still happy and cheerful, a fear and a weight lay upon everybody, and doubtless on the Princess, as if they had a a foreboding that the old family was hastening towards its end.

It was no joke to have anything to do with our illustrious duke then; for misfortune did not suit him at all, but caused a great alteration in him.

Christmas had passed silently and mournfully, and a terrible winter had commenced. I sat sorrowfully, too, at my window in the gateway, for I dare not go away, and yet had nothing to do. I assure you I could have counted the footsteps in the snow, so few people had gone in and out during the whole day.

It was growing dark, and they were beginning to light the lamps in the corridors, when the Chamberlain Vogel went past and stepped into my room for a moment.

"Of course you have heard it," he said as he took a seat.

"What?" I asked him; "I know nothing new."

"Well, that the White Lady began showing herself in the palace again yesterday."

This startled me. I sprang up and exclaimed, "That was all we wanted to settle it. Now the little life at court will entirely cease, and each of the royal personages fancy that the appearance of the White Lady forebodes his speedy death. I am only sorry for the poor Princess; they have deprived her of her liberty, and now she will lose both light and air."

"Yes, and the worst is," the chamberlain said, "that the White Lady disappears in the apartments of the first lady of the bedchamber. She comes from the top of the corridor, near the plate-room and court-marshal's office, and then descends the narrow, steep staircase into the corridor which leads on the left to the rooms which his Highness formerly inhabited, and on the right to the Princess Marie's present abode. There she sinks into the ground."

I trembled all over as I asked him, "Does his highness know it yet?"

"I fancy not," the chamberlain replied, as he stood at the window, and played the [illegible] on the panes; "but there, I see a person coming over the bridge, who will be able to tell us, if he will. You know him better than I do—call him in."

It was Baron Bilgram, who was at that time page to his Highness, and whom I had often enough let in and out by night without writing his name in the book.

He came in quickly when I called him, and we hurriedly told him the whole story. I thought to myself that he would laugh at it, for he was still young and careless. At the same time he had been at a bad school for the last half year, and had attached himself to Count Revel, who, though many years older than him, was only three or four-and-thirty, and reckoned the handsomest gentleman at court. The count was a very haughty man, and wore an expression as if he found no pleasure in any thing. He was, however, very clever, and a great favorite of his Highness, to whom he was first adjutant, so that nobody liked to say aught against him.

As the page laughed too loudly at our superstition, as he called it, I at length became vexed and gave vent to my anger, which is not often the case with me, for I said, "If the gracious gentleman uttered his own sentiments I should have nothing to say against it, for the affair will prove itself. But what he now says, is only what he has heard from Count Revel, who always boasts of his freethinking, that he may not be compelled to call his faults by their right name. I am only one of the lowest at court, but the gracious gentleman would do better, if he would listen more to the advice of a humble man than to the finenesses of the Count. Without God there is no real honor; and when I see how pale the gracious gentleman now looks, and remember how healthy he appeared half a year ago, it seems to me as if the Count did not make the best instructor for youth."

The chamberlain was terribly alarmed at my remarks, and secretly nudged me; but I knew the Baron better, for if he was not precisely handsome, he had the most honest countenance in the world, and was a true, worthy German. Nor was he at all angry; he only laughed still more, and said, "Donnerwetter, Mathies, are you a preacher's son?"

"The gracious gentleman tries to make the affair ridiculous," I replied, without suffering myself to be frightened; "but still I am in the right; we should not laugh at such a thing, for no one knows what lives between heaven and earth. And besides, it is our duty to trouble ourselves about such things, and see whether it is a ghost, or flesh and blood, and doubly so for the gracious gentleman. For what would the Princess say, if I were to tell her that Baron Bilgram laughed heartily, because the White Lady had disappeared in her apartments, and must have terrified her to death?"

I knew very well that the page was devoted to the Princess, and purposely spoke thus; for he was almost of the same age as herself, and had been her favorite playfellow when a child. She was very fond of him, too, and was always the same with him; I really believe more so than with other men; for he was not handsome, and never flattered, but was just what he was.

Still I could not account for the terror which my last words caused him. He sprang up from his chair, his eyes sparkled, and his voice almost failed him, as he said, "That is the case, then I will find it out, even if a legion of devils rise to prevent me! Trust to me, Mathies, I will not be so careless any longer!"

The good boy! I did not know that he at that time loved the Princess more than his life; that he had grown so pale and thin, because he was too honorable to have love passages with his sovereign's daughter, and could not endure the idea that his wishes could never be fulfilled. Years after, however, he told me so, when he came back wounded from Russia, and I nursed him; this and a great deal more of my story, which I will repeat to you in his words, when I do not know it from my own experience.

Thus matters stood. Days and nights passed in this way. At one time the White Lady showed herself, at another she remained away; still the story was becoming known in the town with all sorts of additions, and the sentinels crossed and blessed themselves when the apparition entered the corridor, and pressed themselves close to the wall to make room for it to pass.

Nothing had been yet said to the Duke, but when, on the eighth or ninth morning, the sentry who stood in the narrow corridor near the plate-room was found dead and dashed to pieces, sixty feet below in the palace moat, when all cried unanimously, although not a soul had witnessed it, that the White Lady had hurled him down, when the oldest and best grenadiers refused to face the ghost; they were at length compelled to tell his highness all the circumstances.

After a long consultation at the court-marshal's, it was at length decided that Count von Revel, who remained perfectly cool in the whole affair, and was only vexed at the disgrace of the military, should inform the Duke of the occurrence.

The audience lasted a considerable time; the Count, however, came back fully satisfied; for the announcement had been received with perfect calmness. The gossip in the town appeared disagreeable to the Duke, whence the conversation had principally turned on the method to be employed by which best to prevent it. Even when the Duke heard of the panic among his soldiers, he was at first silent, though he turned as red as [illegible] adjutant with some orders [illegible] batteries from the [illegible] anger, and leave [illegible] the presence [illegible] writing-table, and [illegible] other work.

I have often reflected [illegible] so clever, and learn [illegible] so well, although at [illegible] not a bit cleverer than other [illegible]. They certainly possess [illegible]. They have all they want [illegible] and may follow the first [illegible] everybody only brings his [illegible] est ideas before them. [illegible] from this alone, for [illegible] guard themselves before [illegible] they do before their equals. The [illegible] in the matter is, that the prince [illegible] every thing, even other beings, as his own property, mine and thine, however, make their eyes clear, just as the jeweller distinguishes true from false at a glance, and will not suffer himself to be deceived, if there is the slightest flaw in the brilliancy of a jewel.

In this our master was an excellent judge. He had seen at a glance that the Count must have something in the background which he would not express. What it was he of course could not easily discover, for there were all sorts of intrigues [illegible] which crossed one another in such a way that it was impossible to [illegible] enough.

Such noble gentlemen do not like [illegible] spoken persons about them at all hours of the day, and they cannot do so, or else it would be terribly difficult to govern. In a serious case, however, like this, these people rise in value into whose very heart they can see.

The Duke was dissatisfied, as little as he allowed it to be perceived. He walked for a long while up and down the room, as gloomily and irregularly as if something were driving him to do it involuntarily. At last he rang for the page.

The Baron entered, and remained standing on the threshold, not to disturb his master in his thoughts; he, however, looked him firmly and boldly in the face when he advanced towards him. "Are you afraid of spirits?" the Duke asked, and looked at him, half jestingly, half seriously.

The page's mouth revealed a slight smile, but he replied, after a little reflection, "I do not know, your Highness; I never saw one yet; but I believe that if a shadowless being were to cross my path, I should avoid it, could I do so with honor."

"But if the spectre were to meet you on duty?" the Duke inquired further.

The page blushed, and was silent.

"I would not insult you, young man. A thing which is surprising can move the heart of the bravest, and you yourself confess that you do not know the invisible net in which mortals are entangled," the Duke said, very seriously.

"I dare not say anything to the contrary, for only a trial would prove the truth of my words," the page replied. "In the end, a man can only die once, and I do not think that my heart would quake more at invisible hands than the bullet whose path I cannot see either."

The Duke regarded him kindly. "You are in the right. Good nerves and a good conscience render a man cold-blooded. I believe what you say of yourself. We will, however, render it certain; for you will be posted to-night in the corridor; you already know the reason. You will not be annoyed by company; I have withdrawn all the sentinels from this part of the palace. No one, however, must know what you have to do."

Joy beamed in the young man's eyes; a weight was taken off [illegible] heart; for he had, during these [illegible] days, been yearning to meet the ghost which disappeared in the princess's apartments. But he had nearly always been on duty, and on those nights when he was thus engaged, and had been on the watch, the spectre had accidentally not made its appearance.

He uttered his thanks to the Prince for the confidence he had placed in him, but remained in the room, although the Duke had appeared to dismiss him with the words:

"At eleven o'clock, then, to your post, Baron. From now till that you have [illegible] to prepare yourself. The [illegible] the old palace in [illegible], and to-morrow morning, at six, report yourself to me. But stay," he added, as the page [illegible] standing before him; "you have [illegible] carte blanche—if it is an impostor, take it alive. If it is a shadow, you [illegible] for it must not come again. Well?"

"I have two requests [illegible] your highness will grant them," the [illegible] length said. "I have already examined the path the [illegible] several times: on the [illegible] is not space enough [illegible] I would prefer taking [illegible] passage on the [illegible] rition must come [illegible] case. And [illegible] wish your Highness to [illegible] counter [illegible] for the [illegible] will [illegible] the [illegible]"

"Command," the Duke [illegible] ing a [illegible] offered him his hand [illegible] he quitted the [illegible] forget; you will [illegible] can employ any [illegible] circumstances."

Soon after I [illegible] towards the [illegible] the [illegible] ed his [illegible]

"Can [illegible]

"How could they through those walls?" I said.

"Well, then, Mathies, the Duke has sent me. You must bring me a grenadier's uniform, with the accoutrements and musket, into the little ante-room before the apartments his Highness formerly resided in, by half-past ten. A light is not required; I shall see as much as I want by the lamps in the broad passage. It will cost us our heads, though, if any one but yourself anything about it."

"At your service," I said.

A minister might have come to me, and I would not have done it without the Duke's written order. But the young man's word was worth more to me than a hundred pieces of paper. Consequently I did what he requested and no one knew any thing about it, so cleverly had I contrived to procure the uniform; and I carried it in broad daylight, when no one would be surprised at seeing me enter the palace with a bundle to the duke's former apartments.

Afterwards, on my return, I stopped to speak with the page. He pretended, however, not to be at home, and only opened the door when I mentioned my name; he then double-locked it behind us.

He had a damascened dagger and his pistol case before him, and was cleaning the arms most carefully. We examined every screwbolt, and employed at least a quarter of an hour in selecting the best flints. At last we had finished our task.

"So," he said; "now I will sleep for a few hours and then eat and drink, that I may have all my strength, for I have a troublesome task to night."

"I can think it," I interrupted him.

"But you must not think," he said, "and then none of your thoughts will rise to your lips; but you can listen. Something may happen to me—is not that the expression when running a mortal risk?—well then, I have no fortune, so I need not make a will; but you shall have my pistols, and you can tell the Duke that I leave my debts to him; my mother thinks of me at all times, but to the Princess you can ——" He paused for a time; "Well, then you can tell her frankly that her name will be the last word on my lips. And now make haste and be off," he added merrily, and pushed me out of the door as if I had been a child—so powerful was the young baron.

Precisely at eleven the page went from the ducal apartments, dressed as a grenadier, into the broad passage, which was only dimly lighted, for the lamps were at some distance apart.

In the first place, he again examined the ground and tried, for at least the tenth time, whether the stairs down which the apparition must descend were not wider than to allow him to touch both walls with outstretched arms, if he placed himself on the lowest stair.

Then, however, his only care was to keep himself warm and awake, for it had become bitterly cold. He placed his musket in the corner, as it would be of no service to him, and walked up and down. At times he stopped before the flight of stairs which led from the upper floor, and looked up; he then walked twenty or thirty steps farther than there was any occasion to do down the broad passage towards the apartments in which the Princess resided and thought all sorts of possibilities and impossibilities, just as such a young man is wont to do.

The Princess, however, was not in the palace, but at a party at the French ambassador's, who, at that time—and there was good grounds for it—was the most important of all the foreign envoys.

Shortly before twelve, her carriage drove up. When I had torn the gates open, he heard the sound of the horses' hoofs reecho from the gateway below, and he smiled at his own folly as he quickly seized his musket for he had wished the doors of empty apartments to open before him.

As he feared that the Princess, who was now coming up the passage with her ladies might recognize him, he pulled the collar of his cloak higher up, and pressed his bearskin schako more firmly over his eyes. He grounded his musket, and drew up close to the wall, in the manner prescribed when the royal family passed a sentry in the passages for presenting arms would have been awkward.

He had no necessity to conceal himself, for the Princess hurried past without even looking at the sentry, or hearing his heart beat. She seemed to be vexed, and in a great hurry, for dark rings shaded her eyes and her mouth was contracted, as if she were more ready to weep than laugh.

The page heard several doors open and shut and when he looked out into the court yard, saw the last lights extinguished in the garret rooms. All was quiet; he could only hear the clang of his own footsteps.

In this way midnight was long passed. The page thought at one moment on the Princess, at another on his annoyance if the apparition did not present itself, and the long looked for opportunity be deferred.

Fortunately the cold always aroused him from his reveries, and compelled him to think, before all, how he should keep his hands and feet warm.

Still he did not take his eye off the stairs, and that which he expected really took place, when he had nearly resigned all hope.

And yet a cold shudder seized upon him when, without the slightest previous sound, a white figure appeared at the stair head, and began descending, without the least noise.

The page quickly roused himself, loosed the dagger in the sheath, threw his cloak behind him, walked to the stairs, and stood with outstretched arms in such a position that the apparition must necessarily walk into his arms unless it turned back.

It came down slowly, step by step, without a moment's hesitation, though it must have seen the grenadier at the foot of the stairs long before. The page repeatedly told me that all the blood in his body seemed to have rushed to his head, and a shower of sparks dazzled his eyes. He did not, however, quit his position.

When the figure was six steps above him, he cried, "Halt! in the Duke's name."

The figure stopped, and motioned to him with its hand. He did not trouble himself about this, for he had regained his self-possession and coolness. "You will not pass me," he exclaimed, "until I know who and what you are!"

The page must have been well prepared, for he had scarce uttered the words before the figure leaped upon him like a tiger on its prey, and tried to hurl him to the ground.

It did not succeed however. The page seized the man in his arms, almost without yielding a step, and a silent struggle commenced, about which he never liked to speak afterwards, for he felt from the commencement that his assailant was the stronger, and determined on having his enemy's life for his own; he did not hope to gain the victory, and he was too proud to call for assistance.

His only good fortune was, that his assailant must have walked some distance in the cold, so that his fingers were benumbed, and he was not able to draw his dagger, which the baron plainly felt beneath his dress, when he pressed him closely to him in the death struggle.

Thus they at length fell to the ground, one above the other alternately, so that the page felt the warm breath which streamed out from behind his enemy's silken mask. At length, however, the page managed to draw his dagger, and, in his unbounded fury, was about to strike, when his opponent suddenly quitted his hold, and whispered, as if ashamed to beg his life—"Bilgram, I am Revel; I give myself up on my word; but listen to me."

The page hesitated a moment before withdrawing the dagger from his breast; but a sudden attack of trembling assailed him; he loosed his hold and rose to his feet. Quite exhausted, he leaned against the wall; the strangest thoughts flitted across his mind, like swallows round a church tower, where one is no sooner gone than another arrives; until, at length, the Duke's words occurred to him, "He must not come again."

His opponent had, in the mean while, also risen, and they stood opposite one another for a while, gasping for breath.

At length the page said, "I must know what you do here, if I am to help myself or you."

"A short question—a short reply," the count rejoined; "I love the Princess Marie, and she loves me in return. They have shut her up, so that I can only reach her by employing this superstitious tale. She and I are both lost if you speak."

"She loves him, and she is lost." A sharp pain pierced the page's heart; but after long reflection, he said, "You have broken your oath to your master, Revel—I dispise you for it—and yet I will risk my word and trust to yours. Promise me, on your honor, that you will never atttempt it again, and never tell the Princess who or what is the cause of it, then I will save you for her sake."

The Count promised. The Baron then led him hurriedly into the ante-room, where he changed his own dress, and silently intimated to the Count that he should put on the grenadier's cloak and follow him. Then he accompanied him to the gate, and said to me, when I had let the Count out, and was again fastening the bolt, "The Count von Revel's name must not be entered in the book; every thing is in order, Mathies. I will go and have a sound sleep; mind that I am called precisely at five o'clock, for I must take in my report at six."

He must have been tired to death, he looked so sad, and his eyes were quite dim. In consequence, I did not ask him any further questions, but wished him "Good-night."

The next morning the Duke admitted him directly, though his Highness had hardly left his bed, and received him with meaning inquiry, "And now, my dear Baron."

"It will not return, your Highness," the page replied, and was then silent.

"But what was it?" the Duke asked, with evident pleasure.

"It will not return, your Highness," the page repeated. "I pledge you my word. That I may be allowed to pass over the details is a favor which my prince, as first gentleman of the land, will not refuse me, for the honor closes my lips."

The Duke was astonished; still, thoughts may have occurred to him, to which he did not like to give way, and which it were better to veil in mystery. He walked hurriedly to the page, and said: "Your word is enough—have you any favor to ask? If so it is granted you beforehand."

"Your Highness's kindness has prevented a request which I hardly dared to ask. I hear that the Second Regiment of Hussars has received orders to march, and I should desire to be appointed to it."

The Prince looked at him, and nodded; he, however, made no other reply to the request, although he dismissed the page very kindly.

In the ante room, Count von Revel was waiting as usual, He and the page saluted one another, because the other adjutants were standing around; but from that time they never spoke again, nor, I believe, did they ever meet.

Now they are all gone, and their restlessness has become peace,

The best of them all death carried off first. The page entered on the campaign as captain, and returned a colonel and a cripple. There was no hope that the invalid would recover, although the Duke did every thing in his power to save him.

The Queen was never happy; the Count von Revel alone enjoyed himself all his life, for he understood, better than any one else, how to be cautious and careless at the same time, and that is always the safest on slippery ground. At last they say he became a Catholic, and according to the old proverb this would be very possible. Well! God be merciful to his soul! I never could bear him.

A young lady recently returned from a boarding-school, being asked at the table if she would take some more cabbage, replied, "By no means, madame; gastronomical satiety admonishes me that I have arrived at the ultimate of culinary deglugation consistent with the code of Esculapius.

CESSION OF LAGOS CONFIRMED.—Dr. Delany has received authoritative information from the Secretary of Lord Churchill's Council, that Lagos has been formally ceded to the British Crown. Information to the same effect also reached him by the same mail from his friends in Africa.

STARTLING DISCLOSURE.—An extensive [illegible] establishment in this city, it has recently been discovered, keeps constantly employed a large number of persons to steel ladies skirts to sell!

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 9, 1861.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

A NOBLE PROPOSITION.

ROBERT HAMILTON Esq.,

Dear Sir:—I congratulate you at the appearance once more of the Anglo-African,—a paper that gained, for the time it existed, more prestige than any other that had preceded it.

Now sir, the glorious question is, "Shall it live? I call it glorious, from the immense importance of the hour that is now upon us

It will live if we bring our patriotism, our love for the truth, not to a boiling, but a moderate heat. Let each brother and sister, father and child, do what they can—take stock in it at a fair premium. The premium to be paid in Hallelujahs when its work as a Journal for Freedom is over.

Sir, I propose to unite with some in investing Five Dollars to begin with; what will others answer? I propose no plan upon which it is to be paid, but leave that to your better judgment—but I suppose you need the money as soon as you can get it, I therefore pay immediately. Now who will be the next customer,—if not for five, or four—for three—for two—for one! for fifty cents? Keep in remembrance, friends, that this stock pays glorious in premiums, however small be the investment. Yet you must still remember, that greater the investment, more glorious the premium!

Now sir, I believe I have said enough; perhaps more than enough—for, after all, all that is requisite is but for the people to know your need, and they are ready to nobly respond.

Yours in behalf of the good cause,
J. N. GLOUCESTER.

The following are responses to the above proposition, including Mr. Gloucester's subscription:

J. N. Gloucester,	$5
H. Highland Garnet,	1
Miss Mary A. Chambers,	1
Ezekiel H. Dias,	1
"A Friend,"	1
Robert H. Vandyne,	1
Miss Susan Tindall,	1
Austin Steward,	25

APOLOGY,—Owing to a press of matter from correspondents and other sources, we are compelled to yield all the room usually filled by editorials.

Negro Nationality.

MR. EDITOR:—The movement or migrating party among our people hold up for their banner, or motto "Negro Nationality." Nothing will be lost by an examination of this subject, whose chief merit consists, perhaps in the fact that it must provoke discussion, and will lift us for a time out of the mire of "decided opinions."

They make a grave mistake who hold up this idea as a novelty, or a thing of the future. It is no such thing. "Negro Nationality," is an historic event; it belongs to the past. It is a matter which has been written about, talked about, prayed about, cursed about and lied about. From the time when the good Abbe Gregoire benevolently published a book to prove that negroes were men, to the time when Mott Glyddon and Van Evrie have published other books to prove that negroes are not men, "negro nationality" has been very assiduously discussed; nay the matter has passed into popular language, and all men admit that the negroes are "a nation"—some say "a hard nation."

We say then that "Negro Nationality," is a thing historic. The negro nation is the oldest, the hardiest, the least pregnable of all the nations of the earth. Other nations have migrated in search of their nationalities, have germinated through greater or less difficulties, have waxed great and have decayed; of such have been written in Volneys Ruins, and in Gibbons decline and fall; these nations, moreover, have yielded name and territory, even Continents to new, more powerful and more energetic nations; one great territory, Europe alters its geographical limits every few years to give place to more new nationality won by the sword or diplomacy. Meanwhile, "Negro Nationality" has fulfiled its destiny by one steady stream, the beginning whereof no history records, but whose steady volume and unceasing grandeur, roll down into the ocean of time—even as the great rivers of Africa, the Nile and the Niger, whose source are yet guessed at, while their main channels embochures have been known for ages. "Negro Nationality" has its home on a vast Continent over which no conquering race of all the potent races of the earth have ever trod, nay on whose very borders, only slight indentation have been made by the vauntedly "superior races" of mankind. Europe has been—over-run time and again by the hordes which lived in Central Asia. Asia in turn has been over-run in large part, or conquered by a handful of Africans, or Europeans. South America and North America have in like manner been conquered and held by European races, but of Africa, there she stands, the possession and heritage of the negro through all time' We therefore call "Negro Nationality" "The Nationality" of the earth, before which all other nationalities pale in the comparison.

When we turn from this broad, grand view of a great race, to look at the undertakings of our vociferous "negro nationality" friends, and examine their views, their means, their purposes, and their mode of proceeding, it seems to us that they are attempting to found only a "nigger nationality"—that is, such a nationality as bears the stamp and currency of American Christianity and philanthropy quoad the blacks: such a nationality as the American white man would concede to the American black man;—a knee-bending nationality—a wont you please to contribute a few dollars, nationality—a second-handed nationality—an under the white man's tutelage nationality—a back kitchen nationality—a 'have'nt you such a thing as an old pair of pantaloons to spare' nationality—a nationality such as British satirists pictured of a neighboring isle, with a "big beggar man at the head of it!" A nationality without a single element of the generic force, or self-reliant power wherewith nations are founded. Only think of Genghis, Khan, or Tamerlane, or Mahomet, beginning the frame-work of their mighty empires—by passing around the hat!

So far from possessing the elements of founding a nation, this movement of a few of our leaders bears on its front an admission which they should be the last to make; by assuming to found a negro nationality, they tacitly admit that the world has bitherto been without a negro nationality. They admit the vilest and meanest falsehoods with which American literature has been sullied, in relation to the relative inferiority of the negro; they admit that most stupendous and wicked slander, that the negro has yet to show his capacity to perform all the social and civil functions which belong to common manhood. It is moreover about as ridiculous and stupid a movement, as if a dozen Englishmen should sail from New York to Liverpool to found a British nationality; and who, previous to their departure, should go about town begging a few dollars with which to pay their passage money!

Let us see if these charges be true. From its inception, during its highest success, and now in its obvious decline, the African Civilization Society has been a begging institution; begging at home, begging abroad, thus depreciating, by placing in an eleemosynary position, the very negro character which it started out to elevate. It sends the hot blood tingling through our veins to think of the fact, that we are thus perpetually presented to the world as a feeble, dependent, begging race; born a begging, living thus a youth and manhood of begging, and dying with a paper sent round to ask a few shillings to save us from the Potter's field. We begin a church by begging, begin a school by begging, and now forsooth we must crown the climax by beginning a nationality by begging! Thereby showing, that so far from being an original, forceful, energizing idea, this "negro nationality" is but a larger developement of the old time way in which we attempted to set up for ourselves by depending upon others! Out upon such a "please massa" nationality! It is a libel on the negro race, and upon "negro nationality." The wood-sawyer, or the chimney-sweep, who earns his living by his own labor, pays his debts, and sends his children to school, is worth a thousand such nationalities; society is dependent on him, not he upon society.

So likewise, we find, in a speech which appeared in "London African Times," October 23rd, 1861, that the President of the African Civilization Society, the head and front of this new-fangled "negro nationality," virtually rejoices in the fact that the King of Lagos has ceded that most important port to the British Government. This is precisely as if an American citizen, blurting out in behalf of American nationality, should rejoice in President Lincoln and cabinet giving up the port of New York to the Queen of England. It is precisely such a case; because as we gather from Dr. M. R. Delany's Report of the Niger Valley Exploring Expedition, p. 56:

"Lagos, at the mouth of the Ogun River, in the Bight of Benin, Gulf of Guinea, 6 deg. 31 min. West Coast of Africa, 120 miles Northwest of the Nun (one of the mouths of the great river Niger) is the place of our location. This was once the greatest slave-trading port on the West Coast of Africa, and in possession of the Portuguese—the Slavers entering Ako Bay, at the mouth of the Ogun River, lying quite inland, covered behind the island till a favorable opportunity ensued to escape with their cargoes of human beings for America. Wydah, the great slave port of Dahomi, is but 70 or 80 miles west of Lagos. This city is most favorably located at the mouth of a river which during eight months in the year is a great thoroughfare for native produce, which is now brought down and carried up by native canoes and boats, and quite navigable up to Aro, the port of Abbeokuta, a distance of eighty or one hundred miles, for light draught steamers, such as no distant day we shall have there. Ako Bay is an arm of the gulf, extending quite inland for three and a half miles, where it spreads out into a great sea, extending north ten or fifteen miles, taking a curve east and south, passing on in a narrow strip for two or three hundred miles till it joins the Niger at the mouth of the Nun. It is the real harbor of Lagos, and navigable for light draught vessels, as the Baltimore clippers, and all other such slavers, formerly put into it; and Her Majesty's war steamer Medusa has been in, and Her Majesty's cruiser, Brun, lies continually in the bay opposite the Consulate.

This is the great outlet of the rich valley of the Niger by land, and the only point of the ocean upon which the intelligent Yorubas are settled. The commerce of this port is very great, being now estimated at ten millions pound sterling. Besides all the rich products, as enumerated in another section, palm oil* and ivory are among the great staple products of this rich country. But as every nation, to be potent, must have some great source of wealth—which, if not natural, must be artificial—so Africa has that without which the workshops of Great Britain would become deserted, and the general commerce of the world materially reduced; and Lagos must not only become the outlet and point at which all this commodity must centre, but the great metropolis of this quarter of the world.

The trade of this port now amounts to more than two millions of pounds sterling, or ten millions of dollars, there having been at times as many as sixty vessels in the road-stead.

The merchants and business men of Lagos are principally native black gentlemen, there being but ten white houses in the place—English, German, French, Portuguese, and Sardinian—and all of the clerks are native blacks."

Now then for a leader and upholder of "negro nationality" not only to give up, but give up rejoicingly such a port to the British crown, is what we term the worst kind of "knee-bending" under "the white man's tutelage" nationality. It is de naturalizing the negro in his own soil which he has held from time immemorial.

---

* Nine-tenths of all the palm oil of commerce goes from this point.

The Colored People of Cleveland on the War.

Pursuant to call the colored citizens of Cleveland assembled at the National Hall, on Friday evening, October 11th, to exchange views in regard to the war. Mr. Joseph Williams was appointed chairman after which a committee consisting of the following gentlemen was chosen to prepare business for the meeting: B. K. Sampson, Abram Starkey, James Alston, Dr. Leach, and John Malvin. The committee subsequently reported the following preamble and resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It is true beyond all question that the present armed resistance to the Government by rebel slaveholders is for the spread and perpetuity of slavery; that all the dearest interests of the nation and posterity are involved in the result of this war; that living as we do in this country, our destiny is inseparable from that of the country; that should slavery triumph in the nation's overthrow, the valued immunities of comparative safety in our persons, in the possession of property and our educational and religious advantages, are all lost, consequently we would not be regarded as indifferent spectators to passing events; therefore,

Resolved, That in the midst of our national troubles we cherish fond hopes and common interests with the patriots of the Republic, and as ever are loyal to the Government under which we enjoy the blessings of personal, though not political, freedom.

2. That in the present wide spread rebellion is seen convincing proof that slavery is a gross outrage upon the best rights of hapless victims, and antagonistic to al the declared objects of the Government, so is it the mortal foe of the very existence of the Republic.

3. That the history of this nation during the past quarter of a century illustrates that to a peaceful, prosperous and permanent Union, emancipation is an indispensable condition.

4. That as slavery, in the person of its friends and supporters, is seeking the nation's overthrow, it is the sacred duty of those in authority to proclaim liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof; that this is required alike by the dictates of humanity, the precepts of religion and the maxims of a sound national policy.

5. That in view of these considerations we call upon those to whom is committed the fearful trust of the future of this great commonwealth, to improve the opportunity, which may not again be at command, to secure the blessing of those ready to perish, the gratitude of mankind, the benedictions of Heaven, and become the deliverers of the nation, the benefactors of the race.

6. That this position being taken, we will hold ourselves in joyful readiness to bare our bosoms in battle in defense of the Union. We will pray for the Union, will give our money for the Union, and will fight for the Union. Then will the language of the great Webster, beautiful as patriotic, prove to be prophetic, that "liberty and Union are one and inseparable."

Able and patriotic speeches were made by Messrs. John Malvin, B. K. Sampson, Dr. Leach, Charles H. Langston, —Tascoe, and others. We have a report only of Mr. Sampson's speech, which reads as follows:

SPEECH MR. B. K. SAMPSON.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

We are thrown in the midst of a great crisis. Dark clouds blacken our national sky, the country is convulsed with a fearful rebellion, and the old ship of state has been arrested by the waves of disunion. To determine the nature and consequence of anticipated results, we do not fashion our system of reasoning upon the uncertain foundation of human hypothesis, but upon the laws of Providence, as manifested in the material world. He who holds this world in its course around the sun directs, also, the law of events. That Almighty being who presides over the councils of nations, who conducts the affairs of men, claims pre-eminent jurisdiction in the present contest. We then cannot shrink from the duty which devolves upon us. We are a constituent part of this nation; States owe their allegiance to the Federal government, and so does every subject and citizen of the Commonwealth. Man is no passive being but one that exults in action, untiring and eternal. It is manifest that we cannot remain in a state of indifference in view of the present difficulties. God and the civilized world require that we commit ourselves at once on the side of humanity, truth and justice. What now is the part of the colored man in this conflict? Do not pure motives actuate him to deeds of glory? Has the last ray of hope become extinguished? Has the last spark of freedom been quenched upon the altar of his heart? Never! the light of liberty burns with a brightness more brilliant to-day than that which irradiated the past. Our hopes may be blasted or defeated for a time, they may be darkened with a cloud of artificial night, but like the hope of immortality they are eternal. The blighting influence of American despotism has crushed the colored man, but the aspiration of the human heart are a part of his nature which oppression can never reach, nor the band of man stifle. Hence the American soil is endeared to him for its elements of good; he claims it as his own, he claims it in the name of the people—theirs to preserve, theirs to transmit.

There is a sentiment in the breast of man which causes him to adhere to his native country; that sentiment is natural to all, whether they are of African extraction or descendants of the Saxon race, it is innate and lasting. Our destiny is linked with that of the American people, the spirit which moves the patriot's breast is also alive in our hearts.

Mr Chairman, I hope not to be misunderstood in the advocacy of these resolutions. Other occasions may call for language more imbued with radicalism, but I desire to support the resolutions as they are. The presumption is that we exercise unfaltering devotion to the Union; but our patriotism and our hopes arise not from the efforts of McClellan, nor of the Administration. No, I trust we are actuated by feelings that conform more to the spirit of human progress and the dictates of reason.

The Union ought to be preserved at whatever cost of life or treasure, because the Constitution is, I believe, the palladium of human liberty and republican principles. Viewing the Constitution in the light that I do, my heart is loyal to it. By it the rights of all constitute the basis, and the happiness of all form the object of the government. I, therefore, confess myself ambitious of sharing the glory of preserving the union of these States, but my highest ambition is to strike a death blow to slavery. Does any man think that the Union can be perpetuated unless the cause which would sever it is removed. Will a re-construction of the government accomplish that end? No sir, it will only perpetuate rebellion. Is this Union to be maintained in its original greatness, its strength, and beauty? Is the reign of fraternal feeling to be again restored? It will require more than a selfish policy. Yes, it will require feelings of universal love, that true Promethean fire which passes from heart to heart, from country to country, warming the blood of the whole human race. To preserve this Union it is necessary to institute a philanthropy that will receive in its cosmopolitan embrace the people of every nation and every clime. Let the war be conducted on the broad principles of universal liberty, and—O! my country, though driven, like the Hungarian patriot, into exile, we will love thee still; though robbed of every political right, we will defend thee amid the thunders of battle and the clash of arms.

We ask then in the name of humanity and fidelity, in the name of the fathers and the rising generation, in the name of violated laws and murdered citizens, that Congress by the exercise of the war making power, abolish the accursed system of slavery. Let this be done and the future glory of the nation will be established forever.

It is utterly absurd to shift principles of govermental policy in a contest like this. The destruction of the unity of loyal action is inevitable, unless the cause of our national troubles is removed. The policy of the administration may be to crush the rebellion, regardless of its legitimate cause, let this be done and the blood and treasure so nobly offered will be ignominiously thrown away, Liberty will be buried in her grave, and the nation's fame stained with a lasting infamy. Henceforward there shall be no effulgent day with its beauties and excellences, but night and desolation will mark the path of former greatness. A great people will have fallen, their dying glory shall linger around them, and the wild storm shall beat upon their graves. What! Shall we perpetuate a system whose conquests and usurpations are so prolific of crime? Receive that deadliest of evils again to our national embrace? Shall the bold soldiers who so proudly marched from Arlington' Hights spill their blood in vain? Never never. We are confronted with this evil in a manner as never before and if the people will do their duty, they will bestow upon their children the imperishable blessing of Liberty and Union. Slavery is a gigantic wrong and must be abolished. The verdict of remotest antiquity has been against it. Shall we then await its ultimate design? Shall we longer listen to the wail of outraged humanity, as it sends its pitying cry of mercy to ask our aid? Patriots! if we would be true to the cause of freedom, we would not content ourselves with simply uniting the scattered fragments of a broken Republic; we would first break the fetters of the slave and link these states with a chain of universal freedom. God forbid that the American Republic "heir of all the ages and foremost in the files of time" should in the midst of such a crisis lag in blind forgetfulness of duty.

It is slavery that has infested the country for the last quarter of a century; it is this, in the person of these rebel demons, that is striking the pillars from our national fabric. But better that these rebels be tied with a mill-stone about their necks and be cast into the sea, than that this people be blotted from the list of nations; and better still that this Union should sink beneath the deep, than that slavery, with its destructive elements, should be entailed upon another generation. We cannot forget the cause of our domestic dissentions, intestine commotions and civil strife. What brought about the celebrated controversy of 1819? What placed the North and South in such hostile array upon the tariff question?—What so menanced the country in 1850? What made Kansas bleed and groan? Let the people answer.

Men speak with impassioned solemnity in defense of the Union, while they disclaim the right of the government to interfere with slavery. Such is the doctrine of Dickinson, Holt, Haskins and the Cabinet—a doctrine which persisted in must eventually subvert the foundation of the government. They even dare to quote the language of Cicero, "inter arma silent leges,"—in war the laws are silent. How, then, can they conduct this war on the letter of the constitution? Who ever heard of a war carried on upon the basis of any constitution? This war involves the destiny of millions; it is a conflict between truth and error, between mind and physical force, and it will go on until emancipation shall be the triumphant conclusion. We have an ultimate right of self-defense, which transcends all written constitutions and laws. It is a primal law of our nature, and exists as well among nations as individuals. The constitution must necessarily be transcended. Now we grant that there was no written authority by which the President could have suspended the writ of habeas corpus, but the law of necessity compelled him to suspend it. So it is with slavery; Congress can not abolish it, but there is the law of inexorable necessity which requires its eradication. Again, when General Fremont proclaimed martial law in the State of Missouri, no one supposed that the President would have required a modification of that law; but he did, and why? because it conflicts with the late act of Congress. But the constitution does not authorize martial law; it is a thing of necessity, originating in view of some terrible emergency, and not by any provision of Congress. When General Jackson proclaimed martial law in New Orleans, he did it by no authority of the constitution; the constitution does not warrant such a declaration; martial law suspends the constitution just as President Lincoln suspended the writ of habeas corpus. In these instances the constitution has been transcended because necessity demanded it; but slavery must remain untouched. It is seeking the nation's overthrow, but we must not transcend the constitution to put it down. Now, if in time of war it is transcended in one instance, why not in another, where duty requires it? We do not believe that this war should be conducted on the literal interpretation of the constitution, nor upon the constitution at all; for the saying is a true one, that in war the laws are silent. The present crisis demands that slavery be consigned to its grave, the voice of the multitude demands that slavery must die, and the fiat of nature has gone forth, declaring it as a paramount duty. We demand the eradication of this evil, as a security for our future happiness and prosperity. Since we are loyal to the Union, we claim the right to fight the battles of freedom; as subjects owing allegiance to the United States government we make this claim. But we would fight for more than country, for more than a union of States; we would defend more than human laws, we would defend those which are divine. "Patria cara cario libertas,"—my country is dear, but liberty is dearer. That is a noble soul who who would lay his life upon the altar of his country, but nobler far is he who dies to free his brother man. Shall it be said that this great people are fighting solely for the re-establishment of government? Shall a nation so enlightened support a war so terrible and fratricidal, for the mere assertion of empire? The christian world and the civilized nations expect slavery to meet its final doom.

When patriotic Rome contended against the powers of earth, she did not exclude the plebian from her gathering armies. She hoisted the flag of the country, and her subjects and citizens rallied alike to battle in one common cause. She wielded alike the sword of empire; Asia bowed to her will; Carthage humbled herself, and Greece yielded to her sway. Let America recollect the scattered elements of her strength, and march upon the threatening foe, victory will perch upon her thousand hills, and the tree of liberty will bloom in perpetual grenness. Let the issue be fairly met, and the best vestige of that barbarism be swept from the land. Let the sons of freedom rally to join in noble battle; let them come from whatever clime; whether bleached by the snows of Russia or blackened by the sun of Africa, let them come and enlist under the Star-Spangled Banner, to fight for the slave, God and our country. Refuse to do this, and the battle cry will again go forth, and the slaves will bound to the call. They will come from the everglades of Carolina and the uplands of Georgia, from the frozen zones of Canada and the tropical regions of Hayti, to deluge the land in blood.

Washington, in bequeathing his sword to his heirs, charged them never to take it from the scabbard but in self-defense, in defense of the country and her freedom; and when thus drawn they should never sheath it, but prefer falling with it, to the relinquishment thereof. That sword has been drawn in actual bloody battle. Shall it be sheathed until these hordes of Vandals have realized the vengeance of freemen? Shall it be given up until liberty becomes universal? No, gentlemen; I believe there is a providential agency concerned in this struggle. God will educate this people.— The government will be sustained, the Union will be preserved. Slavery is breathing its last upon American soil. Like the Roman Catholic hierarchy, it pants for breath, but it is destined to die. Nature will again breathe freely, the heavens will beam with a new light, and the banner of freedom will be the pride of all men and of all nations—the proud emblem of a world.

LETTER FROM J. B. HEPBURN.

Port au Prince, Oct. 7th, 1861.

To the Publisher of Anglo-African:

Dear Sir—In your paper of July 27th, an article appears against me signed W. P. Newman.

In this article Newman advises the colored people of the United States not to come to Hayti, and after speaking ill of Mr. James Redpath, does the same of me in a most scandalous manner, unworthy of any minister of the gospel.

As regards the colored people coming to Hayti, that is their own business; let every man look after his own interest according to his judgment.

The animosity of Newman against Mr. Redpath is owing to the latter obtaining from the government of Hayti the emigration agency and that it was not bestowed on him (Newman). When we take into consideration the character of the two men we must necessarily conclude that the government acted wisely in the choice made for such an important office.

It was evident to every well bred man that from the strange manner of acting on the part of Newman after his arrival here, he was quite unworthy of any special consideration from the government. A man calling himself a minister, after the teachings of the New Testament, and so intolerant as to disrespect the religion which a majority of the Haitian people profess. Why should Newman abuse this people when he is well aware that he brought on himself all that was done to him? Did he not purposely force himself into one of the great religious processions while passing through the principal streets of this city on a fete day? Did he not obstinately refuse to take off his hat when desired to do so, and in the presence of all the public functionaries? Certainly when he persisted in keeping on his hat the same was knocked off three times successively. He justly deserved such treatment from the authorities then acting. A Senator of the United States had his hat knocked off in Cincinnati, Ohio, on a similar occasion in 1830 or 1831. Why not follow the advice of St. Paul: "When in Rome do as Rome does?" Why could not Newman regulate his susceptibilities according to others sensibilities?

Newman alludes to his letter to me. The impertinencies contained in such were wholly unprovoked on my part. I caused my overseer to hand Newman my bill for rent after it was due, and instead of sending the amount, or some excuse, as a gentlemen should have done, he kept silent for three days and then sent it by his wife, whom he said I insulted on a former occasion, while asking for my rent, when he was absent. This is an untruth. I never insulted his wife, and if I had he should never have made choice of her to be the bearer of libellous and derogatory letters to me. For his scandalous letter I had him brought before the Police Court, to teach him better manners, and to let him know that in this country people cannot be insulted with impunity.

Newman, aided by the British Vice Consul had a patient hearing before the Judge of the Police Court. He was condemned to pay a fine of two hundred dollars, (Haitien Currency, about $15 U. S. Currency.) Three hundred dollars is the maximum fine in a case like his in that court, and he was fined the minimum figure. Yet he complains I bribed the Judge and asked $60,000 damages, in order to sell the property of the Baptist Free Mission Society in Haiti. If I wanted to prosecute that miscreant to any extremity I could have made an appeal before a higher court and obtained heavy damages; but what I did was merely to bring him to a sense of his duty as a man, a christian and a minister of the Holy Gospel, and not to do him any great harm.

Newman makes insinuations about bribing, but he seems to forget how many American double eagles ($20 pieces) he gave to aid him to get a decision that the church property did not belong to the Haitian Baptists. In 1857, I wrote to Mr. Curtis at Utica, and offered to lease the property to build a carriage house on. Mr. Curtis wrote back to me and stated that I might take possession of the property. I wrote again to that gentleman for more ample authority, and he then answered me stating that the board had concluded not to lease the property as it belonged to the Port au Prince Baptists, whom Mr. Judd presided over.

Newman stated that I was set on by Mr. Judd to prosecute him. Mr. Judd is quite incapable of ever suggesting any thing derogatory to his calling as a good man and a good christian, and far from being as revengeful as Newman; for certainly Newman and the Baptist Board have persecuted this poor man beyond measure, in order to get this church property. Newman further stated that I was actuated by Mr. Redpath to do him harm; this is a wilful untruth. When Mr. Redpath heard that I had issued a warrant against Newman, he called upon me together with Mr. Grice, one evening after I had retired, to persuade me to desist; he called again in the morning on Newman's behalf, but all in vain, for it was time to bridle this stubborn being so as to prevent him from doing more harm and perhaps plunge himself into such troubles that he would find it hard to be extricated.

Newman stated that I was a rogue and a villain; it is a pity that he did not make use of such language here for I would have had him imprisoned for those base lies. I send herewith a certificate from the Clerk of the Civil and Criminal Court, which proves Newman to be an unblushing calumniator. I have received more encomiums and more laudatory notices from the editors of all the news papers in Haiti for my industry and enterprise than any other emigrant who ever came to this country. I have been respected by all of the different Governments, and held a high place of honor under the Empire. I now hold a brevet from President Geffrard, under his own signature, as a member of the Common Council of this city.

I now leave the world to judge which of the two is the better man, Newman or myself. I respect all religious denominations, but really the American Free Baptist Mission, respecting itself, should not tolerate, for an instant, such a blasphemer, and a miserable wretch as their minister calling himself W. P. Newman.

Please, Dear Sir, give publicity to this, and to the certificate, and accept in advance, my grateful acknowledgments.

I have the honor to subscribe myself, Dear Sir,

Your humble and devoted servant,

J. B. HEPBURN.

CERTIFICATE.

I, the undersigned, acting Secretary in Chief of Tribunal Council of Port au Prince, Haiti, certify to all whom it may concern, that there is not on any of the registers of my administration any charge of defamation or dishonoring against citizen John Bell Hepburn, and that he has never been imprisoned for any one or other of these charges; in faith of which I have delivered the present certificate to be seen and availed by all who have the right, at the request of the same citizen J. B Hepburn,

Port au Prince, Sept. 6th, 1861.

J. M. DUVET,
Griffin.

LIBERIAN NAVAL VICTORY.

Below will be found an interesting account of a complete victory by Liberia over Spain, in a naval conflict. What a signal chastisement for one of the most flagrant and meanest cowardly national outrages, ever attempted: and what a sublime contrast is here presented between this case of Liberia which Rev. Mr. Holly was pleased to call some time ago a "semi-barbarous nation", and that of Geffrad and Hayti: who tremblingly sought the interference of the British Consul, in a similar case, wherein this same bully Spain was the aggressor.

Spanish Outrage in Liberia.—A Spanish Frigate Driven out of the Harbor of Monrovia by a Liberian Sloop-of-War.

Correspondence of the London Times.

Monrovia, Lib., Saturday, Sept. 14.

We have received the visit of the Spanish war steamer referred to in mine of the 29th August. On the 11th of September, at 8 o'clock, she entered the harbor and was boarded, according to the laws of the Republic, by a Government officer. The commander of the Spanish vessel asked the boarding-master where the best anchoring ground was. He was told. He said he wished to see the President, and expected to remain two or three days. The boarding-master went on shore and reported to the President what the Spaniard had said. Then the President, thinking the vessel had come up to have the matter in dispute adjudicated, ordered the men on Fort Morris Battery, who had been on the lookout ever since the rumor, not to load a gun. The Quail in the meantime had not a gun loaded. The Spaniard, instead of anchoring as he had pretended he wished to do, steamed immediately out of the harbor, but not out of sight of the Cape, prepared his ship for action, and then steamed, back into harbor, and brought his vessel between the Quail and a ship belonging to the firm of Johnson, Turpin & Dunbar. In this advantageous position he opened fire upon the Quail, intending to clear her decks, but only did a little damage to her rigging. You must bear in mind when the Spaniard gave his first shot, the Quail had no gun loaded: but, after the Spaniard so treachously fired, the commander of the Quail, James L. Benedict, aged 28, soon got his guns ready for action. But after getting them ready, he could not fire for fear he might hit Johnson's ship. He soon, however, got the Quail clear of Johnson's vessel, and bringing his 18-pounder to bear on the Spanish vessel, did much damage to her bulwarks. By this time the Spaniard got another shot at the Quail but missed her; and in return the Quail put a second shot near her stern, did much damage, and made the men run away from the wheel. It is supposed this shot likewise killed some of the Spanish officers. Seeing the Spaniard was in earnest about this work, a heavy fire was opened on the vessel from Morris Battery. He got at once confused, for he did not dream that there was any defence but the Quail, and steamed out of harbor with his ship in a very bad state as quickly as he could. Commander Benedict got three shots at the Spaniard, two of which did execution. The Spaniard got two at the Quail, one of which only damaged her rigging. The Quail lost none in killed or wounded, but it is supposed that the Spanish vessel did.

Religious Intelligence.

Old Zion Church, Rev. D. Stevens, Pastor, is now in the enjoyment of quite a revival. A number have joined the church, and many are still seeking a knowledge of the way of life.

We learn from the "[illegible] Recorder" that the churches in Baltimore city have recently enjoyed an Episcopal visit from Rev. Bishop Payne, and though his health is poor, yet his appearance was hailed with delight. On Sabbath morning, the 20th, he visited Rev. H. Turner's charge, and in the afternoon, Rev. J. M. Brown's. At both churches he gave short exhortations which were well received. On Monday night, the 21st, he attended the grand concert given by the Choir of Bethel Church, which is represented to have been a very fine affair. Mrs. E. Tillman, Miss Wells, Miss Neal, and Miss Cook, particularly distinguishing themselves. The choir has sustained a great loss by the death of Mr. Henry Morrison, husband of Mrs. Mary Jane Morrison, well known as one of the most active members of the female societies of this and other cities.

Another new African Methodist Episcopal Church, on the Ellicot Mills circuit, was consecrated on Sabbath, the 20th. The services were conducted by Rev. Wm. H. Waters, of Baltimore. The amount realized was sixty dollars. The members of that church are rejoicing over the great success that has attended their labors this year in building new churches on their circuit.

The church under the pastoral charge of Rev. W. H. Waters has been blessed with an outpouring of the Spirit of the Spirit of the Lord. Many are found at the altar every night, seeking redemption in the blood of the Saviour.

The Annual Lovefeast of that branch of the African Union Church having its headquarters in Wilmington, Del., was held in that city during the last week.

We are informed by the Rev. Mr. Frisby that it was a lovefeast indeed, and that, according to the reports brought in by the various preachers, peace and harmony prevails throughout the connexion.

FOUNTAIN UNION LODGE LECTURES.

Mr. Editor:—You are aware that a series of lectures are now being given under the especial patronage of Fountain Union Lodge I. O. of G. S., for the religious, social and moral improvement of our people, the general diffusion of knowledge, and the spread of the cause of Temperance and moral reform.

Secondly.—To awake the hitherto dormant intellectual abilities of our young men, inspiring them with high hopes and inducing them to throw the weight of their combined intelligence, in every effort tending to the elevation of the African race.

The series will be continued on every second Thursday evening of each month until April next. The third of the course will be delivered by the Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor of the A. M. E. Church, Bridge street Brooklyn on the evening of Thursday Nov. 14, 1861. Subject "The destiny of the African race, and the means to be employed for their elevation."

The Rev. Mr. Cain is, I am proud to say, a young man of merit, of learning, of great promise and marked ability—and I am desirous that he should be encouraged and sustained. In view of this I most respectfully and earnestly solicit your co-operation in the accomplishment of our object, and cordially invite you, if your ardous duties will permit to be present on the occasion. Hoping that the above may meet with your entire approbation, and with the best of wishes for our success, I have the honor to be dear sir, yours for the elevation of the African race, and the amelioration of the condition of our people,

John D. Bagwell

182 Suffolk st. N. Y. Oct. 28. 1861

THE FUNERAL OF Wm. WHITNEY.

The funeral of this gentleman, who died Oct. 29, took place from the Zion Baptist Church, Sullivan street on Sunday last after Morning Service.

The pulpit was occupied by the Rev. Messrs. Spellman, Cary and the pastor of the church, the Rev. J. T. Raymond. Rev. Mr. Cary read the hymn and Rev. Mr. Raymond then delivered a short but beautiful discourse, taking as his text the 10th verse of the 14th Chapter of Job. We learn—that from long illness, the deceased had become deranged, and, that while in this state, he had spoken words which his enemies were using as an argument against his Christian character. The Rev. speaker called attention to this fact, and showed very clearly its wickedness and meanness. He fully vindicated the deceased, both as regards his Christian character, and his standing as a citizen in this community.

The Rev. Mr. Spellman after reading a portion of scripture which was listened to with marked attention by the vast audience, preached a short discourse which, while it was very short, was as fine a discourse as we ever heard him preach.

These discourses produced very remarkable effect upon the congregation, indeed we could scarcely realise the fact that there was a corpse in the house, so great was the rejoicing.

MARRIED.

Boston—Carpenter.—In Hartford, Ct., Oct. 28th, by Rev. A. N. Freeman, Francis Boston to Mrs. Fanny Carpenter.

Richards—Strong.—By the same, Oct. 29, George W. Richards and Mrs. Lucretia Strong.

Myers—Williams.—In this city, on Monday evening, Nov. 4th, by Rev. John T. Raymond, Geo. W. Myers to Virginia M. Williams, both of this city.

Ward—Draper.—In Sag Harbor, L. I., on Sunday, Nov. 3d, by Rev. Alex. Posey, Abram Ward to Miss Eliza Draper.

Special Notices.

THE BALL IS UP!

FLOOR SKATING, FLOOR SKATING!

BOSTON'S

SKATING ACADEMY,

FOR LADIES.

Mr. T. S. Boston respectfully announces to his friends and the public, that he will re-open his SKATING SCHOOL, for Ladies and Gentlemen, at the

ASSEMBLY ROOMS,

178 Prince Street,

Commencing TUESDAY Evening, Nov. 12, 1861.

Terms of Admission—10 cts. Doors open at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Terms for Skating—15 cts. half hour; 20 cts. per hour.

Persons wishing to engage the Rooms for private parties, can do so by communicating to

THOS. S. BOSTON,
No. 87 Sullivan St.,
15 5t New York City.

Love, Purity and Truth.

GOOD SAMARITAN LECTURES.

The third of the Course will be delivered by the Rev. RICHARD H. CAIN, before Fountain Union Lodge, No. 7, I. O. of G. S. at their Rooms, Masonic Hall, cor. of Forsyth and Broome Sts., on Thursday evening next, the 14th inst., at 8 o'clock. Subject—"The Destiny of the African Race, and the Means to be Employed for their Elevation." The public are cordially invited to be present.

N. B.—Admission free.

MASONIC.

Notice is hereby given, that WILLIAM CLARK is suspended from Celestial Lodge, No. 2, F. A. M., working under the Masonic jurisdiction of the M. W. United Grand Lodge for the State of New York.

JOHN R. PORTER, W. M.
Oliver A. Holmes, Sec'y. 15 1

MASONIC

DIRECTORY,

FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W.G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka No. 15, Norwich, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 2d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 65 East Houston Street, New York City.

NOTICE.

All members of the Annual Conferences of the A.M.E. Zion Church who have taken shares in the stock of the Book Concern of said church, are hereby informed that the payment is now due, and they are requested to make remittances to the Treasurer, Rev. Jos. P. Thompson, Hudson, N.Y., through the mail or by express.

N. B. All who have not taken shares can do so by forwarding the amount of $10 to the Secretary, at New Bedford, Mass.

Samuel M. Giles,
Secretary of the Board.

New Bedford, Oct. 18th, 1861.

AGENCY

FOR TROY AND VICINITY.

James R. Benham is the regularly appointed Agent for the Anglo-African in Troy, Lansingburg, Waterford and vicinity. All orders or communications for the paper may be left with Mr Benham on board of the steamer "Cornelius Vanderbilt."

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delcurt, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tombrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING

To consider measures with reference to a settlement of the

GERRIT SMITH LANDS,

will be held, agreeable to adjournment, at Prince Street Hall, on Monday evening November 11th, 1861. The public are invited to attend. The meeting will be addressed by a person who has resided three years upon his grant.

Charles L. Reason, Ch'mn.
Wright Seaman, Jr., Sec'y.

Jeremiah Powers, James B. Miller,
Chas. B. Ray, A. Roberts,
Peter Vogelsang, Theo. Giles,
Henry Ross, Wm. H. Leonard,
James R. W. Leonard.

LECTURES.

The Rev. Alex. Crummell, of Liberia, W.A., is prepared to deliver the following Lectures, either singly or as a course, during the months of November and December:

1. The customs, genius, and characteristics of native tribes in Western Africa.
2. The growth of civilization along the Western Coast of Africa.
3. The progress and prospects of the Republic of Liberia.

Letters are to be addressed to Rev. A. Crummell, 331 Spring Street, New York. 12—4t

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. Eli N. Hall, Pastor, cor. DeKalb and Hudson Avenues, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock,	A. M.
3½ "	P. M.
7 "	P. M.

10 4t.

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor. Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

12–1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue.

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock,	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

Rev. Chas. H. Thompson, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½	A. M.
3	P. M.
7½	P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn. 13-1y.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr. Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

I. O. OF R. AND S. OF LOVE & CHARITY.

The regular quarterly meeting of Grand Tabernacle of the State of N. Y., will take place on Tuesday evening next, the 12th inst., at 8 o'clock, at the Masonic Hall, No. 231 West 16th St. Officers and representatives are hereby notified to attend. By order of

ROBERT H. COUSINS, G. W. S.

Attest:—
JOHN D. BAGWELL, G. W. R. S.

WANTED, A COLORED WOMAN TO Cook, Wash and Iron. She must understand her business, and have good reference. Wages moderate. Apply at 211 West 34th St. 1t

BOARDING AND LODGING IN BROOKLYN,

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

FOR SALE—A BEAUTIFUL PIC-NIC GROVE, at Glencove, L. I.—The owner has been asked by respectable colored people in that vicinity and in this city to offer for sale the above Grove. It is offered to colored persons and the public generally. It extends from West to Middle Avenue, and has a fine view of the Bay, and is near the landing. Inquire of Mrs. R. BONNER, No. 54 West 29th-st., cor. 6th Avenue.
14—13t.

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston-st., or of the Janitor 225 West 15th-st.

POCKET WATER-FILTER AND DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weight one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing

DAY, & CO.,
13-13t. Box 464 P.O., Newark, N. J.

FASHIONABLE

DRESS MAKING,

SHIRT MAKING, EMBROIDERING, AND QUILTING.

Mesdames F. A. Hamilton, O. A. Newton, and Miss A. M. Hamilton,

187 Navy Street, Brooklyn.

Ladies' and Childrens' dresses cut and made in the most fashionable style and warranted to fit.

SHIRTS of all paterns made, and plain sewing executed with neatness; and durability of work guaranteed. Orders for EMBROIDERING promptly attended to, and QUILTING executed with dispatch.

Public patronage is respectfully solicited.
12-tf

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS AND FURS,
cor. Pearl & Chatham Sts., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET,
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. Ramsey.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Pease call and examine the premises

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT, (formerly Richardson) respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, Where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this or any other city, please call at the [illegible] Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG.

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

Don't Forget,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's
HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.
The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 331 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co. N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St.,
one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t.

JUST PUBLISHED

"THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE IN LIBERIA."

The Anniversary address, on the 26th July, 1860 in Cape Palmas, Liberia, by the Rev. Alex. Crummell, B.A.

For Sale at the Anglo-African Office, 48 Beekman St., New York. Price 15 cents. 8 4t

PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE
BY
MRS. W. S. WILKINS & Co
610 PINE, ABOVE SIXTH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA 7-13t.

LADIES' FURNISHING STORE.
CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
Ready-Made and Made to Order, By
MRS. S. WILKINS & CO.,
610 Pine, above Sixth Street, Philadelphia.
7-13t.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 71 Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

TO LET.—THE UPPER PART OF HOUSE 277 South Fourth St. Williamsburg, consisting of front and back parlors, and a large bedroom, with the back basement. Rent nine dollars a month, to be paid strictly in advance. Inquire on the premises, or at this office.

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMOdate a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 1231 Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate. 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf.

A SCHOOL WANTED.—A YOUNG LADY, a graduate of one of the High Schools of this State, and who is fully qualified as a teacher, is desirous of obtaining a school where the salary would not be less than $200 a year. Address Thos. Hamilton, 48 Beekman St., N.Y.

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION. THE UNdersigned respectfully announces that he is now prepared to give instruction in the Art of Singing. He will be at home at 187 Navy Street, Brooklyn, on Monday evening, and at Zion Church, N. Y., on Thursday evening, of each week. Ladies or Gentlemen desiring instruction, will please apply immediately. Singing schools taught and private instruction given on moderate terms.

3tf. ROBT. HAMILTON,

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. Forten, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 26 Mulberry Street, N. Y. Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y.

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 6—4t

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and the public, that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 66 Sullivan Street, New York. 4-1t

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St., N. Y

MRS. E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 Sullivan Street, New York.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf

BOARDING AND LODGING.

By Mrs. Mary Johnson, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies,	$2,50
" Gentleman,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

y13t.

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER,
219 Centre Street, New York.

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts., 2 tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk Street. Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with

Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.

BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker St.,
between Broadway & Crosby Sts. 4t

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable Extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

P. A. WH [illegible]

Corner of [illegible]

[illegible]

COMMISSION MERCH[illegible]

KEEPS CONSTANTLY ON [illegible]

A FRESH AND PURE ASSORT[illegible]

DRUGS, MEDICINES, [illegible]

[illegible]

LUBIN'S EXTRACTS

AND OTHER PERFUMERY,

FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR [illegible]

BRUSHES, PURE WINES [illegible]

DIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES,

FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA [illegible]

SEGARS, &c., &c.

All his articles are purchased with great care and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS

carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S

VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR

FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH, AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Gray.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea-voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hair-brush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the same, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off, always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split, and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf, or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S

STRENGTHENING PLASTER

AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR

LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT, SPRAINS, BRUISES, [illegible]

Persons disposed, will find this [illegible] particularly [illegible]

Dyspeptic persons will find a [illegible] from its use, [illegible] gentle counter [illegible] the stomach [illegible]

[illegible]

PREVENTING [illegible]

of the [illegible]

[illegible]

P. A. WHITE, [illegible]

Poetry.

HYMN FOR THE SLAVE.

BY HANNAH F. GOULD.

There is a peaceful home above,
Where all who bear below
The cross of Christ, in faith and love,
As equal heirs may go.
There is a fount, whose waters gush
With life beyond the grave,
Whereof the master will not blush
To drink beside the slave.

The Tree that from that Holy Land
Immortal bloom receives,
Is planted where the Ethop's hand
May reach its balmy leaves.
When Death unlocks the bondman's chain,
And sets his spirit free,
No hunter on his flight shall gain,
To that all-healing tree!

The hue that marked his mortal vest—
The yoke—the stripes he bore—
In that pure world of light and rest,
Can wring his soul no more!
But, while his grateful song shall flow
To his Redeemer there,
What part is he who wrought his woe—
His earthly lord—to bear?

There is a Law, all-wise, supreme,
With God's eternal seal;
And self-deceivers vainly dream
From this to find appeal.
No powers that pure, supernal Law,
Can weaken or annul;
Nor Conscience thence an opiate draw,
The sense of guilt to lull.

There is an Advocate, who stands
Unwavering and un-feed,
For those with gyved, but guiltless hands,
That higher Law to plead.
Whoe'er his neighbor robs of rights
Which God with being gave,
Against Omnipotence he fights—
Himself to sin a slave!

Whoso on hand and bosom wears
Fine gold and sparkling gem,
That sprang from drops of sweat and tears,
Where bondmen planted them,
Then boasts of Freedom! rights of birth!
And grasps his trembling slave—
His mockery taints the air—the earth—
It scents beyond the grave.

And he who wears the Christian name,
To mask an earthly heart;
And puts the cause of Christ to shame,
To prop a human mart,—
The holy flame how shall he face
From God's all-searching eye,
That may the Mene, Tekel! trace,
Which he may not defy!

For there's a throne—a holy throne,
Where Justice holds the scale,
Whilst ever soul's concerns are shown,
And many a hope must fail.
The Judge, whose eye unerring sees
Each deed and thought, is He
Who saith, 'What did ye unto these,
Ye did it unto me!'
Newburyport, Mass.

[For the Weekly Anglo-African.]

I'LL THINK OF THEE.

I'll think of thee when morn's first flush,
Shall stream its glittering rays on high,
Of thee, when twilight's crimson flush
Shall spread and kiss the eastern sky,—
I'll think of thee in gloomiest hours,
And in the spring time's brightest glow,
Of thee, when Autumn's dying flowers
So mournfully around me strew.

I'll think of thee when clouds depart,
And cares and troubles all shall flee;
Yes, thine, forever thine! my heart
Shall ever cherish thoughts of thee;
And when in pleasure's giddy rounds
From cares and toils of mind you're free,
Or if you drain life's bitter grounds,
My earnest prayer is—"Think of me."
MICHIGAN, Oct 10th, 1861. M. E. B.

ANOTHER TRUE STORY.

A few weeks since we read in The Independent a thrilling story from the pen of C. L. Brace, showing the tendency of slavery to harden the heart and render a slaveholding community oblivious of justice, honor, or humanity.

A similar incident was related to us by a Christian man, whose early years were spent in the sunny South. We give the reminiscence, as far as possible, in his own language:

During my residence in Richmond, Va., said Mr. B., I knew a bright little slave-boy named Edward Maurice. As soon as he was old enough, Ned was taught to work at a blacksmith's forge. At eighteen he could shoe his master's horses, and do most of the blacksmith work on the plantation. One day I learned that the boy was very sick, and the doctor had pronounced his case incurable, unless he could be sent to a northern climate; and his master kindly provided the means of sending his slave to the mountainous region of Virginia, and sent a small sum to "mine host" of a village tavern to take care of him for three months.

Before leaving home, Ned received the assurance that, if he recovered his health, and could work in a colder climate, when he had earned three hundred dollars, it should be received by his master as the price of his freedom. But there seemed little probability that the boy could live until the expiration of the three months for which his board was to be paid.

Years passed by, and we heard no more of Ned Maurice. Everybody supposed him dead; and who was to care for a slave who was worth but $300—less than young master's pony.

Had the boy a mother? we enquired; and being answered in the affirmative, we thought that there was a world of affection pent up in that slave-mother's heart for her poor lonely boy, who had gone away to die among strangers. In the language of Mrs. Stowe's Address to the Mothers of America, "By the sacred love you bear your child; you, who have learned by the cradles of your own children to love and feel for all mankind—by the motherly tenderness and pity with which you guide his growing years—by the prayers you breathe for his eternal good, I beseech you pity the mother who has all your affection, and not one legal right to protect and to guide the child of her bosom."

Three years had elapsed when Ned Maurice suddenly presented himself before his master, and pouring the hoarded treasure upon the table, heard him exclaim, "All right, boy, three hundred dollars!" Thus the inestimable boon of freedom was to be secured to the slave-boy, and soon the joyful news was communicated to his mother. And now that his own liberty was secured, seemed a light thing to Ned to earn the money that would also purchase freedom for his mother. By his master's advice, he returned to work in the same healthy spot among the mountains of Virginia.

And there, a few months after, Ned was found by his former master, who told him very coolly that he must return to the plantation, as he could no longer dispense with his services. In vain the poor fellow protested that he had paid the full amount demanded, and had purchased his freedom. His master replied that he had only paid for his time—the three years' labor he had lost by the absence of his slave.

Then arose in that village tavern a storm of indignation. This was indeed "sharp stock-jobbing in human flesh," to which "mine host" had a few words to utter that touched a sensitive spot in the soul of a man who was not wholly indifferent to the opinion of others. Edward Maurice had by his honesty and diligent, self-denying industry, gained many friends in that village who had aided him in amassing the sum he had required to purchase his freedom. A compromise was immediately made. One hundred and fifty dollars were added to the three hundred already given, the free papers were drawn and placed in his hands, and now indeed Ned was for ever emancipated from slavery.

Of his subsequent history Mr. B. has not been informed; but we may hope that by the same heroic, self-denying effort that procured for Ned the priceless boon of freedom, his poor mother has been rescued from bondage and is now sharing with him the same blessing. L. L.

[Independent.

THE FREED MEN AT FORTRESS MONROE.

In view of the importance of some settled system in subsisting and clothing the "contraband" negroes, Gen. Wool recently referred the subject to the heads of the different departments in his command. After considering the subject fully, they made a report to the General, on which he has based the following order:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF VA.,
Fort Monroe, Nov. 1, 1861.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 34.—The following pay and allowances will constitute the valuation of the labor of the contrabands at work in the Engineer, Ordnance, Quartermaster, Commissary, and Medical Departments at this post, to be paid as hereinafter mentioned:

Class 1.—Negro men over 18 years of age, and able-bodied, $10 a month, one ration, and the necessary amount of clothing.

Class 2.—Negro boys, from 12 to 18 years of age, and sickly and infirm negro men, $5 per month, one ration, and the necessary amount of clothing.

The Quartermaster will furnish all the clothing

The Departments employing these men will furnish the subsistence specified above, and as an incentive to good behavior to be withheld at the discretion of the Chiefs of the Departments respectively, each individual of the 1st class will receive $2 per month, and each individual of the 2d class $1 per month, for their own use.

The remainder of the money valuation of their labor will be turned over to the Quartermaster, who will deduct from it the cost of the clothing issued to them; the balance will constitute a fund to be expended by the Quartermaster, under the direction of the commanding officer of the Department, for the support of the women and children and those who are unable to work.

For any unusual amount of labor performed they may receive extra pay, varying in amount from 50 cents to $1; this is to be paid by the Departments employing them to the men themselves, and to be for their own use.

Should any man be prevented from working on account of sickness for six consecutive days in any one month, one half of the money valuation will be paid. For being prevented from laboring for a longer period than ten days any one month, all pay and allowance ceases.

By command of Maj.-Gen. Wool.
WM. D. WHIPPLE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

This plan is both simple and just. It insures proper care for all, as the result of the labor of those who can work, so far as, above their own clothing, their wages will do it, the deficiency to be supplied by the Government. The money-pay and overwork will operate as a healthy incentive to all.

In obedience to this order, sergeant Smith of the Quartermaster's department has to-day been engaged in issuing clothing. The suits are serviceable, comfortable, and quite as good as the better class of laborers generally have, and have been purchased of the Seamless Clothing Company, at the rate of $5 50 per suit. In a letter to Quartermaster Tallmadge on the subject, Quartermaster-General Meigs, has directed him to clothe and subsist the negroes according to "the standard of the best Virginia masters." I fancy that Virginia has seen few better "masters" than Capt. Tallmadge, who, viewing the question as a practical one, has allowed neither maudlin sympathy nor anything akin to an opposite sentiment to interfere with the management of the "contrabands." Capts. Taylor, Stewart, and Baylor, on whose report the General based his order, took the same practical view of the subject, and takes a lively interest in caring for the welfare of the "contraband."

Cor. of N. Y. Tribune.

Mrs. Smikes says the reason children are so bad this generation, is owing to the wearing of gaiter shoes, instead of the old fashioned slippers. Mothers find it too much trouble to untie gaiters to whip children, so they go unpunished; but when she was a child, the way the old slipper used to do its duty was a caution.

A gentleman calling one morning on a female friend, was answered by a country servant boy that she was not at home.

"I will thank you to give her this," said he, handing him a card.

"Shall I go up and give it to her now, sir?" said the boy.

THE RECAPTURED NEGROES IN LIBERIA—THEIR CONDITION.

During the past twelve months, the living freight of eight slavers, captured by American cruisers, numbering upward of four thousand five hundred souls, from the Congo country in western Africa, have been landed in Liberia. Most of them are very young persons—a large number ranging between the years of eight and fourteen. To such as feared injurious effects to that Republic from the sudden accession of a large a mass of barbarism, the subjoined letter will afford relief. Its author, Mr. Crummell, was formerly rector of a church in New York city; graduate of Queen's College, Cambridge, England, and for eight years a resident missionary in Liberia of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States. He is now one of the Professors elect for the Liberia College, which is expected to be opened with a large class in December:

"217 Sullivan street, New York city.
Sept. 5, 1861.

"DEAR SIR:—I find in your letter a question which has already, even before leaving the coast, come to me from other correspondents in the United States. It is this: "If you take further shipments of Congoes, will they not seriously affect the interests of the Republic, and may they not jeopardize the very existence of the people and the Government?" To this I must reply to you:—First, that the Providence of God in the recaptures is one of the greatest blessings which could have been bestowed upon the Liberians for the Liberians themselves. For it gives them, first of all, a laboring population, which is their great need in the cultivation of their great staple—sugar. The neighboring nations do not supply this need, chiefly because they are more especially engaged in trade, and so well acquainted with our colonists and their habits, that they know well how to inconvenience our planters by a demand for high wages, and by irregularity in labor.

"The Congoes are apprenticed to our citizens; are remarkably pliant and industrious, and peculiarly proud and ambitious of being called "Americans." The result of their arrival in our borders is, that already hundreds of acres are being cleared for sugar farms; and those citizens who for years have been satisfied to live in the midst of weeds, have been prompted by this auxiliary to plant extensively, and are as ambitious of wealth as any of our citizens. Second, its influence upon surrounding tribes is equally manifest. They dislike the Congoes, and as a consequence, the Congoes are thrown upon us. This leads them to the adoption of American habits, and prompts us Americans to adopt measures for the thorough assimilation of these people to our habits They go to our schools. They crowd our churches. They adopt our dress. They speak English. They are trained with our militia. I have no hesitation in saying that all our native wars are at an end. The Congo additions to our force already staggers and confuses the natives at all our settlements. Thirdly, So plastic is the Congoes' character, that they are easily moulded into Americo-Liberians, and into their habits. In Palmas we have not seen a single relic of their heathenism. They are regular attendants at church, industrious, polite, contented. In Sinou some have already intermarried with our colonist women, and in two cases are thrifty men and members of the church. Two years ago, they were naked heathens in a slave-ship. On the St. Paul's, masses of them are industrious peasants.

"I need not speak of the benefit to them in thus being in juxtaposition with civilization, under an orderly Government and Christian influence.

"So far, then, as we are concerned, I am satisfied that President Benson does not exaggerate in the declaration that we can receive twenty thousand without any detriment to our own civilization There are one or two provisos to be connected with this—namely, that our christian societies may not be harassed by the cry from missionary societies in America, 'Go preach to the heathen in the interior,' when our work is in our own settlements, in our own servants and laborers, and when our indirect influence upon the interior tribes will be a deal more powerful than a few feeble attempts at missionary work in the interior; and next, that the friends of Liberia sustain our efforts to increase our schools and educate the humblest of our citizens—namely, native servants and Congo recaptures.

This cannot be pressed too strongly.—There is a deficientcy of females among the recaptures; there is an excess of females among the colonists; and just as fast as these new men are civilized, they will intermarry amongst us. This has already, to a small extent, taken place; and the whole process shows the absolute need of an immediate effort for a wide diffusion of education in the Republic.

ALEX. CRUMMELL."

FUGITIVE SLAVES IN THE WASHINGTON JAIL.—There are some facts connected with the slavery question in this city, which need ventilation. Our city jail is crowded with fugitive slaves. They are without claiments, and many of them doubtless once belonged to men now in the rebel ranks. One of them certainly did, for his late master was John A. Washington, of the Mount Vernon estate. By what statute these slaves are kept in the United States' jail, no one seems to know. They are put and kept there by a Republican marshal, and it is a well-known fact that prominent office-holders here hold that the late Confiscation Act does not free the negroes who come under its operation, but simply turns them over from rebel masters to the United States' government—the government owning them. According to these theorists, the people of the North have become slaveholders in the act of Congress, and it rests with them, through Congress, to decree the fate of the confiscated slaves, whether they shall be sold at auction or freed.

This is not the view the men who made the law took, nor will any anti-slavery court make any such decision; but under these mistaken views, shameful injustice is done a number of colored men now lying in the United States' jail, and kept there by authority of a Republican Administration. Slaves are also continually returned to claimants from camp, and files of soldiers often are seen escorting a fugitive back to his master or to the district jail. These outrages must and will have an end.—Washington Cor. Indedendent.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT—A little girl, in a family of my acquaintance, a lovely and precious child, lost her mother at an age too early to fix the loved features in her remembrance. She was as frail as beautiful, and as the bud of her heart unfolded, it seemed as if won by that mother's prayers to turn instinctively heavenward. That sweet conscientious, prayer-loving child was the idol of the bereaved family. She would lie upon the friend who took a mother's care of her, and winding one wasted arm about her neck, would say: "Now tell me about my mamma?" And when the oft-told tale had been repeated, would softly ask, "Take me into the parlor, I want to see my mamma." The request was never refused; and the affectionate child would lie for hours contentedly gazing on her mother's portrait. But

"Pale and wan she grew, and weakly—
Bearing all her pain so meekly,
That to them she still grew dearer,
As the trial hour drew nearer."

That hour came at last, and the weeping neighbors assembled to see the little one die. The dew of death was already on the flower as its life-sun was going down. The little chest heaved faintly—spasmodically.

"Do you know me, darling? sobbed close in her ear the voice that was dearest; but it awoke no answer.

All at once a brightness, as if from the upper world, burst over the child's face colorless countenance. The eyelids flashed open, the lips parted, the wan, cuddling hands flew up, in the little one's last impulsive effort as she looked piercingly into the far above.

"Mother," she cried, with surprise and transport in her tone—and passed with that breath into her mother's bosom.

Said a distinguished divine, who stood by that bed of joyous death:

"If I had never believed in the ministration of departed ones before, I could not disbelieve it now!"

"Peace I leave you," said the wisest Spirit that ever passed from earth to heaven Let us be at peace, amid the spirit-mysteries and questionings on which His eye shall soon shed the light of eternity.

A CLEAR CASE OF FRAUD.

It is related by one of the dispatches from the battle field at Edward's Ferry, that when our brave boys were trying to make their way from the trap into which they had been foolishly led, back across the Potomac, a poor negro with a small skiff employed himself the whole night in ferrying over the fugitives. He succeeded, in this way, in saving the lives, or in securing the escape, at least, of no less than one hundred persons. His master all the while was probably on the Virginian shore trying to send a Minie ball into the hearts of our men.

Now, as the "service" of this fellow did not belong to himself but his masters, what right had he to lend his labor to our suffering soldiers? Was he not defrauding his owner? Will not some of our Generals insist upon "delivering him up," to be properly punished for so audacious a use of his muscles! Of course, no one will be so insane as to propose that he should be emancipated for this timely rescue of so many loyal troops. That would be Abolitionism; that would be interfering with the sacred institution; that would be confessing that negroes are men and entitled to a decent respect.

At a convention of clergymen, not long since, it was proposed by one of the members, after they had dined, that each man should entertain the company with some interesting remarks. Among the rest, one drew upon his fancy and related a dream. In his dream he went to heaven, and he described the golden streets, etc. As he concluded, one of the divines, who was somewhat noted for his penurious and money-saving habits, stepped up to the narrator and inquired jocosely:

"Well, did you see anything of me in your dream?"

"Yes, I did."

"Indeed! what was I doing?"

"You were on your knees."

"Praying, was I?"

"No—scraping up the gold!"

ABATING A NUISANCE.—Mrs. Sourby says she would whip that oldest boy of hers, but he is so cunning. The other day he fried one of his stockings with a beef-steak, for which he should have been whipped, but, as Mrs. Sourby observes, "he is so cunning." Yesterday he got hold of Mr. Vinegar's hen canary, and, "to keep her from falling backwards," as the urchin alleged, plucked her tail feathers out!—rather a queer prescription too. It is not necessary for us to say that Mr. Vinegar swore roundly at that improvement.

The last we saw of Vinegar, he was asking of Dr. Briggs how much arsenic it would take to abate a nuisance about six years old? What Vinegar meant by this, time alone can determine.

A COOL DUTCHMAN.—A cunning old Dutchman was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature some years ago, from ——— county. On one occasion he promised a lobby member to vote for a certain local measure; but when the measure came up he voted against it, and it was lost. The lobby member came to him in great wrath, and the following colloquy ensued:

"Sir, you promised to vote for my bill."

"Vell, said the Dutch member, "vell, vat if I did?"

"Well, sir, you voted against it."

"Vell, vat if I did?"

"Well, sir, you lied!"

"Vell, vat if I did?" was the cool reply.

BAD THINGS.—A dirty cook, a smoky house, a perpetual scold, an aching tooth, an empty purse, a false friend, an improvident servant, an intemperant parent, husband or wife, an incessant talker, a first-rate appetite and nothing to eat, a dull shaving razor passing over a pimpled face, musketoes and bugs in a bed-chamber, and a dandy.

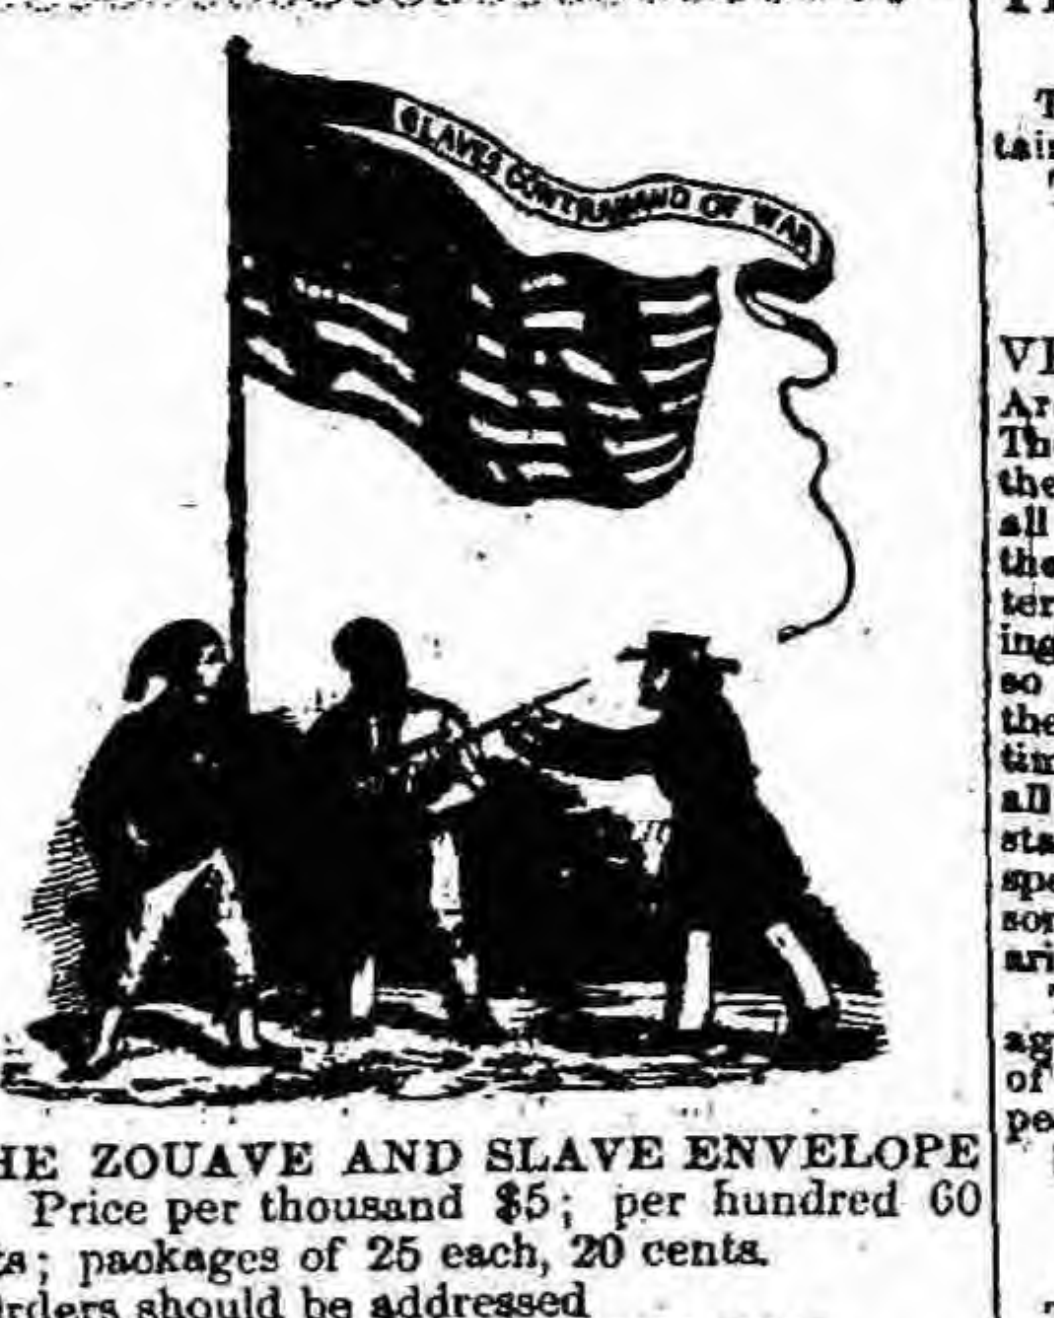
A woman was arrested for drunkenness, and being asked why she was drunk again, exclaimed:

"Me drunk, yer honor! Why, the only thing that I've had this blessed day was a pint of gin and two ounces of snuff; and what is that, yer honor, for a woman who has a large family to attend to!"

Old Guzzlefustin having drank nine mugs of cider at a neighbor's house one evening, observed upon rising to leave:

"I believe, neighbor T., I'll take a little more of your cider. I love good cider as well as anybody, but as for swilling it down as some people do, I never could."

MISCLELANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y.

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. for washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

MRS. WINSLOW'S
SOOTHING SYRUP.

Every mother should be prepared to act in the capacity of both nurse and physician to her children she can, if she will, discharge these duties much better than any one she can employ. If she does not, she ought to know that there is a Medicine prepared by an old nurse and female physician which has stood the test of many, many years, and is the most perfect thing on earth for children teething; it also cures. Wind Colic, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, and is sure to regulate the bowels. We say to every mother, do not let your own prejudices, or the prejudices of others stand in the way of the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP certainly does, as the name implies, "soothe" the little sufferer into a quiet, natural sleep, from which it awakes invigorated and refreshed. And for the cure of diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Wind Colic, &c., we have never seen its equal.

We have always been, and still are, opposed to the practice of drugging infants. This article has no deleterious effects whatever, and from our own experience (we speak advisedly) we have every confidence in it, and can heartily recommend it to all mothers. Take our advice—use it—and you will as strongly recommend it to others as we have to you.

When we say that MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP acts like a charm, we do but reiterate the language of every person who ever used it for their children, for all diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery and Diarrhœa, Wind Colic and Cholera Infantum. It will produce quiet and rest, relieve all suffering, and the infant will awake invigorated and refreshed, and not with the dull and stupefying effects of preparations of opium

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States.

During the thirty years of unprecedented and increasing popularity of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, innumerable "CORDIALS" and other nostrums, prepared by pretended M.D.'s, have sprung up and lived but a mushroom existence, the SOOTHING SYRUP has been constantly increasing in popularity, and become a household word, and THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS THANK MRS. WINSLOW for the health of their children, by the use of her invaluable article.

PRICE 20 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

For sale by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St., N.Y.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs, sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes of people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Billous Stomach, Billous Bowels, Billous Colic, Billous Fever, and all diseases which arise from a billous state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equral in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken, occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of this world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.
Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of troject.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.
All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.
PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1 00
CONTENTS;
EMBELLISHMENT.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake: or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship—by James M'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihudas De Salas.—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jeff er Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon,
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly.
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.
Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs. Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass. One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S. H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In papes, 294 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x22, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents) must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1 25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, "Vina," after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price, only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual;
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
60 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred [illegible] and models.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. I. NO. 16. NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 16, 1861. PRICE FOUR [illegible]

The Weekly Anglo-African
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY,
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
No. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed
ROBT. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

Poetry.

"How Beautiful is Earth."

BY MRS. SIGOURNEY.

Oh God! how beautiful is earth,
In sunlight or in shade;
Her forests with their waving arch,
Her flowers that gem the glade.

Her hillocks, white with fleecy flocks,
Her fields with grain that glow,
Her sparkling rivers, deep and broad,
That through the valleys flow.

Her crested waves that dash the shore,
And lift her anthem loud,
Her mountains with their solemn brows,
That woo the yielding cloud.

O God! how beautiful is life
That thou dost lend us here,
With tinted hopes that line the cloud,
And joys that gem the tear;

With cradle hymns of mothers young,
And tread of youthful feet,
That scarce, in their elastic bound,
Bow down the grass-flowers sweet;

With brightness round the pilgrim's staff,
Who, at the set of sun,
Behold the golden gates thrown wide,
And all the work well done.

But if this earth which changes mar,
This life to death that leads,
Are made so beautiful by Him
From whom all good proceeds,

How glorious must that region be
Where all the pure and blest,
From change and fear and sorrow free,
Attain eternal rest.

[From the Chatham (C. W.) Argus.]

FALL.

BY J. W. MENARD.

Varied leaves are all now falling,
From where nature gave them birth;
They're obeying nature's calling—
"Dust to dust and earth to earth."

Frost is robbing earth's fair adorning,
By its chilling, withering hand;
See its victims every morning
Lying prostrate o'er the land!

Sportive birds have ceased their singing—
Sad are we without their song;
Still the fountain's voice is ringing,
Making music all day long.

Northern winds are fiercely blowing—
Sad and dreary is each day;
Dim old Luna's halo is glowing—
Faint and lifeless in its ray.

Spring is mourning—Fall is laughing—
Winter grins behind its pall—
Autumn's boasting of its victory—
Winter soon will plan its fall!

THE COTTON ARGUMENT AND CONFIDENCE GAME REVIEWED.

MR. EDITOR:—It was my intention to have sent you a review of the arguments in favor of Haytian emigration; but I rejoice that that has become unnecessary, others more competent and more favorably known having taken the matter in hand. I therefore, for the present, content myself with a brief notice of the "confidence game" and the cotton argument, both of which have been pretty freely used by Mr. Redpath and his subordinates.

It must have been noticed by others as well as myself, that lack of argument on the part of the emigrationists, generally finds a substitution in somewhat loud and long vociferations of "good intentions," "disinterestedness," &c., ad nauseam. This plea, somehow or other, never fails to remind me of an anecdote once told by Garrit Smith. According to his relation, a church member was once arraigned for adultery, and the testimony going rather hard against the offender, all he could say was—"I know very well that my intentions were good!"—Admit that Mr. Redpath et id omne genus are animated by similar good intentions, those acts, so far as emigration is concerned, are none the less abominable.

But an appeal is made to the "record," therefore to the record let us go, and profit by its teachings. When the paper now called the "Pine and Palm" came into the possession of Mr. Redpath, there may have been hopes, that with perhaps a dash of his pompous and patronizing air, he would yet be faithful enough to our interests to say, in effect: "Colored men and women: this new emigration scheme now so persistently thrust upon you, is something which concerns you and you alone. It involves the breaking up of your schools and churches, the scattering of your [illegible] the abandonment of all your cherished hopes, and the sundering of all the holy ties of home, kindred and kind associations that bind you to your native land. The question is a momentous one, and those who would do aught to prevent your giving it the closest scrutiny. My paper, therefore, as a faithful friend, invites the fullest and freest discussion of everything relating to the people."

Had some such course been adopted; my confidence in the disinterestedness and good will of the man, would, probably have remained unimpaired, how much severe I might have detested his scheme for its pernicious effects. But, behold the "record!" After a partial tirade of abuse directed against all who had opposed the plan, any reply, all discussion, was cut off by that favorite appliance of petty tyrants, a gag law, the first enunciation of which read as follows:

"Notwithstanding our hint last week, the communications that continue to come to us on the Emigration question are even more personal than before. With this number, therefore, we close our columns to the discussion. As historians of passing events, we will record, carefully, everything relating to the movement; about the question, nothing."—Emigration Organ, March 23d, 1861.

Thus, on a palpable pretence, we were denied, so far as Emigrationists were able to prevent it, any utterance of our thoughts on a "question" of vital importance. I use the word "pretence" deliberately, because of the malignity with which that paper, now the "Pine and Palm," has since heaped upon our representative men the vilest of personal abuse, is part of the "record," and proves it to have been nothing else. That the scurrilous attack on a woman, one whom thousands have learned to bless for her self-denying labors, shows the animus of the liberal and gallant editor.—Add to this the deception practiced by a careful reticence in regard to important facts, a wilful prevarication for the purpose of concealing some of "the qualities of the isle," the domineering spirit manifested, and the unscrupulousness displayed in general, and we have a record of "practical" iniquity, never surpassed by the worst of our enemies.

The "record" indeed! "I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word." It will not soon be forgotten, and unless the prime movers speedily forsake the scheme, it will cover their names with an infamy that will cling to them through succeeding generations. "Practical," undoubtedly, as any Legree that ever wielded the lash, Mr. Redpath is, if his estimate of colored character—"returning a kiss for a kick"—be correct; but the fast-gathering storm of popular indignation, I apprehend, will teach him that he is slightly mistaken.

It is stated that Hindoo Brahmins teach that the world stands upon four elephants, and that the elephants in turn are supported upon the back of a huge turtle; but further than that they resolutely refuse to explain. A similar theory, equally philosophical and satisfactory, I find has been advanced by those who would induce our colonization in Hayti. As pirates carry the flag of the nation they plunder, so these emigration ships that should be shrouded in black, flaunt a banner inscribed—Anti-Slavery! Thus one person, before leading a colony to their graves, told us about a "reflex influence" that would speedily blow slavery to smithereens; but considering that about 11,000 emigrants went to Hayti about the year 1824, without liberating a single slave, I was constrained to regard the "reflex influence" adverted to as something rather mythical, having its existence and carrying on its principal operations in the brain of an enthusiast. But the philosophical mind of Mr. Redpath, practically grasping the subject, seems to have made a discovery, which his agents are now traveling hither and thither to impart to less fortunate mortals. All the anti-slavery of the project rests in cotton! Lest, however, I should be accused of misrepresentation, I give the theory in the words of the eloquent H. Ford Douglass, which is the ablest statement of it I have anywhere met:

"Disinterested benevolence is a rare virtue in this world, and the most hopeful soul must despair of ever seeing slavery abolished by the supremacy of the slaveholder's moral nature over his selfish love of gain. By concentrating free labor in the tropics we shall be able to attack slavery with that most efficient of all weapons—competition. Experience has taught us that slave labor can only be profitably employed in the sugar and cotton growing regions of the world, and only there because they have a monopoly of those articles which are in universal demand by the civilized world outside of the tropics. It is a system whose very life depends upon a monopoly of the raw material produced, fed by a single stream, sugar and cotton. Turn this Euphrates aside and Babylon with its gilded splendor must capitulate."—Anglo-African, April 20th, 1861.

Concerning the facts, with which every schoolboy ought to be acquainted, the confidence with which such assumptions are made, and that too by men who undertake to be public teachers, is to me really astonishing. So far, indeed, from Slavery's being only able to exist in the regions mentioned, it seems to have been almost a universal crime. In ancient times it existed in Egypt, Greece, Rome, &c.; at a later day it lurked in England, Ireland, and Barbary States; more recently still 20,000,000 slaves were clanking their chains on the icy steppes of Russia; and all, everywhere, without producing a single pound of sugar or one fibre of cotton. At the present moment it exists in at least four of our States in which the cotton and sugar are not the staple productions, and, it is well known, that though raising sugar and cotton in Kansas would be an impossibility, that Territory was saved from being overrun by the blighting curse, only by years of resistance even to blood and death. That it existed here in New York, New Jersey and other Northern States, for a period of 200 years, without any "monopoly" of the aforesaid "raw material produced" is also a pretty well authenticated historical fact. And were further proof wanting to show that slavery stands on a foundation wholly independent of cotton or sugar, it might be found in the stern fact, that during the same period (above 200 years) the vile system, with all its horrors, flourished in the present cotton and sugar growing States, without employing its victims one single moment in the production of either of these articles.

In the time of Claudius, we learn from competent authority, there were not less than 60,000,000 slaves in the Roman empire. Of this vast number, however, strange though it may appear to our emigration friends, not one was engaged in the lucrative cultivation of the before-mentioned "raw material produced." On the contrary, they were compelled to serve their masters as artificers, actors, agricultural laborers, buffoons, cooks, confectioners, literary slaves, porters, prostitutes, &c., &c.; or public slaves, as lictors, jailors, executioners, and other functionaries. A not altogether dissimilar state of things is existing in this country at the present time. Turn to the Southern papers, and in a majority of instances, you will find the slaves advertised, not as sugar-growers or cotton-pickers, but as blacksmiths, carpenters, coopers, house-servants, masons, wheelwrights, &c.; whilst, if we look for public slaves, it will not be difficult to recognize them in Colonels, Generals, Members of Congress, Presidents, &c., and in those literary men who are attempting with all their little power to prove colored men incapable of ever living on terms of equality with the whites, or of being anything here but hewers of wood and drawers of water for a superior people. (Vide Emigration Documents.) Nothing, therefore, is more clear, no truth can be plainer, than that men are held in slavery not because they may assist in the production of cotton or sugar, but because they may be made serviceable in all kinds of labor.

Contrary to the assumption of the above extract, the value of cotton and sugar is only a small portion—(not more than a sixth)—of the annual produce of the slaveholding States. A word, however, concerning the generalship of attacking slavery with the weapon of "competition" in the manner proposed. The conception, certainly, is a sublime one, and every way worthy of its "practical," "philosophical" authors. It proposes nothing less than to colonize the free-colored people of this country in the tropics, there to compete with unpaid labor, and undermine slavery by working cheaper than those who work for nothing! That the slaveholder might possibly stand such an attack as long as the assailants, is an idea that seems not yet to have been able to work its way through the "practical" skulls of those who are directing the movement. The usual results of such "attacks" is not a matter of conjecture. Besides leaving their mark pretty visible in the miserable condition of the "poor whites" of the Southern States, it may be seen in the abandoned sugar plantations of the British West Indies, where free labor was brought in competition with the slave labor of Cuba.

Here, with these hints, I close for the present, my communication having already extended far beyond the limits intended. Months ago, when the seven principles of the five loaves and two fishes seemed predominant, and when every petty town had its aspirant toadying to Mr. Redpath for an agency, I ventured, in opposition to what seemed the general feeling, to oppose the project in your columns, on the ground of its tendency to injure the colonists and those also who refused casting themselves into the tide of this dishonorable exodus.

Then, my conclusions were scouted as the ravings of insanity; in the light of the revelations of to day, they read like prophecy.

A. P. SMITH.

LETTER FROM TRENTON.

TRENTON, NEW JERSEY, Nov. 5, 1861.

DEAR ANGLO:—It is quite pleasant to read your paper, so as to find out what we are doing for ourselves in these perilous times. I am proud to see that we are not altogether inactive and lifeless. We are a power among the people—and our power should be felt and known. The world, and this Government in particular, should know that we live, and move, and have a being. Silence in such times, and under such circumstances, is not only cowardice, but a base betrayal of the sacred trust with which God has invested us—to wit, the freedom of our race, and the inalienable rights of man, besides a sacrifice of our own manhood, which above all else we should hold most sacred. It is thus only we shall have character, and can give character to those we represent. True manhood, when rightly developed, speaks right out what is necessary to be spoken, when it ought to be spoken without fear or favor.

Our characters will suffer much at the hands of our enemies if this rule of conduct be not strictly adhered to by us, think they, [illegible] the policy of the Government and people at large, is to keep us still. [illegible] still at this time; Let us then, like blind Bartimeus of old, when they assailed his inalienable right of speech, and bid him be still, he cried out but the more; like him, let us cry out but the more, until they join with us in the vindication of our rights, and respect our manhood.

Let me here suggest that the most effectual way of making our influence felt and feared is by acquiring intelligence and amassing wealth. These are the two great elements of strength in a government and nation. Intelligence commands respect, and wealth demands equality. The acquisition of these will place us in possession of all our rights. The study of political economy, and its practice, will go further to the development of our people's manhood, and the acquisition of their rights, that all the military tactics which have been or could be studied and practiced. A healthy, vigorous, muscular frame, with a knowledge of the use of arms are all well enough, but it is no substitute for these, for these have a power they never had, nor could have; these two elements are the levers that move the world; the others are useless without these, just as much so as the engine is useless without the steam. It is quite singular that some of our people don't see that the greater includes the less.

Another point of interest I wish to present is, that I differ much from a great many of our people—and abolitionists, so-called—who believe that the emancipation of the slaves will obtain a full and entire recognition of all our rights in the Government. I don't think so.

1st. Because those who clamor most for the freedom of the slave are most opposed to political and social equality of those already free, although prepared for its enjoyment and exercise. Negro equality is entirely out of the question.

2nd. I believe that the true and only basis upon which we can really expect this equality is by obtaining these two great fundamentals, the result of which will be the emancipation of the slaves, because we are the representatives, part and parcel of them, and by party of reasoning what is true of us is also true of them—what we are capable of being and doing, so also are they.

I will not pursue this argument further, but simply remark, I hope the colored people will, throughout all the free States, in every town and country, let themselves be heard in bold, manly, and respectful language what are their feelings and sentiments. Tell the people in emphatic terms what they want, and that they want no more than they themselves want, nor will they be satisfied with less; and by a diligent, persevering, untiring effort to do what I have here advised, the work is accomplished. Then we shall not only be nominally free, but freemen.

WM. E. WALKER.

LETTER FROM TORONTO.

TORONTO, C. W., Nov. 5, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:—The task of contributing to a periodical specially in the interest of a particular class or sect, is not altogether without additional difficulties to those of a more general character, notwithstanding the person so contributing is more or less specially identified with the aforesaid parties, as these are matters which would interest the public generally, and yet would fail to interest in the direction aimed at. Your numerous readers will not, I trust, conclude from this, that your correspondent is accusing our people of utter selfishness, or that every thing, however much it may interest mankind and benefit humanity, is devoid of interest to us unless we are particularly identified with it; such is not the case. But I hold that the peculiar and embarrassing position we occupy on this continent, inclines us to an apparent selfishness in that particular, which can be pardoned in us, owing to the facts as they are generally known. And, on the other hand, it is frequently charged that we show too little interest in matters appertaining to ourselves as a people, while the two propositions are directly antagonistic, much argument can be adduced in support of each. However, enough of this for the present. The most notable subject that I have to present just now, is the annual convocation of University College, Toronto, and this becomes so from the fact a colored young man taking a conspicuous part in its exercises. University College is the chief seat of learning for the Province, and is largely endowed by the Government. On the 25th ult., Mr. Alfred M. Lafferty, a young man of color, about twenty-two years of age, received the prize for the best composition in Greek verse. When reading it, he acquitted himself with great honor, receiving the applause of the Faculty, and the large and intelligent assemblage. Aside from this mark of distinction, he occupied honorable positions in Greek and Latin, and in Mathematics and Natural Philosophy.

The subject of the Greek verse was: Massinger, "The Bondman," Act 1st, Scene 3d, from "It is your seat" to "Do not repent." Mr. Lafferty while a student in Upper Canada College frequently distinguished himself, for which he received a large number of prizes, and when leaving that institution received the Governor General's prize, which was a large number of very valuable books, and on entering the University, and since there competed for and obtained scholarships, amounting to the sum of $240. Mr. Lafferty's father (who is now deceased) emigrated to this country from Virginia some thirty years ago, quite poor, and by perseverance and industry was enabled to leave his family, consisting of wife, three sons, and a daughter, in comfortable circumstances. The two eldest sons are engaged in the lucrative and independent calling of farming, some eight miles from Toronto. Mr. Lafferty is now in his third year in the University, and at the end of the fourth he graduates.

G. W. C.

HAYTIAN EMIGRATION IN BOSTON.

MR. EDITOR:

Haytian emigration has been somewhat jostled in its onward progress in Boston, and the Central Bureau will no longer have an abodgment in our city. The cool east wind of our bay are too rugged for the hot atmosphere of Hayti. We hold two Anti-Haytian meetings on the 16th and 23d, ult., at both of which Mr. John A. Coleman a returned emigrant, or rather fugitive from Hayti, with what remains of his family, gave us some interesting details of Hayti, and what our deluded people are suffering there, and must suffer for Mr. Redpath has sold them to the Haytian government for three years at thirty dollars per head.

And here Mr. Editor, you will allow me to say that I do not believe that it is all Haytian capital that is paying the enormous expense of this devilish "Las Casas" scheme. A movement of this kind has always found friends and ready money in Boston, New York and Philadelphia; but the future will write Mr. James Redpath down the most successful colonizationist North America has ever seen; and why, because he is so nicely completing the work so ardently began forty-five years ago by colonizationists in the interest of colonization slaveholders. And when he shall, as he surely will be, tried at the bar of public opinion for this misleading and beguggling those emigrants that have gone and are absolutely going to Hayti, the panacea for him and his conscience will be that his plans were all carried out by well informed and leading black men. For it is they, after all in those emigration movements who bring upon our people misery and desolation. But the general agent has "smelt a mice" in the drawer of the Bureau, and is going to New York with the "infernal machine," where those little animals are not so bold as to enter into that hidden and secret place to disturb the cotton tree behind which the mischief of Haytian emigration is hid.

Mr. Jacob R. Andrews who carries on a picture and frame establishment in this city has just returned from Hayti, and on whose statement all can rely, brings us the most discouraging account of the emigrants who have gone to Hayti, and thinks when this movement is clearly understood by our people, it must come to an end.

Mr. William W. Brown attended one of the above meetings, and plead well for Mr. Redpath and his cause, but Boston refused to hear or even believe that his heart was in his speech.

The following resolutions were favored by Robert Morris, Esq., John J. Smith Rev. L. A. Grimes, and others, and adopted.

There was a reporter for the "Pine and Palm" at our meeting, and we wait for his report.

Whereas, Strenuous efforts are now being made by certain intelligent, but misguided colored men and white men to induce free colored persons, residents in the United States and in the Canadas, to emigrate to Hayti under the mistaken policy of bettering their condition; and whereas, in the present crisis of the history of our race we deem such efforts pernicious, calculated to weaken our strength, by lessening our numbers, and removing our laboring and able-bodied men; Therefore,

Resolved, That we regard such men with suspicion, and deprecate both their counsel and advice; and we earnestly recommend that if they are sincere in their pretended love and admiration for Hayti, they immediately quit our shores and take up their abode in that country.

Resolved, That under no circumstances will we be induced or persuaded to emigrate from this our native country, [illegible] the last [illegible] has been [illegible] the limbs of the last slave on this continent, believing that [illegible] great work, which in our judgment is soon [illegible] to have a sword in [illegible]

Resolved, That after emancipation it will be time enough for the colored people to convene, and in solemn convention decide upon their future course.

Resolved, That we earnestly recommend our people both in the United States and the Canadas to discourage and discountenance this Haytian emigration movement as fraught with evil and disastrous consequences both to us and our children.

ABDALLAH AND SAIDA.

A TALE OF MESOPOTAMIA.

The glory of Bagdad has departed. The city where a Caliph once displayed a gorgeous splendor and magnificence that astonished an ambassador from Stamboul, and where Haroun-al-Raschid used to play his pranks of love and merriment attended by Jaffar the vizier and Mesrour the executioner, amid gilded halls and luxurious gardens, is now reduced to the insignificance of a dirty, second-rate Turkish town. Basrah, formerly her rival in wealth, has shared her fall; those quays and magazines which of old "teemed with the wealth of Ormus and of Ind," are now silent and unfrequented; a population of two hundred thousand souls has been reduced to six thousand; marshes and stagnant pools have replaced her fragrant orange-groves and her rose-buds famous as those of Shiraz. Such have been the consequences of plague, cholera, and, deadliest pest of all, Turkish rule. Nor has the country fared better than the towns. All this region, like Holland, depends for its prosperity on its dykes and embankments; the remains of such works, constructed by ancient princes, are still of an extent and magnitude to arrest the traveller's eye and claim his admiration; but, having been long neglected, they have fallen into ruin, and now the greater part of the south-eastern district of Mesopotamia is a huge lake, interspersed with jungles of reed, the habitation of frogs, wild-fowl, and amphibious Arabs. The great tribe inhabiting the northern side of this peninsula washed by the Tigris, is the "Abou Mohammed," the tribe exercising dominion over the southern or Euphrates side, is the Montefik. Both nominally acknowledge the sovereignty of the Porte; but they levy black-mail, which they modestly term "the fee," on all boats passing through their waters, and woe be to the luckless wight who endeavors to claim exemption from payment, by exhibiting a firman from the Pasha from Bagdad! Circumstances have lately led me to pass through this region in a native boat. I found myself one day in the Hyeh, a large water-course connecting the waters of the Tigris with those of the Euphrates; the black tents of the Montefik were numerous in the neighborhood, though not visible from the river, owing to the dense jungle that lined the bank. While our men were cutting some wood to cook their breakfast, one or two Arabs came down, and I overheard them saying, that during the night a lion had carried off and devoured one of their cows, not far from our boat; some of our crew had heard the lordly brute roaring over his prey, but I had slept too soundly to be thereby awakened. This incident led me to talk with the Arabs about lions, of which there seems to be a considerable number in these jungles; and one of them told me the following story, which he asserted to be founded on facts well known to persons still living.

"Some years ago a wealthy merchant of Basrah, having contracted his daughter, Saida, in marriage with the son of a brother merchant in Bagdad, sent her up, with several female attendants, in one of his merchandise boats, in order that the contract might be fulfilled. One night, while the boat was moored to the bank of the Hyeh, it was attacked by a large party of the Montefik, who, having easily mastered and bound the crew, proceeded deliberately to appropriate and carry off the bales, which promised an amount of booty exceeding their utmost expectations. In the party was a young Arab named Abdallah, famed for his daring courage, who, having made his way suddenly into the cabin, found himself in the presence of the females there assembled. Saida, in her fright and confusion, had dropped the veil from her head; and he was so struck by her beauty, that he caught her up in his arms and carried her off to his reed-hut, unnoticed by his companions, who were too busily engaged in their work of plunder to pay any attention to his movements. The booty obtained by the plunderers proved to be of such great value, that Abdallah, who was equally feared and liked by his comrades, and who claimed no share of the spoil except a box containing Saida's clothes, was permitted to retain his prize unquestioned and unopposed.

"The city maiden had already passed several days under the roof of her wild captor, who treated her with as much reverence as if she had been a queen, and he her subject. Her every wish was a law, her slightest word a command; [illegible]

[illegible] was a sacrifice [illegible] And how [illegible] beyond the luxurious [illegible] harem, she had [illegible] having any will but his [illegible] she saw the [illegible] Abdallah, melted into [illegible] it rested upon her [illegible] graceful and [illegible] as he offered [illegible] the chase [illegible] if her little heart fluttered within her like a bird newly encaged? One evening they were sitting together in the hut, having finished their simple supper; the door was open, and she was seated opposite to it, he being at a little distance, listening to her artless description of her childish days in Basrah, when a slight rustling was heard without the hut, immediately followed by a faint cry from the affrighted maiden, "The lion—the lion!" To draw his sword, to envelope his left arm in the triple fold of his blanket, and to throw himself between the door and Saida, was to Abdallah the work of a moment. There, confronting him, were the glaring eyes of the jungle-king. Could he enter the hut, Saida's life might be endangered. Abdallah hesitated not for an instant, but rushed at the lion and plunged his sword into his breast. Fruitless were the struggles of the wounded lion. In vain did it seek to shred the blanket that enveloped Abdallah's left arm, tearing away with them several pieces of the skin and flesh. Thrice and thrice did Abdallah's sword pierce the vitals of his enemy; and at length a sullen expiring groan announced the victory of the heroic Arab.

"What were the feelings of Saida that night, as she bound up the lacerated arm of her deliverer? Was not the [illegible] her eyes [illegible] on her tongue, when she looked into his face and prayed to Allah to bless and reward him? But no word of love was spoken between them. The proverb says, 'There is a road from heart to heart;' their spirits may have traveled on that road, but their thoughts were unuttered. Abdallah's healthy and hardy frame soon recovered from the effects of the contest with the lion, and again they were sitting together in the hut, after their evening meal. Saida's tone of voice and manner had of late unconsciously become more soft and tender, and she was much surprised at hearing him abruptly exclaim, in a tone of anguish, as he prepared to rush from the hut, 'Allah, Allah! I can bear this no longer.'

"'What has happened, Abdallah?' cried Saida, holding out her tiny hand gently to detain him; 'have I offended you? have I done anything wrong?'

"'No! you are an angel [illegible] Saida! It is I who am a [illegible]'

"'You, Abdallah?' said Saida, [illegible] you who have been so kind and gentle; you who risked your life with the lion to defend [illegible] whom [illegible]'

"Was the word 'love' trembling on the tip of her tongue? Perhaps it was, but maidenly reserve drove it back to her heart, and in its place there came [illegible] 'You whom I have so much cause to thank.'

"'Saida,' said he, in a voice [illegible] rendered fierce by contending [illegible] 'that lion was a lamb compared to what is here—here—here,' striking his breast with violence as he spoke. 'Bolt the door, and Allah bless and protect you.' So saying, he sprang to his feet, and rushed out of the hut.

"For several hours did Abdallah stride up and down, in the vain endeavor to still the tumult of passion within. [illegible] with the lovely girl who had gained possession of his ardent and generous heart. His high spirit recoiled from the thought of taking any unfair advantage of the helpless condition of an unprotected maiden who had [illegible] resumed the labors of the chase to provide dainties for the table of his beloved. For a short time all went smoothly and pleasantly in the hut; but this happiness was soon destined to interruption. One day the chief sheik of the tribe sent for Abdallah, and, on his obeying the summons, said to him:

"'My son, the agent of Mansour, the Basrah merchant, is arrived, and is charged to pay us the ransom of the woman whom we took from his boat. That of the servants we have already fixed; his daughter is with you; and as you shared not in the spoil, it is for you to name and receive her ransom.'

"'Sell Saida!' cried Abdallah, while the heaving of his breast and the swelling veins of his forehead attested the violence of the storm that raged within. 'Never—never! not if——'

"'Peace, my son,' interrupted the old shiek. 'Listen to the words of one who was your father's friend, and cast them not to the winds. Mansour the merchant is rich, and has the ear of the Pasha of Basrah. We are not now, as our forefathers were, able to laugh at the beards of these Turks; for our fathers could plunder them, beat them, and yet, when occasion required, could retire into the desert, where no Turk dared to follow. We now have fields of rice and wheat; we have pastures with thousands of sheep and buffalo; we have palm-groves that bear many thousands loads of dates. If we refuse to ransom this maiden according to custom, all the forces of the Pasha will be sent against us, and we must abandon our fruits and our crops—perhaps even our flocks and herds; therefore, be persuaded my son; name the ransom of this maiden to which you are justly entitled—suffer her to depart, and avert these misfortunes, from our tribe.'

"Fierce was the struggle in Abdallah's breast, but it was not of long duration: pride, regard for his tribe, and habitual deference to his aged chief, triumphed over his passion.

"'It shall be as you desire,' he said; 'but I will not see this bargaining agent; I will write to the maiden's father myself. Be pleased to call your katib.'

"Agreeably to this summons, the shiek's secretary no sooner appeared than Abdallah dictated the following letter;

"'Abdallah ebn Jaffer, ebn Obeid, restores to Hadjee Mansour, merchant of Basrah, a pearl without stain and without price, which all the gold in his coffers, if seven times told, were insufficient to ransom.'

"Having affixed his silver seal to this letter, Abdallah saluted his chief, and returned with a heavy heart to the hut. We will pass briefly over the few days that elapsed ere the preparations for the return of Saida, accompanied by her female attendants, were completed. The morning arrived, and Abdallah, feeling that the adieu would unman him, rushed into the jungle and disappeared, having left his aunt to give his farewell messages to Saida. The Basrah maiden's heart had whispered to her its secret, now that she was about to leave her protector's hut. She could not pronounce his name, but she wept in silence, with her face pressed against the matron's shoulder.

"'Give him this,' she said, as, with a broken voice, she detached a gold chain from her neck; 'let him wear it, and believe that my prayers to Allah are for him and——'

"Sobs choked the poor girl's utterance, as the matron gently played her on the mule sent to bear her to the boat which was to convey her to Basrah.

"Weeks and months have passed; Saida had recounted to her parents the story of the lion, and the gentleness, the courage, and devotion of her protector, whose proud and generous letter had moved the heart of her father; for, to do him justice, although a stern, imperious man, and ardent in pursuit of gain, he was not of a mean or niggard spirit, and loved his daughter even better than his money; but he had not penetrated the secret of her heart, though it had not escaped the quicker feminine perception of her mother. His word had been given to his friend in Bagdad, and, in fulfillment of his engagement, Saida was ere long sent up thither, accompanied by her mother, himself proposing to follow as soon as certain affairs which demanded his presence at Basrah should be termimated.

"Saida's voyage to Bagdad was performed without interruption or accident; and in spite of the deep sadness which had lately crept over her spirits, she was soon called upon to receive the visits of her affianced lover. He came attended by his father; and she sat by her mother's side, her face completely concealed by the long vail, through the upper gauze of which she was able to see the features of her intended. A shudder passed through her frame as she saw their mean and sinister expression and his form emaciated by early debauchery and disease. His father soon took his leave, and the son remained, aiming dull and insipid compliments at Saida through her mother. The latter happened to go for a moment into the adjoining room to bring her handkerchief, and during her absence a large rat, which had missed its footing while crossing a rafter of the ceiling, fell to the ground between Saida and her admirer. The latter, frightened out of his wits, jumped up and [illegible] out of the room. Saida laughed aloud, [illegible] laugh astonished her mother, who [illegible] seen a smile on her face for weeks: [illegible] a laugh strangely compounded [illegible] scorn, and anguish.

"[illegible] are you laughing at, my child?' [illegible] her mother.

"'Because,' she replied, 'you have taken me from a man who risked his own life to save mine from a lion, and you give me to that thing who runs from a rat!'

"It was not long ere the merchant arrived at Bagdad, and learned how matters stood. Saida looked upon her intended with undisguised abhorrence; neither did he stand much higher in the opinion of her mother. Observation soon satisfied the merchant that his intended son-in-law was a worthless and disreputable scamp; and on his hinting at these failings to the youth's father, the latter answered with such insolent violence, that the merchant's pride took fire, and he scrupled not to break off the engagement. Having done this, and received Saida's grateful thanks for so doing, he assured her that now he would find for her the best and worthiest husband in Bagdad. But the smile came not back to her lip, nor the rose to her cheek; and the grieved father saw his once blooming child daily wasting before his eyes from some unknown and unexplained disease. One day, when talking on this subject with his wife, she found courage to him:

"'O my husband, be not angry; but know you not that Saida is dying of love for Abdallah, who saved her life from the lion? If you refuse your consent, or give her to another, she will soon be in her grave.'

"For some time the Merchant's pride rebelled against this strange and unusual alliance; but at length his parental fondness gained the day, and adopting the Moslem consolation that it was kismet (destiny) and the will of Allah, he gave his consent. The arrangements for the marriage were soon completed; the roses speedily returned to Saida's blooming cheek and lip; and never was seen such a feast among the Montefik as on the day when the Pearl of Basrah became the bride of Abdallah, the lion slayer of the Hyeb."

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 16, 1861.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

Blake: or the Huts of America.

We now have the pleasure of announcing to our readers that in our next number we will commence the publication of a story of thrilling interest, from the able pen of Dr. Martin R. Delany, entitled "BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.—A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba."—A portion of it was published in the Anglo African Magazine, but owing to the departure of its author on an Exploring expedition to Africa, the whole work was not produced. As we have the entire manuscript in our possession, a similar interruption is improbable, and our readers may rest assured of its completion in our columns. The work differs greatly from all others of a similar character heretofore published, and stands without a rival, not even excepting the world wide known "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The scene is laid in Mississippi, the plot extending into Cuba; the hero being an educated black, who deprived of his liberty when young and brought to the United States, in maturer age, at the instance of his wife being sold from him, seeks revenge through the medium of a deep laid secret organization. This story as soon as known, will be sought with avidity.

We would suggest, that with its commencement, our friends make a special effort to obtain the subscriptions of their neighbors, that they may be furnished with all the early chapters, of which we do not intend to keep a large supply.

The Rights of Human Nature

"This country maintains and means to maintain the rights of human nature, and the man of capacity for self-government."—Address of President Lincoln to Swedish Minister, Nov. 7, 1861.

We must not be too hard upon our President, nor too impatient with the progress of the war. It is significant of good, rather than evil, to the nation, to find its affairs drifting beyond the control of its rulers. It is significant of good rather than evil that the rebellion of 1860-61 has found Buchanan and Lincoln rather than an Andrew Jackson, at the head of affairs. Andrew Jackson could have done no more in 1860-61 than he did thirty years before—he smote the rebels, but left unharmed the seeds and principles of the rebellion. He might now have prevented the capture of Fort Sumter, he might have evaded for another generation the secession of the cotton States. But judging of the future by the past, would not the nation, in another thirty years, sink deeper and deeper into the slough of slave-holding, so deep indeed as to be incapable of resuscitation? We should rejoice rather at the imbecility of our earthly rulers, for it portends that our affairs are in mightier hands, and will receive such a guidance and direction as seem best to Almighty Providence.

Nothing proves this last statement more clearly than the sentiment expressed by the President—"This country maintains the rights of human nature." Coming from him, considering his antecedents, his avowed and repeatedly avowed determination to uphold slavery, this statement seems like the utterance of another through him and in spite of him: it is, as if he were the mere instrument through which a higher power spake. Mr. Lincoln surely cannot have changed ground so suddenly since his modification of Fremont's proclamation "so as to conform to the act of Congress," as to affirm a doctrine in regard to "the rights of human nature" which, of necessity, contains the doctrine of immediate emancipation. He cannot mean what he says, therefore some one else spoke through him.

For, supposing that the President really meant what he said, let us see what are "the rights of human nature."

Unwittingly, yet inexorably, has the President bound the country in its own faith, in its disasters, in its humility, and in the presence of God and the world, to take one step in advance of what it has ever taken. The Declaration of Independence simply announced or affirmed the doctrine "We hold, &c., &c., that all men are created equal, and are endowed with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." But now Mr. Lincoln, at the head of the same Government, commanding three-fourths of a million of men in arms, exercising universal executive if not dictatorial powers, affirms that he is virtually in arms to maintain the doctrine of "the rights of human nature," and to maintain it with all the power this great nation can bring into the field. To affirm a doctrine is one thing, to maintain it by force of arms is another and a bolder step, from which there can be no retreat. It was, therefore, a great historic feat, marking national advancement which the President announced to the Swedish minister.

When the Creator endowed man with lungs he gave him the right to breathe the air and to possess the air; when He gave man eye-sight he endowed him with the right to see and the use of light wherever found; when he granted man with muscular and bony system of locomotion, he endowed him with the right to move in the waters, and also the use of the dry land and the waters, these endowments and the material means of using them each individually co-relate to each other—endowments inevitably predicate rights—so also the sum of all these endowments, the unity which they go to make up—man himself—cannot be of less dignity or power or endowment than the separate facilities of which he is made up—man therefore has an imperceptible God derived right to himself, and personal liberty is the first of the rights of human nature; we would think it horrible to see enacted by statute law the right of one man to put out the eyes of another man and of his children and children's children—this is only one endowment; how much more horrible the enactment to give a slave-holder the right to own, use and destroy the sum of all the endowments of the slave, to the slave himself.

In considering what are the "rights of human nature," we are greatly aided by a word in the Declaration of Independence—endowed. It is self-evident that men could not have endowed themselves with these rights: endowed is something bestowed by another; and is thus contra-distinguished from developement or acquirement. Hence men must be endowed with these rights of nature, by none other than the Great Giver—God Himself. And the measure of this endowment, that is to say of these rights, can only be reached by a thorough knowledge of human nature itself.

In that celebrated debate on natural rights which occurred in the Convention of 1793, in Robespierre's "Declaration of Rights," of which the first article stated

"The natural, civil and political rights of man are . . Liberty, Equality, Security, Property, social guarantee and resistance to oppression."

Lassource (a member) moved to strike out the words "natural rights, because, in the state of nature, man had no rights."

Garreau Coulon affirmed that the history of the most savage people did not afford a single example of men living otherwise than in society; therefore the social state was the natural state of man; therefore social rights are the natural rights of man.

A member, deputy from Cayenne, affirmed that "the natural rights of man are given him by the Supreme being."

Wilhelm von Humboldt, in his work "On the Sphere and Duties of Government" says—"The grand leading principle, towards which every argument unfolded in these pages directly converges, is the absolute and essential importance of human developement in its richest diversity."

First among the natural rights of man is the right to liberty. It is the paramount right which takes precedence of all others, and out of which all others grow; the very limits placed on each man's conduct grows out of it, because each one is at liberty to act for himself to the extent that he shall not interfere with the liberty of another. Even the ablest defender of American Slavery, in his work on "American Slavery Justified by the Law of Nature" affirms (p.) that if the slave resume his natural rights to liberty, and take himself off, or slay his master in the endeavor to get free," &c., &c.

But it is needless to pile up authorities to prove that "the rights of human nature" embrace liberty to all who bear the impress of humanity. We joyfully thank the President for this new and unexpected affirmation. We go in for the Union, of course; but we go in more so for "the rights of human nature!" It is a short sentence, but it is full of force and majesty; we uphold it with both hands, and with all our heart. Let it be inscribed on every American banner. Let the old meaningless latin motto be erased from the scroll in the eagle's talons, and let the new strong soul-stirring motto, "The Rights of Human Nature," take its place. Our soldiers will feel better under it, will fight better under it, and die a nobler death beneath it. It is a war slogan which can lead only to victory; it will renew once more in all the earth, the hopes of those who have fed their inherent love of liberty on the success and prosperity of the American example."

PROF. BOSTON'S SKATING SCHOOL opened finely, on Tuesday evening. We are pleased to know that the Professor's enterprise promises to be a success.

The Day Schools of New York & Vicinity.

It is a most important fact, that notwithstanding the hardness of the times, and the consequent disability that the heads of most families must labor under to provide food and raiment for their children; yet the public schools are better attended than they ever were before. We have examined the roll-book of several of the schools, and find this to be the case.

Although this is very encouraging, yet the attendance, is not what it might be if the exertions of our faithful teachers were seconded by parents and guardians.

There is one fact, however, that ought to be borne in mind, and that is, the necessity that many labor under in ridding themselves of the expense attendant upon the bringing up of a large family.

When the facts are known, this, it will be perceived, becomes quite a serious matter.

The want of profitable employment for the parent, makes it absolutely necessary that every hand should be employed in securing a livelihood; hence, they are obliged to withdraw their children from school as soon as they are able to earn anything. Now this is very lamentable, for the reason that the child is taken from the school at the very time that it ought to have remained there. The reasons why it should have remained is doubtless apparent to all.

The vast amount paid for rent, in many cases, renders it necessary that the child be sent from home.

To overcome these difficulties ought to be the first objects of our leaders; and until this is done, all their talk will be in vain.

We hope that parents will do all that they can to keep the schools full.

We are pleased to know that the Evening School, in Laurens street, is very well attended; indeed there is a very great increase over the last year's attendance. We presume that this is owing to an increase of the branches taught.

The African Civilization Society.

A special meeting of the African Civilization Society was called at the Bible House, Nov. 4th, 1761, to hold a conference with Dr. Martin R. Delany, as the representative and exponent of the African movement, as understood by the Emigrationists and others, among the colored people of America, to effect and complete a oneness and harmony of sentiment and action, that their white friends, as aiders and assistants, may have a true and definite point as data before them.

The following gentlemen composed the conference: Messrs. Rev. John Carey, W. J. Alston, R. H. Cain, B. W. Wilkins, Tunis G. Campbell, A. A. Constantine, Robert Hamilton, Dr. M. R. Delany, and Rev. H. M. Wilson. Mr. Hamilton was called to the chair, and Rev. H. M. Wilson, Secretary. Prayer by Rev. R. H. Cain.

After deeply interesting speeches by Messrs. Campbell, Alston, Wilson, Wilkins, Constantine, the Chairman, and Dr. Delany, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to draw up a basis as a fundamental principle by which the African Civilization Society shall be governed, and its objects and designs defined.

Resolved, That Rev. R. H. Cain, T. G. Campbell, John Carey, Mr. Robert Hamilton, and Dr. M. R. Delany, be that committee, to report to a General Committee, at 26 Bible House, at 4 o'clock, Thursday, the 7th inst.

Resolved, That having listened with deep interest to Dr. M. R. Delany, we heartily tender him our thanks for his instructing and practical address. Adjourned.

BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK,
Nov. 7th, 1861.

General Committee met, pursuant to adjournment. Present—Messrs. R. H. Cain, Chas. H. Thompson, Benj. W. Wilkins, Alfred A. Constantine, Isaac T. Smith, Robert Hamilton, Henry M. Wilson, Martin R. Delany; H. M. Wilson, Chairman, A. A. Constantine, Secretary.

Dr. Delany, on behalf of the Chairman, Rev. R. H. Cain, made the following report, which was taken up and adopted seriatim:

SUPPLEMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION
OF THE
AFRICAN CIVILIZATION SOCIETY.

In order the better to make the origin and objects of the African Civilization Society known, and to define its designs, intentions, and true position, and to secure that harmony and co-operation with other similar institutions previously established by the colored people of the United States and Canada, as well as that by the friends of African race in Great Britain, to aid these movements, that the succeeding articles be added as an essential and fundamental part of the Constitution.

ARTICLE I.

The Society shall not encourage general emigration, but will aid only such persons as may be practically qualified and suited to promote the developement of Christianity, morality, education, mechanical arts, commerce, and general improvement, who must always be carefully selected and well recommended, that the progress of civilization may not be obstructed.

ARTICLE II.

The basis of the Society, and ulterior objects in encouraging emigration shall be—Self-Reliance and Self-Government, on the principle of an African Nationality, the African race being the ruling element of the nation, controlling and directing their own affairs.

ARTICLE III.

All agents employed by this Society must act under instructions, and consistent with the fundamental principles of the constitution.

Rev. RICHARD H. CAIN,
Pastor of Bridge street Church,
Brooklyn, Chairman.
Rev. Tunis G. Campbell,
Rev. John Carey.
Robert Hamilton.
Rev. David Stevens, Pastor of Zion Ch'ch.
Rev. Henry M. Wilson, Pastor of 7th Avenue Church.
Rev. C. H. Thompson, Pastor of Siloam Church, Brooklyn.
Rev. B. W. Wilkins.
Rev. E. J. Adams, Pastor of Plane street Church, Newark.
Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D.
Mr. Jerh. W. Bowers.
Mr. Henry Montgomery.
Mr. Christopher Brown.
Mr. Abram Roberts.
Mr. Henry W. Bogert.
M. R. DELANY, Sec.

On motion, Resolved, That the committee have power to add to their own number.

On motion, That these proceedings be published in the ANGLO-AFRICAN, and all other papers friendly to the movement be respectfully requested to copy.

HENRY M. WILSON,
Chairman.
ALFRED A. CONSTANTINE,
Secretary.

OBITUARY.

The funeral sermon of Mr. Samuel Porter, who died recently, at his residence, near Chatham, Chester county, Pa., was preached on Sunday, Oct. 6, in the Union church of said place, by Rev. Lewis P. Hood, of Lancaster, who took for his text the 13th verse of the 14th chapter of Job:

"Oh, that thou would'st hide me in the grave; that thou would'st keep me secret until thy wrath be past!"

Mr. Porter was born a slave in Kent county, Delaware, February, 1790, and consequently was nearly seventy-two years of age at the time of his decease. He was sold, when yet a boy, to the Georgia traders, from whom he escaped and made his way to Philadelphia, where by untiring industry he accumulated sufficient means to purchase his freedom. After that was accomplished, he paid his parents a visit, married a Miss Jacobs, of Lewistown, Del., and then moved, in company with his brother Solomon, to Chester county. A brother of his, named Cyrus, also escaped from slavery and went to England, about fifty years ago. His brother Solomon, father of Peter S. Porter, of this city, also purchased his own freedom. Mr. Porter had two uncles who escaped from slavery but afterwards redeemed themselves, and resided in Philadelphia, where they became very useful citizens, being among the founders of the St. Thomas Episcopal church in said city, and also the 11th street Masonic Lodge. Cyrus was chorister at St. Thomas' for some time. The parents of Mr. Porter were slaves in Delaware, also his grandfather, who was a native of the Gold Coast of Africa, and who used frequently to relate the manner of his capture.

Mr. Porter had resided in Chester county for forty years, and had there raised a family of five sons and two daughters. One of the latter married Mr. Wm. W. Morton, of this city, and the other, Mr. Levi Taggart, who resides within eight miles of the late residence of Mr. Porter. The sons are residing in the same neighborhood, and are enjoying a fine reputation for industry, honesty and sobriety.

Mr. Porter was noted for his industrious habits, they coming up fully to the Quaker standard of Chester county, and were evidenced in his well-cultivated farm, neat dwelling, substantial and commodious barn, fine cattle, good horses and wagons of every description, all of which compared favorably with those of his white neighbors. He was for thirty years a member of the African Union church, and was acknowledged by two congregations to have been the chief instrument through which their churches were built; one at Somerset, several miles from his residence, and the other at Chatham, with which he was connected. Mr. Porter looked well to the educational wants of his children, sending them to the very best schools. He also cared for other children beside his own, one of the most promising young men in the neighborhood being largely a recipient of his favors.

Mr. Porter endured an illness of eighteen months' duration, which terminated his earthly career May 12th, 1861.

There were about twenty-five of Mr. Porter's relatives present on this occasion, among whom were his sister, Mrs. Sarah Hitchings, from the lower part of Delaware, aged sixty years, who had not seen Mr. Porter for forty years, Mr. Peter S. Porter and Mr. and Mrs. Morton, of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Hood, of Lancaster, and Rev Lewis Porter, of Christiana, Delaware, all of whom were entertained under the roof of Mr. Porter's widow for several days.

Richard Hazen died at Wilksbarre Pa., Oct. 24th. 1861. Mr. Hazen was born in New Jersey, but moved to Wilksbarre about nineteen or twenty years ago. He always took a deep interest in the welfare of our people. On coming to Wilksbarre he found the colored people without a place of worship, and immediately went to work to procure one, his labors resulting in the building of the present Zion Church. There are now two colored churches in Wilksbarre. Mr. Hazen's house was always the home of the [illegible] preacher, and everything was done by him to render them comfortable. His family consisted of a wife and seven children, the former being well known to the preachers by the appellation of "Aunt Polly."

Mr. Hazen was elected a trustee of Zion Church of Wilksbarre in 1842, which post he filled with honor until about a year ago. About two weeks ago he was taken with the typhoid fever from which he died. His funeral took place on the 26th, and was attended by the entire colored population of Wilkesbarre and a large number of the whites. He was loved by all that knew him, and by his death the preachers have suffered very great loss.

"But man dieth and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he? As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up; so man lieth down and riseth not, till the heavens be no more, they shall not awaken nor be raised out of their sleep."

J. ANDERSON.

Letter from Newark.

NEWARK, N. J. Nov. 11, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:

I learn from the Daily Journal, that the Governor of New Jersey has set apart the 28th day of November as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to God, for the manifestation of his goodness in the production of our lives, and the rich bounties whereby our store-houses have been filled with enough and to spare during the past year. Yet all will not celebrate the day, we regret upon the principles it inculcates. But let all who are of an inteligent mind pay due homage to their Maker, and be living witnesses to the world by setting forth a bright example worthy of imitation.

The friends of Miss Hattie Cook were much gratified upon her return from the east last week. She has been absent about one year.

Mr. James Thorpe and family returned a few days since from a visit to Philadelphia and West Jersey, among relations and friends where he is extensively known, and owns considerable real estate.

Our city has been visited with gentlemen of distinction and education, among whom was Mr. Spencer Anderson of Liberia, Africa, a sugar merchant. Mr. Anderson made some large investments in shoes and other articles in the city, amounting to some hundreds of dollars. Mr. Ferguson from the Ashmund Institute, an educated young man qualified for a teacher or any other business, in company with Mr. James Anderson from Wilmington, Del., made their farewell visit among their acquaintances on Tuesday morning. These gentlemen and some others embarked for Africa on Tuesday the 5th inst.

The friends of the Rev. Mr. Lynch gave him a donation visit on Tuesday evening 29th inst. Owing to the war panic it was but slimly attended. "But he that giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord."

The Good Samaritans have under contemplation, the celebration of their first anniversary.

ISAAC TEMBROOK.

PATERSON, N. J. Nov. 9, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:—Many of your readers may recollect the case of the two young men brought from Georgia by Mr. Cuthbert some months ago, as the facts were noticed in your paper at the time, and perverted by a pro-slavery press, were also widely circulated as a case of "slavery in New Jersey." Having remained in this vicinity till about a week ago, they then departed on their way to Africa, whither some infernally good friends are so anxious to send the colored people of this country. Of course these good friends were in their glory. Individuals contributed some clothing, with some money, to assist them in going away. One of the churches took up a collection for sending them off; a minister rolling up his eyes prayed for their safe arrival in Africa, &c., &c.

Thus Colonisation has again triumphed over us; a couple of worthy young men are exiled to a distant land, and the Rev. Mr. ——, of the Baptist Church, (whom last month of July we heard deliver an address in which there was not one word of sympathy for the suffering slaves) may boast of his philanthropy!

For our part we utterly abhor the Colonisation scheme under whatever name it appears for the time being, and, from African Colonization to Haytian Emigration, it certainly has had about as many aliases as a London thief. But if there is a choice of evil, rather say we to the broad fields of Africa, with her teeming millions, and the elements of future greatness in her bosom, than to a petty, pestilential Island where physical circumstances must forever prevent our ever exercising any considerable influence on the destiny of the world.

An examination of the Colored School was had on Friday, October 31st. A number of parents and friends were present, and an address was given by Mr. Van Wagoner, Ex-Superintendent. The recitations of the children are very favorably spoken of, and their proficiency in grammar especially commended.

Your correspondent "Y. H." must be mistaken in regard to the identy of "Occasional." Nevertheless, we are for this war, and would have colored young men place [illegible] quietly as possible, so that they may be pre[illegible] emergency.

OCCASIONAL.

Letter from Dr. Delany to George Lawrence, Esq.

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 5TH, 1861.

GEORGE LAWRENCE, ESQ.—My Dear Sir:—In the ANGLO AFRICAN of the 26th ult., I find the following:

A concordat has been published between the Pope and the President of Hayti. It creates an Archbishopric of Hayti and four Bishoprics. The Pope is to nominate, and a special article allows the selection to be made from the white race.

In justice to the race to which I belong, and for whose elevation I have for years been laboring, and for whose equality of attainments, as I have understood from yourself, your emigration movement is intended to effect, I simply inquire of you Sir, having every confidence in your integrity as one identified in destiny with that race, believing you to be incapable of betraying the confidence of those who rely upon you, to inform me whether or not to your knowledge this report be true?

I hope, Sir, that you will not hesitate frankly to reply, and think me incapable of any design to draw you into any unpleasant controversy or position, or of making upon you any ungentlemanly or outlandish attack.

I am, Dear Sir,
Most sincerely, your friend,
M. R. DELANY.

P.S. I would have sent this to the PINE AND PALM, but the person who has the controlling influence over it so peremptorily rejects everything which does not endorse his enterprise and subserve his ends, that I avoided embarrassing you with it.

M. R. D.

MISS KNOWLES' SCHOOL, JERSEY CITY. Mr. Editor:—I had the pleasure of visiting the aforesaid school a few days ago, and found it in a most flourishing condition. The number present was forty, which, I understood, is the daily average, and which evidences a marked improvement under Miss Knowles. I heard several classes recite, although not recitation day, they being called out for my especial benefit. They performed remarkably well, but I was particularly struck with their beautiful manner, and their strict compliance to the rules of the school. The little songsters sang for me several fine songs in really a creditable manner. I will only add that the children have in their teacher an highly competent instructor. Miss Knowles is a genuine Yankee, being from Connecticut, a State which is said to produce the best teachers in the country.

ELIZ. H. CASH.

Church Festivities.

The Second Bethel Church in Thirtieth Street, closed its fair by a festival on Thursday evening, October 31st. We are pleased to announce that the ladies were quite successful in their efforts. This was to be expected where such ladies as Mrs. Ricks is concerned. She expressed, in our presence, great gratitude for the assistance afforded by the ladies engaged with her in this affair.

The Union Church in Twenty-Eighth Street, also held a feast on the same evening, which was one of much pleasure to those in attendance. Speeches were made by Messrs. Crugar and Ward, which were well received.

The festivities were continued to a late hour, and everybody departed well satisfied with their entertainment.

The Siloam Church, Brooklyn, held a festival on the evening of the 29th, which is represented as being quite successful.

HORRORS OF ST. DOMINGO."—Cannot our contemporary, the "Pine and Palm," see the gross impropriety of filling the fences and walls of our city, and the advertising columns of our daily papers with "The Horrors of St. Domingo," while the public mind is considering the propriety and necessity of emancipating the Southern slaves? It could not select, from all language, three words which would do more to check a public feeling in favor of emancipation. Or, does it with cool diabolism, thus advertise the "horrors" of emancipation, unaccompanied with expatriation—thereby hoping to drive grist into its own mill?

A MASSACHUSETTS JUSTICE.—The Salem "Standard," says that John S. Rock, Justice of the Peace in Suffolk county, Massachusetts, is a "negro," who studied dentistry with Dr. Harbart (now of the "West Jersey Press") at Salem, N. J.

The above item was found going the rounds of the New Jersey press. The Jersey editors evidently cannot understand how a "negro" brought up under Jersey influences could become a man—yes, a justice of the peace, in the great commonwealth of Massachusetts; and their surprise will not be lessened, probably, on reading the following, which we clip from the "Boston Herald," a pro-slavery Democratic sheet:

ACQUITTED ON THE PLEA OF INSANITY. John Murray, alias Gillespie, who was tried in the Superior Criminal Court on Friday, for an assault upon Mary Jane Pratt, with intent to commit rape, was acquitted on the ground of insanity. He was defended by John S. Rock, Esq.

We would add for the edification of these editors that Justice Rock has had many cases since his admission, and has not lost one.

From Liberia.

The Bark "Edward," Captain McIntyre, owned by the enterprising firm of Johnson, Turpin & Dunbar, arrived at this port on Monday, 4th inst., direct from Monrovia. She brought as passengers John D. Johnson, Esq., Captain Joseph L. Turpin, Mr. and Mrs. Savage, of Monrovia, Mr. Toomey, Miss Mernam, and Mrs. Simpson, of the Episcopal Mission at Palmas, and Mr. Judson. During the last two or three days of the voyage the "Edward" encountered a tremendous gale, but, fortunately, received no damage from it, although she got aground near Sandy Hook, at which point Captain Turpin and the three female passengers were landed. She remained in that situation but a short time, for she worked her way off and was towed to this city.

The "Edward" brings files of the Liberia Herald, from which we gather the following items of news:

The first of August was celebrated in Monrovia. The Herald says of the celebration

"There was no booming cannon, no martial music, no great display of flags and banners. Still we witnessed the natural outgushings of the hearts of our townsmen, who seemed to regard the circumstances of the day not only as retrospective, but also as prophetic.

The exercises commenced at 3 o'clock in the Representative Hall. Rev B R Wilson, who presided, opened the meeting with an appropriate prayer.

Speeches were made by Hon W. H. Lynch, W. F. Burns, Esq., and one or two others, one of the speakers was absent.

Besides many gentlemen, among whom were ex-President Roberts and Vice-President Warner, there were ladies present on the occasion.

After the exercises, Hon Mr. James apologized for the proceedings not being more interesting, which was owing mostly to the shortness of time in which the affair was got up. He said that credit was due to the ladies, who had manifested so much interest in the celebration, and by whose active exertions principally the festivities of the day were prepared. After returning thanks to the speakers, the meeting adjourned.

In the evening, there was an entertainment served up at the Senate Chamber, at which were present about fifty ladies and gentlemen, who retired at a late hour.

His Excellency, the President, was unable to partake in any of the festivities of the occasion, on account of indisposition of health."

The Herald contains an account of the presentation of a cane to Lord Brougham, from the young men of Liberia, from which we make the following extract:

On Wednesday, May 15, accompanied by Mr A W Hanson, formerly British Consul in Liberia, Mr Samuel Crowther and Mr. Ralston, I called upon his Lordship to present the cane and resolutions which the young men of Liberia did me the honor of forwarding by me. Mr. Chamerovzow, Cor Sec of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society, was also present. We were introduced by Mr. Ralston. His Lordship requested us to be seated. He himself sat next to Mr. Ralston in a large arm chair. I then arose and presented the walking cane with a few remarks; after which I presented the resolutions—I had an extra copy which I read, and then made a few more remarks. A strange and indescribable feeling came over me, while I stood in the presence of that great man, and thought of his mighty efforts in behalf of our down-trodden people. I briefly went over the history of the anti-slavery struggle in this country, and while I was referring to the sufferings of the race, the tears started to my eyes quite unexpectedly—I had to stop for a minute to recover my voice. His Lordship covered his face with his hands. The others present hung their heads. Mr. Hanson took out his handkerchief to dry his eyes. I do not know that I have ever taken part in a more impressive scene. It was truly affecting. This result could not have been brought about by the words which I spoke, for they were words which I have spoken over and over again in Liberia, which Lord Brougham and Mr. Hanson have frequently much better spoken; but a combination of circumstances rendered the words then uttered peculiarly affecting. A brief notice of this presentation has been published in the city papers; but I think a detailed account of it will appear in the Anti-Slavery Reporter.

On the 25th of July, the Fair of the Protestant Episcopal Church—the object of which, we learn, was to raise funds to assist in the erection of their new meeting-house—was opened in this city in the evening, six o'clock, at the Court House. The fair lasted several days. His Excellency, the President, was present on the afternoon of the 26th.

The Fair closed Monday evening with Tableaus of several scenes, and piano and vocal music.

Mr. Lynch has withdrawn from the editorial department of the "Herald."

Dr. R. C. Cooper, physician of the American Colonization Society, at Robertsport, was married to Miss Rebecca Burns, third daughter of Bishop Burns, on the 1st of August.

An examination of the High School in the M. E. Seminary, of which W. F. Burns, B. A., is principal, took place on the 29th of July. The students were examined in Geometry, Arithmetic, Philosophy, Physiology, Latin, English Grammar, Governmental Instructor, &c. The examination was unexpected by the students, who were not given time to make special preparation for the occasion, but it was passed in a satisfactory manner.

A few days ago, while crossing the St. John's river, in Bassa, a boat was upset, and the following persons drowned: A. F. Johnston, Guilford, Gwinn, Minor, and several native men. We learn that the first four were carpenters, and Johnston one of the first class in Liberia.

During the June term of the Court of Quarter sessions and Common Pleas, Mr. William M. Davis, a Liberian, returned by Johnson, Turpin and Dunbar's vessel, from the United States, (where he had been for several years pursuing the study of law,) made application to be admitted to the Bar. H. W. Johnson, Esq., District Attorney, motioned the court to appoint a committee of three members of the Bar, in accordance with the rule established by His Hon. Ex-Judge Moore. His Hon. Judge B. R. Wilson entertained the motion, and appointed H. W. Johnson, Joseph W. Hilton, and —— as a committee to examine the said W. M. Davis; and an evening was appointed by the chairman of the committee. After an examination he was recommended by the committee to His Hon. Judge B. R. Wilson, to be admitted to the Bar.

On the 16th of Aug., Edward C Peal, of Millsburg, was shot dead by his own gun, while in the act of taking it out of his canoe, and died immediately. Mr. Peal, it is said, was on his way hunting, and had left his wharf, and stopped at another some distance below, where the sad event happened. The Coroner's jury from some collateral circumstances, returned a verdict of "willful suicide," though many persons assert that it was "death by accident."

The Cession of Lagos.

We lay before our readers a copy of the treaty between Great Britain and Lagos, which has given to the British Government for the paltry sum of probably less than ten thousand dollars per annum, one of the most important ports on the western coast of Africa.

The London "African Times" says of this treaty: "The negociations seemed to have been conducted with a little undue haste on the part of the British agents employed. But Lords Palmerston and Russell have humanely determined to finish with the slave trade in those parts. We are assured too, that there were many serious secret reasons for avoiding further delay; and King Docemo, the fisherboy whom we placed in authority, was never regarded in any other light than as a mere locum tenens, until it should become indispensable for Great Britain to assume the absolute sovreignty and rule, as she has now done."

Can the "African Times" enlighten us as to the "very serious secrets" for hurrying up at this time this arrangement between "Her Majesty, Sovereign of Lagos" and her fisherboy substitute?

The Treaty is as follows:—

"Treaty between Norman H. B dingfeld, Commander of Her Majesty's sloop Prometheus, and Senior Officer of the Bights Division, and William McCoskry, Esq., Her Britannic Majesty's Acting Consul, on the part of Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain, and Docemo, King of Lagos, on the part of himself and Chiefs.

ARTICLE I.

In order that the Queen of England may be the better enabled to assist, defend, and protect the inhabitants of Lagos, and to put an end to the slave-trade in this and the neighboring countries, and to prevent the destructive wars so frequently undertaken by Dahomey and others for the capture of slaves, I, Docemo, do, with the consent and advice of my Council, give, transfer, and by these presents grant and confirm, unto the Queen of Great Britain, her heirs and successors, for ever, the port and island of Lagos, with all the rights, profits, territories, and appurtenances whatsoever thereunto belonging, and as well the profits and revenue, as the direct, full, and absolute dominion and sovereignty of the said port, island, and premises, with all the royalties thereof, freely, fully, entirely, and absolutely. I do also covenant and grant that the quiet and peaceable possession thereof shall, with all possible speed, be freely and effectually delivered to the Queen of Great Britain, or such person as Her Majesty shall thereunto appoint, for her use in the performance of this grant; the inhabitants of the said island and territories, as the Queen's subjects, and under her sovereignty, crown, jurisdiction, and government, being still suffered to live there.

ARTICLE II.

Docemo will be allowed the use of the title of King, in its usual African signification, and will be permitted to decide disputes between natives of Lagos, with their consent, subject to appeal to British laws.

ARTICLE III.

In the transfer of lands the stamp of Docemo affixed to the document will be proof that there are no other native claims upon it; and for this purpose he will be permitted to use it as hitherto.

In consideration of the cession, as before mentioned, of the port and island and territories of Lagos, the representatives of the Queen of Great Britain do promise, subject to the approval of Her Majesty, that Docemo shall receive an annual pension from the Queen of Great Britain equal to the net revenue hitherto annually received by him; such pension to be paid at such periods and in such mode as may hereafter be determined.

[Here follow the signatures.]

Lagos, Aug. 6, 1861.

The Kansas Brigade true to Freedom

A great deal has been said about Lane's course in regard to slaves. He informs me that his invariable policy has been not to return, against their own wishes, a single negro, man, woman, or child, who has come within his lines. Where the master is a loyal man, he has given him a certificate of that fact, and of the loss of the negro; but no unwilling fugitive has been dragged out of the camp of the Kansas Brigade. It is said that the number of slaves who have thus been practically emancipated is about 2,000, though less than one-tenth of them now remain with the brigade. The others seem to have wended their way to those regions where the negro has some rights which the white man is "bound to respect." You can be very sure that the rebels in the regions through which Lane have passed, who believed in the Southern idea that Slavery was one of their chief elements of strength, have awakened to the fact that they are victims of misplaced confidence. Unfortunate as it is that General Lane will not keep out of the ruinous personal quarrels which disgrace our leaders in Kansas, at least record it to his honor that he is not of those who hold slavery more sacred than the success of our arms—who are too timid to accept the issue which the rebels have forced upon us, and to place our cause upon a footing where it would enlist the sympathies of all men the world over, who love justice and believe in human rights.—Cor. of N. Y. Tribune.

Books Wanted for Hayti.

MR. EDITOR:—I have made up my mind to emigrate to the Island of Hayti, there to settle for life, to promote the glorious cause of civilization and Christianization, at which place I intend to join the Colony of the Rev. Mr. Holly, and before going I shall endeavour to visit the various Sabbath schools, and say a few words of encouragement, probably for the last time, and if they should have anything to contribute in the way of establishing a Sabbath School, it will be thankfully received, and a true account given to the public.

N. R. ASHBY

New York, Nov. 2, 1861

THE SLAVES AND THE WAR.—A writer in the N. Y. Herald, furnishing notes of a recent tour in the South, makes the following statement:

The negroes seem to relish the present condition of affairs very much. The military excitement possesses great charms for them. They sew yellow stripes to their pants as a sort of uniform, and fancy themselves thoroughpaced soldiers. Those who remain on the plantation are delighted, because their labor is not so irksome and continuous as it used to be, and the rigor of the overseer has been relaxed. Those employed on the fortifications do their work cheerfully, incited to it by the raw head-and-bloody-bone stories about the the terrible Yankee abolitionists, which they think something worse than cholera or yellow fever. They are told that the war is to defend them, and to keep them from being sold into Cuba. The negroes in the cities, towns and border states know better than to give credence to such stories, but not so the field hands in the cotton states.

There are no apprehensions of a servile insurrection entertained, nor is there a thought bestowed upon the subject. The only danger is from the mass of negroes that have been sent from the border states into the interior of the Gulf states. Those are generally hard cases, and calculated to spread mutiny and dissatisfaction among their more ignorant and innocent fellow victims. Still it will take some time for their influence to be manifested. The negroes from the northern border of Tennessee are being daily sent South.

A RIGHTOUS DECISION.—A negro woman belonging to a citizen of Alexandria, early in the rebellion, was imprisoned by her master in the city jail, on suspicion of an intention to run away, which suspicion was founded upon the fact that she had, on several occasions, furnished meals to some of our soldiers, from her master's table. A short time ago her mistress applied to the Provost Court for leave to take her from jail, which was granted. On the night of her release her master took her to the garret of his house, gagged and bound her, and whipped her furiously, then locked her in. During the night she escaped by the window, and in the morning made complaint to Judge Freese. He summoned her master, who is one of the F. F. Vs., and ordered him to be confined in jail. His wife, with tears in her eyes, applied to Gen. Montgomery for relief, and he arrested the order for imprisonment. The question was taken to the War Department, and Assistant Secretary Scott, who is as wise as he is able, in deciding it, said he felt no disposition to meddle with the action of the Provost Court in any of its decisions, but especially in this one, because it seemed in his opinion to be eminently just and proper.—Cor. N. Y. Tribune.

SUMMARY.

The Louisville correspondent of the Cincinnati "Commercial" has the following story from a Southern refugee:

"Mr. Joseph A. Acklin, of Nashville, has three large plantations at the mouth of the Red River, in Louisiana, on which are about 2,000 slaves. Since the speculators advanced pork to $45 per bbl. he has been limiting his negroes to half rations. Full rations for slaves in Louisiana are never more than they can devour. As a natural consequence of being hungry the slaves looked about for something to eat, and confiscated the pigs and poultry of their master, dividing and secreting it among themselves. Acklin ordered his overseer to flog the slaves whenever found guilty of similar thefts. But lately the overseer refused to do so any longer, urging that it was dangerous, and that their lives were in danger from the negroes who boldly asserted they would have plenty to eat or steal it. Acklin concluded to allow them to steal what they would, trusting that in the sugar-crushing season he would be able to feed them on sugar.

The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. "Tribune" writes:

A slave belonging to a rebel was sent from beyond our pickets to Alexandria a few days ago. While there he informed Judge Freese that he was told before leaving home that it was his master's intention to sell him to a Southern planter. He sought protection. Judge Freese gave him a letter addressed to our pickets to the effect that they had no right to pass any person beyond our outposts. The slave is thereby detained in Alexandria.

The population of the Beaufort District, S. C., now in the possession of the Federal troops, according to the census of 1850, is as follows:

Total white population	5,947
Free colored	579
Total free population,	6,529
Slaves	32,279

Beaufort would have been a fine missionary field for General Lane's brigade.

A young colored man was badly beaten in the streets of Reading, Pa., while accompanied by a female, a few evenings since.

Mr. Ira Aldridge, the African Roscius, is making a most successful tour through Russia. He has given nine representations at Kieff, and been received with distinguished attention by some of the highest families of the country. He has appointments at Moscow and St. Petersburg for twelve nights in each place.

MARRIED.

JASON—HORTON.—In Williamsburgh, Monday evening, Nov. 11th, by Rev. M. Manning, Samuel B. Jason to Miss Margaret E. Horton, all of said place.

Special Notices.

LECTURES.

THE UNDERSIGNED is prepared to fill engagements to deliver single Lectures, on the following subjects:

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY WITH REFERENCE TO NATURAL THEOLOGY;

THE ADAPTATIONS OF THE EARTH, OR TERRESTRIAL ADAPTATIONS;

MENTAL PHILOSOPHY

THE ANCIENT HONORS OF THE BLACK AND COLORED RACES OF THE EARTH;

—Being a series of popular discourses recently delivered, founded on the following texts:

1. "Look not upon me because I am black." [Song of Sol.—1 6.
2. "Princes shall come out of Egypt." [Psalm 68 -31.
3. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin." [Jer —13.23.
4. "Cursed be Canaan."—Gen.—9 25.
5. "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus." Philemon.

TERMS.—The lecturer's passage both ways, and one-fourth of profits.

[From the Detroit Daily Advertiser, March 1, 1860.]

"Mr. BERRY's lecture last night is stated to have displayed much thought, and to have been in every respect meritorious."

Grand Promenade Concert and Oyster Supper.

The J. W. B. Smith Tabernacle, No. 2,

I. O. of B. and S. of LOVE and CHARITY, will celebrate its third anniversary, on Thanksgiving Eve., Wednesday, the 27th inst., at the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms, No. 178 Prince Street, on which occasion there will be given a Grand Promenade Concert and Oyster Supper.

Professor Robert Brown's Cotillion Band is engaged for the occasion.

N. B.—In addition to the above, the Ice Creams, Fruits and Mottoes, will be served gratuitously.

Tickets only 50 cents—to be had of any member of the Tabernacle. Do not forget—secure your tickets early. Remember, Wednesday Evening, Nov. 27th.

PLEASANT R. SMITH, Chairman.
OLIVER A. HOLMES,
16 2t Com. of Arrangements.

A DONATION

For the benefit of Mrs. Rev. H. H. GARNET will take place at the Metropolitan Hall, 178 Prince St., on Thursday evening, Nov. 21st.

Tickets 37 cents—to be had of
Mr. TITUS, 247 Thompson St.,
" HENRY MONTGOMERY, 89 Thompson St.,
" WM STACKHOUSE, 88 Marion St., and elsewhere. 16 1t

THE BALL IS UP!

FLOOR SKATING, FLOOR SKATING!

BOSTON'S

SKATING ACADEMY,

FOR LADIES.

Mr. T. S. BOSTON respectfully announces to his friends and the public, that he will re-open his SKATING SCHOOL, for Ladies and Gentlemen, at the

ASSEMBLY ROOMS,
178 PRINCE STREET,

Commencing TUESDAY Evening, Nov. 12, 1861.

Terms of Admission—10 cts. Doors open at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Terms for Skating—15 cts. half hour; 20 cts. per hour.

Persons wishing to engage the Rooms for private parties, can do so by communicating to

THOS. S. BOSTON,
No. 87 Sullivan St.,
15 6t New York City.

MASONIC.

NOTICE is hereby given, that WILLIAM CLARK is suspended from Celestial Lodge, No. 2, F. A. M., working under the Masonic jurisdiction of the M. W. United Grand Lodge for the State of New York.

JOHN R. PORTER, W. M.
OLIVER A. HOLMES, Sec'y. 15 1

MASONIC

DIRECTORY,

FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5819.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka No. 15, Norwich, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14. Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, New York City.

NOTICE.

All members of the Annual Conferences of the A.M.E. Zion Church who have taken shares in the stock of the Book Concern of said church, are hereby informed that the payment is now due, and they are requested to make remittance to the Treasurer, Rev. Jos. P Thompson, [illegible], N.Y., through the mail or by express.

N.B. All who have not taken shares can do so by forwarding the amount of $10 to the Secretary, at New Bedford, Mass.

SAMUEL M. GILES,
Secretary of the Board.
New Bedford, Oct. 16th, 1861.

AGENCY

FOR TROY AND VICINITY.

James R. Benham is the regularly appointed Agent for the Anglo-African in Troy, Lansingburg, Waterford and vicinity. All orders or communications for the paper may be left with Mr. Benham on board of the steamer "Cornelius Vanderbilt."

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delsart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING

To consider measures with reference to a settlement of the

GERRIT SMITH LANDS,

will be held, agreeable to adjournment, at Prince Street Hall, on Monday evening November 18th, 1861. The public are invited to attend. The meeting will be addressed by a person who has resided three years upon his grant.

Charles L. Reason, Ch'mn.
Wright Seaman, Jr., Sec'y.

LECTURES.

The Rev. Alex. Crummell, of Liberia, W.A., is prepared to deliver the following Lectures, either singly or as a course, during the months of November and December:

1. The customs, genius, and characteristics of native tribes in Western Africa.
2. The growth of civilization along the Western Coast of Africa.
3. The progress and prospects of the Republic of Liberia.

Letters are to be addressed to Rev A. Crummell, 311 Spring Street, New York. 12—4t

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor, cor. DeKalb and Hudson Avenues, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock,	A. M.
3½ "	P. M.
7 "	P. M.

10 4t.

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH.

28th Street, near 8th Avenue, Rev. John Frisby, Pastor. Residence 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o'clock,	A. M.
3 "	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue.

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock,	P. M.
7 1-2 "	P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

Rev. CHAS. H THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½	A. M.
3	P. M.
7½	P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn. 13-1y.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate LADIES and GENTLEMEN with FIRST CLASS BOARD, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand. 16 13t

MRS. M. E. EDDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING
IN BROOKLYN,

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

FOR SALE—A BEAUTIFUL PIC-NIC GROVE, at Glencove, L. I.—The owner has been asked by respectable colored people in that vicinity and in this city to offer for sale the above Grove. It is offered to colored persons and the public generally. It extends from West to Middle Avenue, and has a fine view of the Bay, and is near the landing. Inquire of Mrs. R. BONNER, No. 54 West 29th-st., cor. 6th Avenue.
14—13t

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston st., or of the Janitor 225 West 15th-st.

POCKET WATER-FILTER
AND
DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weighs one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing

DAY & CO.,
13-13t. Box 464 P.O., Newark, N. J.

FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKING,
SHIRT MAKING, EMBROIDERING, AND QUILTING.

Mesdames F. A. HAMILTON, O. A. NEWTON, and Miss A. M. HAMILTON,

187 Navy Street, Brooklyn.

Ladies' and Childrens' dresses cut and made in the most fashionable style and warranted to fit.

SHIRTS of all paterns made, and plain sewing executed with neatness; and durability of work guaranteed. Orders for EMBROIDERING promptly attended to, and QUILTING executed with dispatch.

Public patronage is respectfully solicited.
12-tf.

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS.
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) respectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms. Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this or in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG.

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

DON'T FORGET,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET,
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T. L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Pease call and examine the premises.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS. The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co., N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St.,
one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE
BY
MRS. W. S. WILKINS & Co
610 PINE, ABOVE SIXTH STREET
PHILADELPHIA 7-13t.

LADIES' FURNISHING STORE,
CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
READY-MADE AND MADE TO ORDER, BY
MRS. S. WILKINS & CO.,
610 Pine, above Sixth Street, Philadelphia.
7-13t.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate. 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf.

A SCHOOL WANTED.—A YOUNG LADY, a graduate of one of the High Schools of this State, and who is fully qualified as a teacher, is desirous of obtaining a school where the salary would not be less than $200 a-year. Address Thos. Hamilton, 48 Beekman St., N.Y.

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION. THE UNdersigned respectfully announces that he is now prepared to give instruction in the ART OF SINGING. He will be at home at 187 Navy Street, Brooklyn, on MONDAY EVENING, and at ZION CHURCH, N. Y., on THURSDAY EVENING, of each week. Ladies or Gentlemen desiring instruction, will please apply immediately. Singing schools taught and private instruction given on moderate terms.

3tf. ROBT. HAMILTON,

NEW SAILOR'S HOME, CHARLES M. FORTEN, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 26 MULBERRY STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and the public, that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 66 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK. 4-1t

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St., N. Y

MRS. E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies,	$2,50
" " Gentleman,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

y13t.

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER,
219 CENTRE STREET, NEW YORK.

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts., 2 tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk Street. Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with

Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.

BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker St
between Broadway & Crosby St. 4t.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

P. A. WHITE,
Corner of Frankfort & Gold Sts.,
GENERAL
COMMISSION MERCHANT,
KEEPS CONSTANTLY ON HAND
A FRESH AND PURE ASSORTMENT
OF
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS
GENUINE
LUBIN'S EXTRACTS
AND OTHER PERFUMERY,
FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH
BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES,
FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA
SEGARS, &C., &C.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS
carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S
VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR
FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH,
AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Grey.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant, in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hair-brush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off, always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S
STRENGTHENING PLASTER.
AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR
LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT,
SPRAINS, BRUISES, &c., &c.

Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly servicable.

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent relief from its use, as it keeps a continued heat, acting as a gentle counter irritant, removing the inflammation of the stomach without breaking the skin. Persons engaged in sedentary pursuits should use these Plasters constantly, as they give strength to parts weakened by constant sitting and stooping.

For STRAINS and SPRAINS, they are infallible, affording relief immediately and without fail.

For RHEUMATISM there is no external application equal to them, promoting the general circulation, and

PREVENTING A RETURN

of the excruciating pain.

These plasters are prepared with great care, and of the best material, and to prevent fraud the name of the originator is placed on the back of each one. In purchasing ask for BADEAU'S PLASTER. See that the name BADEAU is written on the back, or you will be deceived.

P. A. WHITE, Sole Proprietor.

REV. H. H. GARNET'S SPEECH AT BIRMINGHAM.

The London "African Times" of Oct. 23d, contains a report of a meeting held at Birmingham on the evening of the 15th ult., 'for the purpose of considering the effects of the cotton famine on Manchester and Birmingham industries, the best mode of procuring a supply of cotton, and the opportunity the crisis affords of annihilating the slave trade by establishing the cotton industry in Africa." The Mayor (A Ryland, Esq.) presided. Able speeches were made by Lord Alfred Churchill, Mr. M'Leod, Mr. Danby Seymour, M. P., Lord Calthorpe and Mr. Edward Green, in support of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That this meeting emphatically expresses its approval of the appointment by the British Government of an accredited agent at Abbeokuta, and trusts that the policy which dictated this appointment may be extended to the town of Rabba, on the Niger, and other important places, as facilities arise.

Resolved, That this meeting recognises in the special qualities of the African race the promise of an African nationality, and anticipates in that nationality a valuable element in the commonweath of nations.

Resolved, That whilst deploring the threatened cotton famine in the manufacturing districts of the North, this meeting cannot but see in the present crisis the means of securing our own cotton supply for the future, and also an opportunity of destroying the African slave trade by the development of the vast natural cotton fields of Western Africa.

The resolutions were carried unanimously.

MR. GARNET'S SPEECH.

The Rev. H. H. Garnet, who was received with protracted applause, moved the fourth resolution. He said he was somewhat embarrassed in arising to address this large and intelligent audience; and, in addition, he was more than ordinarily impressed with a sense of the responsibility that was resting upon him; for he had not only to speak his own sentiments, but also those of thousands of his brethren in America, whose representative he was. (Applause.) But there was one consideration which afforded him some relief. He had learned that it was the pleasure of Englishmen of noble birth and distinguished position to bestow great kindness and condescension upon even the humble of other nations, when they appeared before them with a worthy and important object. (Hear, hear.) He hailed this new movement as most hopeful and encouraging for the future of his fatherland. If it had originated in merely selfish considerations (he meant those suggested alone by trade or commerce), he should have reason to doubt the good that would be finally done to Africa. But this was not the case. It was true there was some self-interest in this movement, as there was, more or less, in everything with which man had to do; but he believed that, in this stupendous work, it was modified and controlled by the spirit of Christianity and universal freedom. (Applause) With such principles and purposes, the most glorious results might be looked for. As for himself, he had not the least doubt as to the character of those results; for he was satisfied that God's set time had come, in which He intended to favor Africa, and when the cheering prophecy was to be fulfilled, "Ethiopia shall quickly stretch forth her hands unto God." He knew he would be pardoned in saying that England owes a great debt to Africa. (Hear, hear.)

He was glad that she had begun to think about paying it, and he was satisfied that if she went about the work as she usually did in such matters, she would very soon pay off the first instalment at least. He would remind the audience that every pound of cotton that came from America, was fanned by the sighs, wet with the tears, and stained with the blood of slaves. This race for whom he spoke had enriched the commerce, enlivened the trade, contributed to the comforts, and administered to the luxury of England. Nor was this all. The soil of Africa in times past had been the theatre upon which many of Britain's sons had enacted the worst of crimes. Surely a great Christian people should hasten to make compensation. (Hear, hear.) In adverting to the plans of the African-Aid Society, the reverend gentleman said that the requirements of the age demanded the adoption of some new and improved measures in the work of the civilization of Africa. The society proposed to assist at first a few industrious and Christian families from North America to settle in Abbeokuta, Western Africa. It was desired that they should go in the spirit of Christian love, with the Word of God in their hands, and with the plough, and other agricultural implements; with their chests of mechanical tools, and with men that could use them all well. The effect would be amazing and powerful, if the natives could see among them civilized colored men, fully imbued with Christianity, who had come to live and die with them. They would be taught how to till their land, how to plant and crop, how to live and labor, how to worship the true God, how to hope, and how to die. (Loud applause.) He firmly believed that the society, having such objects and purposes would surely win and conquer. Let the Africans feel that the new comers are friends and brothers, and as such they will be received. The Africans were quick to observe the difference between pure selfishness and common honesty. One had said, that "there were two classes of men that came to Africa; one loved Africa, the other loved the Africans. The first are welcome, but the second they cared not to see." After dwelling on the kindness of the Africans to strangers, and especially to the civilized of their own race, the reverend gentleman said he regarded the field of operation selected by the society as a wise and judicious selection. The people there were distinguished for their honesty. It was customary for persons who wished to sell chickens to tie them by the highway, and to intimate the price they wished for them in strings of cowries by a corresponding number of notches cut on a stick fastened by them; the owner would then go to his work, or on a journey, leaving his property entirely unprotected. A hundred might pass, and the property would not be meddled with, unless the full price was laid in their place. Then another hundred people might pass by the money, and it would not be removed, except by the lawful owner. (Laughter.) Although Birmingham had a great deal of moral light, yet he questioned whether chickens, under similar circumstances, would fare any better in that city. (Renewed laughter and applause.) The people of Abbeokuta were industrious. He was informed that in almost every house there were heard the hum of the rude spinning wheel, and the clatter of the weaver's shuttle. For all that Britain, or any other portion of the world, might do for Africa, an ample reward was reserved. Give her your civilization, and she will give you her commerce and wealth. Give her the religion of Christ, and she will give you her friendship. Scatter with liberal hands, and you shall reap a thousandfold of the increase. If any should say the work was too great and impracticable, he would answer, that Anglo-Saxon energy, and African industry and honesty could accomplish anything within the boundaries of reason. (Hear, hear.)

He wished to see the white hand of England and the black hand of Africa struck together as the sign of an unconquerable determination, under God, to develop the vast resources of that injured land, and to give her people the light of the Gospel. He rejoiced in particular at one sentence in the Article of Cession of Lagos to the British Crown. He referred to the article in which it is declared to be the purpose of the Government to "annihilate the slave trade." [Applause.] After alluding in glowing terms to the interest which was manifested by many distinguished Christian philanthropists in New York, and other parts of the United States, in favor of the development of the various resources of Africa, and the elevation and nationality of the African race throughout the world, the speaker said the negro race were not surpassed by any other in the power of endurance. In fact, the black man was universal, and everywhere he kept his head above water, notwithstanding the waves of hard trials were fearfully raving around him. [Hear, hear.] He flourished in every land—in the sunny south, the cold north of America, in Greenland, and in all the tropics. He was strong and athletic in every temperate climate, and even in England he had won and worn the champion's belt [Loud laughter and applause.] Surely for such a people there was in reserve a glorious destiny, and a proud and powerful nationality. His native country, America—which he loved, with all her faults—was involved in a terrible war, which he believed would long continue; but America's extremity was England's opportunity to smite King Cotton between the joints of his harness. [Applause.] He would now read the resolution entrusted to him: "That the introduction of Christian colored families from Canada into Africa is eminently calculated to advance the influence of Christianity and civilization in that country." The reverend gentleman resumed his seat amidst loud applause.

Prof. Robert Campbell, in seconding the resolution, briefly alluded to his labours in Abbeokuta and other places, in support of the objects of the society, and he was convinced that it only needed the shackles of slavery to be broken, for the Africans to be capable of developing amongst themselves a civilization of which even this great country would not need to be ashamed. He had just shipped in a vessel, from London, about 250l. worth of cotton machinery, which he intended to follow as fast as he could, and take from Lagos up the river Ogun to Abbeokuta, which was about ninety miles in the interior. When there he should take in some land, get laborers to plant cotton, and purchase all the cotton from the natives that his means would allow, and ship it to this country. To prove that the negroes were a trading race, he mentioned the fact, that in the interior of Africa he found articles of luxury that had been imported from Europe and by the caravans from Egypt across the great desert, the trader not daring, however, to approach the western coast of Africa for fear of the slave-dealer.

The resolution was put and passed.

After the adoption of another resolution, which does not appear in the report, the meeting adjourned.

A STORY AS IS A STORY.

Just twenty years ago a party went over to Cohokia Creek, on a skating match. Bill Berry was the leader—a tall, six-footer, full of pluck, and the best skater in all creation. Well, we got to the creek, and fastened on our skates; and, after taking a horn from Joe Turner's flask, started off in good style. Bill Berry in the lead. It was a dogoned cold day and so we had to skate fast to keep the blood up. There were little breath-holes in the ice, and every now and then we came near going into 'em. Just as I had finished bucklin' the straps, I heard a noise. I looked up and saw something shooting along the ice like lightning. It was Bill Berry's head. He had been going like greased electricity, and before he knew it he went into one of them holes. The force was so great as to cut his head off against the sharp corner.

"It's all day with Bill Berry," said I.

"And all night, too," said Joe Turner.

Just as he got these words out of his mouth I looked at Bill's head, which had been going on the ice, and all at once it dropped into another hole. We ran to it and heard Bill say:

"For God's sake, boys, pull me out!"

I looked into the hole, and there, as true as I am alive was Bill Berry's body, which had skooted along under the ice, and met the head at the hole. It was so cold that the head had frozen fast to the body, and we pulled Billy out as good as new. He felt a little numb at first, but after skating awhile he was as brisk as the rest of us, and laughed over the joke. We went home about dark, all satisfied with the day's sport. About nine o'clock in the evening, somebody rapped at the door, and said I was wanted over to Bill Berry's. I put on my coat and went over. There lay Bill's body in one place, and his head in another. His wife said after he came home from skating he sat down to warm himself, and, while attempting to blow his nose he threw his head into the fire place. The coroner was called that night, and the verdict of the jury was that "Bill Berry came to his death by skating too fast."

Our Devil thinks the above story very improbable.

A pedlar being asked by a spindle-shanked wag if he had any tin overcoats, replied: "No, but I have a pair of candle moulds that would just fit you."

THE LONDON TIMES AND THE WAR.

The New York correspondent of the "Western Argus," published in Chatham, C. W., under date of October 28, writes thus:

FOREIGN POLICY.

The London "Times" still seems determined to influence France and other great powers of Europe, and compel the British government to raise the blockade. Owned as this journal principally is, by the Rothchilds, with their enormous wealth, the editor of which is Mr. Delany, the disappointed heir to a large estate of West India slaves on the Island of Jamaica, smarting under the pain received by the blow of Emancipation, they seem determined in defiance of the moral status of the Christian age in which we live, to defend, protect, and foster Slavery wherever it might be done, for the benefit of those who profit by its products.

THREE PARTIES CONCERNED.

One thing the London "Times" will have to learn, which I am sure it never dreamed of, that there is a party to this question besides itself and the Manchester Cotton Manufacturers, leaving out of the issue the Government of America and England. The black population of the United States are loyal and patriotic to a fault, and never in the history of the nation was so satisfied and contented to remain passive, and let the course of events have their own way. They believe in, and depend upon God and his Providence, and therefore would do nothing at the present juncture to embarrass their fellow countrymen, in this, their hour of trial.

But this I will assure the "Times," that if the Blockade is raised by European interference, the intelligent free blackmen who understand this whole question would look upon it as such, and regarding it as a determination to reopen the trade and defend the Cotton interest on the blasted hopes of their enslaved brethren, will find their way into the South, and regardless even of Manchester Cotton Dealers—though Englishmen they be—never permit another stock of cotton to be grown, by exciting the slaves to general insurrection. This, when worst comes to worst, by European interference, the over-bearing London "Times" may be certain of.

As appropos to this, the New York "Tribune" of this morning, placed in my hands since commencing this letter, has the following significant hint. Whether true or not it is of little consequence, since it seems to show the American feeling on the subject:

At a grand dinner given in Washington to Prince Napoleon and suit, an eminent American naval commander, born in a slave State, was seated next to a French naval officer who attended the Prince. The conversation between these two gentlemen turned upon the Southern blockade. The French officer said that it would before long be broken. "By what power?" asked the American. "By the English, of course," was the answer, "they can't live without cotton." "Very good," replied the American, "but I tell you what, the consequence of such an interference will make a figure in history. As soon as it happens a million of men will march South from the loyal States each carrying two muskets—one for himself, and one for a negro. Whether this proceeding will help the English to cotton, you Monsieur, can judge as well as I."

Let the London Times and over bearing cotton dealers beware of their interference with the affairs of a people determined to be free.

The interference of the British in Lagos, West Central Africa, is very unfavorably received by the colored population here, and does much towards shaking their confidence in British sincerity for their elevation.

HOMO.

A NEW SPECULATION—SINGULAR KIDNAPPING.

An outrageous transaction (says the Dayton Journal) was investigated before the Mayor on Saturday last. The victim was a colored child about six years old; and the parties under arrest were a man named Thomas Hopkins and a woman named Fanny Galloway, the latter formerly of Xenia and the former of Dayton. The speculation is novel, and perhaps a new way to raise the wind. The mode of proceeding was somewhat after this wise: Hopkins induced the woman—Galloway—to accompany him to Xenia and to present herself as his wife, for the purpose of procuring a colored child to raise, telling her she could realize a hundred dollars by the operation. She consented and succeeded after a good deal of labor in finding a child of the right age, belonging to parents who were willing to part with it for the purposes stated. They took the child to Lexington, Kentucky, and offered it for sale; they remained there five days, being out of money and not succeeding in effecting a sale, they left the child in pledge for their board, that amounted to $25, and returned to Dayton. After the lapse of several days it is said that some one advanced to Hopkins money enough to go back to Lexington and make another attempt to sell. This time he was successful, getting a horse, a gold watch and $40, in money for the child.

The charges being fully sustained, the Mayor bound Hopkins in the sum of $600, and Galloway in $400. They failed to give the bond and were sent to jail.

Marshal Hannon made the arrests in Indianapolis—Hopkins at Campmorton, and *Miss Galloway at a hotel. Hopkins has en*listed in Capt. Kline's company, and supposed that it would exempt him from civil arrest, but this impression was quite erroneous, as the Marshall had not the least trouble in getting him from the millitary authorities.

The child is yet in Lexington, and we are told that steps will be taken to secure it and restore it to its parents.

From the Philadelphia Christian Recorder, Nov. 2nd.

CONVERSION AND SUDDEN DEATH.

In the A. M. E. Church, Hurst Street, Philadelphia, for three or four weeks past the pastor has held a series of meetings, during which there were some sixteen conversions and accessions to the church. Among them was a remarkable case, which will doubtless be interesting to a portion of our readers.

On Sunday evening, the 13th of October, after the sermon, the Pastor stated that he felt moved upon to inform the congregation present, that some one in their midst would very soon be summoned to appear before God, and a preparation was neccessary. On Wednesday evening, the 16th, a young lady, namely Cornelia B. Pagans, having taken warning, came forward to the inquirer's seat to be prayed for. During the day she informed her cousin that she felt so bad she must surely die if not relieved. In the early part of the evening, Cornelia and her cousin attended their society, i. e., Order of Love and Charity, of which they were members. Cornelia was not content to stay long, but desired to attend church that she might seek the forgiveness of her sins. Her cousin desired her to go home, and have the Doctor or some medicine, but she refused; her desire was to attend church, and to church she came. When the invitation was extended for inquirers, she desired her cousin to accompany her, who refused. Cornelia, however, made her way to the anxious seat, and bowed in humble submission to Almighty God. She was not ashamed to pray, but boldly confessed her sins and asked forgiveness. She continued wrestling in prayer until the hour of adjournment, when the congregation was dismissed, and many dispersed. While many where leaving church to go home, what were Cornelia's thoughts? They were these, as she has since confessed:—"Must I go home without the blessings of salvation? No, I will wait here, I will pray here, until my sins are forgiven." She had scarcely finished these resolutions when her dungeon shook, her chains fell off. "Glory to God," she cried; "My soul is happy and I am free." She went home rejoicing and giving God the glory. On Sunday, the 20th, she joined the church. Many of the Society rejoiced at her reception. Ah! little did they think that their sweet fellowship would soon be ended. But, on Thursday evening, the 24th, after Cornelia had read a lesson in the Bible, and while singing a favorite hymn, she passed before the furnace, and her clothes took fire. She immediately ran up stairs to Mrs. Samuels, with whom she lived, and requested her to extinguish the flames, but alas! it was too late. The flames soon devoured almost every fragment of the wearing apparel in which she was clad. But while fire tortured the flesh, she exclaimed, "Glory to God, the fire is burning out my soul, but I have got Jesus." She was conveyed to the hospital, and survived till Saturday, the 26th, when she died in the full triumphs of faith, exclaiming, "I am going home to Jesus." "She hath given up the ghost; her sun is gone down while it was yet day" Ten days was the brief period of her pilgrimage. She has finished her course, her race is ended, and now the sparkling garland is entwined about her spiritual brow. Cornelia was truly tried by and with fire.

"The Lord is my shepherd," &c.,

"She has gone to God; she has gone to her home:
No more amid peril and error to roam,
Her eyes no longer are dim;
Her feet no more will falter,
No grief can follow her;
No pang her cheek can alter.
O! honored, beloved, to earth unconfined,
Thou hast soared on high, thou hast left us behind.
But our parting is not forever,
We will follow thee by heaven's light,
Where the grave cannot dissever
The souls whom God will unite."

THE COUNTRY PHYSICIAN.

The poor doctor is called from his bed on a stormy night with the stirring summons:

"Doctor, want you to come right straight away off to Bank's; his child's dead."

"Then why do you come?"

"He's poisoned. They gin him laudlum for paregoricky."

"How much did they give him?"

"Don't know—great deal. Think he won't get over it."

The doctor pushes on through the storm—with divers mishaps on the way; and at length arrives at the house of the poisoned patient. He finds it all closed, not a light to be seen. He knocks at the door but no answer. He knocks again furiously, and at last a nightcap appears at the chamber window, and a woman's voice calls out:

"Who's there?"

"The doctor, to be sure. You sent for him."

"Oh! it's no matter, doctor. Ephraim is better; we got a little skeered kinder.—Gin him laudlum, and he sleep kinder sound but he's waked up now."

"How much laudlum did he swallow?"

"Only two drops; 'taint hurt him none Wonderful bad storm to night."

The doctor turns away, buttoning his overcoat under his throat, to seek his home again, and tries to whistle away mortification and anger, when the voice calls:

"Doctor! doctor!"

"What do you want?"

"You won't charge nothin' for this visit will you?"

"What does Satan pay you for swearing?" said a gentleman to one whom he heard using profane language.

"He don't pay me anything," was the reply.

"Well, you work cheap enough, to lay aside the character of a gentleman, to inflict so much pain on your friends and civil people, and to risk your own soul, [gradually rising in emphasis,] and all for nothing! You certainly do work cheap—very cheap indeed!"

"I say, Mister, what's butter to-day?"

"Why butter, certainly."

"Well, I'm mighty glad of it, for the last pound I got of you was mor'n half lard!"

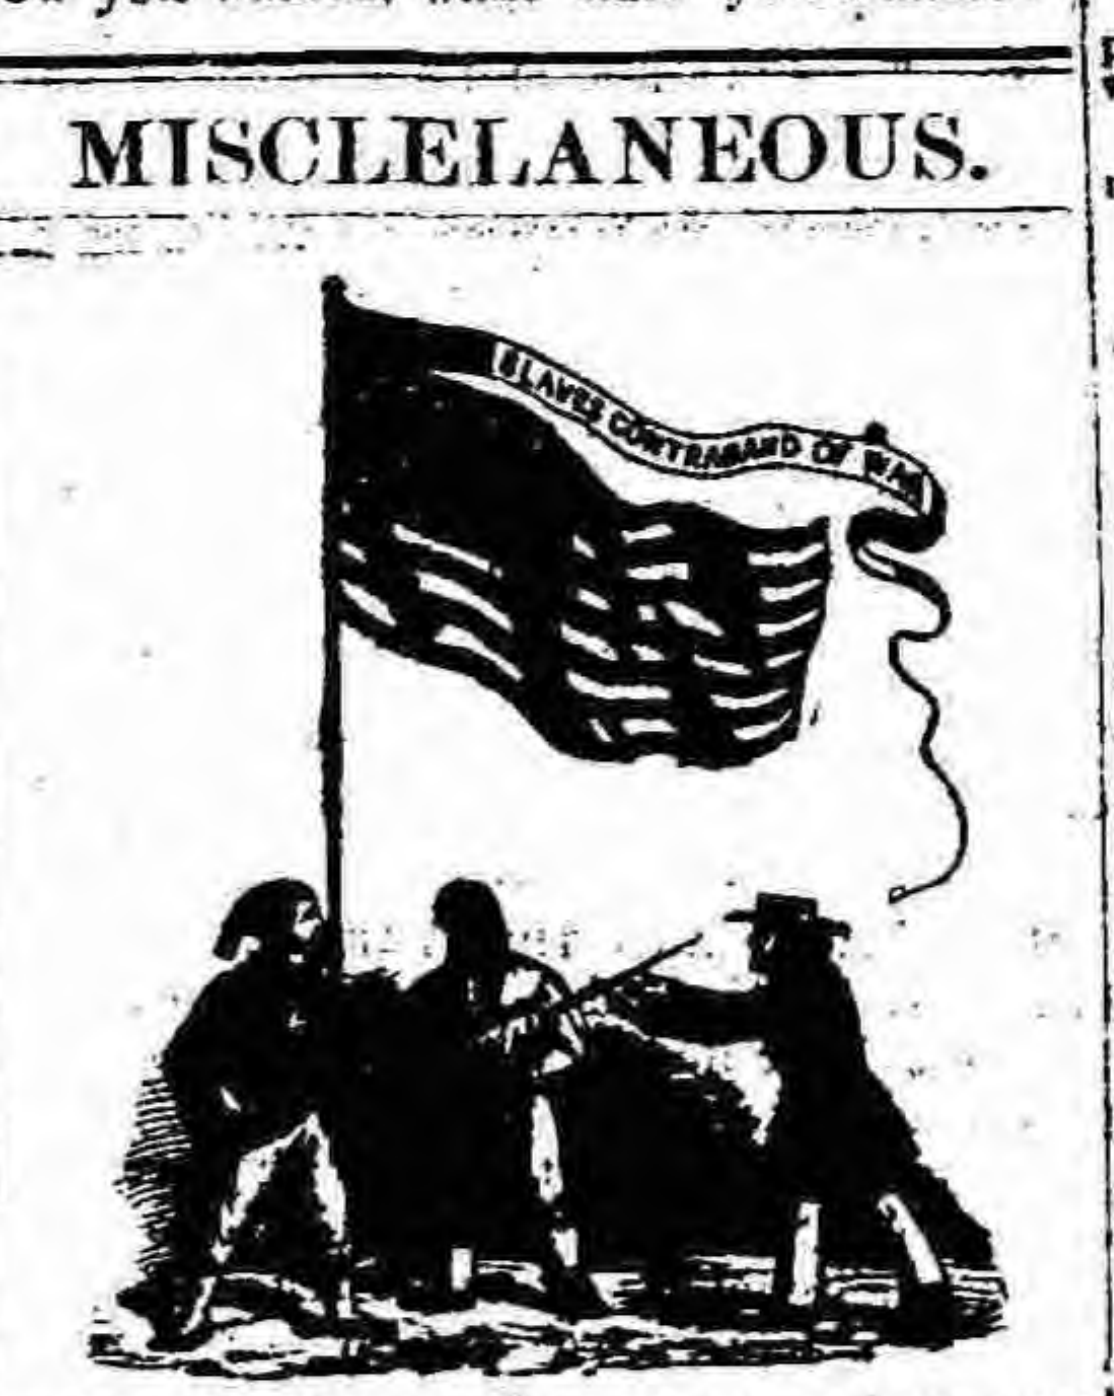
"How long will it take me to reach Jamaica," asked a pedestrian on the Jamaica turnpike.

"Walk on, walk on," said the person interrogated.

Thinking he was misunderstood, the traveler repeated the question, when the same answer was returned. Fancying that the man was crazy, the pedestrian moved on at an accelerated pace.

"Look here," said the interrogated party calling after the traveler, "it'll take you half an hour. I couldn't tell till I saw how you walked, what 'time' you'd make!"

MISCLELANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are equired to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. for washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

MRS. WINSLOW'S
SOOTHING SYRUP.

Every mother should be prepared to act in the capacity of both nurse and physician to her children she can, if she will, discharge these duties much better than any one she can employ. If she does not, she ought to know that there is a Medicine prepared by an old nurse and female physician which has stood the test of many, many years, and is the most perfect thing on earth for children teething; it also cures Wind Colic, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, and is sure to regulate the bowels. We say to every mother, do not let your own prejudices, or the prejudices of others stand in the way of the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP certainly does, as the name implies, "soothe" the little sufferer into a quiet, natural sleep, from which it awakes invigorated and refreshed. And for the cure of diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Wind Colic, &c., we have never seen its equal.

We have always been, and still are, opposed to the practice of drugging infants. This article has no deleterious effects whatever, and from our own experience (we speak advisedly) we have every confidence in it, and can heartily recommend it to all mothers. Take our advice—use it—and you will as strongly recommend it to others as we have to you.

When we say that MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP acts like a charm, we do but reiterate the language of every person who ever used it for heir children, for all diseases incident to the perior of teething, such as Dysentery and Diarrhœa, Wind Colic and Cholera Infantum. It will produce quietude and rest, relieve all suffering, and the infant will awake invigorated and refreshed, and not with the dull and stupefying effects of preparations of opium.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States.

During the thirty years of unprecedented and increasing popularity of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, innumerable "CORDIALS" and other nostrums, prepared by pretended M.D.'s, have sprung up and lived but a mushroom existence, the SOOTHING SYRUP has been constantly increasing in popularity, and become a household word, and THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS THANK MRS. WINSLOW for the health of their children, by the use of her valuable article.

PRICE 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

For sale by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St., N.Y.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rhenbarb, Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c. they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes of people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb hat grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Billious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is erfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions.

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50, Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS;

EMBELLISHMENT.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
Music.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African America Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brindis De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Miss Brushington.—Anon.
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson's Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause,—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica,—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion,—by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson.
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly.
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G. B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden, Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo, volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass. One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S. H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp, 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters,
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787-9. 2. The Articles of Confederation. 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on slavery, and the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions, collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights. Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the Northwest Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts. postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 294 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel between decks, regulation slave deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated: 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price, only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Deacon Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Hon. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland.
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party, late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia, and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton; its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe,
60 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough illustration upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet, and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 17

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 23, 1861.

PRICE FOUR [illegible]

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART I.

"By myself, the Lord of Ages,
I have sworn to right the wrong:
I have pledged my word unbroken,
For the weak against the strong."
[H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER I.

THE PROJECT.

On one of those exciting occasions, during a contest for the Presidency of the United States, a number of gentlemen met in the city of Baltimore. They were few in number, and appeared little concerned about the affairs of the general government. Though men of intelligence, their time and attention seemed to be entirely absorbed in an adventure of self interest. They met for the purpose of completing arrangements for refitting the old ship 'Merchantman,' which then lay in the harbor near Fell's Point. Colonel Stephen Franks, Major James Armsted, Captain Richard Paul and Captain George Rayer, composed those who represented the American side—Captain Juan Garcia and Captain Jose Castello, those of Cuban interest.

Here a conversation ensued upon what seemed a point of vital importance to the company; it related to the place best suited for the completion of their arrangements. The Americans insisted on Baltimore as affording the greatest facilities, and having done more for the encouragement and protection of the trade, than any other known place. Whilst the Cubans on the other side, urged their objections on the ground that the continual increase of liberal principles in the various political parties, which were fast ushering into existence, made the objection beyond a controversy. Havana was contended for as a point best suited for adjusting their arrangements, and that too with many apparent reasons; but for some cause, the preference for Baltimore prevailed.

Subsequently to the adjustment of their affairs by the most complete arrangement for refitting the vessel, Col. Franks took leave of the party for his home in the distant State of Mississippi.

CHAPTER II.

COLONEL FRANKS AT HOME.

On the return of Colonel Stephen Franks to his home at Natchez, he met there Mrs. Arabella, the wife of Judge Ballard, an eminent jurist of one of the Northern States. She had arrived but a day before him, on a visit to some relatives, of whom Mrs. Franks was one. The conversation, as is customary on the meeting of Americans residing in such distant latitudes, readily turned on the general policy of the country.

Mrs. Ballard possessed the highest intelligence, and Mrs. Maria Franks was among the most accomplished of Southern ladies.

'Tell me, Madam Ballard, how will the North go in the present issue?' enquired Franks.

'Give yourself no concern about that, Colonel,' replied Mrs. Ballard, 'you will find the North true to the country.'

'What you consider true, may be false—that is it might be true to you, and false to us,' continued he.

'You do not understand me, Colonel,' she rejoined, 'we can have no interests separate from yours; you know the time-honored motto, 'united we stand,' and so forth, must apply to the American people under every policy in every section of the Union.'

'So it should, but amidst the general clamor in the contest for ascendency, may you not lose sight of this important point?'

'How can we? You, I'm sure, Colonel, know very well that in our country commercial interests have taken precedence of all others, which is a sufficient guarantee of our fidelity to the South.'

'That may be, madam, but we are still apprehensive.'

'Well sir, we certainly do not know what more to do to give you assurance of our sincerity. We have as a plight of faith yielded Boston, New York, and Philadelphia—the intelligence and the wealth of the North—in carrying out the Compromise measures for the interests of the South; can we do more?'

'True, Madam Ballard, true! I yield the controversy. You have already done more than we of the South expected. I now remember that the Judge himself, tried the first case under the Act, in your city, by which the measures were tested.'

'He did, sir, and if you will not consider me unwomanly by telling you, desired me, on coming here, to seek every opportunity to give the fullest assurance that the judiciary are sound on that question. Indeed, so far as an individual might be concerned, his interests in another direction as you know, place him beyond suspicion,' concluded Mrs. Ballard.

'I am satisfied, madam, and by your permission, arrest the conversation. My acknowledgments, madam!' bowed the Colonel, with true southern courtesy.

'Maria, my dear, you look careworn; are you indisposed?' inquired Franks of his wife, who during conversation sat silent.

'Not physically, Colonel,' replied she 'but'—

Just at this moment a servant throwing open the door announced dinner.

Besides a sprightly black boy of some ten years of age, there was in attendance a prepossessing, handsome maid servant, who generally kept, as much as the occasion would permit, behind the chair of her mistress. A mutual attachment appeared to exist between them, the maid apparently disinclined to leave the mistress, who seemed to keep her as near her person as possible.

Now and again the fat cook, mammy Judy, would appear at the door of the dining room bearing a fresh supply for the table, who with a slight nod of the head, accompanied with an affectionate smile and the word 'Maggie,' indicated a tie much closer than that of mere fellow-servants.

Maggie had long been the favorite maid servant of her mistress, having attained the position through merit. She was also nurse and foster-mother to the two last children of Mrs. Franks, and loved them, to all appearance, as her own. The children reciprocated this affection, calling her 'mammy.'

Mammy Judy, who for years had occupied this position, ceded it to her daughter, she preferring, in consequence of age, the less active life of the culinary department.

The boy Tony would frequently cast a comic look upon Mrs. Ballard, then imploringly gaze in the face of his mistress. So intent was he in this, that twice did his master admonish him by a nod of the head.

'My dear,' said the Colonel, 'you are dull to day; pray tell me what makes you sad?'

'I am not bodily afflicted Colonel Franks, but my spirit is heavy,' she replied.

'How so? What is the matter?'

'That will best be answered at another time and place, Colonel.'

Giving his head an unconscious scratch accompanied with a slight twitch of the corner of the mouth, Franks seemed to comprehend the whole of it.

On one of her Northern tours to the watering places, during a summer season some two years previous, having with her Maggie the favorite, Mrs. Franks visited the family of the Judge, at which time Mrs. Ballard first saw the maid. She was a dark mulatto of a rich, yellow, autumn-leaf like complexion, with a matchless, cushion-like head of hair, neither straight nor curly, but handsomer than either.

Mrs. Franks was herself a handsome lady of some thirty-five summers, but ten years less in appearance, a little above medium height, between the majestic and graceful, raven black hair, and dark, expressive eyes. Yet it often had been whispered that in beauty the maid equalled if not excelled the mistress. Her age was twenty-eight.

The conduct of Mrs. Franks toward her servant was more like that of an elder sister than a mistress, and the mistress and maiden sometimes wore dresses cut from the same web of cloth. Mrs. Franks would frequently adjust the dress and see that the hair of her maid was properly arranged. This to Mrs. Ballard was as unusual as it was an objectionable sight, especially as she imagined there was an air of hauteur in her demeanor. It was then she determined to subdue her spirit.

Acting from this impulse, several times in her absence, Mrs. Ballard took occasion to administer to the maid severities she had never experienced at the hands of her mistress, giving her at one time a severe slap on the cheek, calling her an 'impudent jade.'

At this, Mrs. Franks, on learning, was quite surprised, but on finding that the maid gave no just cause for it, took no further notice of it, designedly evading the matter. But before leaving, Mrs. Ballard gave her no rest until she gave her the most positive assurance that she would part with the maid on her next visit at Natchez. And thus she is found pressing her suit at the residence of the Mississippi planter.

CHAPTER III.

THE FATE OF MAGGIE.

After dinner colonel Franks again pressed the inquiry concerning the disposition of his lady. At this time the maid was in the culinary department taking her dinner. The children having been served, she preferred the company of her old mother whom she loved, the children hanging around, and upon her lap. There was no servant save the boy Tony present in the parlor

'I can't, I won't let her go! she's a dear good girl!" replied Mrs. Franks. 'The children are attached to her, and so am I; let Minny or any other of them go—but do not, for Heaven's sake, tear Maggie from me!"

'Maria, my dear, you've certainly lost your balance of mind! Do try and compose yourself,' admonished the Colonel. 'There's certainly no disposition to do contrary to your desires; try and be a little reasonable.'

'I'm sure cousin, I see no cause for your importunity. No one that I know of designs to hurt the negro girl. I'm sure it's not me!' impatiently remarked Mrs. Ballard.

During this, the boy had several times gone into the hall, looking toward the kitchen, then meaningly into the parlor as if something unusual were going on.

Mammy Judy becoming suspicious, went into the hall and stood close beside the parlor door, listening at the conversation.

'Cousin, if you will listen for a moment, I wish to say a word to you,' said Mrs. Ballard. 'The Judge, as you know, has a country seat in Cuba, near the city of Havana, where we design making every year our winter retreat. As we cannot take with us either free negroes or white servants, on account of the existing restrictions, I must have a slave, and of course I prefer a well-trained one, as I know all of yours to be. The price will be no object; as I know it will be none to you, it shall be none to me.'

'I will not consent to part with her, cousin Arabella, and it is useless to press the matter any further!' emphatically replied Mrs. Franks.

'I am sure, cousin Maria, it was well understood between the Colonel and the Judge, that I was to have one of your best-trained maid servants!' continued Mrs. Ballard.

'The Colonel and the Judge! If any such understanding exist, it is without my knowledge and consent, and—'

'It is true, my dear,' interposed the Colonel, 'but—'

'Then,' replied she, 'heaven grant that I may go too! from—'

'Pah, pah! cousin Maria Franks, I'm really astonished at you to take on so about a negro girl! You really appear to have lost your reason. I would not behave so for all the negroes in Mississippi.'

'My dear,' said Franks, 'I have been watching the conduct of that girl for some time past; she is becoming both disobedient and unruly, and as I have made it a rule of my life never to keep a disobedient servant, the sooner we part with her the better. As I never whip my servants, I do not want to depart from my rule in her case.'

Maggie was true to her womanhood, and loyal to her mistress, having more than once communicated to her ears facts the sound of which reflected no credit in his. For several repulses, such as this, it was that she became obnoxious to her master.

'Cousin Maria, you certainly have forgotten; I'm sure, when last at the North, you promised in presence of the girl, that I was to have her, and I'm certain she's expecting it,' explained Mrs. Ballard.

'This I admit,' replied Mrs. Franks; 'but you very well know, cousin Arabella, that that promise was a mere ruse, to reconcile an uneasiness which you informed me you discovered in her, after overhearing a conversation between her and some free negroes, at Saratoga Springs.'

'Well, cousin, you can do as you please,' concluded Mrs. Ballard.

'Colonel, I'm weary of this conversation. What am I to expect?' inquired Mrs. Franks.

'It's a settled point, my dear, she must be sold!' decisively replied Franks.

'Then I must hereafter be disrespected by our own slaves! You know, Colonel, that I gave my word to Henry her husband, your most worthy servant, that his wife should be here on his return. He had some misgiving that she was to be taken to Cuba before his return, when I assured him that she would be here. How can I bear to meet this poor creature, who places every confidence in what we tell him? He'll surely be frantic.'

'Nonsense, cousin, nonsense,' sneered Mrs. Ballard; 'frantic, indeed! Why you speak of your negro slaves as if speaking of equals. Make him know that whatever you order, he must be contented with.'

'I'll soon settle the matter with him, should he dare show any feelings about it!' interposed Franks; 'when do you look for him, Maria?'

'I'm sure, Colonel, you now more about the matter than I do. Immediately after you left, he took the horses to Baton Rouge, where at the last accounts, he was waiting the conclusion of the races. Judge Dilbreath had entered them according to your request, one horse for each day's races. I look for him every day. Then there are more than him to reconcile. There's old mammy Judy, who will run mad about her, You know, Colonel, she thought so much of her, that she might be treated tenderly the old creature gave up her situation in the house as nurse and foster-mother to our children, going into the kitchen to do the harder work.'

'Well, my dear, we'll detain your cousin till he comes. I'll telegraph the Judge that if not yet left, to start him home immediately.'

'Colonel that will be still worse, to let him witness her departure; I would much rather she'd leave before his return. Poor thing!' she sighed.

'Then she may go!' replied he,

'And what of poor old mammy and his boy?'

'I'll soon settle the matter with old Judy.'

Mrs. Franks looking him imploringly in the face, let drop her head, burying her face in the palms of her hands. Soon it was found necessary to place her under the care of a physician.

Old mammy Judy had long since beckoned her daughter, where both stood in breathless silence catching every word that passed.

At the conclusion, Maggie clasping her hands, exclaimed in suppressed tones,—

'O mammy, O mammy! what shall I do? O, there is no hope for me? Can't you beg master—can't you save me!'

'Look to de Laud, my chile! him only able to bring yeh out mo' ner conker!' was the prayerful advice of the woe-stricken old mother; both hastening into the kitchen, falling upon their knees, invoked aloud the God of the oppressed.

Hearing in that direction an unusual noise, Franks hastened past the kitchen door, dropping his head, and clearing his throat as he went along. This brought the slaves to an ordinary mood, who trembled at his approach.

CHAPTER IV.

DEPARTURE OF MAGGIE.

The country-seat of Franks, or the 'great house' of the cotton plantation, was but a short distance from the city. Mrs Franks by the advice of her physician, was removed there to avoid the disturbance of the town, when at the same time Mrs. Ballard left with her slave Maggie en route for Baltimore, whither she designed leaving her until ready to sail for Cuba.

'Fahwell, my chile! fahwell; may God A'mighty be wid you!' were the parting words of the poor old slave, who with streaming eyes gazed upon her parting child for the last time.

'O mammy! can't you save me?—O Lord, what shall I do! O my husband! O my poor child! O my! O my!' were the only words, the sounds of which died upon the breeze, as the cab hastily bore her to a steamer then lying at the wharf.

Poor old mammy Judy sat at the kitchen door with elbow resting upon her knee, side of the face resting in the palm of the hand, tears streaming down, with a rocking motion, noticing nothing about her, but in sorrow moaning just distinctly enough to be understood:

'Po'! po' me! po' me!'

The sight was enough to move the hardest heart, and it so affected Franks, that he wished he had 'never owned a negro.'

Daddy Joe, the husband of mammy Judy, was a field hand on the cotton place, visiting his wife at the town residence, every Saturday night. Colonel Franks was a fine, grave, senatorial looking man, of medium height, inclined to corpulency, black hair, slightly grey, and regarded by his slaves as a good master, and religiously as one of the best of men.

On their arrival at the great house, those working nearest, gathered around the carriage, among whom was daddy Joe.

'What a mahtter wid missus?' was the general inquiry of the gang.

'Your mistress is sick, boys,' replied the master.

'Maus, whah's Margot?' enquired the old man, on seeing his mistress carried into the house without the attendance of her favorite maid-servant.

'She's in town, Joe,' replied Franks.

'How's Judy, seh?'

'Judy is well.'

'Tank's seh!' politely concluded the old man, with a bow, turning away in the direction of his work, with a countenance expressive of anything but satisfaction, from the interview.

The slaves from their condition, are suspicious, any evasion or seeming design at suppressing the information sought by them, frequently arouses their greatest apprehensions.

Not unfrequently the mere countenance, a look, a word, or laugh of the master, is an unerring foreboding of misfortune to the slave. Ever on the watch for these things, they learn to read them with astonishing precision.

This day was Friday, and the old slave consoled himself with the thought that on the next evening he would be able to see and know for himself the true state of things about his master's residence in town. The few hours intervening were spent with great anxiety, which was even observed by his fellow-slaves.

At last came Saturday evening and with it, immediately after sunset, daddy Joe made his appearance at the hall-door of the great house, tarrying only long enough to inquire 'How's missus?' and receive the reply, 'she's better,' when a few moments found him quite out of sight, striding his way down the lane toward the road to the city.

The sudden and unexpected fate of Maggie had been noised among the slaves throughout the entire neighborhood; many who had the opportunity of doing so, repairing to the house to learn the facts.

In the lower part of the town, bordering on the river there is a depot or receptacle for the slave gangs brought by professional traders. This part of the town is known as 'Natches under the Hill.' It is customary among the slaves when any of their number are sold, to say that they are gone 'under the hill,' and their common salutation through the day was, that 'Franks' Mag had gone under the hill.'

As with quickened steps daddy Joe approached the town, his most fearful apprehensions became terribly realised when meeting a slave who informed him that 'Margot had gone under the hill.' Falling upon his knees, in the fence corner, the old man raised his voice in supplication of Divine aid:

'O Laud! dow has promis' in dine own word, to be a fader to de faderless, an' husban to de wider! O Laud, let thy work run and be glorify! Sof'en de haud heart ob de presser, an' let my po' chile cum back! an'—

'Stop that noise there, old nigger!' ordered a patrol approaching him; 'who's boy are you?'

'Sarvant, maussa!' saluted the old slave, 'I b'long to cunel Frank, seh!'

'Is this old Joe?'

'Dis is me maus Johnny.'

'You had better trudge along home then, as it's likely old Judy wants to see you about this time'

'Tank's seh,' replied the old man, with a bow, feeling grateful that he was permitted to proceed.

'Devilish good, religious old negro,' he remarked to his associates, as the old man left them in the road.

A few minutes more, and daddy Joe entered the kitchen door at his master's residence. Mammy Judy, on seeing him, gave vent afresh to bitter wailing, when the emotion became painfully mutual.

'O husban'! husban'! our po' chile is gone!' exclaimed the old woman, clasping him around the neck.

'Laud! dy will be done!' exclaimed he, 'ole umin, look to de Laud! as he am suffishen for all tings;' both falling on their knees, breathed in silence their desires to God.

'How long! how long! O Laud how long!' was the supplicating cry of the old woman, being overcome with devotion and sorrow.

Taking the little grand-child in his arms—'Po' chile,' said the old man, 'I wish yeh had neber been baun!' impressing upon it kisses whilst it slept.

After a fervent and earnest prayer to God for protection to themselves, little grandson Joe, the return of his mother their only child, and blessings upon their master and the recovery of their mistress, the poor old slaves retired to rest for the evening, to forget their sorrows in the respite of sleep.

CHAPTER V.

A VACANCY.

This morning the sun rose with that beauty known to a southern sky in the last month of autumn. The day was Sabbath, and with it was ushered in every reminiscence common to the customs of that day and locality.

That she might spend the day at church for the diversion of her mind, Mrs. Franks was brought in to her city residence; and Natchez, which is usually gay, seemed more so on this day than on former occasions.

When the bells began to signalise the hour of worship, the fashionable people seemed en masse to crowd the streets. The carriages ran in every direction, bearing happy hearts and cheerful faces to the various places of worship—there to lay their offerings on the altar of The Most High for the blessings they enjoyed, whilst peering over every gate, out of every alley, or every kitchen door, could be seen the faithful black servants, who staying at home to prepare them food and attend to other domestic duties, were satisfied to look smilingly upon their masters and families as they rode along, without for a moment dreaming that they had a right to worship the same God, with the same promise of life and salvation.

'God bless you, missus! pray for me,' was the honest request of many a simple-hearted slave who dared not aspire to the enjoyment of praying for themselves in the Temple of the living God.

But amidst these scenes of gayety and pleasure, there was one much devoted to her church, who could not be happy that day, as there, to her, was a seeming vacancy which could not be filled—the seat of her favorite maid-servant. The Colonel, as a husband and father, was affectionate and indulgent: but his slave had offended, disobeyed his commands, and consequently, had to be properly punished, or he be disrespected by his own servants. The will of the master being absolute, his commands should be enforced, let them be what they may, and the consequences what they would. If slavery be right, the master is justifiable in enforcing obedience to his will; deny him this, and you at once deprive him of the right to hold a slave—the one is a necessary sequence of the other. Upon this principle colonel Franks acted, and the premise justified the conclusion.

When the carriage drove to the door, Mrs. Franks wept most bitterly, refusing to enter because her favorite maid could not be an incumbant. Fears being entertained of seriousness in her case, it was thought advisable to let her remain quietly at home.

Daddy Joe and mammy Judy, were anxious spectators of all that transpired at the door of the mansion, and that night, on retiring to their humble bed, earnestly petitioned at the altar of Grace, that the Lord would continue upon her his afflictions, until their master convinced of his wrongs, would order the return of their child.

This the Colonel would have most willingly done without the petition of Joe or Judy, but the case had gone too far, the offense too great, and consequently there could be no reconsideration.

'Poor thing,' uttered Mrs. Franks in a delirium, 'she served him right! And this her only offense! Yes, she was true to me!'

Little Joe, the son of Maggie, in consequence of her position to the white children—from whom her separation had been concealed—had been constantly with his grandmother, and called her 'mammy.' Accustomed to being without her, he was well satisfied so long as permitted to be with the old woman Judy.

So soon as her condition would permit, Mrs. Franks was returned to her country seat, to avoid the contingencies of the city.

CHAPTER VI.

HENRY'S RETURN.

Early on Monday morning, a steamer was heard puffing up the Mississippi. Many who reside near the river, by custom can tell the name of every approaching boat by the peculiar sound of the steampipe, the one in the present instance being the Sultana.

Daddy Joe had risen and just leaving for the plantation, but stopped a moment to be certain.

'Hush!' admonished mammy Judy, 'hush! sho chile, do'n yeh hear how she holler? Sholy dat's de wat's name! wat d't yeh call er?' "Suckass," wat not; sho! I ain' gwine bauther my head long so—sho! See, ole man see! dare she come! See dat now! I tole yeh so, but yeh uden bleve me!' and the old man and woman stood for some minutes in breathless silence, although the boat must have been some five miles distant, as the escape of steam can be heard on the western waters a great way off.

The approach toward sunrise, admonished daddy Joe of demands for him at the cotton farm, when after bidding 'good [illegible] ole [illegible],' he hurried to the daily task which lay before him.

Mammy Judy had learned by the boy Tony, that Henry was expected on the Sultana, and at the approach of every steamer, her head had been thrust out of the door or window to catch a distinct sound. In motionless attitude after the departure of her husband this morning, the old woman stood awaiting the steamer, when presently the boat arrived. But then to be certain that it was the expected vessel—now came the suspense.

The old woman was soon relieved from this most disagreeable of all emotions, by the cry of the news boys returning from the wharf—

'Ere's the Picayune, Atlas, Delta! lates' news from New Orleans by the swift steamer Sultana!'

'Dare now!' exclaimed mammy Judy in soliloquy; 'dare now! I tole yeh so!—de wat's name come!' Hurrying into the kitchen, she waited with anxiety the arrival of Henry.

Busying about the breakfast for herself and other servants about the house—the white members of the family all being absent—mammy Judy for a time lost sight of the expected arrival. Soon however, a hasty footstep arrested her attention, when on looking around it proved to be Henry who came smiling up the yard.

'How'd you do mammy! how's Mag' and the boy?' inquired he, grasping the old woman by the hand.

She burst into a flood of tears, throwing herself upon him.

'What is the matter!' exclaimed Henry, 'is Maggie dead?'

'No chile,' with increased sobs she replied, 'much betteh she war.'

'My God! has she disgraced herself?'

'No chile, may be betteh she dun so, den she bin hear now an' not sole. Maus Stephen sell eh case she!—I dun'o, reckon dat's de reason!'

'What!—Do you tell me mammy she had better disgraced herself than been sold! By the—!'

'So, Henry! yeh ain' gwine swar! hope yeh ain' gwine lose yeh 'ligion! Don't do so; put yeh trus' in de Laud, he is suffishen fah all!'

'Don't tell me about religion! What's religion to me? My wife is sold away from me by a man who is one of the leading members of the very church to which she and I belong! Put my trust in the Lord! I have done so all my life nearly, and of what use is it to me? My wife is sold from me just the same as if I did n't. I'll—'

'Come, come, Henry, yeh mus'n talk so; we is po' weak an' bline creters, an' cant see de way ob de Laud. He move' in a mystus way, his wundehs to purfaum.'

'So he may, and what is all that to me? I don't gain anything by it and—'

'Stop, Henry, stop! ain' de Laud bless yo' soul? ain' he take yeh foot out de mich an' clay, an' gib yeh hope de udder side de vale ub tears?'

'I'm tired looking the other side; I want a hope this side of the vale of tears. I want something on this earth as well as a promise of things in another world. I and my wife have been both robbed of our liberty, and you want me to be satisfied with a hope of heaven. I won't do any such thing; I have waited long enough on heavenly promises; I'll wait no longer. I—'

'Henry, wat de mautter wid yeh! I neveh hear yeh talk so fo'—yeh sin in de sight ub God; yeh gone clean back, I reckon. De good Book tell us, a tousan' years wid man, am but a day wid de Laud. Boy yeh got wait de Laud own pinted time.'

'Well mammy, it is useless for me to stand here and have the same gospel preached into my ears by you, that I have all my lifetime heard from my enslavers. My mind is made up, my course is laid out, and if life last, I'll carry it out. I'll go out to the place to-day, and let them know I have returned.'

'Sho boy! what yeh gwine do, bun hous down? Betteh put 'yeh trus' in de Laud!' concluded the old woman.

'You have too much religion mammy for me to tell you what I intend doing,' said Henry in conclusion.

After taking up his little son, impressing on his lips and cheeks kisses for himself and tears for his mother, the intelligent slave left the abode of the care-worn old woman for that of his master at the cotton place.

Henry was a black—a pure negro—handsome, manly and intelligent, in size comparing well with his master, but neither so fleshy nor heavy built in person. A man of good literary attainments—unknown to Col. Franks, though he was aware he could read and write—having been educated in the West Indies, and decoyed away when young. His affection for wife and child was not excelled by Colonel Franks for his. He was bold, determined and courageous, but always mild, gentle and courteous, though impulsive when an occasion demanded his opposition.

Going immediately to the place, he presented himself before his master. Much conversation ensued concerning the business which had been entrusted to his charge, all of which was satisfactorily transacted, and full explanations concerning the horses, but not a word was uttered concerning the fate of Maggie, the Colonel barely remarking 'your mistress is unwell.'

After conversing till a late hour, Henry was assigned a bed in the great house, but sleep was far from his eyes. He turned and changed upon his bed with restlessness and anxiety, impatiently awaiting a return of the morning.

CHAPTER VII.

MASTER AND SLAVE.

Early on Tuesday morning in obedience to his master's orders, Henry was on his way to the city, to get the house in readiness for the reception of his [illegible]. Mrs. Franks having much improved in [illegible] four days. Mammy Judy [illegible] risen when he knocked at the door.

'Hi Henry! yeh hear ready! [illegible] yeh git up so soon; arter some mischief I reckon? Do'n reckon yeh arter any good!' saluted mammy Judy.

'No mammy,' replied he, 'no mischief, but like a good slave such as you wish me to be, come to obey my master's will. Just what you like to see.'

'Sho boy! none yeh nonsens', [illegible] I want yeh bey maus Stephen? [illegible] nonsens' in yeh head las' night long 'go, I reckon! Wat dat yeh gwine do now?'

'I have come to dust and air the mansion for their reception. They have sold my wife away from me, and who else would do her work?' This reply excited the apprehension of mammy Judy.

'Wat yeh gwine do Henry? yeh arter no good; yeh ain' gwine 'tack maus Stephen is yeh?'

'What do you mean mammy, strike him?'

'Yes! reckon yeh ain' gwine hit 'im?'

'Curse—!'

'Henry, Henry, member wat yeh 'fess! far de Laud sake, yeh ain' gwine take to swarin?' interrupted the old woman.

'I make no profession mammy. I once did believe in religion, but now I have no confidence in it. My faith has been wrecked on the stony hearts of such pretended christians as Stephen Franks, while passing through this stormy sea of trouble and oppression! and—'

'Hay, boy! yeh is gittin' high! yeh call maussa "Stephen?"'

'Yes, and I'll never call him "master" again, except when compelled to do so.'

'Botteh g'long ten' to de house fo' white folks come, an' neber mine talkin' 'bout fightin' 'long wid maus Stephen. Wat yeh gwine do wid white folks? Sho!'

'I don't intend to fight him, mammy Judy, but I'll attack him concerning my wife, if the words be my last! Yes, I'll —!' and pressing his lips to suppress the words, the outraged man turned away from the old slave mother, with such feelings as only an intelligent slave could realise.

The orders of the morning were barely executed, when the carriage came to the door. The bright eyes of the footboy Tony sparkled when he saw Henry approaching the carriage.

'Well Henry! ready for us?' enquired his master.

'Yes sir,' was the simple reply. 'Mistress!' he saluted, politely bowing as he took her hand to assist her from the carriage.

'Come Henry, my man, get out the riding horses,' ordered Franks after a little rest.

'Yes sir.'

A horse for the colonel and lady each, was soon in readiness at the door, but none for himself, it always having been the custom in their morning rides, for the maid and man-servant to accompany the mistress and master.

'Ready did you say?' enquired Franks on seeing but two horses standing at the stile.

'Yes sir.'

'What for sir?'

'What for? yourself to be sure!'

'Colonel Franks!' said Henry, looking him sternly in the face, 'when I last rode that horse in company with you and lady, my wife was at my side, and I will not now go without her! Pardon me—my life for it, I won't go!'

'Not another word you black imp!' exclaimed Franks, with an uplifted staff in a rage; 'or I'll strike you down in an instant!'

'Strike away if you will sir, I don't care—I wont go without my wife!'

'You impudent scoundrel! I'll soon put an end to your conduct! I'll put you on the auction block, and sell you to the negro traders.'

'Just as soon as you please sir, the sooner the better, as I don't want to live with you any longer!'

'Hold your tongue sir, or I'll cut it out of your head! you ungrateful black dog! Really things have come to a pretty pass when I must take impudence from my own negro! By gracious!—God forgive me for the expression—I'll sell every negro I have first! I'll dispose of him to the hardest negro trader I can find!' said Franks in a rage.

'You may do your mightiest, colonel Franks. I'm not your slave, nor never was, and you know it! and but for my wife and her people, I never would [illegible] with you till now. I was [illegible] when young, and then became [illegible] in such domestic relations as to [illegible] to remain with you; but now [illegible] is broken. I know that the odds are against me, but never mind?'

'Do you threaten me, sir? Hold your tongue, or I'll take your life instantly, you villain!'

'No sir, I don't threaten [illegible] Colonel Franks, but I do say that [illegible] treated like a dog. You sold [illegible] from me, after always [illegible] should be free, and [illegible] sold her because [illegible] about whipping me. [illegible] do anything [illegible] your hands on me, as I will [illegible] to whip [illegible]

Running up to his [illegible] seized a revolver [illegible] ing hold of his [illegible]

'Colonel, [illegible]

'Ma[illegible]

[illegible]

hope you'll not be rash. For Heaven's take, do not stain your hands in blood.'

'I do not mean to, my dear. I take this for protection!' said Franks hastening down stairs, when Henry had gone into the back part of the premises.

'Dar now! dar now!' exclaimed mammy Judy as Henry entered the kitchen, 'see wat dis gwine back done for yeh! Betteh put yo' trus' in de Laud! Henry, yeh gone clean back to de wurl ghin, yeh knows it!'

'You're mistaken mammy, I do trust the Lord as much as ever, but I now understand him better than I use to, that's all. I dont intend to be made a fool of any longer by false preaching.'

'Henry!' interrogated Daddy Joe, who apprehending difficulties in the case, had managed to get back to the house, 'yeh gwine lose all yo' ligion?' What yeh mean boy!

'Religion!' replied Henry rebukingly; 'that's always the cry with black people. Tell me nothing about religion when the very man who hands you the bread at communion, has sold your daughter away from you!'

'Den yeh 'fen' God case man 'fen' yeh! Take 'are Henry, take 'are! mine wat yeh 'bout; God is lookin' at yeh, an' if yeh no' willin' trus' 'im, yeh ne'd'n call on 'im in time o' trouble.'

'I dont intend, unless He does more for me then than he has done before. "Time of need!" If ever man needed his assistance, I'm sure I need it now.'

'Yeh do'n know wat yeh need; de Laud knows bes'. On'y trus' in 'im, an' 'e bring yeh out mo' ner conk'r. By de help o' God I's hear dis day, to gib yeh comfot!'

'I have trusted in Him daddy Joe, all my life, as I told mammy Judy this morning, but—'

'Ah boy, yeh's gwine back! Dat on't do Henry, dat on't do!'

'Going back from what? my oppressor's religion? If I could only get rid of his inflictions as easily as I can his religion, I would be this day a free man, when you might then talk to me about "trusting."'

'Dis Henry, am one ob de ways ob de Laud; he fus' tl'cks us an' den he bless us.'

'Then it's a way I dont like.'

'Mine how yeh talk, boy!'

God moves in a mist'us way
His wondehs to perfaum,' an—'

'He moves too slow for me daddy Joe; I'm tired waiting so—'

'Come Henry I hab no sich talk like dat! yeh is gittin' rale weaked; yeh gwine let de debil take full 'session ob yeh! Take 'are boy, mine how yeh talk!'

'It is not wickedness, daddy Joe; you dont understand these things at all. If a thousand years with us is but a day with God, do you think that I am required to wait all that time?'

'Dont Henry, dont! de wud say 'Stan' still an' see de salbation.'

'That's no talk for me daddy Joe, I've been "standing still" long enough; I'll "stand still" no longer.'

'Den yeh no call t' bey God wud? Take 'are boy, take 'are!'

'Yes I have, and I intend to obey it, but that part was intended for the Jews, a people long since dead. I'll obey that intended for me.'

'How yeh gwine bey it?'

'"Now is the accepted time, to-day is the day of salvation." So you see, daddy Joe, this is very different to standing still.'

'Ah boy, I's fea'd yeh's losen yeh 'ligion!'

'I tell you once for all daddy Joe, that I'm not only "loosing," but I have altogether lost my faith in the religion of my oppressors As they are our religious teachers, my estimate of the thing they give, is no greater than it is for those who give it.'

With elbows upon his knees, and face resting in the palms of his hands, daddy Joe for some time sat with his eyes steadily fixed on the floor, while Ailcey who for a part of the time had been an auditor to the conversation, went into the house about her domestic duties.

'Never mind Henry! I hope it will not always be so with you. You have been kind and faithful to me and the Colonel, and I'll do any thing I can for you!' sympathetically said Mrs. Franks, who having been a concealed spectator of the interview between Henry and the old people, had just appeared before them.

Wiping away the emblems of grief which stole down his face, with a deep toned voice, upgushing from the recesses of a more than iron-pierced soul, he enquired—

'Madam, what can you do! Where is my wife?' To this, Mrs. Franks gave a deep sigh. 'Never mind, never mind!' continued he, 'yes, I will mind, and by—!'

'O! Henry, I hope you've not taken to swearing! I do hope you will not give over to wickedness! Our afflictions should only make our faith the stronger.'

'"Wickedness!" Let the righteous reprove the wicked, and the Christian condemn the sinner!'

'That is uncharitable in you Henry! as you know I have always treated you kindly, and God forbid that I should consider myself any less than a Christian! and I claim as much at least for the Colonel, though like frail mortals he is liable to err at times.'

'Madam!' said he with suppressed emotion—starting back a pace or two—'do you think there is anything either in or out of hell so wicked, as that which Colonel Franks has done to my wife, and now about to do to me? For myself I care not—my wife!'

'Henry!' said Mrs. Franks, gently placing her hand upon his shoulder, "there is yet a hope left for you, and you will be faithful enough I know, not to implicate any person; it is this; Mrs. Van Winter, a true friend of your race, is shortly going to Cuba on a visit, and I will arrange with her to purchase you through an agent on the day of your sale, and by that means you can get to Cuba, where probably you may be fortunate enough to get the master of your wife to become your purchaser.'

'Then I have two chances!' replied Henry.

Just then Ailcey thrusting her head in the door, requested the presence of her mistress in the parlor.

A colored man, named James Madison, living near the Blue Ball, Lancaster, Pa., raised a cabbage this season which measured thirty-five inches in circumference, and weighed twenty-seven pounds.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 23, 1861.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY,
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
No. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street

"What shall be done with the Slaves?"

The policy of the Government in regard to the slave question appears to be this. In the partially loyal or border States, to uphold loyal slave owners, by securing to them their slaves for the present; in the disloyal and entirely rebellious States, to accept the services of all slaves, and hire and pay them as laborers, and if necessity requires to arm them as auxiliary troops; setting free all who come within the lines of the troops, engaging to pay only loyal owners for their abstracted property.

This amounts in fact to entire emancipation—if the slaves will it—of all the slaves in the cotton States; and their can be no doubt that the slaves will accept this offered emancipation. In regard to the slavery of the border States, even the N. Y. Herald —a competent authority on this point—admits that it will end with the war.

Hence the question now agitating the public mind, almost as deeply as the war itself, is, what shall be done with the slaves, or rather, freed-men?

Two modes of disposing of them have been named. 1st. Banishment to some foreign territory. 2nd. (By the New York Herald.) The division of them among the non-slave-possessing Unionists of the cotton States.

1st. The Banishment or expatriating scheme is criminal in its very conception. None but the heartless could entertain the idea, none but the personally interested uphold it. It is a scheme which proposes to return evil for good; it advises our government to repay loyalty by banishment, simply to oblige the rebels now in arms. No other reason can be urged for expatriation of the freedmen than that their present owners would be unwilling to live on terms of equal citizenship with their liberated slaves. This is a reason which would also require the banishment of the non-slave-holding, or poor whites, of the slave States also, for the slaveocrats regard them as on a level with their slaves.

Where is the power or authority of the Government to do this thing?

The status of the freed men will be that of "persons" according to the lowest construction—should be "citizens of the United States," according to Thomas Jefferson. The liberated slaves captured on slavers and sent to Liberia had acquired no such status, and the government has no authority to expatriate or banish any persons from its territory, even as a penalty for crime.

But if the government had the will and the power, where would it find a locality to which to send four millions of freed men? The little Republic of Liberia, which strains and pants under an addition of a few thousand liberated Africans, would be squelched, wiped out, 'bust,' under one million, let alone four; we know that it is a plucky little republic, and that its navy, (the schooner Quail) is on a war footing, and its steam marine, the Seth Grosvenor, (90 feet long!) under Captain the Hon. Joseph Turpin, is quite some; but at the advent of four million of freed men what would be her fate? Ermpit, Evadit—she would burst, our lamented fellow-citizen P. W. Downing, would return to his mother air, and our equally lamented C. Luca, like a modern Apollo, would be obliged strike his lyre for the benefit of enchanted dolphins.

Great Britain has hermetically sealed Abbeokuta against colored American emi*gration in force, by seizing upon Lagos.*

Central America could now be obtained only by conquest in the teeth of the material opposition of England, France, and Spain.

As to the island of Hayti: Title 1, Art. 1, of its constitution, declares that "The Island of Hayti and the adjacent Islands which are dependent thereon, form the territory of the Republic." Art. 4. "The Republic of Hayti is one and indivisible, essentially free, sovereign and independent." "Its Territory is inviolable, and cannot be alienated by any treaty."*

This Constitution was adopted in 1846. In 1861 we find Spain seizing upon two-thirds of this Island of Hayti, this "indivisible," "inviolable" territory, without a gun being fired in opposition by Geffrard its heroic President, and who was further "kicked and cuffed" by Spain to the tune of a fine of twenty-five thousand dollars, for a fancied insult to the Spanish flag. And who can gainsay the allegation, that, any fine morning, when Spain may take it in her head to finish the meal, she can easily swallow the remaining third of Hayti? Her own bad faith in receiving millions of pounds sterling from England thirty years ago to abolish a slave trade which she has faithlessly maintained ever since, and the immediate neighborhood of her slave-holding Cuba, are ample guarantees that she will, at the earliest moment, make Hayti also a slave-holding territory or province. The Cubans will first acquire territory, then claim the right to remove their "property" into the Spanish end of Hayti. We have at least so much faith in our government as to believe that it would not banish its freed men to a territory where, as in Hayti, the doom of slavery hangs upon their not dis*tant future.*

Apart from this, the fragment of Hayti, now under the rule of black men, only one-third of the island, and containing less than ten thousand square miles, is entirely too small in area to receive an addition of four millions of inhabitants; it would raise the number of her population to five hundred persons to each square mile; denser by one hundred per cent that any known population on the face of the globe; denser than even fertile Hayti could possibly support; almost as dense as they pack emigrants in the rickety bottoms which have sailed from this port for St. Marks; but not too dense for the pocket lens of the Chief of the Bureau; for at the rate of two dollars ahead—not Haytian dollars mind you—that is to say eight millions of dollars per se, the little chief would burst out out into a golden ecstacy!

Whether we look at the politico—moral aspect of the question, or at a suitable locality for that purpose, it is safe to say that the emancipated slaves of our Southern states will not be banished beyond the territory of the United States.

They must therefore be disposed of within the United States and its territories.

The "Herald's" project of the "Division of Slaves among Loyal Non Slaveholders,"

would be diabolical if it were not perfectly ridiculous. It is simply one of those raw-"head and bloody bone" conceptions wherewith the "Herald" is wont to frighten nervous old gentlemen and simple servant girls—"The respectable young women," whose two shilling advertisements have made Mr. Bennett grow rich. They pour gold into his pockets and he pours nonsense into their ears. But there is a method beneath this mad proposition. Emancipation would throw upon the country North and South, half a million, at least, of respectable young women, active, tidy, handy, docile, and willing to work for low wages; hence, Bennett's great constituency would be in great danger of losing their places, and he in equal danger of losing his quarters; and such old sinners grow more miserly as they grow older and richer. A shrewd Intelligence Office-keeper is already on the qui vive in this direction.

The solution of what to do with the slaves will force itself upon the government just as other questions in this war have done. During the war, the government will require, will use, and will pay for, the labor, or other services, of all the slaves in the ultra-rebellious states. When the war is ended, there will be few, if any, slaves, for the government to dispose of. There will be four million of free men and women and children, accustomed to toil, who have by their labor during sixty years past supported themselves, and in addition, an extravagant aristocracy, and in addition produced a staple or staples which have been the basis and support of American, British, and French industry.† Besides these laborers, lands will be confiscated to the government, and turned into public lands, subject to pre-emption rights, or if Gerrit Smith again gets into Congress, turned into "free land for the landless." What course can be clearer, what course more politic, what course will so immediately restore the equilibrium of commerce, what course will be so just, so humane, so thoroughly conducive to the public weal and the national advancement, as that the government should immediately bestow these lands upon these freed men who know best how to cultivate them, and will joyfully bring their brawny arms, their willing hearts, and their skilled hands to the glorious labor of cultivating as their OWN, the lands which they have bought and paid for by their sweat and blood?

The guns of the Wabash having opened up Broad river, General Sherman finds, in the richest district of all rebeldom, fields white with cotton bolls, and freed black men alone in possession of them; no living sober white man is found to claim either the fields, or the men, but a day before slaves. Let us see the impression made by these events on the mind of a disinterested observer, a Frenchman who had been in the Crimean war, an extract from whose letter we copy on our fourth page from the New York "Herald" of November 16th; it is dated from Port Royal, and written after the capture of that place by our naval armament.

Such is the light which the events at *Beaufort cast on the question we have un*der consideration; a question which we may further consider under its proper title, "What will be done with our freed men, when the war is over.

---

*Redpath's Guide to Hayti (Presentation Copy) p. 65.

†The whole of the mines of England, coal, iron, tin, &c., yield only one hundred and fifty millions of dollars per annum; the cotton crop alone of the United States yield two hundred millions of dollars per annum!

* * *

One of the bravest men in the gallant fight near Lebanon, Mo., a few days ago, was a negro. The Captain of the Union troops reports that Lieut. Montgomery killed four rebels with his sword, and the Captain's colored servant two.]

Army Correspondence.

Headquarters of Hooker's Division,
Near Budd's Ferry, Doncaster, Md.
Nov. 11, 1861.

Mr. Editor: I promised that I would say something in regard to the "Anglo;" since that promise was penned I have endured all the vicissitudes and fatigue of a long march, suffered a painful illness, and labored under so many other difficulties that the fulfilment of it has been all but impossible. But, my dear sir, we surely can rely on the self-respect, intelligence and public spirit of our people, for that encouragement and support your noble paper so justly merits, without me urging its claims. The most eloquent testimonial that could possibly be offered in its behalf, it bears upon its own face, in its columns. I shall never entertain the thought that the colored people could be so recreant to duty and interest as to allow your paper to perish for want of support. It behooves every one of us in this startingly eventful period of our country's history, one portion of which is sternly warring for our utter enslavement, the other scorning and rejecting our every manly and patriotic impulse, to unite heart and hand in making the "Anglo" the Tribune of the negro. Never let the shameful story go forth that three hundred and fifty thousand black men could not support one single newspaper.

The main body of this Division took up he line of march for this place on the 24th ult., accompanied by a numerous artillery and baggage train. The distance from Camp Union to Budd's Ferry is reckoned to be between thirty-eight and forty miles, and the road is the most villainous I ever saw. I call it a road because the folks here call it one. No people in the world, save sloven, brutal, ignorant Marylanders, would dignify this meandering quagmire, this tortuous slough of despondency, with the title of road. It is intersected throughout its entire length with unbridged runs, creeks, and ponds of sandy mud. Our struggling teams would be stalled for hours, and when I call to mind the state of that—I am ready to believe that our arrival here with artillery and baggage safe and sound, is the result of some supernatural interposition.

The scenes along the road were numberless and indescribable. These cold, autumnal nights and wet murky days, the folks at home, seated by blazing, cheerful hearths, may read with perfect nonchalance of the soldier's march from one point to another. Little do they dream of the hardships of the march; the travel of miles with nothing to eat but hard biscuit, his trunk packed on his back, on his shoulders forty rounds of ball cartridge and a thirteen pound gun; at night he stops for the bivouac, chops his wood, builds his fire, makes a bed of the earth, accepts the sky for his roof, and sleeps regardless of storms, wind or rain.

The second day after our departure, an affair transpired which came near proving fatal to a private of the 26th Pennsylvania Regiment. Colonel Small (who, by the way, is the same individual who furnished the oracular part of Parson Brownlow's Argument with Rev. Abram Pryne, at National Guards' Hall,) ordered that no man should advance alone beyond the regiment. Privates Winter and Brody disobeyed this order, and the Colonel ordered them back. Thinking they did not move quick enough, he fired three shots, one taking effect in the leg of Brody, and another in the spine of Winters, who was left at Piscataway, too badly wounded to be moved farther than that place.

The towns were not to be seen—the villages, few and very far between. I saw two churches on the route, but no school houses. The latter *may have been seces*sion ones. Plenty of negroes, dirty, ragged, dreamy-eyed—very few seedy looking, stupid whites. On every hand I saw the evidences of sloth and thriftlessness, the twin sisters or offsprings of unrequited toil.—When a chance offered, some poor fellow would venture to ask a question about the object of the Union troops, so many fugitives having been returned by them that the slaves are almost their enemies. One old fellow told me that he did not want the Union troops to help him out, but wanted them not to be so anxious to send him back into hard, helpless bondage.

The slaves, to a man, are on the alert. They look upon Union men as little better than secessionists. I thought to myself that many a lesson might have been learned by these Northern soldiers, of the effects of slavery upon a community, but the men of which this army is composed are drawn from the cesspools of society, and are intemperate, brutal and ignorant; pregnant with negro hate, and strangers to every sentiment of honor or justice. They would carry fire and sword to the home of friend, as well as foe, and never yet have imbibed the first notions of law or humanity. No country in the world furnishes a populace so hatefully mean and violent as that of the United States. On every hand are the traces of wanton destruction of property; hen-roosts, turkey pens, turnip patches, barns, were ransacked and pillaged. I saw a fine fat hog pierced with bayonets, and a hind quarter cut from him while yet alive, the rest left behind. Cattle and sheep were shot down for mere pastime.

A party of men from the Excelsior Brigade went into the house of a free colored man by the name of Isaac Newton, and behaved most shamefully. After eating all they could find, they insulted his wife and daughters. Captain Price, learning that his men were at Newton's, went down to protect him, if possible, when the villains fired on the Captain, wounding a young man who happened to be in his company at the time. The Captain returned the fire with his revolver, mortally wounding one and slightly wounding two others. Mr. Newton was left to himself by his master, who died some three years ago. He informs me that the slaveholders have done everything in their power to ruin him. He owns about one hundred acres of land here in Doncaster. His entire family, a wife, son and three daughters, were left free upon this place, and he has thus become an object of hatred and envy among the slave-driving whites. They have been killing his stock, tramping under foot his grain, annoying him with midnight patrols. Last fall a party of them attacked him with clubs, and for four long weeks he was confined to his bed from the effects of the assault.

Since our arrival here, the 28th ult., we have had no letters, papers or news. The mails are irregular, but in very short time, the General tells us, we will have regular mail facilities.

G. E. S.

Colored People at Fortress Monroe.

Accounts have been published to October 14th. Mr. Lockwood, the missionary, has been diligently at work promoting the temporal and spiritual welfare of the ex-slaves. He was met with obstacles, arising in part from the unfriendliness of some persons, "clothed with a brief authority," who have been accustomed to look upon the "negro" with contempt, and in part from a conflict of authority between persons exercising jurisdiction over the "contrabands." Gen. Wool is friendly, and so are other officers of various grades, while some, either from misunderstanding the views of Government, in relation to the freed men, or differing among themselves as to matters left to their discretion, have thwarted Mr. Lockwood, in some respects, while injustice has been done to them for whose benefit he has been laboring with so much assiduity. As the views of Government have been better understood by those who have interrupted Mr. Lockwood's labors, and the voice of the people has been so unequivocally expressed in favor of this missionary movement, opposition has lessened, and we are encouraged to believe that the Gospel will henceforth have free course among our "sable brothers and sisters" at Fortress Monroe and the neighborhood.

As Mr. Lockwood's incessant labors has brought on a renewal of a bronchial complaint, to which he has been subject in times past, he has been relieved for the present by Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, our Secretary for the Home Department who after visiting Washington, proceeded to the fortress, where he arrived on the 9th of November. He writes as follows:

—"I arrived on Saturday morning. The deputy of the Provost Marshal came on board, and I accompanied him to the Provost Marshal's office, where, with others, I took the oath to be loyal to the Government, the Constitution, etc. With the pass given me, I went to Gen. Wool's quarters. He received me courteously, read your letter, and its full endorsement by Secretary Chase, giving every needful assurance as to us individually, and in a manner to secure attention to our objects. Gen. Wool gave me the following:

"'The Rev. S. S. Jocelyn has permission to visit the contrabands at Camp Hamilton and Fortress Monroe, until further orders.

John E. Wool,
Major-General Commanding.'

"I went to the seminary, two miles distant, saw brother Lockwood, and was cordially welcomed by him, Captain Burleigh and others. I was greeted by the colored people near the seminary, several of whom knew of my coming. At 11 o'clock we went to Newport News, where we had an interview of nearly an hour with Gen. Phelps, who is decidedly in favor of emancipation, and of paying the freed colored wages, the same as free white persons.—He urged us to come again and see him. We saw Mrs. Peake, and found her so much better, that she hoped to resume her day school this day.

"The sun-rise prayer-meeting on the Sabbath, was a meeting of much interest. After breakfast we went to the Sabbath-school, and saw enough to feel its great value. Some of the soldiers were present as teachers, and the superintendent is a soldier. As he was necessarily absent, Mr. Peake, husband of Mrs. Peake, acted in his place. Both he and his wife showed great adaptation to the work. We then went to the neighborhood, near Hampton, a mile distant, to the preaching place. The Sunday-school having closed, we, before the congregation assembled, addressed a number of the children, as did Mr. Davis, our colored brother, whose remarks were very impressive. The place was soon filled. A number of soldiers were present, and appeared to be deeply interested in all the services. I shall not here attempt to describe the prayers and addresses of several of the colored brethren, and their singing, etc., but simply say that for intelligent views of Gospel truth, for pathos, holy unction and power, I have never been privileged to witness a more remarkable manifestation. Oh, that every slaveholder, and unbeliver in Christ and the equality of souls, could have heard them!"

Mr. Jocelyn proceeds to say that he read to them the 72d Psalm, and a portion of the Epistle of Peter, and preached to them from the text, "Casting all your care upon him who careth for you." He adds:

"It was a time of blessing never to be forgotten. The gratitude manifested was deeply affecting. . . . After dining with brother Davis and family, we went back to the seminary, and found the gymnasium building, near the seminary, crowded with colored people, say three hundred, and many soldiers, while some stood out by the door. The first part of the service related to the funeral of a little colored child. A portion of the prayers and two addresses were by colored brethren, and very appropriate. Remarks were made by brother Lockwood. I read the 14th chap. of Job, and preached from these words: 'Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me.'

"At the close, we went to the burying ground, where Mr. Lockwood addressed the people. The procession was very large, and the impression solemn. At sundown we went to the fortress and found the people assembled. As we entered, a colored brother was praying with great earnestness-pleading with God, in a way that was deeply affecting. Remarks were made by Mr. Lockwood, and I preached from 1 Tim. 1st chap, 'It is a faithful saying, etc.' At the close the people sang one of their hymns, with great animation and pious feeling.

"I must be brief, though I could say much about this opening door of the great prison house, which has a promise of extending freedom, glory and salvation to millions in bondage. The people are greatly attached to brother Lockwood. The soldiers and officers generally regard him with respect and affection. From his statements, and Captain Burleigh's, in regard to the present mode of distributing clothing to the 'contrabands,' I do not think there will be any more trouble between him and the Quartermaster. . . . I hope that a sufficient quantity of clothing will be sent on before winter."

Major-General Wool issued General Orders November 1st, in relation for ra*tions, clothing, compensation, etc.*, to the "contrabands." As we read the orders, the allowance for labor, etc., is to be put into the hands of the Quartermaster, to be distributed according to his discretion. This arrangement does not supercede the necessity of sending cloth*ing and bedding, by benevolent societies* and individuals, for the use of the aged men and women, and the children and youth. Whatever is sent can be directed to Lewis Tappan, Treasurer, 61 John st., New York, or to Rev. L. C. Lockwood, care Captain Burleigh, Seminary, near Fortress Monroe, Va. A duplicate invoice should be sent to the Treasurer, with a valuation of the goods.

Letter from Newark.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 20, 1861.

Mr. Editor:—This city is the largest in the State, and is known as the city of churches. Everywhere can be seen the towering steeple, indicating that the solemn worship of our Creator is observed with reverence and respect; but the reality is to the contrary. Having occasion last Sabbath to go through some of our principal manufacturing streets, to my astonishment I heard the blowing of the bellows, and the sound of the huge sledge upon the anvil, and the revolutions of the mill for japaning, which is, at this time, carried on extensively for government and other purposes. Who is it that's performing this labor? Is the black man, who was born on this soil, and whose right to it is unquestionable, and who would not only strike the anvil and blow the bellows, but would wield the sword in defence of his country, a sharer in this great accumulation of hurried work?

No! he must be left to struggle on, until by chance, the order of things is reversed.

One word to the young men of New Jersey. I would suggest to them the propriety of turning their attention to military tactics, so that in case of an emergency they will be prepared to do their duty. But do not do this to the neglect of intellectual improvement, for they go hand in hand.

Rev. Mr, Hall, of New York, lectured on Phrenology in the A. M. E. Church, Catharine St., Wednesday evening, 13th inst. Several young persons were favored with an examination of their heads, but while this was going on I was partaking of refreshments, a large supply of which was furnished by the ladies in the lecture room, and enjoyed by a numerous company.

Isaac Tembrook.

OBITUARY.

Died in Boston Oct. 12th, Darby Vassall, aged 92 years, much respected by the citizens of said city for his general intelligence and excellent character. He was born in the house in Cambridge known as Washington's Head Quarters. Mr. Vassall was the oldest member of the church in Brattle Square.

Cesar Russell died recently at Taunton, Mass., at the remarkable age of 105 years It is said that he had been a slave for seventy-five years! Three quarters of a century in chains!

We find the following in a late number of the Albany Express;

Sarah Johnson, a colored woman, died in Troy on Thursday evening. She was born in this city, March 8th, 1762, and was therefore in the one hundredth year of her age. Sarah remained here until she was eighteen years old. She was a slave in the family of Derrick Broeck Van Schoonhoven. Her parents were from Africa, and slaves in the family. She well remembered, and related with much unction, many thrilling incidents of the revolutionary war. When Gen. Burgoyne was brought a prisoner into this city, she saw him, and well remembered his personal appearance. She witnessed the execution, in this city, of Captain William Rogers, and three members of his skinner band, for treason. In those days that tried men's souls, traitors were not much honored. She had a son, who was sold from her when he was eight years old, and she never saw him afterward. The probability is that he preceded her to the grave. She was herself sold into slavery three times before she was fifty years old, and then obtained her liberty through the emancipation in this State. The funeral of the old lady took place from the Liberty street Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon.

Col. Cochrane on Arming the Slaves.

On the occasion of the distribution of new uniforms to the New York Chasseurs, their commander, Col. John Cochrane, (nephew of Hon. Gerrit Smith) made a speech from which the following is an extract:

Suppose our army encounters myriads of cotton bales, and we are able to export those cotton bales to Europe, and receive from them millions upon millions of the sinews of war, do you say we should not seize the cotton? No. You are clear upon that point. Suppose that munitions of war, that subsistence for their army are within our reach, would we not be guilty of shameful neglect were we not to appropriate them to our own use? Certainly we would. Suppose the enemy advances against you, would you, from any squeamishness, from any false delicacy, refrain *from levelling the hostile gun and prostra*ting them in death? No. It is your object, your purpose. Then if you seize their property, if you open their ports, if you destroy their lives, I ask you whether you will not seize their slaves? I ask you whether you will not arm their slaves, and whether you will not carry them by battalions into war against their masters? (Cheers.) What! You have no sympathy for white rebels, and yet you will spare the black slave whom they use! Why, if it be necessary to save this government, I would plunge their whole people, black and white, into one indiscriminate sea of carnage and slaughter, and build upon it a government which shall be the Vicegerent of God. Let us have no more of this dallying with people's dilitant conservatism, this doubting in Cabinet when your soldiers are perishing in the field. Soldiers, you know no such reasoning as this. You have arms in your hands, and those arms are for the purpose of exterminating the enemy until he submits to law, order and the constitution. Then explode whatever magazine of combustibles is in your way: set fire to and consume the cotton; export the cotton; take property whenever you find it, confiscate property wherever you find it; take the slave and bestow him upon the non-slaveholder if you please; do unto them as they would do unto you; raise up in their midst a party interest against the present slaveholder; distract their counsels. Do all this, and if that be not sufficient take the slave by the hand, place a musket in it, and bid him in God's name strike for the liberty of the human race.

At the conclusion of the speech, General Cameron having been called for, came forward and said:

Soldiers—It is too late for me to make you a speech to-night, but I will say that I heartily approve every sentiment uttered by your noble commander. The doctrine which he has laid down I approve as fully as if his words had been my own. It is idle to talk about treating with these people upon their own terms. We must meet them as enemies, and punish them as our enemies, until they learn to behave better.

Charleston Fishermen drifting from their Anchorage.—A correspondent of the Philadelphia "Bulletin," writing from the U. S. S. Flag off Charleston Oct. 29th, states that a few days previous a dug-out containing six slaves from Charleston had reached the ship Susquehannah, they leaving behind them wives and children. Among them is a pilot who is conversant with the surrounding localities.

He states that some time ago he had thought of running away: that he, with others, came alongside of one of our ships, but they were not received as warmly as anticipated, and that they deferred "leaving the South," but they were determined to try again.

It seems they were sent out to fish. They did so for a time, and returned to Charleston; again they came to the fishing-ground, but they had little luck. They had orders upon their return to leave a certain number of fish at Fort Sumpter. As they sat riding, spreading their net, they conceived the idea of now executing their long-cherished design, and, seeing the Susquehannah, resolved to wait till nightfall and then steer for her. But the chance of being shot by the sentry occurred to them, and they at once pulled up the net and made for her, coming alongside, they at once demanded protection. Their dug-out was new and well made; the net, about 175 feet long, in excellent condition, and their clothing of excellent quality. They were entered upon the Susquehannah's books as supernumeraries, and they discharge faithfully the several duties devolving upon them in their individual stations. They brought with them all their clothing and about $12 to $15 each in silver. When asked why they did not bring more, they replied that they had been saving the specie for a long time, but that a "good deal of wages," were due them, which if they had asked for, they would have been compelled to receive in "wrapping paper money." They could have pocketed "lots of that," if they had known that they could have the face of the rough bills cashed in gold. The captain of this "fishing dug-out," who was a free man, was not with this party having been sick.

Maryland.—It is evident that a movement for the extinction of Slavery is at last on foot in Maryland. The recent demonstration of Gov Thomas in Baltimore leaves no doubt that the work has been commenced and will be vigorously prosecuted. On this subject our Baltimore correspondent writes as follows:

"The people of Maryland have been rudely brought face to face with the monster iniquity of the age, African Slavery, and they have been forced, against their will, to look upon its hidden deformity. They have seen it essay to destroy the best government that was ever on earth, in the insane ambition of the slaveholder to extend his power and influence over the whole continent, and this very day, the shock upon the public mind of this State has brought it almost up to the determination to get rid of the accursed institution within our own boundaries, and to acquiesce in its speedy extinguishment in the further Slave States, by the prompt exercise of the war power, gently suggested by Gen. Butler, openly proclaimed by Gen. Fremont, and only yesterday energetically renewed by Col. John Cochrane (God bless him!) and indorsed many times by Gen. Cameron, who is not afraid to avow his sympathy with human Liberty, even for the black skin. Do not be astonished, then, to see the next Legislature set on foot measures that shall set the State free from the crime of further allowing its inhabitants the supreme privilege of robbing the poor negro of his just earnings and keeping them down in debasing bondage. Disgust at Negro slavery is rapidly taking the place of toleration of the curse."

—So the good work advances! They who set on foot this nefarious war against republican institutions little dreamed what a fire they were lighting up.—N. Y. Tribune.

Gen. Lane "giving color" to his Brigade.

Gen. Lane now has about 250 negroes with his brigade. The men are organized into a military company, and some of them are armed. A friend who was present the other evening when the General read to them an order from Gen. Fremont, forbidding depredations, and then made them a speech, gives an amusing account of the affair. Lane told them they could do as they pleased about obeying the order, but if they violated it he should have the offenders shot. "You can act like savages if you choose," he remarked, "but I want to see you act like men; for you are not only all men, but you are all free men"—a sentiment which was rapturously applauded. At the close of the speech their captain stood up and said, "Soldiers, you will now give three cheers for General Lane; you will do this by taking off your hats and huzzahing." The cheers promptly followed, making up in boisterousness what they lacked in regularity.

As I have already stated, no negroes who enter Lane's lines are returned against their will. Where they belong to Union men, and will not go back voluntarily to their masters, they are appraised, and a certificate given to their "owner," stating that he has given satisfactory proof of his loyalty, and has lost his negro, named ——, valued at ——, by the march of the Kansas Brigade—leaving the final settlement of compensation to Congress. This is not far in advance of Secretary Cameron's recent letter, but it is a step ahead of Fremont's proclamation, which did not propose to interfere at all with the slaves of loyal men. And when the Government is forced, as it surely will be, by the irresistible logic of events, upon the ground of that proclamation, the country will not forget that Gen. Fremont was the first of our commanders in adopting the most effective blow it was possible to strike at the rebels. The soldiers who are fighting the battles of the Union in the West believe heartily in the policy of the proclamation, notwithstanding the hot haste in which the Government saw fit to modify it. As a legitimate effect of that modification, one of the bitterest Secessionists in this county rode boldly into our lines, a few days since, and demanded that his slaves should be returned. They were not sent back. No slaves of Rebels have been returned in this Department; and, unless we are mistaken in Gen. Hunter, none will be.—Cor. of N. Y. Tribune.

Letter from New London.

New London, Nov. 19th, 1861.

Mr. Editor:

William, an escaped slave from Virginia, gave two lectures in this city last month in the vestry of the 2nd Baptist church, (which) relating in a creditable manner incidents of his escape and rescue. He was accompanied by Mr. Henry Jones of New York, who, at his last lecture, exhibited a painting illustrating one of the most cruel incidents of American slavery. The proceeds of these lectures are reserved to procure for William, a liberal education. A secret expedition sails from this city tomorrow; it consists of about fifteen old whale ships, loaded with stone. It is rumored that the destination of this fleet is Charleston, where they intend to effect a permanent blockade. A steamer will accompany this expedition to bring back the crews of each ship. The Rev. Alex. Crummell of Liberia, Africa, arrived in this city last Monday. On Sunday, delivered three very eloquent discourses, in the morning and afternoon at the 1st and 2nd Congregational churches, and in the evening at St. James Episcopal church, on which occasion the church was filled to its utmost capacity. A collection was taken up in the evening in aid of his mission.

"Wide Awake."

THE CAPTURE OF BEAUFORT, S.C.

The following item taken from the "New York Tribune's" special dispatch giving the particulars of the capture of Beaufort, S. C., by the Union troops is very significant, and but confirms the startling facts portrayed in every page of the great story now being published in our columns, that the slaves are extensively organized, understanding each other, and anxiously determined on an effort for freedom at the earliest opportunity which may be presented:

The village was entirely deserted, but a single white man being found in it, and he was drunk.

The negroes had already begun to pillage and destroy. Capt. Ammon took from the Post-Office its contents. The white population generally fled to Charleston by small steamers by the inside route. The negroes came into Gen. Sherman's camp in large numbers, giving information, and it is supposed that by this time he has several hundred, perhaps thousands, of laborers.

Zion Branch Festival.—The festival given at Old Zion Church on the evening of the 7th, was quite successful, and although the house was not crowded, yet there was a sufficient number to make everything very agreeable, and at the same time make the affair profitable. We are pleased to make this announcement, as the labors of the committee had been indefatigable.

Shiloh Church, Philadelphia.—We are pleased to record the fact, that the congregation of this church, which is under the care of the Rev. Mr. Asher, has made very great improvement in their church edifice, expending not less than sixteen hundred dollars thereon. To do this in these times indicates not only very great faithfulness on the part of the pastor, but also much zeal on the part of those committed to his care.

Washington Correspondence.—We have just received assurances from our faithful correspondent "Box," whose letters in days gone by were read with so much interest, that with the next issue he will commence furnishing our readers with a weekly report of all transactions of interest occurring in Washington. As many of our readers are from that locality, this to them will be a pleasing announcement.

DOINGS IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

The correspondent at Port Royal of the "Times" thus reports progress on the contraband question:

"The battle of Port Royal was terminated at about 3 o'clock on Thursday last; on Saturday, at the same hour, I saw eighty fugitive slaves, contraband of war, who had escaped from their masters and hurried within the Union lines. This was on the southern headland of the bay, and on the northern side there are half as many more. They report that the rest are coming. They declare that, since last March they have been waiting and watching for the Yankees. And this is in South Carolina—this is where the blacks are so contented, where they were so attached to their masters, where we were defied to seduce them away. No attempt has been made, or will be made, to entice them, much less to excite an insurrection, but those who come in will be welcomed, will be clad and fed and set to work for the National cause. I talked for an hour with various of them. They were all men or boys—of every age—some had been house-servants, some field hands, some were stupid and stolid in an extraordinary degree, but they had very definite ideas relative to the Yankees. Through their jargon, at first nearly unintelligible, I was able at last to get at those ideas. They saw my difficulty in apprehending them, and said they could not talk plain, but it was all "here," pointing to their breasts. They said they believed the Yankees to be friends; that they came in to work, to do whatever they were bidden; they had expected us, but not dared to speak of it to their masters; they had seen the fight from up the river, and hurried down as soon as it was over. They all report that since last March they have been waiting for us; they all declare that so far as they know, all the blacks are anxiously waiting for us; their only uneasiness was on account of the wives and children they had left behid, but when told they should see these again, their fears were at once allayed. So here is a mighty engine put into our hands, one that may well be used to weaken the enemy. A careful, merciful use of it may prove to the rebels a warning at once and a rebuke. If traitors are deprived of their property, and all loyal men indemnified, and no outrages permitted, a lesson of the real intention of the North may be taught, and a significant indication of its power be afforded.

A little later the same correspondent adds:

There was a jubilee last night in the negro quarters at Seabrook, dancing and singing around fires that they built, and inside of the captured Fort Walker a religious meeting was held, and thanks offered to God for their deliverance. A hundred or more are already at work landing the cargoes of the vessels, or assisting in whatever labors are assigned them. There can be no doubt that the negro question is destined immediately to assume in this quarter proportions and aspects utterly unlike any that it has presented elsewhere. The blacks throughout the State will desert their masters wherever our army appears, and if those masters are so insane as to attempt coercion, results appalling to contemplate must ensue. No shadow of inducement has thus far been held out to the slaves by the National forces. They have come to us without any invitation; they express a willingness to work; they have already given valuable information, acted as guides, and in the labors to which they are put will prove of prodigious assistance. But the utter and speedy anihilation of slavery in South Carolina seems as certain as that these infatuated Secessionists contine to hold out against our arms."

A New Church in Jersey City.—A public meeting was held in Jersey City on Wednesday Nov. 13th, for the purpose of hearing the views of the friends of the Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, in regard to the obtainment of a place of worship. Rev. Wm. H. Pitts was called to the chair, and Mr. Geo. H. Feeks appointed Secretary. After a prayer by the chairman and singing, the following resolution was discussed and unanimously adopted;

Resolved, That steps be immediately taken to purchase for the use of the A. M. E. Zion congregation a place of worship..

Anglo African War Items.

The Leavenworth Conservative of Oct. 29th, states:

Slaves began coming into camp as soon as Gen. Lane left Westport. Not a day passes without a practical exemplification of the lie that "the slaves are contented." A black brigade consisting of over one hundred and fifty recent chattels came out of Missouri on Friday last—they are well mounted, and have a good supply train. Their untimely departure has created no little excitement in the districts they are engaged in bleaching out. Lane continues to give "vouchers" to such owners as are proved to be Union men, stating that such a slave, valued at so much, was "lost by the march of my brigade."

The Springfield (Mo.) correspondent of N. Y. Tribune, writes under date Nov. 9th:

Gen. Lane, during his stay here, has been making his headquarters at the house of Major Berry, a prominent secessionist, who, with three of his sons, is in the rebel army. On Thursday night, Lane was serenaded by the 24th Indiana Regiment, and in response, made a speech, which I append. The ladies of Major Berry's family, in spite of their secession views, were among the listeners to the speech, which was made from the balcony of the house. On reentering afterward, they were astounded to find that all the negroes in the family (five) had embraced the opportunity afforded by their brief absence to run away! Not a single servant remained in the house, and yesterday morning the ladies were reduced to the melancholy necessity of preparing their own breakfast! During the day they were searching diligently through Lane's camp for their evanescent chattels, but not, I think, with very brilliant prospects of success.

There has been a great stampede of the negroes within the last two days, and Gen. Hunter has been visited by many citizens, in [illegible], clamorous for his [illegible]. He gives them written permission to search through all our camps, and take their slaves if they can find them; but I have not yet heard of an instance in which one has been found. It is reported that he administered a severe reprimand to Lane yesterday for his proceedings in regard to negroes; but I do not place much confidence in the rumor. It is certain, however, that in the absence of any instructions from the Government upon the perplexing question, the commanding General feels greatly embarrassed. Whether Gen. Hunter did rebuke Lane as reported or not, he was exceedingly surprised [illegible] morning to find that every slave in the Chambers House, where his headquarters were located, had decamped during the night. They were five in number, who all mysteriously disappeared, bag and baggage; and it is more than probable that the places which once knew them shall know them no more forever.

Owing to a scarcity of white soldiers, it has become necessary to call on the planters of Savannah River, for a contribution of labor to the extent of one hand to each twenty, to work on the defenses.

The Memphis Argus of the 16th has a dispatch dated Charleston, 14th, which says that the Union forces have possession of Pinckney Island, and have seized all the able bodied men on the plantations, and taken them on board the fleet.

The following is an extract from a public letter from one of the officers engaged in the bombardment at Port Royal.

I am sure our success will rejoice your hearts; it has been complete, and terror runs over the whole country. The negroes are wild and plundering their masters houses. The whites have been driving the negroes away by force and shooting them down, but they still come to the gunboats.

"The moment General Drayton took to his horse in the panic of the 7th, his two hundred servants went directly to the Wabash. This is worthy of notice as putting down the nonsense that the slaves were ready to fight for their masters. They surrounded Capt. Ammen in crowds at Beaufort, one of them calling out in a joy of his heart 'I did'nt think you could do it, massa.'"

SUMMARY.

On the night of the 8th inst. a colored man by the name of Alexander Smith, residing in Slemmer's Alley, Baltimore, attempted to kill his wife by cutting her head with an axe. The female was removed to the Central station house, where her wounds were dressed by Dr. Morgan. When brought into the station house the woman presented a horrible spectacle, her head, face and the bosom of her dress being one mass of clotted blood. The would-be-assassin was committed for court by Justice Hiss.

Richard Dennison, a colored deck hand, on the Leclair, lying at Kittaning, Pa., on the night of the 2nd inst., stepped from the boat and was drowned. Every effort was made by those on the boat to rescue him, but in the darkness it was found impossible to do anything. He was borne off by the rapid current, and sunk.

Charles Moore was arrested in Baltimore on the 8th inst. as a runaway slave. He was claimed as the property of one Daniel Lee, residing about nine miles from the city, on the York turnpike.

MARRIED.

White—Purnell.—In this city, on Thursday, Nov. 14, by the Rev. William Spelman, Chas. A. White, of Canandaigua, to Miss Emma O. Purnell, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Special Notices.

A GRAND

MUSICAL FESTIVAL

WILL BE GIVEN AT

Turn Hall, 63 and 65 Meserole Street,

WILLIAMSBURGH,

On Wednesday Evening, Dec. 11, 1861.

The Committee pledge themselves that no pains will be spared to make this equal to any that has been given.

Music under the direction of

Prof. S. WALDRON'S BAND.

Prof. LaMATIEU, the celebrated Tight Rope Performer, has been engaged to give one of his performances on this occasion. He will WALK A ROPE one inch thick, with his hands and feet chained together. He will also walk a rope blindfolded, hang by his feet with his head down, and beat a drum, and perform many other daring and interesting feats.

TICKETS 50 CENTS,

REFRESHMENTS INCLUDED.

Persons wishing to see the performance can have a seat in the Gallery for 25 Cts. Children half price.

Performance to commence at 8 o'clock.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Mr. George Poole,	Mr. Joseph H. Nixon,
Mr. Wm. Moore,	Mr. Charles Trower,
Mr. Chas. Smith,	Mr. Wm. R. Conner,
Mr. Benjamin Clark,	Mr. James Mitchell,
Mr. J. F. Jackson,	Mr. AlexanderCorprew.

N. B.—Cars leave Peck Slip and Grand Street Ferry every five minutes, and go within one block of the Hall. J. A. TROWER, Conductor.

17 3t

Query.—Who is going to attend the Anniversary Festival of the J. W. B. Smith Tabernacle, No. 2, on the 27th inst.

A GRAND TEA ENTERTAINMENT

For the benefit of Mrs. MARY REDDEN, gotten up by a Committee of Ladies and Gentlemen, will be given on

TUESDAY EVENING, DEC. 3, 1861,

AT THE

Metropolitan Assembly Rooms,

178 Prince street.

The Committee being satisfied that Mrs. Redden is worthy of this demonstration, assure the public that no pains will be spared to entitle it to their patronage.

Tickets 38 cents. 17 2t

VOORHEES' SECOND GRAND SOIREE,

On THANKSGIVING NIGHT, Thursday, Nov. 28th, at the Rooms 177 Wooster street, near Bleecker.

Grand Orchestra—Prof. Robt. H. Brown, Conductor.

Tickets 30 cents, including Refreshments.

☞ School Rehearsals every Monday and Thursday evenings.

Modest Young Lady.—"Charles, are you going to attend the Promenade Concert on the 27th inst.?

Sensible Gent.—I am, Kate; will you accompany me?

Modest Young Lady—With pleasure, Charles; you know it will be so delightful.

Rev. Alex. Crummell at the 7th Avenue Church.

On THANKSGIVING DAY, Nov. 28th, Rev. Alex. Crummell, of Liberia, W. A., will deliver a discourse at the 7th Avenue Church, (Rev. H. M. Wilson's,) commencing at 11 o'clock.—Subject—"The Providence of God Regarding Western Africa."

At the conclusion of the discourse a collection will be made for Mr. Crummell's mission.

LECTURES.

The Undersigned is prepared to fill engagements to deliver single Lectures, on the following subjects:

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY WITH REFERENCE TO NATURAL THEOLOGY;

THE ADAPTATIONS OF THE EARTH, OR TERRESTRIAL ADAPTATIONS;

MENTAL PHILOSOPHY

THE ANCIENT HONORS OF THE BLACK AND COLORED RACES OF THE EARTH;

—Being a series of popular discourses recently delivered, founded on the following texts:

1. "Look not upon me because I am black." [Song of Sol.—1.6.
2. "Princes shall come out of Egypt." [Psalm 68—31.
3. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin." [Jer.—13.23.
4. "Cursed be Canaan."—Gen.—9 25.
5. "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus." Philemon.

Terms—The lecturer's passage both ways, and one fourth of profits.

[From the Detroit Daily Advertiser, March 1, 1860.]

"Mr. Berry's lecture last night is stated to have displayed much thought, and to have been in every respect meritorious."

Grand Promenade Concert and Oyster Supper.

The J. W. B. Smith Tabernacle, No. 2,

I. O. of B. and S. of LOVE and CHARITY, will celebrate its third anniversary, on Thanksgiving Eve., Wednesday, the 27th inst., at the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms, No. 178 Prince Street, on which occasion there will be given a Grand Promenade Concert and Oyster Supper.

Professor Robert Brown's Cotillion Band is engaged for the occasion.

N. B.—In addition to the above, the Ice Creams, Fruits and Mottoes, will be served gratuitously.

Tickets only 50 cents—to be had of any member of the Tabernacle. Do not forget—secure your tickets early. Remember, Wednesday Evening, Nov. 27th.

PLEASANT R. SMITH, Chairman.
OLIVER A. HOLMES,
16 2t Com. of Arragements.

T H E BALL IS UP!

FLOOR SKATING, FLOOR SKATING!

BOSTON'S

SKATING ACADEMY.

FOR LADIES.

Mr. T. S. Boston respectfully announces to his friends and the public, that he will re-open his SKATING SCHOOL, for Ladies and Gentlemen, at the

ASSEMBLY ROOMS,

178 Prince Street,

Terms of Admission—10 cts. Doors open at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Terms for Skating—15 cts. half hour; 20 cts. per hour.

TUESDAY and FRIDAY Evenings, for Classes

Persons wishing to engage the Rooms for private parties, can do so by communicating to

THOS. S. BOSTON,
No. 87 Sullivan St.,
15 5t New York City.

NOTICE.

All members of the Annual Conferences of the A.M.E. Zion Church who have taken shares in the stock of the Book Concern of said church, are hereby informed that the payment is now due, and they are requested to make remittance to the Treasurer, Rev. Jos. P. Thompson, [illegible], N.Y., through the mail or by express.

N B. All who have not taken shares can do so by forwarding the amount of $10 to the Secretary, at New Bedford, Mass.

Samuel M. Giles,
Secretary of the Board.

New Bedford, Oct. 18th, 1861.

AGENCY

FOR TROY AND VICINITY.

James R. Benham is the regularly appointed Agent for the Anglo-African in Troy, Laningsburg, Waterford and vicinity. All orders or communications for the paper may be left with Mr Benham on board of the steamer "Cornelius Vanderbilt."

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delsart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING

To consider measures with reference to a settlement of the

GERRIT SMITH LANDS,

will be held, agreeable to adjournment, at Prince Street Hall, on Monday evening November 25th, 1861. The public are invited to attend.

Charles L. Reason, Ch'mn.
Wright Seaman, Jr., Sec'y.

LECTURES.

The Rev. Alex. Crummell, of Liberia, W.A., is prepared to deliver the following Lectures, either singly or as a course, during the months of November and December:

1. The customs, genius, and characteristics of native tribes in Western Africa.
2. The growth of civilization along the Western Coast of Africa.
3. The progress and prospects of the Republic of Liberia.

Letters are to be addressed to Rev. A. Crummell, 311 Spring Street, New York. 12—4t

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Rev. Eli N. Hall, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, . . . A. M.
3 " . . . P. M.
7½ " . . . P. M.
10 4t.

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o'clock, . . . A. M.
3 " . . . P. M.
7 1 " . . . P. M.
12–1y

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. Wm. J. Alston, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, . . . A. M.
3 " . . . P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue.

Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

Rev. Chas. H. Thompson, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—
10½ . . . A. M.
3 . . . P. M.
7½ . . . P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn. 13-1y.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

OYSTERS IN EVERY STYLE—GOOD Music, splendid Dancing; Ice Cream and other delicacies of the season—all for Fifty Cents. Remember, Wednesday evening, the 27th inst., at the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms, 178 Prince street.

PETER S. PORTER,

GENERAL AGENT FOR

HOUSE LETTING,

170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

Wanted.

AN OPPORTUNITY IS NOW OFFERED to ONE HUNDRED healthy, industrious colored men (those being married permitted to take their families), who have had experience in the cotton fields of the Southern States, to proceed to the healthy and thriving colonies of New South Wales and Queensland, in Australia Their passage will be advanced to them, and an engagement made with them for two years, at about $100 per annum and lodging, with full rations. Rations to Australian laborers are very liberal, consisting of ample allowances of fresh meat, tea, vegetables, &c.; also an allowance of tobacco.

The subscriber offers his own guaranty that the colored people sent out by him will receive from the Australian Cotton Growing Association the same privileges and immunities enjoyed by employees of a different complexion, all being alike free subjects of an enlightened Government. For further particulars apply to

R. W. CAMERON,
90 Beaver St., New York.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate Ladies and Gentlemen with first class Board, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand. 16 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,

EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.

Residence—134 Chrístie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING IN BROOKLYN,

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

FOR SALE—A BEAUTIFUL PIC-NIC GROVE, at Glencove, L. I.—The owner has been asked by respectable colored people in that vicinity and in this city to offer for sale the above Grove. It is offered to colored persons and the public generally. It extends from West to Middle Avenue, and has a fine view of the Bay, and is near the landing. Inquire of Mrs. R. BONNER, No. 54 West 29th-st., cor. 6th Avenue.

14—13t

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston st., or of the Janitor 225 West 15th-st.

POCKET WATER-FILTER AND DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weighs one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing

DAY & CO.,
13-13t. Box 464 P.O., Newark, N. J.

FASHIONABLE

DRESS MAKING,

SHIRT MAKING, EMBROIDERING, AND QUILTING.

Mesdames F. A. Hamilton, O. A. Newton, and Miss A. M. Hamilton,

187 Navy Street, Brooklyn.

Ladies' and Childrens' dresses cut and made in the most fashionable style and warranted to fit.

SHIRTS of all paterns made, and plain sewing executed with neatness; and durability of work guaranteed. Orders for EMBROIDERING promptly attended to, and QUILTING executed with dispatch.

Public patronage is respectfully solicited.

12-tf.

Miserable Old Bach—"I have made up my mind to go to the Oyster Supper of Tabernacle No. 2, on the 27th inst. Everybody will be there. Perhaps it will be my last chance: Oh, yes, I remember now, there never was a Jack without a Gill."

HENRY G. LEASK, HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS AND FURS,

COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.

Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly Richardson) REspectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen it you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,

BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

Don't Forget, 168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS, EMPIRE STATE HOTEL AND UNION HOUSE, 541 BROOME STREET,

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. Ramsey.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Pease call and examine the premises

HATS CAPS & FURS

IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS. The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co., N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE

BY

MRS. W. S. WILKINS & Co

610 PINE, ABOVE SIXTH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA 7-13t.

LADIES' FURNISHING STORE.

CHILDREN'S CLOTHING

Ready-Made and Made to Order, By

MRS. S. WILKINS & CO.,

610 Pine, above Sixth Street, Philadelphia.
7-13t.

MRS. ANDERSON,

CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

NOTICE EXTRAORDINARY.—The lovers of good Oysters will meet on Wednesday evening next, the 27th inst., at the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms. By order of Chef de Cuisine.

J. D. B., Sec,

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m.

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMOdate a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate. 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 6 tf.

A SCHOOL WANTED.—A YOUNG LADY, a graduate of one of the High Schools of this State, and who is fully qualified as a teacher, is desirous of obtaining a school where the salary would not be less than $200 a-year. Address Thos. Hamilton, 48 Beckman St., N.Y.

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION. THE UNdersigned respectfully announces that he is now prepared to give instruction in the Art of Singing. He will be at home at 187 Navy Street, Brooklyn, on Monday evening, and at Zion Church, N. Y., on Thursday evening, of each week. Ladies or Gentlemen desiring instruction, will please apply immediately. Singing schools taught and private instruction given on moderate terms.

3tf. ROBT. HAMILTON,

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. Forter, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 26 Mulberry Street, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y;

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

Affectionate Mother—James, are you going to attend the Festival of the J. W. B. Smith Tabernacle, on the 27th inst?

Fast Young Man—Well, old woman, you go bet I am. What a Dance, and Oyster Supper—and only Fifty Cents. You bet!

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.

79 Thompson St., N. Y

MRS. E. LEONARD,

FASHIONABLE

DRESS MAKER,

25 Sullivan Street, New York.

Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

By Mrs. Mary Johnson, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies,	$2,50
" " Gentleman,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

y13t,

JAMES H. W. LEONARD,

CARD AND JOB PRINTER,

219 Centre Street, New York.

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts. 9tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gent, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 18[illegible] Suffolk Street. Terms very moderate. [illegible]

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes this privilege to inform his friends and the public generally that he has [illegible] fitted up his SALOON [illegible] prepared to furnish them with Ice Creams, [illegible]

BENJ. F. BROWN,
[illegible] Bleecker St.
between Broadway & Crosby St. 4t.

P. A. WHITE,

Corner of Frankfort & Gold Sts.

[illegible]

COMMISSION MERCHANT,

KEEPS CONSTANTLY ON HAND

A FRESH AND PURE ASSORTMENT

OF

DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS,

GENUINE

LUBIN'S EXTRACTS

AND OTHER PERFUMERY,

FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES.

FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA SEGARS, &c., &c.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S

VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR

FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH, AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off, or becoming prematurely Gray.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hair-brush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off, always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S

STRENGTHENING PLASTER.

AN INVALUABLE REMEDY, FOR

LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, &c., &c.

Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly serviceable.

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent [illegible] from its use, as it keeps a continued [illegible]

For [illegible]

For RHEUMATISM [illegible]

PREVENTING A [illegible]

[illegible]

P. A. WHITE, [illegible]

Poetry.

IMMORTAL LONGINGS.

Christ, let me come to Thee!
My heart is weary and I long for rest;
Is not my earthly mission well nigh done?
I cannot bear this burden on my breast—
It weighs my spirit downward like a stone.
My saddened life is ever veiled in clouds.
And midnight darkness hath come o'er my soul,
My once bright hopes are wrapped away in shrouds,
And sorrow's heavy surges round me roll;
Sweet Christ, Oh! may I come?

Christ, let me come to Thee!
Life hath a dark Sahara been to me!
The few bright flowers that bloomed along my way
Were soon transplanted—each beloved tree
To bloom perennial in the "perfect day."
My dear loved ones sit round the Golden Throne,
And wait—a broken circle till I come;
Let me not linger here on earth alone—
Oh! let me join them in their heavenly home!
Sweet Christ, oh! may I come?

Christ, let me come to Thee!
Behind me roars the angry ocean tide;
Each crested wave comes nearer, nearer still;
The muttered thunders in the billows hide;
I shudder at their hoarse, loud voice so chill,
I cannot meet the fierce, wild storm of Life!
I have no strength to battle with it more!
Too long I've wrestled in the painful strife,
I must lay down the burden that I bore.
Sweet Christ, oh! may I come?

Christ, let me come to Thee!
In dreams I hear the white-robed angels sing
The golden glories of their beauteous land;
I hear the rustle of each snowy wing,
And feel my touch upon my fevered hand.
Colder than ever seems the earth to me,
When I awake and see them flit away;
I strain my eyes, the last bright glimpse to see,
And watch them vanquish through the gate of day,
Sweet Christ, oh! may I come?

Christ, let me come to Thee!
I watch my toiling breath grow faint and slow;
I note the hectic deepening, day by day,
And feel my life is like a wreath of snow,
Which one kind breath of heaven would melt away.
A little longer in this world of vice—
The wished-for boundary is passed—
I see the shining shore of Paradise,
I know my pain is o'er at last.
Sweet Christ, oh! let me come!

Christ, let me come to Thee:
I've seen the gates that guard thy holy clime!
And often caught a gleam of thee within;
I know they'll open in thine own good time,
And let thy weary wandering child come in.
I've had, through all this weary care and pain,
One blessed hope, that ne'er has known despair—
It cheers me like the sunshine after rain!
I know thou'lt hear my deep and heartfelt prayer,
And let me come to Thee!

[Anon.

FORMATION OF COLORED REGIMENTS.

MR. EDITOR:—Absence from home has prevented my notice of the rejoinder of your able correspondent, R. H. V., on the war policy. I now avail myself of a leisure hour to reply. I am one of those who believe that truth loses nothing from investigation, and it is at all times the most pleasant and agreeable feature in the honest investigation of truth to know that your opponent can properly appreciate honor, candor and gentlemanly generosity, for the views of his antagonist. My friend, your correspondent, R. H. V., seems largely to possess those characteristic traits of a gentleman and scholar. I am pleased to find my antagonist on this question, of that progressive class of minds, who can honorably differ with his fellows without condescending to that hateful and disgusting virulence manifested of late among the ancient leaders of our people, in very high circles. I think among us boys (as our more ancient leaders are wont to term us) this practical fact of itself developes progress. My friend thinks that so far as my declamation is concerned, my arguments may do very well; but he wants facts to make it appear that my position is tenable; I am willing to submit our previous articles, respectively, to the arbitration of those who have read them, and abide their decision as to whose arguments are the most self evident, and whose position is sustained by the greatest number of facts. I think that a careful comparison of the articles and the premises on which they are based, will prove my friend's production quite as liberally bereft of that important auxilary in debate (proof) as my own iridescent missive. Invidious distinctions among the colored people of this continent has done more to keep us oppressed than all other efforts of white men combined. By this rule we have ever been unable to wring from this government the acknowledgement of black genius adequate to the successful competition of whites, in governmental power. White men have ever made us believe that the interests of black men in Mexico, Hayti, Jamaica, Canada, and even in Africa, were really as dissimilar to the interests of colored Americans, as is the difference in the respective statures of the giraffe and dor-mouse. All these countries offered very superior advantages to colored men of genius, long before American diplomacy and American prejudice had the power to influence them against us.—But this stand still policy, and this reasoning upon the false and prejudiced suggestions of our oppressors and misguided friends, has been the successful drawback to every well-directed plan of concentrated effort for our elevation, such as would have been adopted by any other people similarly situated. Had we obeyed the dictates of reason, and the offer of those people made to us years ago, instead of now going to California to black boots, wait tables and wash spittoons, our leading men might have been large contractors, land owners, and citizens to all intents and purposes; while the secondary class of our people might have filled very enviable positions in contrast to what they now fill in that country; for, you remember that the acquisition of territory from Mexico changed none of her laws relating to her resident citizens in any part of the territory ceded to or purchased by the United States. What, then, kept us from joining with the English and French emigrants in California before the war? becoming citizens under the laws of Mexico, and forcing the United States, by the laws of nations, to respect that position to the present day, as she does blacker men and less cultivated than two-thirds of the colored people of the United States who cannot even enjoy their oath against one of those fellows, black though he be, if he happens to be a Mexican. The reason is obvious: white men, seeing the result of such a measure, denied our identity of interest with the colored people favored by the laws of Mexico and California; and though Mexico contented us to make our home with them (as Hayti now entreats us from the same reasons). Our leading men, reasoning upon this absurd theory of prejudiced white men, counseled us to stand still and see the salvation of God; but instead of the analogy being carried out, and we seeing our oppressors declining in strength, as did Israel, we see them day by day growing until they had made that blessed land of Freedom as odious from their accursed prejudice as any other part of the United States and then these same leaders cease to counsel standing still, but counsel them going to California. In the name of heaven, I ask for for what should they now go there? They say to better their condition and make a living; I say to become worse slaves and menials than us they leave behind. This is the stand still policy I am at variance with, standing still, till all advantages are lost and we are left in the same darkness and degradation that a brilliant epoch in the history of our country has found us, and is compelled to leave us, because we refuse to get up and run with the world to the great issue to which she is tending—universal Freedom. There is no such thing as stand still in this nineteenth century; you must progress backward or forward; the world is rushing on; he or they that will not move with her, must be crushed by her onward march.

My friend says he has yet to learn that these are practically established facts; "that grasping the sword will emancipate us from prejudice and slavery." Indeed, he asks—"Will the proposition bear qestioning?" I answer yes, in the most positive sense, because four-fifths of all the emancipations from these evils among men have been brought about by this means. The Israelites were carried away captives seven times by Pharaoh, Tiglath-Pilaser, Shalmanezer, Nebuchadnezer, and finally Titus. These men forced them to serve as slaves and vassals, not only to themselves, but to their successors in Egypt, Babylon, Assyria, Persia and Rome, over which empires they respectively held dominion. The Israelites groaned and prayed to God, lifting their windows toward the city of the great King three times a day—but never were released in five out of seven cases, till they grasped the sword, and like Samson, cried to God for strength to drive it to the hilt. In one of the other cases of the seven, God himself, by the use of elements more destructive and desolating than the sword, effected the purpose by a national slaughter. My comment on all these Bible transactions may be found in the writings of the Prophets Isaiah, Jeremian, Ezekiel, Daniel and Hosea. A careful study of these inspired writers, and the chronological history of the Jews through all those years of their servitude and degradation, developes the fact that the special direction of God, by the mouth of his prophets, is decidedly at variance with my friend's peace measures and neutral policy, in a war against the greatest moral, social, and intellectual antagonist to human progress that now curses the civilized world. Turning from sacred history to more recent dates, I am taught by the modern historian that the vassals and slaves of the entire continent of Europe a few centuries ago, are now its free citizens—made free by the power of their own strength, contending often against fearful odds for the advancement of the cause of human suffrage. The once lowest castes of Hindostan are now the free gentoros of that empire. The slaves that built the Pyramids of Egypt are now, it is true, the degraded but free moslem of that land. The Mexicans that Cortez found in that country, working as slaves of the emperors and priesthood, are now the free population of Mexico. The slaves of England, France and Spain in the West Indies, are now the independent Haytians, the citizens of the Dominician Republic, and the British West Indies. Now let me ask by what special interposition of Providence, aside from the general rule of grasping the sword, have these changes been brought about? The answer comes back from the earliest antiquity that the universal rule for Emancipation, Equality and Enfranchisement, whether it be to the Jewish slaves of antiquity; the Roman slaves, the grecian helots, the German Fuedal vassals, the serfs of Russia, the Indian slaves of Mexico and Central America, and the African slaves of the West India Islands) the one, the all prevailing influence for removing these accursed systems of tyranny and oppression is and ever has been an appeal to the sword, wielded by strong and energetic arms and minds, aidded and guided by that Omnipotence that is ever on the side of justice, and who directs the blow so as to spread terror and dismay among the oppressors of a crushed and bleeding race, the outraged struggling victims of injustice and wrong. So will God help us if we conform to this universal rule; and cease to cling to this abstruct rule of "stand still and see the salvation etc.," which after all never would be applied to our case at present, for the Israelites had done what we have steadfastly refused to do, i. e., they had spoiled their oppressors and were marching out of their land in rank and file. Then again, it was only when they had gone to the last extremety of human effort and were about to turn back to slavery, and to be buried in Egypt, that Moses gave the command to stand still etc. Now I am willing to grant my friend the full benefit of this one isolated case in support of his theory as far as it goes; when we have performed our part as faithfully even as those to whom it was addressed. When the slaves have raised the standard of rebellion against their masters, and have broken every yoke, and then by some great impending danger are about to yield and go back again to slavery, I like Moses, rather than retrograde, would readily counsel standing still at least for a while. When we of the north by indefatigable exertion (and sacrifice if required) have armed and equipped our selves, and become proficient in all that pertains to self defence, as men in our condition should be; and then find ourselves environed with some of the difficulties that my friend predicts would follow such a significant result; and we like Israel are about turning back to our present unhappy and significant condition, I for one should steadfastly counsel standing still with fixed bayonets and torn cartridges, to see the salvation of God. Which I verily believe would be seen if we followed those general rules to which I cling, notwithstanding the enemy's preeminence of position, superior numerical strength &c.

TO BE CONTINUED.

THE INTERMARRIAGE LAW OF OHIO A FARCE.

A few months ago a colored man by the name of Oliver West, married at Cleveland, O., a white girl named Emily Fuller, who subsequently returned to her father's house. West believing that her parents were preventing her from living with him, sued out a writ of habeas corpus in one of the courts, but it appearing on investigation of the case, that she was not restrained in any way of her liberty, the writ was dismissed. This over, her father obtained a warrant for the arrest of the justice who performed the marriage, under an act passed last winter by the Ohio Legislature, entitled "an act to prevent the amalgamation of the white and colored races." This act, besides making it unlawful for any person possessing a visible admixture of African to intermarry with any person of pure white blood, makes any person convicted of solemnizing such a marriage liable to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars, or imprisonment for a term not to exceed three months, at the discretion of the court. At the trial West plead guilty, and was fined one cent. The Judge remarked that he regretted that there were no half cents, as that would have been the measure of his damages; that the law was ridiculous; that when a white woman makes up her mind to marry a negro there should be no restraint but that imposed by taste; that it was better to have legitimate mulattos than bastards—that the law was forced through the Legislature in bad faith by the party whose policy it was to breed mulattos to embarrass a party that wanted to stop the breed, now amounting to one hundred thousand per annum.

From the Coudersport (Pa) Journal.

NO SLAVE HUNTING IN THE ARMY.

MR. EDITOR—The loyal citizens of this county will furnish with alacrity their full proportion of volunteers to enable the government to crush out the slaveholder's rebellion; but they feel outraged at the orders issued by several Generals commanding soldiers to aid in returning fugitive slaves. As they were about sending their fourth company to the seat of war, they deemed the occasion a suitable one to give expression to this feeling, hence the resolutions adopted yesterday at the Court House, which I herewith hand you for publication.

J. S. MANN.

Protest against Slave catching by Soldiers.

At the close of religious services in Coudersport, on Sunday, Oct. 20, 1861, Capt. Jones' Rifle Company made up of volunteers from nearly every township in the county of Potter, State of Pennsylvania, with their friends, being present, the following resolutions were adopted, only two persons voting against them:

Resolved, That we cheerfully send forth our husbands, brothers and sons to aid in crushing this wicked rebellion; but while doing so, we protest that it is no part of the soldiers to aid in returning fugitive slaves, and we earnestly implore the Governor of Pennsylvania to make immediate remonstrance against any soldiers from this State being ordered to engage in so revolting a work.

Resolved, That Captain Jones be requested to present the above resolution to his Excellency Andrew G. Curtin, and respectfully ask him to transmit the same to the President of the United States.

A speaker enlarging upon the rascality of the devil, got off the following:—"I tell you that the devil is an old liar, for when I was about to get religion, he told me that if I did git religion I could not go into gay company, and lie and cheat, or any such thing, but I have found him out to be a great liar."

A HIGHLAND LEGEND.

Once upon a time, in Burr Glen, on a wild winter's night, a farmer and family and servants were comfortably seated around a peat fire, when the wind was howling terribly around the house, and the drifting snow was clogging up the doorways. The father knew that his son and the servant maid were much attached to each other, but he would not consent to their marriage. While they were all sitting around the fire on that winter's night, he thought of a plan by which the servant maid should be got rid of; so he said that if, before the next day, she would bring him a skull that was in Saddell church, she should have his son for a husband. The girl's love was so strong for the young man that she joyfully agreed to the proposal, although it was quite seven miles to Saddell, and the road thereto lay over the Beinnau-Tuire. She knew the road well, and all its dangers and difficulties even by daylight, which would now be immensely increased by the darkness of the night, the fierce wind and driving snow, and the slippery rocks and swollen torrents. But she did not shrink from the danger, and at once made ready and went on her way. The farmer took good care that she went alone, and that his son did not follow her. The brave girl went over the hill and glen, battling with the snow storm, and tracking her path with the greatest difficulty. She passed safely over the southern side of Beinnau-Tuire, and at midnight reached Saddell church. Its doors were open, burst open, perhaps, by the violence of the wind. She knew the place where the skull was kept, and she grouped toward it in the dark. As she did so she heard a great and peculiar noise, made up as it seemed of low moans. There was a tramping of light feet over the pavement, and she heard forms rush past her; then a moment's silence, succeeded by more mysterious moans and sounds. Terrified, but not disheartened, the brave girl kept her purpose steadily in view; and grouping toward the skull seized it with both hands, and made for the church door.

The tramping of feet and the moans continued, and the forms pursued her. Grasping the skull, she gained the door and shut it. As she did so she heard a rush against it; but she turned and fled. By daylight she had regained her lover's home, and half dead with fatigue and excitement, placed the skull in the farmer's hands, and claimed the fulfilment of his promise. The farmer was taken aback by seeing the girl, having hoped that she would have perished amid the snow and wilds. He would not believe that she had really been to Saddell, and taken the skull from the church on such a night; so he at once set out to Saddell with some of his men, expecting to be able to disprove the girl's tale, by finding the skull still in its place in the church. When they got there, and had opened the church door, they found within the building—not the skull, but a number of wild deer, who, having found the door open, had sought shelter from the violence of the storm. The girl had told him of the sounds she heard within the church. Here was the cause; and much as he wished it otherwise, yet it was impossible for him to disbelieve her tale. There was nothing for him to do but to yield with the best grace he might. He gave his consent to the match, and to make assurance doubly sure, the lover took his brave girl to Saddell church the very next day, where she replaced the skull in its position, and they were married off hand. And as some of the deer that had frightened her had been killed and cooked, they had a hearty wedding and plenty of good venison at the feast that followed.—(Glenesaegan, or a Highland Home in Cantire, by Cuthbert Bede.

The Emancipated of Beaufort.

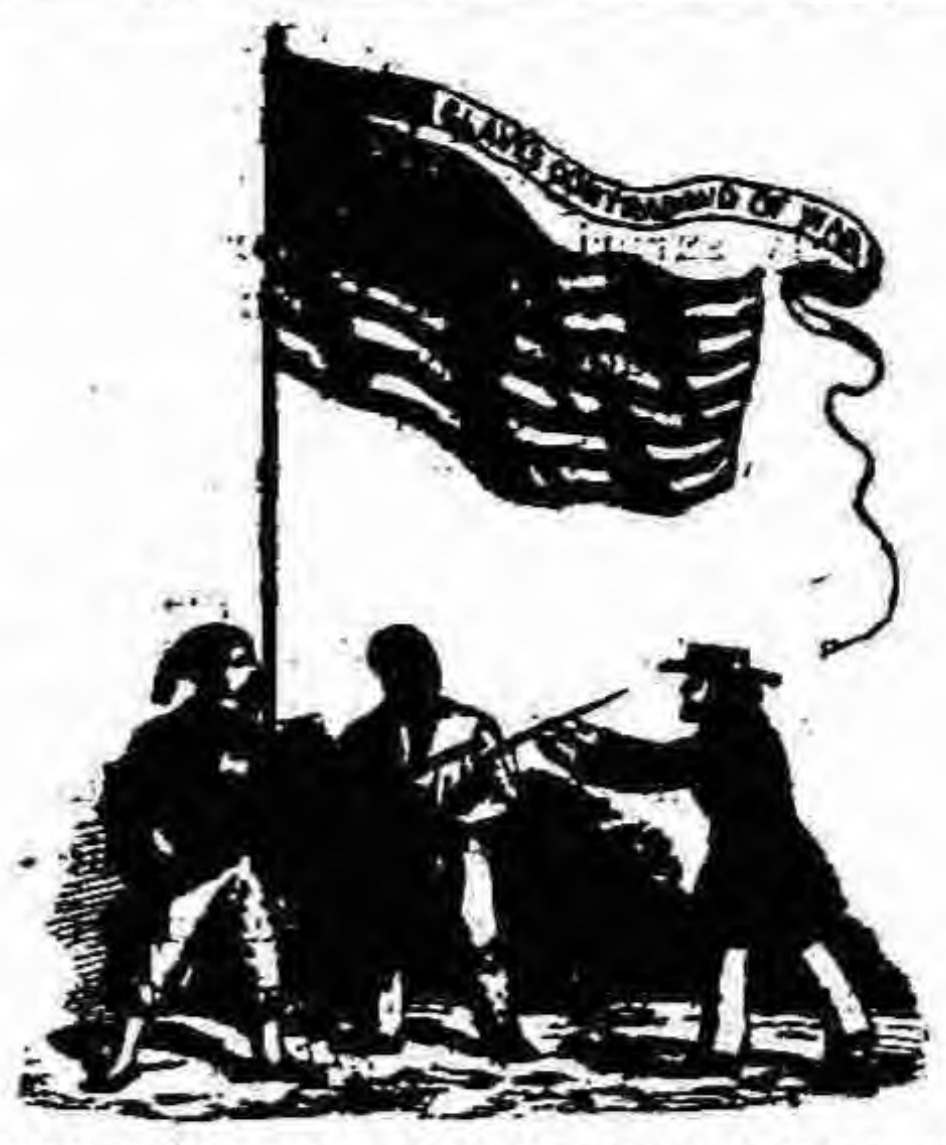
A French traveller, formerly attached to the Crimean army, happening to be on one of the vessels which captured Port Royal, writes to one of his friends in this city a letter, from which the following is an extract:

And now, my friend, let me say a word of that burning question of slavery, which, happily for the fame of our common country, and for the interests of the French planters themselves we disposed of thirteen years ago. I say happily for the French planters, for I was six months ago in one of the emancipated colonies, and I could ascertain with my own eyes that she produces now three times as much sugar as before the emancipation. Excuse me if I refer to that event, but I cannot forbear thinking that if the rich soil which I tread was cultivated by free hands it would in a few years, like the French colonies, yield three times as much as it does now. The negroes who flock from all parts of the country to meet their liberators, and who are now surrounding the staff of General Sherman, have an intellectual an appearance as any French negro of my acquaintance. I have just talked to a French creole from Louisiana, who goes as a body servant to New Orleans every year with his master. He had a basket of oranges under one of his arms and a dozen of unfeathered chickens on the other, which he wanted me to buy. Seeing that I was talking French to one of the officers he undertook me in that language, that is to say in creole, a kind of brogue with which my numerous travels have made me familiar. You cannot imagine how interested I was with his conversation. There was such a feeling of gratitude in his whole countenance, such a contentment beaming in his eyes, that notwithstanding the wariness of his nature and the simplicity of his language, I could not help being moved to tears. He said to me that every negro in the South turned every day his eyes towards the horizon to see whether he could not discover the Star Spangled Banner looming in the distance, and the Yankees coming to deliver them. Every negro, male or female, is conscious of the struggle now going on between the North and the South, and relies upon its results for the recovery of his freedom. The expedition of Port Royal, for instance, was *known by them as well as by Jeff. Davis him*self; and though they could neither read or write, they knew by the conversation the rebels had between themselves, perhaps through other channels unknown to me, the place of landing of the expedition, and more particularly the name of the officer who commanded it. It seems, however, that they have not a very exact idea of time, for when I asked the creole negro how long he had been waiting for Commodore Dupont's arrival, he told me that he thought he would have come six months ago, in July last. Though perfectly ignorant of the material means of action of the blacks in the South, I think that there is in them a hidden force calculated to display itself sooner or later, which, if the American government chose to use now, would undoubtedly transform itself into a mighty instrument of war.

The other night, a landlord, discovering one of his customers drunk, sloshing about in the mire, went to his assistance, and setting him up on his feet, inquired if he 'was sick, or what was the matter?' 'No,' replied the boozy customer, 'I ain't sick nor I ain't drunk—but I'm almighty discouraged!

Mrs. Partington advises all young people inflicted with preparation of the heart, to apply a plaster of the contract of mustard, to draw out the information, and she says she has never known a failure where this devise was swallowed.

MISCLELANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. for washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

MRS. WINSLOW'S
SOOTHING SYRUP.

Every mother should be prepared to act in the capacity of both nurse and physician to her children she can, if she will, discharge these duties much better than any one she can employ. If she does not, she ought to know that there is a Medicine prepared by an old nurse and female physician which has stood the test of many, many years, and is the most perfect thing on earth for children teething; it also cures Wind Colic, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, and is sure to regulate the bowels. We say to every mother, do not let your own prejudices, or the prejudices of others stand in the way of the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP certainly does, as the name implies, "soothe" the little sufferer into a quiet, natural sleep, from which it awakes invigorated and refreshed. And for the cure of diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Wind Colic, &c., we have never seen its equal.

We have always been, and still are, opposed to the practice of drugging infants. This article has no deleterious effects whatever, and from our own experience (we speak advisedly) we have every confidence in it, and can heartily recommend it to all mothers. Take our advice—use it—and you will as strongly recommend it to others as we have to you.

When we say that MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP acts like a charm, we do but reiterate the language of every person who ever used it for their children, for all diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery and Diarrhoea, Wind Colic and Cholera Infantum. It will produce quietude and rest, relieve all suffering, and the infant will awake invigorated and refreshed, and not with the dull and stupefying effects of preparations of opium.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States.

During the thirty years of unprecedented and increasing popularity of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, innumerable "CORDIALS" and other nostrums prepared by pretended M.D.'s, have sprung up and lived but a mushroom existence, the SOOTHING SYRUP has been constantly increasing in popularity, and become a household word, and THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS THANK MRS. WINSLOW for the health of their children, by the use of valuable article.

PRICE 20 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

For sale by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St., N.Y.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes of people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in out-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS;

EMBELLISHMENT.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored Americans Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brindas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture —by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause- by Robt. Gordon
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly.
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Meroe Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE. Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordon, Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell. Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 330 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory; also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel between decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which places it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin,
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress,
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
60 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 18 NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 30, 1861. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African.
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY,
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
No. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART I.

> "By myself, the Lord of Ages,
> I have sworn to right the wrong;
> I have pledged my word unbroken,
> For the weak against the strong."
> [H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE SALE.

'Dar now, dar now!' exclaimed mammy Judy; 'jis wat ole man been tellin' on yeh! Yeh go out yondeh, ye kick up yeh heel, git yeh head clean full proclamation an' sich like dat, an' let debil fool yeh, den go fool long wid wite folks long so, sho! Betteh go 'bout yeh business; been sarvin' God right, yeh no call t'do so I reckon!'

'I dont care what comes! my course is laid out and my determination fixed, and nothing they can do can alter it. So you and daddy Joe, mammy, had just as well quit your preaching to me the religion you have got from your oppressors.'

'Soul-driveh git yeh, yeh can' git way from dem I don' recken! Sho chile, yeh ain' dat mighty!' admonished mammy Judy.

'Henry my chile, look to de Laud! look to de Laud! case he 'lone am able to bar us up in our trouble! an—'

'Go directly sir, to captain John Harris' office and ask him to call immediately to see me at my house!' ordered Franks.

Politely bowing, Henry immediately left the premises on his errand.

'Laud 'a messey maus Stephen!' exclaimed mammy Judy, on hearing the name of John Harris the negro trader; "hope yeh arter no haum! gwine sell all ob us to de tradehs?',

'Hoot-toot, hoot-toot! Judy, give yourself no uneasiness about that, till you have some cause for it. So you and Joe may rest contented Judy,' admonished Franks.

'Tank'e maus Stephen! case I hearn yeh tell Henry dat yeh sell de las' nig—'

'Hush! ole umin, hush! yeh tongue too long! Put yo trus' in de Laud!' interrupted daddy Joe.

'I treat my black folks well,' replied Franks; 'and all they have to—'

Here the door bell having been rung, he was interrupted with a message from Ailcey, that a gentleman awaited his presence in the parlor.

At the moment which the Colonel left the kitchen, Henry stepped over the style into the yard, which at once disclosed who the gentleman was to whom the master had been summoned, he having been met by the messenger in the street. Henry passed directly around and behind the house.

'See, ole man, see! reckon 'e gwine dar now!' whispered mammy Judy, on seeing Henry pass through the yard without going into the kitchen.

'Whar!' enquired daddy Joe.

'Don'o, out yondeh, whar 'e gwine way from wite folks!' she replied.

The interview between Franks and the trader Harris was not over half an hour duration, the trader retiring, Franks being prompt and decisive in all his transactions, making little ceremony.

So soon as the front door was closed, Ailcey smiling bore into the kitchen a half pint glass of brandy, saying that her master had sent it to the old people.

The old man received it with compliments to his master, pouring it into a black jug in which there was both tansy and garlic, highly recommending it as a 'bitters' and certain antidote for worms, for which purpose he and the old woman took of it as long as it lasted, though neither had been troubled with that particular disease since the days of their childhood.

'Wat de gwine do wid yeh my son?' enquired mammy Judy as Henry entered the kitchen.

'Sell me to the soul drivers! what else would they do?'

'Yeh gwine stay 'bout till de git yeh?'

'I shant move a step! and let them do their—!'

'Maus wants to see yeh in de front house Henry,' interrupted Ailcey, he immediately obeying the summons.

'Hear dat now!' said mammy Judy, as Henry followed the maid out of the kitchen.

'Carry this note sir, directly to captain Jack Harris!' ordered Franks, handing to Henry a sealed note. Receiving it, he bowed politely, going out of the front door, directly to the slave prison of Harris.

'Eh heh! I see,' said Harris on opening the note: 'Colonel Frank's boy; walk in here;' passing through the office into a room which proved to be the first department of the slave-prison. 'No common negro I see! you're a shade higher. A pretty deep shade too! Can read, write, cipher; a good religious fellow, and has a Christian and surname. The devil you say! Who's your father? Can you preach?'

'I have never tried,' was the only reply.

'Have you ever been a member of Congress?' continued Harris with ridicule.

To this Henry made no reply.

'Wont answer hey! beneath your dignity. I understand that you're of that class of gentry who dont speak to common folks! You're not quite well enough dressed for a gentleman of your cloth. Here! Mr. Henry, I'll present you with a pair of ruffles: give yourself no trouble sir, as I'll dress you! I'm here for that purpose,' said Harris, fastening upon the wrists of the manly bondman, a heavy pair of handcuffs.

'You hurt my wrist!' admonished Henry.

'New clothing will be a little tight when first put on. Now sir!' continued the trader, taking him to the back door and pointing into the yard at the slave gang there confined; 'as you have been respectably dressed, walk out and enjoy yourself among the ladies and gentlemen there; you'll find them quite a select company.'

Shortly after this the sound of the bell-ringer's voice was heard—a sound which usually spreads terror among the slaves: 'Will be sold this afternoon at three o'clock by public outcry, at the slave-prison of captain John Harris, a likely choice negro-fellow, the best trained body servant in the state, trained to the business by the most accomplished lady and gentleman negro-trainers in the Mississippi Valley. Sale positive without a proviso.

'Dar, dar! did'n I tell yeh so?' Ole man, ole man! hear dat now! Come hear. Dat jis wat I been tellin on 'im, but 'e uden blieve me!' ejaculated old mammy Judy on hearing the bell ring and the hand-bill read.

Falling upon their knees, the two old slaves prayed fervently to God, thanking him that it was as 'well with them' as it was.

'Bless de Laud! my soul is happy!' cried out mammy Judy being overcome with devotion, clapping her hands.

'Tang God, for wat I feels in my soul!' responded daddy Joe.

Rising from their knees with tears trickling down their cheeks, the old slaves endeavored to ease their troubled souls by singing—

> 'Oh when shall my sorrows subside,
> And when shall my troubles be ended;
> And when to the bosom of Christ be conveyed,
> To the mansions of joy and bliss;
> To the mansions of joy and bliss!'

'Wurthy to be praise! blessed be de name ob de Laud! Po' black folks, de Laud on'y knows wats to come ob us!' exclaimed mammy Judy.

'Look to de Laud ole umin, he's able to bar us out mo' ner conker. Keep de monin star in sight!' advised daddy Joe.

'Yes ole man yes, dat I's done dis many long day, an' I ain' gwin lose sight ob it now! No, God bein' my helpeh, I is gwine keep my eyes right on it, dat I is!'

As the hour of three drew near, many there were going in the direction of the slave-prison, a large number of persons having assembled at the sale.

'Draw near, gentlemen! draw near!' cried Harris; the hour of sale is arrived: a positive sale and no proviso, cash down, or no sale at all!' A general laugh succeeded the introduction of the auctioneer.

'Come up here my lad!' continued he, wielding a long red cowhide; 'mount this block, stand beside me, an' let's see which is the best looking man! We have met before, but I never had the pleasure of introducing you. Gentlemen one and all, I take pleasure in introducing to you Henry—pardon me sir—Mr. Henry Holland, I believe—am I right sir?—Mr. Henry Holland, a good looking feller you will admit.

'I am offered one thousand dollars; one thousand dollars for the best looking negro in all Mississippi! If all the negro boys in the state was as good looking as him, I'd give two thousand dollars for 'em all my-self!' This caused another laugh. 'Who'll give me one thousand five—'

Just then a shower of rain came on.

'Gentlemen!' exclaimed the auctioneer; 'without a place can be obtained large enough to shelter the people here assembled, the sale will have to be postponed. This is a proviso we could'nt foresee, an' therefore is not responsible for it.' There was another hearty laugh.

A whisper went through the crowd, when presently a gentleman came forward saying, that those concerned had kindly tendered the use of the church which stood near by, in which to continue the sale.

'Here we are again, gentlemen! Who bids five hundred more for the likely negro feller? I am offered fifteen hundred dollars for the finest negro servant in the state! Come my boy bestir yourself an' dont stan' there like a statute; cant you give us a jig? whistle us a song! I forgot, the negro feller is religious; by the by, an excellent recommendation gentlemen. Perhaps he'll give us a sermon. Say, git up there old feller, an' hold forth. Cant you give us a sermon on Abolition? I'm only offered fifteen hundred dollars for the likely negro boy! Fifteen, sixteen hundred dollars, seventeen hundred, just agoing at—eighteen, eighteen, nineteen hundred, nineteen, nineteen! Just agoing at nineteen hundred dollars for the best body servant in the state; just agoing at nineteen and without a better bid I'll—going! going! go—!'

Just at this point a note was passed up the aisle to the auctioneer, who after reading it said:

'Gentlemen! circumstances beyond my control, makes it necessary that the sale be postponed until one day next week; the time of continuance will be duly announced!' when bowing he left the stand.

'That's another proviso not in the original bill!' exclaimed a voice as the auctioneer left the stand, at which there were peals of laughter.

To secure himself against contingency, Harris immediately delivered Henry over to Franks.

There were present at the sale, Crow, Slider, Walker, Borbridge, Simpson, Hurst, Spangler and Williams, all noted slave traders, eager to purchase, some on their return home, and some with their gangs en route for the southern markets.

The note handed to the auctioneer read thus:

'CAPT. HARRIS:—Having learned that there are private individuals at the sale, who design purchasing my negro man Harry, for his own personal advantage, you will peremptorily postpone the sale—making such apology as the occasion demands—and effect a private sale with Richard Crow, Esq., who offers me two thousand dollars for him. Let the boy return to me. Believe me to be,

Very Respectfully,
STEPHEN FRANKS.

Capt. John Harris.
Natchez, Nov. 29th, 1852.'

'Now sir,' said Franks to Henry, who had barely reached the house from the auction block; 'take this pass and go to Jackson and Woodville, or any where else you wish to see your friends, so that you be back against Monday noon. I ordered a postponement of the sale, thinking that I would try you awhile longer, as I never had cause before to part with you. Now see if you can't be a better boy!'

Eagerly taking the note, thanking him with a low bow, turning away, Henry opened the paper which read:

'Permit the bearer my boy Henry, sometimes calling himself Henry Holland—a kind of negro pride he has—to pass and repass wherever he wants to go, he behaving himself properly.

STEPHEN FRANKS.

To all whom it may concern.
Natchez, Nov. 29th, 1852.'

Carefully depositing the charte volante in his pocket wallet, Henry quietly entered the hut of mammy Judy and daddy Joe.

CHAPTER IX.

THE RUNAWAY.

'De Laud's good—bless 'is name!' exclaimed mammy Judy, wringing her hands as Henry entered the hut; 'he hears de pra'rs ob 'is chilen. Yeh hab reason to tang God yeh is here dis day!'

'Yes Henry, see wat de Laud's done fer yeh. Tis true's I's hear dis day! Tang God fer dat!' added daddy Joe.

'I think,' replied he after listening with patience to the old people; 'I have reason to thank our Ailcey and Van Winter's Biddy; they, it seems to me should have some credit in the matter.'

'Sho boy, g'long whar yeh gwine! Yo backsliding, gwine git yeh in trouble g'in I reckon?' replied mammy Judy.

Having heard the conversation between her mistress and Henry, Ailcey as a secret, informed Van Winter's Derba, who informed her fellow servant Biddy, who imparted it to her acquaintance Nelly the slave of esquire Potter, Nelly informing her mistress, who told the 'Squire, who led Franks into the secret of the whole matter.

'Mus'n blame me, Henry!' said Ailcey in an undertone; 'I did'n mean de wite folks to know wat I tole Derba, nor she di'n mean it nuther, but dat devil, Potteh's Nell! us gals mean de fus time we ketch 'er out, to duck 'er in de riveh! She's rale wite folk's nigga, dat's jis' wat she is. Neveh mine, we'll ketch 'er yit!'

'I dont blame you Ailcey, nor either of Mrs. Van Winter's girls, as I know that you are my friends, neither of whom would do anything knowingly to injure me. I know Ailcey that you are a good girl, and believe you would tell me—'

'Yes Henry, I is yo' fren' an' come to tell yeh now wat de wite folks goin' to do.'

'What is it Ailcey; what do you know?'

'Wy dat ugly ole devil Dick Crow—God for gim me! but I hates 'im so, case he nothin' but po' wite man, no how—I knows im; he comes from Fagina an—'

'Never mind his origin, Ailcey, tell me what you know concerning his visit in the house.'

'I is goin' to, but de ugly ole devil, I hates 'im so! Maus Stephen had 'im in de parla, an' he sole yeh to 'im, dat ugly ole po' wite devil, for—God knows how much—a hole heap a money; "two" somethin'.'

'I know what it was—two thousand dollars—for that was his selling price to Jack Harris.'

'Yes, dat was de sum, Henry.'

'I am satisfied as to how much he can be relied on. Even was I to take the advice of the old people here, and become reconciled to drag out a miserable life of degradation and bondage under them, I would not be permitted to do so by this man, who seeks every opportunity to crush out my lingering manhood, and reduce my free spirit to the submission of a slave. He cannot do it; I will not submit to it, and I defy his power to make me submit.'

'Laus a messy, Henry, yeh free man! how cum yeh not tell me long'o? Sho boy, betteh go long whar yeh gwine, out yondeh, an' not fool long wid wite folks!' said mammy Judy with surprise, 'wat brings yeh hear anyhow?'

'That's best known to myself, mammy.'

'Wat make yeh keep hear so long den, dat yeh ain' gone fo' dis?'

"Your questions become rather pressing mammy; I cant tell you that either.'

'Laud, Laud, Laud! So yeh free ma Well, well, well!'

'Once for all, I now tell you old people, what I never told you before, nor never expected to tell you under such circumstances; that I never intend to serve any white man again. I'll die first.'

'De Laud a' messy on my po' soul! An' how cum yeh not gone befo'?'

'Carrying out the principles and advice of you old people; "standing still to see the salvation." But with me, "now is the accepted time, to-day is the day of salvation."'

'Well, well, well!' sighed mammy Judy.

'I am satisfied that I am sold, and the wretch who did it, seeks to conceal his perfidy by deception. Now if ever you old people did anything in your lives, you must do it now.'

'Wat dat yeh want wid us?'

'Why, if you'll go, I'll take you on Saturday night, and make our escape to a free country.'

'Wat place yeh call dat?'

'Canada!' replied Henry, with emotion.

'How far yeh gwine take me?' earnestly enquired the old woman.

'I cant just now tell the distance, probably some two or three thousand miles from here, the way we'd have to go.'

'De Laus a messy on me! an' wat yeh gwine do wid little Joe; ain gwine leave 'im behine?'

'No, mammy Judy, I'd bury him in the bottom of the river first! I intend carrying him in a bundle on my back, as the Indians carry their babies.'

'Wat yeh gwine do for money; yeh ain' gwine rob folks on de road?'

'No mammy, I'll starve first. Have you and daddy Joe saved nothing from your black-eye peas and poultry selling for many years?'

'Ole man, how much in dat pot undeh de flo' dar; how long since yeh count it?'

'Don'o,' replied daddy Joe, 'las' time I count it, de was faughty guinea* or sich a mautter, an' I put in some six-seven guinea mo' since dat.'

'Then you have some two hundred and fifty dollars in money?'

'Dat do you?' enquired mammy Judy.

'Yes, that of itself is enough, but—'

'Den take it an' go long whar yeh gwine; we ole folks too ole for gwine headlong out yondeh an' don'o whar we gwine. Sho boy! take de money an g' long!' decisively replied the old woman after her inquisitiveness.

'If you dont know, I do mammy, and that will answer for all.'

'Dat ain' gwine do us. We ole folks ain' politishon an' undehstan' de graumma ob dese places, an' wen we git dar den may be do'n like it an can' git back. Sho chile, go long whar yeh gwine!'

'What do you say, daddy Joe? Whatever you have to say must be said quick, as the time with me is precious'

'We is too ole dis time a-day chile, t'go way out yondeh de Laud knows whar; betteh whar we is.'

'You'll not be too old to go if these whites once take a notion to sell you. What will you do then?'

'Trus' to de Laud!'

'Yes, the same old slave song—"Trust to the Lord." Then I must go, and—'

'Ain' yeh gwine take de money Henry?' interrupted the old woman.

'No mammy, since you will not go, I leave it for you and daddy Joe, as you may yet have use for it, or those may desire to use it, who better understand what use to make of it than you and daddy Joe seem willing to be instructed in.'

'Den yeh 'ont have de money?'

'I thank you and daddy most kindly, mammy Judy, for your offer, and only refuse because I have two hundred guineas about me.'

'Sho boy, yeh got all dat, yeh no call to want dat little we got. Whar yeh git all dat money? Do'n reckon yeh gwine tell me! Did'n steal from maus Stephen, I do'n reckon?'

'No Mammy, I'm incapable of stealing from any one; but I have from time to time, taken by littles, some of the earnings due me for more than eighteen years' service to this man Franks, which at the low rate of two hundred dollars a year, would amount to sixteen hundred dollars more than I secured, exclusive of the interest, which would have more than supplied my clothing, to say nothing of the injury done me by degrading me as a slave. "Steal" indeed! I would that when I had an opportunity, I had taken fifty thousand instead of two. I am to understand you old people as positively declining to go, am I?'

'Wat dat yeh mean, dat "cline" so!'

'Oh! by "decline," I mean wont go.'

'No, no, chile, we can' go? We put our trus' in de Laud, he bring us out mo' ner konker.'

'Then from this time hence, I become a runaway. Take care of my poor boy while he's with you. When I leave the swamps, or where I'll go, will never be known to you. Should my boy be suddenly missed, and you find three notches cut in the bark of the big willow tree, on the side away from your hut, then give yourself no uneasiness; but if you dont find these notches in the tree, then I know nothing about him. Good bye!' and Henry strode directly for the road to Woodville.

'Fahwell my son, fahwell, an' may God a'mighty go wid you! May de Laud guide an' 'tect yeh on de way!'

The child, contrary to his custom, commenced crying asking to see 'mamma Maggie and dadda Henry.' Every effort to quiet him was unavailing. This brought sorrow to the old people's hearts and tears to their eyes, which they endeavoured to soothe in a touching lamentation:

> 'See wives and husbands torn apart,
> Their children's screams, they grieve my heart!
> They are torn away to Georgia!
> Come and go along with me—
> They are torn to Georgia
> Go sound the Jubilee;'

CHAPTER X.

MERRY MAKING.

The day is Saturday, a part of which is given by many liberal masters to their slaves, the afternoon being spent as a holiday, or in vending such little marketable commodities as they might by chance possess.

As a token of gratitude for acts of generosity, it is customary in many parts of the South for slaves to invite their masters to their entertainments. This evening presented such an occasion, on the premises of Colonel Stephen Franks.

This day mammy Judy was extremely busy, for in addition to the responsibility of the culinary department, there was her calico habit to be done up—as she would not let Potter's Milly look any better than herself—and an old suit of the young master George's clothes had to be patched and darned a little before little Joe could favorably compare with Craig's Sooky's little Dick. And the cast off linen given to her husband for the occasion might require a 'little doing up.'

'Wat missus sen' dis shirt hear wid de bres all full dis debilment an' nonsense for?' said mammy Judy, holding up the garment, looking at the ruffles: 'sho! missus mus' be crack, sen' dis hear. Ole man ain' gwine sen' he soul to de ole boy, puttin' on dis debilment!' and she hastened away with the shirt, stating to her mistress her religious objections. Mrs. Franks smiled as she took the garment, telling her that the objections could be easily removed by taking off the ruffles.

'Dat look sumphen like!' remarked the old woman, when Ailcey handed her the shirt with the ruffles removed. 'Sen' dat debilment an' nonsense hear! sho!' and carrying it away smiling, she laid it upon the bed.

The feast of the evening was such as mammy Judy was capable of preparing when in her best humour, consisting of all the delicacies usually served up on the occasion of corn huskings in the grain growing region.

Conscious that he was not entitled to their gratitude, Colonel Franks declined to honor the entertainment, though the invitation was a ruse to deceive him, as he had attempted to deceive them.

The evening brought with it much of life's variety, as may be seen among the slave population of the South. There were Potter's slaves, and the people of Mrs. Van Winter, also those of Major Craig, and Dr. Denny, all dressed neatly, and seemingly very happy.

Ailcey was quite the pride of the evening, in an old gauze orange dress of her mistress, and felt that she deserved to be well thought of, as proving herself the friend of Henry, the son-in-law of daddy Joe and mammy Judy, the heads of the entertainment. Mammy Judy and Potter's Milly were both looking matronly in their calico gowns and towlinen aprons, and daddy Joe was the honored and observed of the party, in an old black suit of his master, with an abundance of surplus.

'Hep' yeh se'f chilen!' said mammy Judy, after the table had been blessed by daddy Joe: 'Henry ain' gwine be hear, he gone to Woodville or some whar dar, kick'n up 'e heel. Come chilen eat harty, mo' whar dis come from. He'p yeh se'f, now do'n—'

'I is aun Judy; I likes dis hear kine a witals!' drawled out Potter's Nelse, reaching over for the fifth or sixth time; 'dis am good shaut cake!'

'O mammy, look at Jilson!' exclaimed Ailcey, as a huge, rough field hand—who refused to go to the table with the company, but sat sulkily by himself in one corner—was just walking away, with two whole 'cakes' of bread under his arm.

'Wat yeh gwine do wid dat bread Jilson?' enquired the old woman.

'I gwine eat it, dat wat I gwine do wid it! I ain' had no weat bread dis two hauvest!' he having come from Virginia, where such articles of food on harvest occasion were generally allowed the slave.

'Big hog, so he is!' rebukingly said Ailcey, when she saw that Jilson was determined in his purpose.

'Neveh mine dat chilen, plenty mo!' responded mammy Judy.

'Ole umin, dat chile in de way dar; de gals hardly turn roun,' suggested daddy Joe, on seeing the pallet of little Joe crowded upon as the girls were leaving the table, seating themselves around the room.

'Ailcey my chile, jes' run up to de hut wid 'im, 'an lay 'im in de bed; of yeh feard, Van Winteh' Ben go wid yeh; I knows 'e likes to go wid de gals,' said mammy Judy.

Taking up his hat with a bland smile, Ben obeyed orders without a demur.

The entertainment was held at the extreme end of a two acre lot in the old slave quarters, while the hut of mammy Judy was near the great house. Ailcey thought she espied a person retreat into the shrubbery, and startled as she went to the back door of the hut, but Ben hooted at the idea of any person being out and about on such an occasion, except indeed it was Jilson with his bread. The child being carefully placed in bed, Ailcey and her protector were soon again mingled with the merry slaves.

There were three persons generally quite prominent among the slaves of the neighborhood, missed on this occasion; Frank's Charles, Denny's Sam, and Potter's Andy; Sam being confined to bed by sickness.

'Ailcey, whar's Chaules—how cum he not hear?' enquired mammy Judy.

'Endeed, I don'o mammy.'

'How cum Potteh's Andy ain' hear nudder?'

'Andy a' home to-night,' aun' Judy, an' I don' o whar 'e is,' replied Winny.

'Gone head-long out yondeh, arteh no good, I don' reckon, an' Chaules 'e gone dar too,' replied the old woman.

'De ain' nothin' matteh wid dis crowd aun' Judy!' complimented Nelse as he sat beside Derba. At this expression mammy Judy gave a deep sigh, on the thought of her absent daughter.

'Come chilen!' suggested mammy Judy; 'yeh all eat mighty harty, an' been mighty merry, an' 'joy yehse'f much; we now sing praise to de Laud for wat 'e done for us,' raising a hymn in which all earnestly joined:

> 'Oh! Jesus, Jesus is my friend.
> He'll be my helper to the end,' etc.

'Young folks yeh all betteh git ready now an' go, fo' de patrolles come out. Yeh all 'joy yeh se'f much, now time yeh gone. Hope yeh all sarv God Sunday. Ole man fo' de all gone, hab word ob prar,' advised the old woman; the following being sung in conclusion:

> 'The Lord is here, and the Lord is all around us;
> Canaan, Canaan's a very happy home—
> O, glory! O, glory! O, glory! God is here!

when the gathering dispersed, the slaves going cheerfully to their homes.

'Come ole man, yeh got match? light sum dem shavens dar, quick! I can' fine de chile hear on dis bed!' said mammy Judy, on entering the hut and feeling about in the dark for little Joe. 'Ailcey, wat yeh done wid de chile?'

'E's dar, mammy Judy; I lain 'im on de bed, I spose 'e roll off.'

The shavings being lit, there was no child to be found.

'My Laud, ole man! whar's de chile? Wat dis mean? O, whar's my po' chile gone; my po' baby!' exclaimed mammy Judy, wringing her hands in distress.

'Stay, ole 'umin! de tree! de tree!' when going out in the dark, feeling the trunk of the willow, three notches in the bark were distinct to the touch.

'Ole 'umin!' exclaimed daddy Joe in a suppressed voice, hastening into the hut; 'it am he, it am Henry got 'im!'

'Tang God, den my po' baby safe!' responded mammy Judy, when they raised their voices in praise of thankfulness:

> 'O, who's like Jesus!
> Hallelujah! praise ye the Lord;
> O, who's like Jesus!
> Hallelujah! love and serve the Lord!

Falling upon their knees, the old man offered an earnest, heartfelt prayer to God, asking his guardianship through the night, and protection through the day, especially upon their heart-broken daughter, their runaway son-in-law and little grandson, when the two old people retired to rest with spirits mingled with joy, sorrow, hope and fear; Ailcey going into the great house.

CHAPTER XI.

A SHADOW.

'Ah, boys! here you are, true to your promise,' said Henry, as he entered a covert in the thicket adjacent the cotton place, late on Sunday evening; 'have you been waiting long?'

'Not very,' replied Andy; 'not mo' den two-three hours.'

'I was fearful you would not come, or if you did before me that you would grow weary, and leave.'

'Yeh no call to doubt us Henry, case yeh fine us true as ole steel!'

'I know it,' answered he; 'but you know Andy, that when a slave is once sold at auction, all respect for him—'

'O pshaw! we ain' goin' to hear nothin' like dat a tall! case—'

'No!' interrupted Charles; 'all you got to do Henry, is to tell we boys what you want, an' we're your men.'

'That's the talk for me!'

'Well, what you doin' here?' enquired Charles.

'W'at brought yeh back from Jackson so soon?' farther enquired Andy.

'How did you get word to meet me here?' asked Henry.

'By Ailcey; she give me the stone, an' I give it to Andy, an' we both sent one apiece back. Did'nt you git 'em?'

'Yes, that's the way I knew you intended to meet me,' replied he.

'So we thought,' said Charles; 'but tell us Henry, what you want us to do.'

'I suppose you know all about the sale, that they had me on the auction block, but ordered a postponement, and—

'That's the very pint we cant understand, although I'm in the same family with you,' interrupted Charles.

'But tell us Henry, what yeh doin' here?' impatiently enquired Andy.

'Yes, added Charles, 'we want to know.'

'Well, I'm a runaway, and from this time forth, I swear—I do it religiously—that I'll never again serve any white man living!'

'That's the pint I wanted to git at before,' explained Charles; 'as I cant understan' why you run away, after your release from Jack Harris, an'—'

'Nor I, nuther!' interrupted Andy.

'It seems to me,' continued Charles; 'that I'd 'ave went before they 'tempted to sell me, an' that you're safer now than before they had you on the block.'

'Dat's de way I look at it,' responded Andy.

'The stopping of the sale was to deceive his wife, mammy, and daddy Joe, as he had privately disposed of me to a regular soul-driver by the name of Crow.'

'I knows Dick Crow,' said Andy; ''e come f'om Faginy, whar I did, de same town.'

'So Ailcey said of him. Then you know him without any description from me,' replied Henry.

'Yes 'n deed! an' I knows 'im to be a inhuman, mean, dead-po' w'ite man, dat's wat I does!'

'Well, I was privately sold to him for two thousand dollars, then ordered back to Franks, as though I was still his slave, and by him given a pass, and required to go to Woodville where there were arrangements to seize me and hold me, till Crow ordered me, which was to have been on Tuesday evening. Crow is not aware of my having been given a pass; Franks gave it to deceive his wife; in case of my not returning, to make the impression that I had run away, when in reality I was sold to the trader.'

'Then our people had their merry-making all for nothin',' said Charles; 'an' Franks got what 'e didn't deserve—their praise.'

'No, the merry-making was only to deceive Franks, that I might have time to get away. Daddy Joe, mammy Judy, and Ailcey, knew all about it, and proposed the feast to deceive him.'

'Dat's good! sarve 'im right, de 'sarned ole scamp!' rejoined Andy.

'It could'nt be better!' responded Charles.

'Henry I wish we was in yo' place an' you none de wus by it,' said Andy.

'Never mind, boys, give yourselves no uneasiness, as it wont be long before we'll all be together,

'You think so, Henry?' asked Charles.

'Well I hope so, but den body can hardly 'spect it,' responded Andy.

'Boys,' said Henry, with great caution, and much emotion; 'I am now about to approach an important subject, and as I have always found you true to me—and you can only be true to me by being true to yourselves—I shall not hesitate to im*part it! But for Heaven's sake!*—perhaps I had better not!'

'Keep nothin' back, Henry,' said Charles; 'as you know that we boys 'll die by our principles, that's settled!'

'Yes, I wants to die right now by mine; right hear, now!' sanctioned Andy.

'Well it is this—close boys! close!' when they gathered in a huddle beneath an underbrush, upon their knees: 'you both go with me, but not now. I—'

'Why not now?' anxiously enquired Charles

'Dat's wat I likes to know!' responded Andy.

'Stop boys, till I explain. The plans are mine and you must allow me to know more about them than you. Just here, for once, the slave-holding preacher's advice to the black man is appropriate—"Stand still and see the salvation."'

'Then let us hear it, Henry,' asked Charles.

'For God's sake!' said Andy, 'let us hear w'at it is, anyhow, Henry; yeh keeps a body in 'spence so long, till I's mose crazy to hear it. Dat's no way!'

'You shall have it, but I approach it with caution! Nay, with fear and trembling, at the thought of what has been the fate of all previous matters of this kind. I approach it with religious fear, and hardly think us fit for the task; at least, I know I am not. But as no one has ever originated, or given us any thing of the kind, I suppose I may venture.'

'Tell it! tell it!' urged both in a whisper.

'Andy,' said Henry, 'let us have a word of prayer first!' when they bowed low, with their heads to the ground, Andy, who was a preacher of the Baptist persuasion among his slave brethren, offering a solemn and affecting prayer, in whispers to the Most High, to give them knowledge and courage in the undertaking, and success in the effort.

Rising from their knees, Andy commenced an anthem, by which he appeared to be much affected, in the following words:

> 'About our future destiny,
> There need be none debate—
> Whilst we ride on the tide,
> With our Captain and his mate.'

Clasping each other by the hands, standing in a band together, as a plight of their union and fidelity to each other, Henry said—

'I now impart to you the secret—it is this: I have laid a scheme, and matured a plan for a general insurrection of the slaves in every State, and the successful overthrow of slavery!'

'Amen!' exclaimed Charles.

'God grant it!' responded Andy.

'Tell us, Henry, how's dis to be carried out?' enquired Andy.

'That's the thing which most concerns me, as it seems that it would be hard to do in the present ignorant state of our people in the slave States,' replied Charles.

'Dat's jis wat I fear!' said Andy.

'This difficulty is obviated. It is so simple that the most stupid among the slaves will understand it as well as if he had been instructed for a year.'

'What!' exclaimed Charles.

'Let's hear dat aghin!' asked Andy.

'It is so, just as I told you! So simple is it that the trees of the forest or an orchard illustrate it; flocks of birds or domestic cattle, fields of corn hemp or sugar cane; tobacco rice or cotton, the whistling of the wind, rustling of the leaves, flashing of lightning, roaring of thunder, and running of streams all keep it constantly before their eyes and in their memory, so that they cannot forget it if they would.'

'Are we to know it now?' enquired Charles.

'I'm boun' to know it dis night befo' I goes home, 'case I been longin' for ole Potteh dis many day, an' I got 'im now!'

---

* Guinea—among slaves, a five dollar gold piece.

'Yes boys, you've to know it before we part, but—'

'That's the talk!' said Charles.

'Good nuff talk for me!' responded Andy.

'As I was about to say, such is the character of this organization, that punishment and misery are made instruments for its propagation, so—'

'I cant understan' that part—'

'You know nothing at all about it Charles, and you must—'

'Stan' still an' see de salvation!' interrupted Andy.

'Amen!' responded Charles.

'God help you so to do, brethren!' admonished Henry.

'Go on Henry tell us! give it to us!' they urged.

'Every blow you receive from the oppressor impresses the organization upon your mind, making it so clear that even Whitehead's Jack could under tand it as well as his master.'

'We are satisfied! The secret, the secret!' they importuned.

'Well then, first to prayer, and then to the organization. Andy!' said Henry, nodding to him, when they again bowed low with their heads to the ground, whilst each breathed a silent prayer, which was ended with 'Amen' by Andy.

Whilst yet upon their knees, Henry imparted to them the secrets of his organization.

'O, dat's de thing!' exclaimed Andy.

'Capital, capital!' responded Charles; 'what fools we was that we did'nt know it long ago!'

'I is mad wid myse'f now!' said Andy.

'Well, well, well! Surely God must be in the work,' continued Charles.

'Es hear; Heaven's nigh! I feels it! it's right hear!'-responded Andy, placing his hand upon his chest, the tears trickling down his cheeks.

'Brethren,' asked Henry; 'do you understand it?'

'Understand it? Why a child could understand, it's so easy!' replied Charles.

'Yes,' added Andy, 'I not only undehstan' myse'f, but wid de knowl dge I has uv it, I could make Whitehead's Jack a Moses!'

'Stand still, then, and see!' said he.

'Dat's good Bible talk!' responded Andy.

'Well, what is we to do?' enquired Charles.

'You must now go on and organize continually. It makes no difference when, nor where you are, so that the slaves are true and trustworthy, as the scheme is adapted to all times and places.'

'How we gwine do Henry, 'bout gittin' de things 'mong de boys?' enquired Andy.

'All you have to do, is to find one good man or woman—I dont care which, so that they prove to be the right person—on a single plantation, and hold a seclusion and impart the secret to them, and make them the organizers for their own plantation, and they in like manner impart it to some other next to them, and so on. In this way it will spread like smallpox among them.'

'Henry, you is fit for leadeh I see,' complimentingly said Andy.

'I greatly mistrust myself, brethren, but if I cant command, I can at least plan.'

'Is they anything else for us to do, Henry?' enquired Charles.

'Yes, a very important part of your duties has yet to be stated. I now go as a runaway, and will be suspected of lurking about in the thickets, swamps and caves; then to make the ruse complete, just as often as you think it necessary to make a good impression, you must kill a shoat, take a lamb, pig, turkey, goose, chickens, ham of bacon from the smoke house, a loaf of bread or crock of butter from the spring house, and throw them down into the old waste well at the back of the old quarters, always leaving the heads of the fowls lying about and the blood of the larger animals. Everything that is missed do not hesitate to lay it upon me, as a runaway, it will cause them to have the less suspicion of your having such a design.'

'That's it—the very thing!' said Charles, 'an it so happens that they's an ole waste well on both Franks and Potter's places; one for both of us.'

'I hope Andy, you have no religious objections to this?'

'It's a paut uv my 'ligion Henry, to do whateveh I bleve right, an' shall sholy do dis, God being my helpeh!'

'Now he's talkin'!' said Charles.

'You must make your religion subserve your interests, as your oppressors do theirs!' advised Henry. 'They use the Scriptures to make you submit, by preaching to you the texts of obedience to your masters and "standing still to see the salvation," and we must now begin to understand the Bible so as to make it of interest to us.'

'Dat's gospel talk'! sanctioned Andy. 'Is da anything else yeh wants tell us boss—I calls 'im boss, 'case 'e aint nothing else but "boss"—so we can make 'ase an' git to wuck? 'case I feels like goin' at 'em now, me!'

'Having accomplished our object, I think I have done, and must leave you tomorrow.'

'When shall we hear from you Henry?' enquired Charles.

Not until you shall see me again; when that will be, I dont know. You may see me in six months, and might not in eighteen. I am determined, now that I am driven to it, to complete an organization in every slave state before I return, and have fixed two years as my utmost limit.'

'Henry, tell me before we part, do you know anything about little Joe?' enquired Charles.

'I do!'

'Whar's de chile!' enquired Andy.

'He's safe enough, on his way to Canada!' at which Charles and Andy laughed.

'Little Joe on 'is way to Canada!' said Andy; 'mighty young traveleh!'

'Yes,' replied Henry with a smile.

'You're a joking Henry?' said Charles enquiringly.

'I am serious, brethren,' replied he, 'I do not joke in matters of this kind. I smiled because of Andy's surprise.'

'How did 'e go?' farther enquired Andy.

'In company with his "mother" who was waiting on her "mistress!" replied he quaintly.

'Eh heh!' exclaimed Andy, 'I knows all 'bout it now; but whar'd de "mammy" come f'om?'

'I found one!'

'Aint 'e high!' said Andy.

'Well brethren, my time is drawing to a close,' said Henry, rising to his feet.

'O!' exclaimed Andy, 'I like to forgot; has yeh any money Henry?'

'Have either of you any?'

'We has?'

'How much?'

'I got two—three hundred dollahs!' replied Andy.

'An' so has I, Henry!' added Charles.

'Then keep it, as I have two thousand dollars now around my waist, and you'll find use for all you've got, and more, as you will before long have an opportunity of testing. Keep this studiously in mind and impress it as an important part of the scheme of organization, that they must have money, if they want to get free. Money will obtain them every thing necessary by which to obtain their liberty. The money is within all their reach if they only knew it was right to take it. God told the Egyptian slaves to "borrow from their neighbors"—meaning their oppressors—"all their jewels;" meaning to take their money and wealth wherever they could lay hands upon it, and depart from Egypt. So you must teach them to take all the money they can get from their masters, to enable them to make the strike without a failure. I'll show you when we leave for the North, what money will do for you, right here in Mississippi. Bear this in mind; it is your certain passport through the white gap, as I term it.'

'I means to take all I can git; I bin doin' dat dis some time. Ev'ry time ole Potteh leave 'is money pus, I borrys some, an' 'e all'as lay it on Miss Mary; but 'e think so much uv hur, dat anything she do is right wid 'im. Ef 'e 'spected me, an' Miss Mary say 'twant me, dat would be 'nough for 'im.'

'That's right!' said Henry; 'I see you have been putting your own interpretation on the Scriptures, Andy, and as Charles will now have to take my place, he'll have still a much better opportunity than you, to "borrow from his master."'

'You need'nt fear, I'll make good use of my time!' replied Charles.

The slaves now fell upon their knees in silent communion, all being affected to the shedding of tears, a period being put to their devotion by a sorrowful trembling of Henry's voice singing to the following touching words:

'Farewell, farewell, farewell!
My loving friends farewell!
Farewell old comrades in the cause,
I leave you here, and journey on;
And if I never more return,
Farewell, I'm bound to meet you there!'

'One word before we part,' said Charles. 'If we never should see you again, I suppose you intend to push on this scheme?'

'Yes!

Insurrection shall be my theme!
My watchword "Freedom or the grave!"
Until from Rappahanock's stream,
To where the Cuato * waters lave,
One simultaneous war cry
Shall burst upon the midnight air!
And rouse the tyrant but to sigh—
Mid sadness, wailing, and despair!'

Grasping each eagerly by the hand, the tears gushing from his eyes, with an humble bow, he bid them finally 'farewell!' and the runaway was off through the forest.

---

* A river in Cuba.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 30, 1861.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

What shall be done with the Freedmen?

We feel guilty, to a certain extent, of pro-slavery leanings, in the mere discussion of this question; for we tacitly admit in such discussion that three or four millions of men set free from chattel slavery, will require some care or protection on the part of their liberators. This is false in theory, and is falsified by experience. It is false in theory because the assertion that they ought to be set free contains the assumption that they are fit for all the responsibilities of freedmen. And the history of emancipation in British West Indies (see ANGLO AFRICAN MAGAZINE, p.p. 151,) abundantly proves that once set free, negro slaves require no special government, or other protection, in order to advance themselves, and to promote the material welfare of the community in which they live. They simply required that the laws should regard and treat them as it regarded and treated other free men. The results were that society righted itself, and required no political, or other quackery, to restore it to a normal condition.

This matter is so well set forth by one of our own orators that we cannot forbear quoting:

"One word as to the propriety of calling West India Emancipation an experiment. I take it that this is one of the tricks of slavery, and is of a piece with the character of their fraudulent business. There is obviously no more reason for calling West India Emancipation an experiment, than for calling the law of gravitation an experiment. Liberty is not a device, an experiment, but a law of nature, dating back to man's creation, and if this fundamental law is a failure, then the responsibility is not with the British Parliament, not with the British people, but with the Great Author of this law. Slavery is the experiment in this case. God made man upright, but man has sought out many inventions, and slavery is one of them. It is an experiment by which men seek to live without labor, to eat bread by the sweat of another man's brow, to get gold without digging it, and to become rich without using ones faculties and powers to obtain riches. This is the real experiment. But in answer to the charge that West India Emancipation is a failure, I frankly admit that in some respects it has failed. It has failed to keep slavery under the name of Liberty. It has failed to change the name without changing the character of the thing. The negroes have really been emancipated, and are no longer slaves. Emancipation has failed to keep negroes out of civil office; it has failed to keep them out of the jury-box; off the judge's bench, and out of the Colonial Legislature; for colored men have arisen to all these stations since emancipation. It has failed to keep the lands of Jamaica in the hands of a few, and out of the hands of the many. It has failed to make men work for a planter at small wages, when they can work for themselves at larger wages."—(Speech of Frederick Douglas, August 1st, 1858.

If the freedmen in Jamaica required no special protection from the British, neither will the freedmen of our Southern States require any special protection from the American government. The government has simply to act towards them as it will act towards the poor whites or non-slaveholders of the South; give them a fair and equal chance to occupy confiscated lands, or to seek employment as free laborers with those who may purchase these lands. In the reconstruction of the several state or territorial governments, let these slaves be counted each one as five-fifths of a citizen. They are quite as well prepared to vote as the poor whites are, if not a little better—give them the right of suffrage, under the clause of the Constitution of the United States which guarantees to each State a Republican form of government.

But will the Government do this thing? Will it by indirection elevate the slave in the slave States to the status of the free white man in the slave States? The question is just the other way. The poor whites of the slave States occupy a position lower than the slaves; they are slaves without masters. As producers, in matters of intelligence, of religion they rank greatly below the slaves, and have a harder fate in some regards; the poor wretches shivering in the fields bordering on the Potomac, in arms to seal forever their own degradation, are sunk to a level which the slaves can never reach.

Owing to a press of other matter we are obliged to defer the further prosecution of this subject until our next.

Letter from Washington.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 20, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:—Washington just now is full of strangers from the east, west, north, and a few from the south in the shape of contrabands. Everything and everybody have assumed a military aspect. Almost every man you meet appears to have something to do directly or indirectly with the army or navy, for almost every one has some part of a uniform on, and what is still more remarkable, everybody here is Union, if the badge is an evidence of it. Some few who were known a few months ago to be "secesh," now display large Union rosettes, which only serve as bait in the Government fish pond.

Sometimes we, the colored people, make a slight rejoicing over some army or naval victory, but verily I say unto you, we rejoice more over one poor downtrodden soul escaped from chains, than over the taking of ninety and nine cities; hence the proclamations of our Generals, after running off the white residents with shot and shell, and which should read thus: "I ——, General commanding, invite all good and loyal citizens to return and reclaim your slave property." Until such proclamations cease, we cannot look for a complete victory, for slavery is the cause of the war, and must be abolished before permanent peace can be established.

Your readers probably would like to know how the war affects the colored people of Washington. This being the seat of war all classes here are benefited by it. Five hundred men find employment each day in the Quartermaster's department, all of which number, instead of one-half, would have been colored, had they been found, as they are preferred as teamsters. Business of every kind for males has increased fully ten per cent. Numbers of our young men have taken officers' messes. Some have staff officers of the different commands. Others attend exclusively to the horses of the army officers. Large numbers find employment in our hotels, boarding-houses, and restaurants. Barbers and hackmen are doing a driving business, and the Northern Suttlers' establishments give work to any number as drivers, porters, assistant packers, and salesmen. Many are engaged at the railroad depot unloading and storing the immense amount of freight that daily arrives here from the North and West. Three or four thousand men are employed at cutting wood in Virginia around the different fortifications, and on the northern front of Washington. Laundresses are doing a fine business. They have the exclusive wash of entire regiments and the families of U. S. officers; also for the Hospital inmates. Many females are securing a comfortable livelihood by peddling little notions around the different camps. In a word, we are all doing well as far as employment is concerned. None need be idle.

Our churches and societies are also in a prosperous condition. The attendance is necessarily diminished from the large number of males off with the army in Virginia, Maryland and other Southern States.

The establishment of the Metropolitan police has made but very little difference with the colored people, as they manifest as much eagerness to carry out the obnoxious laws made by Maryland before the ceding of the district to the government. They, like the old Auxiliary Guards, arrest all persons of color who may be found out after dark without a pass from some responsible white person. I, with many others, hoped that when the government got control of the police department that we would receive better treatment, instead of which it is worse than heretofore. When the appointments were made by the Commissioners it happened that just such men were selected as hated to see the colored man live and were delighted with an opportunity to show their ill feeling toward the colored people. As an illustration I will give an occurrence of a few evenings ago. A Mr. Butler got up a ball after securing the usual permit from the Mayor. I will here say that under the old regulation after getting a permit, a policeman is detailed by the Captain of the Guard, who instructs him to call in several times at the place of entertainment, to see that order is preserved for which service he receives from the proprietor two dollars with a supply of refreshments and an opportunity to take a nap and display his ungentlemanly propensities. Since the establishment of the new police regulations, men detailed for such service are not allowed to take any pay. After the ball, of which I write, the policeman remained contending for his pay. Mr. Butler pointed him to the law which forbade him receiving any remuneration. He left swearing to get even with Mr. B. Mr. Butler keeps a bar on Pennsylvania Avenue, and is patronized by numerous friends. A few evenings ago a number of his patrons had assembled there, when this M. P. got wind of it, and accompanied by others entered and took the whole party prisoners. The next day Mr. B. was arraigned on the charge of selling liquor to negroes, and was fined $20 and costs. Each one of his customers, twenty-two in number, was fined $6 each.

Is the government justified in employing a set of men, as policemen, at an expense of $60,000, whose sole duty appears to be to harrass poor, inoffensive colored people? We have endured this treatment for a long time, but when the government administers it, we feel its severity increased tenfold. Notwithstanding the outrages perpetrated upon us, we still remain true and loyal citizens, paying regularly our annual property tax and obeying the laws.

Last Tuesday evening the St. Vincent and St. Paul (catholic) Colored Association gave a concert to assist in paying the expenses of repairing the basement of St. Mathew's Catholic Church, which is occupied by the colored portion of that congregation as a meeting room. Although the performances were not of the highest order, yet it was a pleasant affair. Miss Gray and Miss King of Georgetown bore off the palm, as usual.

BOX.

AMUSEMENTS,

A complimentary entertainment was given on Thursday evening, 21st inst., at the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms, Prince street.

As the evening was pleasant the effort was well repaid with cheerful numbers. When the evening had pretty well advanced, the company was called to order, and Mr. Jas. R. W. Leonard introduced to make a few remarks who arose and spoke substantially as follows;

He was somewhat surprised and embarrassed by the position in which he found himself so suddenly thrust, having had not the slightest expectation of being called upon to speak, but after all he esteemed it a great privilege to be permitted to testify his own humble approval of this most cheering sign of progress amongst the colored people exhibited in this humble testimonial of respect and gratitude toward the family of a distinguished public laborer in the public vineyard. He regarded this movement of infinitely more importance because it emanated from the young. Said he, "it appears to me that there has a new class of minds suddenly sprung up amongst us to elbow out and put to flight the old fogy element which has so long ruled our affairs to the detriment of our dearest interests. Can it be, that from his far off trans-atlantic fields of labor, the trumpet tones of his voice, coming o'er the ocean has rung out again upon the ears of that class whose chief interest was his care and whose prosperity his delight,—the young,—can it be that they have received the inspiration, and thus crown his effort with success. May we hope that it is so and that from this example we inaugurate an improved spirit and better practice."

After some further remarks, complimentary to the committee, the speaker alluded to the fitness of the demonstration toward Mrs. Garnet. Said he, "Socrates was blessed with his Xantippe; her peculiar qualifications were her capacities to scold and annoy him—but the sharper her tongue, the pleasanter his smile; for he was a philosopher, and used her faults to strengthen his patience and self-control; but Socrates has been dead some time, and with him died this philosophical disposition to experiment with our patience. Men look for the opposite traits in a wife; therefore, when you see a man going forth with a smiling countenance, grappling with calm power and success the stormy elements of public life, know that you see a man whose domestic relations are congenial and inspiring—his home the fountain of light and strength which adorns and revives like the river Euphrates.'

Mr. Leonard concluded by assuring Mrs. Garnet that he spoke the sentiments of all present, and hundreds whose privilege was not to be there when he said that the hearts of the people cherished his labors for their good, and that though far away he was near.

Mr. Titus followed in a most eloquent strain, and, in fact, made the oration of the evening.

Before retiring, Mrs. Garnet, supported by Mr. Leonard, addressed the young folks in acknowledgment of the compliment. It had been to her a great surprise. They had kept the matter secret from her until near the issue of the bills, and then she could hardly realize it.

At the conclusion of her remarks the young folks advanced, and affectionately embraced her.

The affair was extremely pleasant, and broke up at a late hour. Many looked wishfully at the music, but the rules were strict, and there was no dancing.

TYPES.

Letter from Newark.

NEWARK, Nov. 26, 1861.

MR. EDITOR: According to the recent celebrated speech of Col. John Cochrane, the comments thereupon by the Secretary of War, and the still more recent endorsement of the same by that wily old politician, Edwin Croswell, we see plainly that despite the haughty refusal of this Government to accept of proffered aid from the Northern blacks last summer, Providence is irresistibly forcing the President and his Cabinet into the development of measures in which the aid of our enslaved brethren south are about to be invoked. God speed the work! But will our brethern have meted out to them in the end, the same bitter pill that Gen. Jackson gave them after their invaluable aid in securing the victory at New Orleans and at Mobile?

Is it the destiny of our enslaved brothers to assist the Government not only in achieving still greater victories at Charleston, Savannah, and other places, but in the finale to dash to pieces, and grind to powder, the slavish chains which now bind all of us.

Last evening William Wells Brown, the celebrated lecturer, entertained a large audience in the Plane-street school-room, with a lecture on the history and present condition of Hayti, and the splendid inducements held out by the government of that island for colored agricultural and mechanical immigrants from this country. And I confess with unfeigned regret my inability to do the distinguished lecturer due justice, as regards the varied information he imparted to his very attentive listeners.

At the close a vote of thanks was passed unanimously.

SKIMMER.

The Spanish Outrage on Liberia.

In the December number of the Colonization Journal, we find letters from President Benson, Vice-President Warner, Hon. B. V. R. James, Mayor of Monrovia, and Gen. J. N. Lewis, in reference to the recent outrage by the Spanish. They all breathe a manly spirit, and inspire the friends of that growing republic with high hopes of a glorious future for it.

President Benson writes under date Sept. 26th:

Messrs. Johnson & Turpin will give you all the particulars respecting the conduct of the Spanish man-of-war, and certain Spaniards on the coast, said to be acting under the authority of the Governor-General of Fernando Po. Suffice it to say that the Quail so disabled the aggressor, the Spanish war-steamer, that she had to put into Sierra Leone for repairs. If we have wronged Spanish subjects in any way, we are willing to give satisfaction, to make prompt redress, when civilly applied to. But we will never be bullied into measures. And having travelled five thousand miles to secure the liberty we have in Liberia, we will die to a man, rather than permit the slave-trade to be forced upon us in our territory by any nation under the sun, because of their superior power.

We give Vice-President Warner's letter in full:

MONROVIA, Sept. 12, 1861.

REV. J. B. PINNEY—Dear Sir:—Some time in the month of June last, the Government had an occasion to despatch the Quail to Gallinas, to order away or to bring to trial, just as circumstances might require, a Spanish schooner, which had gone there for the purpose of purchasing slaves. She was found in the river, having discharged her cargo of goods, and bargained for her load of human beings. The officers of the Quail boarded her, with a view of bringing her to Monrovia, to be tried, either for violating our revenue law, or for buying slaves within our territory. But during the time of making preparations to carry into effect the order of Government, an English cruiser, the Torch, went into Gallinas for the purpose also of arresting the slaver, and did seize, and then set fire to and destroyed her; for which act, the Spanish Government became displeased, and ordered one of its armed vessels up here from Fernando Po, to chastise us; and yesterday, at twelve o'clock, the vessel came in, and, without asking any questions, or even visiting the shore, steamed alongside the Quail, and fired into her twice with grape and round shot. For endeavoring to suppress the slave-trade within our territory, we are first opposed by the natives, and then unceremoniously murdered by the Spaniards.

Great Britain, by an armed force, ought not to have been the first to throw into our face an indignity, by taking out of our harbor, last April, before trial, two English trading vessels, schooners, which had openly and willfully violated our revenue-law; and thus opened the door for the ingress of every species of insult and contumely that others chose to throw in upon us. Will stronger America and England remain dormant, and look on with indifference, while these outrages are being committed upon a weaker nation, by a barbarous people, against humanity and international justice? I think not. Liberia is the last place to which we can remove and be free, it being our legitimate home; and here we will stay, unless otherwise determined by Infinite Wisdom, until we die.

Very respectfully and truly yours,
D. B. WARNER.

The following is an extract from Mayor James' letter; after alluding to the taking and burning of a Liberian prize by an English man-of-war, an account of which has already appeared in our columns, Mr. James says:

We heard nothing more of this affair, until, about six weeks ago, the Mystic arrived here from Ferando Po, and gave the information that when the steamer left that place, there was fitting out a small steam gunboat by the Spanish Consul, for the purpose, he understood, of proceeding to Monrovia, to attack and destroy the Liberian schooner Quail. This information being confirmed by other communications received about this time, President Benson thought it necessary to make some preparations to receive the Spaniard, if he should think proper to carry into execution his threat. Accordingly, orders were given to have the cannon in Fort Norris, on Mesurado Height, mounted as soon as possible. Our men went to work with a will and by the first of September, eight of the heaviest pieces were mounted, and ready for effective service.

At 2 o'clock, P.M., on the 1st inst., just as the men who had been engaged on the works and keeping guard were assembling to hear preaching on the battery, a steamer to the south-west of the Cape hove in sight, and bore down upon the Cape, until she came near the south-west point. She showed no colors, which was the cause of much suspicion and many conjectures by our people; but she soon hauled up, and kept away to the N. N. W. She seemed to be a small schooner-rigged steamer, a propeller. Long before sundown, she was out of sight, and was no more seen or heard of until the 11th inst., when, about 11 o'clock A. M., a steamer about the same size and rig was signaled coming from the same direction, south-west; and in an hour or so she reached the harbor, displaying Spanish colors.

The second officer from the Quail boarded her, inquired her name and the name of her commander, to which inquiry he received no answer. Then Mr. Carney intimated, that he would like to know his business, as she seemed to be a man-of-war, etc. The captain replied that he was a Spanish man-of-war just from Sierra Leone, and had come to see the President; expected to stop two or three days; and asked the officer about the landing, etc. His questions were satisfactorily answered, and Mr. Carney, the officer, offered to accompany him to the shore. He said he was not ready then, but would come when he got ready. Mr. Carney left, and returned to his vessel.

The Spanish gunboat immediately steamed out of the harbor some distance, tacked about, and came back into the harbor, and came in between the bark Edwards, which was not lying far from the Quail, so as to be sheltered and protected by the Edwards. As soon as she got broadside on the Quail, she let go a charge of grape into the Quail. The professed peaceable intentions of the Spaniard had thrown the people on the Quail off their guard, and they were engaged in their various duties about the vessel as usual, suspecting no harm. When the Spaniard fired, Captain Benedict immediately ordered his men to the guns, which order was quickly obeyed; but before the Quail's guns were brought to bear upon her, the Spaniard gave them a round shot, accompanied with canister (neither of which did any harm.) By this time Captain Benedict was able to reply, and gave them two to one, two of his shots taking effect. The guns from the fort were also booming away. The Spaniard began to think, by this time, he was getting more than he had bargained for; up all sail, and made hot haste to get out to sea, which he succeeded in doing, and has not made his appearance since.

How this affair will terminate, I cannot say; no one knows. We have taken our first lesson; and I hope, by God's grace, we shall prove apt scholars.

General Lewis says:

About a month ago we received intelligence by the way of Cape Palmas, which came in one of the mail packets, that the Governor of the island of Fernando Po was fitting out a squadron to proceed to Monrovia, to capture or sink the Quail, and bombard the city. We could scarcely believe that a representative of a civilized nation would attempt any thing of the kind, before calling on our Government for explanation. Nevertheless it was determined to prepare for defence, and it was well that we did so. Fort Norris battery was put in a state of defence, and the Quail was made ready to resist aggression.

On the morning of the 11th September inst., a Spanish war-steamer came to anchor in our harbor, and was immediately boarded by an officer from the Quail, to tender to the Commander the usual civilities. The officer was politely received by the Spanish commander, who said that he would remain in port two or three days, as he intended to communicate with the President; and he requested to know the place of landing. The Quail's officer had returned to his vessel not more than half an hour, before the Spaniard got his vessel under weigh, and stood out to sea. The favorable report made by the officer of the Quail, which was immediately reported to the authorities on shore, had the effect of relieving us from immediate apprehensions, and therefore we were somewhat off our guard. The crew of the Quail was employed, not apprehending any disturbance from the Spaniard: [illegible] seems to have been the object aimed at by the Spaniard. He returned to the [illegible], rounded to, near the Quail, and fired into her. Commander Benedict, though taken by surprise, soon beat to quarters, and returned the shot with a good will. Fort Norris followed his example, and in a short time the Spaniard was compelled to make steam and sail, and put to sea with all haste.

We do not know what will be the ending of this matter with the Spaniards, but it is believed that the civilized world will condemn this act of theirs as being without a parallel in atrocity.

Capt John Brown, Jr.'s Men—A Speech of Col. Jennison.

Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.

CAMP JENNISON, KANSAS CITY,
Tuesday, Nov. 12, 1861.

To-night I have looked on scenes such as few months ago men would have been considered demented to have foretold. Capt. John Brown, Jr.'s Company of Sharpshooters arrived here this afternoon, having on reaching Fort Leavenworth, unanimously decided to join Col. Jennison's command. They will be attached as mounted riflemen. Some sixty men are here, under Lieuts. Bostwick and Hoyt. Capt. Brown is still in your city, finishing the recruiting, and will be on in a few days. It is by all odds the finest body of men I have seen, and as they marched up the main street, singing the "John Brown" song, the emotions and memories the scene excited crowded thickly on the mind of an old Kansas man like your correspondent, and were far too deep to be painted by words. As the song rung out, and the escort came to meet the new-comers, cheering lustily, there was something in the scene which will render it ineffaceable to my mind.

Stirring as was the reception of the company, it was surpassed by the scene that took place in camp after supper. The company came to the Colonel's quarters, and formed a semicircle in front. The field-officers came out, and then the "John Brown's" song by them was sung with glorious spirit. Afterwards cheers were given for the Colonel and officers generally. The bugler of the company then sung a new and very appropriate version of "Dixie," which I will send hereafter. Col. Jennison was called out and made a characteristic speech. I cannot give you more than a short synopsis thereof. It was as forcible, and couched in as strong Anglo-Saxon as the proclamation I forwarded you yesterday. Col. Jennison said; "Gentlemen and fellow-soldiers, I am not in the habit of public speaking, but will say that I never felt more like fighting than I have in the last fifteen minutes. Proud to welcome here Capt. Brown's New York Company, he would say that old John Brown was the only man in the United States in whom he took stock. He first took arms under him, and, when doing so, determined never to lay them down again until the last slave in the United States was free. The time for that was now come. This regiment was organized, not for political effect, but for fighting purposes and freedom. He meant to do for treason, and to kill Slavery at the same time. Here he would say, that if at any time the Government did not approve of such action, they could have his commission. But if that occurred, they would be likely to find him on his own hook though, as at first, he should have but six men with him. He felt that Capt. Brown's Company had honored him, his officers and regiment, by so unitedly voting to come into it. In his own name, and that of his officers and men, he returned them thanks.

He believed that everything would be done to insure mutual confidence, and wanted them to understand the programme. It was a standing order that any man bringing a rebel into camp should be put into irons. If the Colonel ever did so foolish a thing, he trusted the regiment would enforce the order. He meant to bring them out of their holes by necessitating their attendance on their families. He was ordered to guard through a government train, and, in doing so, proposed to make this country so safe that a lone widow might travel in safety. He wanted the rights of Union men respected. For rebels and their sympathizers, no temporizing. Be sure they are disloyal men, and then meet them promptly. For the half-way trash we have no room, and my test of loyalty is a willingness to fight for the Union. There can be no peace until the thing is settled, justice done to traitors, and freedom established. He had told Gen. Fremont that he would do no fighting if he thought slavery would exist when the fight was done. The slaves of rebels can always find a protection in this camp, and they will be defended to the last man and bullet. He wanted no men who were not Abolitionists—had no room for such, and trusted he had none, for all know now that slavery is at the bottom, middle and summit of this hellish war. Nor was he or his men too good to fight by darker skinned men than themselves. He meant to make 'contrabands useful,' and did not know what better use to put secesh guns to than place them in the hands of the slaves of rebels. No excesses will be committed by his men, and he doubted not our new companions will cheerfully obey all legitimate commands. Again he thanked them.'

LOST BY NEGLECT.—We give the following case as "The Calendar" states it:

"The American Colonization Society has recently missed securing a legacy of $10,000, by what looks like sheer negligence on the part of some of its officers. Notice was given of the bequest, and by the terms of the will, the acceptance of it was to be signified within six months after the notice. The legacy was duly accepted by the Executive Committee, informed as to the terms, but the act of acceptance was not intimated to the trustees of the charities of the deceased till four days after the expiration of the six months. A question was raised as to the true date from which to reckon, and the case was carried into court, which decided against the claims of the Colonization Society."

The loss of this money is in one sense a gain: for while we do not doubt that the Colonization Society has done much good, we know that it has done much harm; and the compensating reflection in the present case is, that there will be ten thousand dollars less to aid in expatriating American black men from the soil on which they were born, and sending them to a foreign coast three thousand miles from their native land.
—Independent.

MASONIC.

MR. EDITOR: I have from time to time met those who have and still are working under different jurisdictions, and the question has ever and anon been asked, What is going to be done this year? It has grown old by repetition as the work goes on; but the question has now been changed. It is this, What are you young men going to do? I will briefly answer. The young men, without distinction of party, have viewed with regret the errors of our fathers. We have long desired to see the craft working in harmony. We believe that discord and dissension belong not to us, and everything that is contrary to the principles we have been taught to inculcate, is calculated to destroy the feeling that should exist among us. Acting, then, not upon the cause of our division, but upon the means of uniting, as a body, with one jurisdiction, we say no more old fogyism; let us have ten young men, with the consent of the two or more Grand Lodges each; let them be empowered to arrange the plan for uniting the bodies; let them have the full power to work. Let our fathers stay at home; they have rent in twain. Let the young recruits meet according to their arrangements, with the understanding that they are not to separate until they come to a conclusion which will be satisfactory to all parties. We do not want to hear anything about the cause of division; we have had enough of this already. Young men and brothers! let us rise up in our might, and call upon our fathers to cast in oblivion the cause of dissension, that generations to come may receive the work from our hands unshattered and unbroken! May God direct us, and may every brother's heart respond for the union, for our cause!

SELAH.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25th.

SECRETARY CAMERON AND EMANCIPATION.—A Washington dispatch of November 26th reads:

"The slavery question will come before Congress at the opening of the next session in an official form. Secretary Cameron will discuss the subject in his annual report from the War Department, and will take strong ground in favor of the emancipation of all slaves belonging to rebels in arms against the Government. Rumors of this recommendation of Mr. Cameron have been in circulation here for a day or two, and are fully confirmed by a statement made last evening by the Secretary himself."

DEFRAUDING A COLORED WOMAN.—The following case of fraud, reported in the Brooklyn News of 26th inst., is an illustration of the disadvantages many of our people labor under from the want of an ordinary education:

A well-known police court lawyer, named James L. Smith, was brought before the Mayor this morning, to answer a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The complainant was a colored woman named Sarah Carrol, who lives in Stryker's Court, Jay street, whose statement is as follows: On the 27th of October last, she engaged Smith to prosecute her husband for abandonment. He instituted the proceedings, and she paid him $27 for his services. Smith afterwards learned from the woman that she had $135 in a Brooklyn savings bank; he persuaded her that her money was not safe in Brooklyn, as her husband could claim it, and that she had better give it to him to place in a bank in New York. The poor woman placing implicit faith in the shyster, drew the money from the savings bank and placed it in his hands. Smith gave her a receipt for it, which she could not read, but supposed it was all right. About two weeks ago she went to Smith, and asked him for her money. He put her off at first, but she went again to his house in East Broadway, New York, when Smith's wife gave her three dollars. On Saturday last, Mrs. Carrol went to the house again, and found that Mr. Smith had all his furniture packed ready to move away. She then applied to his Honor, the Mayor, who dispatched Officer Carr to arrest Smith. The receipt which Smith had given the woman was acknowledging the receipt of $135 "for professional services." When Smith was first brought in before the Mayor, he appeared to be suffering under a mild attack of delirium tremens, and had to be taken out in the air for a short time until he recovered. When he was brought back he told a very plausible story to his Honor; he acknowledged that he had taken the money, but said it was to pay the expenses of a divorce suit which Mrs. Carrol wished him to institute. Mrs. Carrol denied that she had ever said anything about a divorce suit, and maintained with an earnestness that carried conviction with it, that her original statement was strictly true. Smith, with a readiness which betrayed him, said he was willing to return the money, but had not the amount by him, but said that he had a note and some other securities to give. The Mayor finally agreed to let Smith go in charge of Officer Carr to see Mrs. Carrol's lawyer, Mr. Applegate, to see if a satisfactory arrangement could be made. No such arrangement appears to have been arrived at, for Smith was brought back to the Mayor's office.

THEN AND NOW.—Twenty days ago our brave troops in Missouri had just routed the enemy in the battle of Fredericktown, and the four successive skirmishes of Lexington, Wet Glaze, Linn Creek, and Springfield. They had driven the rebels down to the Arkansas line, and were still in pursuit, when Gen. Fremont was removed from the command for "incompetency." Since that time our army has evacuated Springfield, leaving all southern Missouri to be again overrun by the Rebels, while Union families by hundreds are flying for their lives. The enemy has been permitted to advance more than a hundred miles to the north, burn Warsaw, and destroy the Government supplies which were stored there, rob the steamer Platte Valley on the Mississippi, and the sunshine on the Missouri, and capture a valuable train, loaded with guns, between Sedalia and Leavenworth. But, on the other hand, great vigor has been shown in giving orders for the rendition of fugitive slaves, in hunting down even the negroes who accompanied General Fremont and his staff on their return to St. Louis, culminating in General Halleck's order to kick out all fugitives who have sought protection in our lines.

We need not venture to make any comment upon these facts. Indeed they need none.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE REFUGEE HOME SOCIETY, held its Annual Meeting at Detroit, on the evening of the 7th inst., Rev. Wm. Webb, in the chair.

The treasurer, H. Hallock, reported the condition of the society as follows:

Amount on hand at the commencement of the year	$ 922 88
Receipts	758 15
Total	$1,691 03
Disbursements	1,235 54
Balance on hand	$ 455 39

This society since the commencement of the war had had its hands full, but circumstances occurring in the south somewhat relieved it of much of its labor.

Mrs. Carys' school in Chatham, and another school in Windsor, have been aided by the society, judging by its Report we should be pronounce it to be an institution worthy of public support. The following officers were chosen for the ensuing year;

President—Rev. H. D. Kitchel, D. D.
Vice President—Rev. N. Colver.
Treasurer—H. Hallock
Recording Secretary—F. Raymond.
Auditor—E. C. Walker.
General Agent—Rev. C. C. Foote.
Executive Committee—Rev. T. J. Mumford, Rev. C. C. Foote, Rev. Wm. Hogarth, Nathan Power, Robt. Garver, S. M. Holmes, S. Zag, H. E. Baker, George DeBaptists.

Highly Important from Africa.

Important intelligence has just reached here, through a reliable source, from Africa, that King Docemo of Lagos, having discovered the deception and fraud of the treaty imposed upon him by Commander Bedingfield, of Her Majesty's Squadron, and Mr. Consul, McCoskry, has become so incensed that he is expelling the English from the Island. This is precisely what might have been expected under the circumstances as a legitimate fruit. He that "soweth the wind," may expect to reap the whirlwind.

PRESIDENT BENSON ON HAYTIAN EMIGRATION.—From a letter just received by a gentleman in this city from the President of Liberia, we make the following extract:

Though not the avowed policy of your government, (nor would it be policy to make such an avowal), yet I feel sanguine that emancipation in the Slave States will keep pace with the United States troops. Divine Providence has taken the work of emancipation in hand, and it will be brought about in a manner and with a rapidity not originally designed, nor yet fully understood by human foresight. I believe it to be beyond any human power and sagacity to prevent it. As the United States Government will necessarily have, at some time in future, to make some provision for the emancipated, I hope there will be no abatement in the usual interest of our friends in the United States in advocating the superior claims and interests of Liberia. I perceive that the agents of the Haytian Government are exerting themselves; but I think it does not require any extraordinary penetration of mental acumen to see that the prospect of permanently establishing a colored nationality (African) in the western hemisphere, is very gloomy. I wish Hayti well, and so do Liberians generally. We will not speak an unkind word of them; yet we are incredulous that the Caucassian race will let them maintain a permanent nationality in that hemisphere.

ENLISTING COLORED MEN.—Gen. Jackson, who, as colonel, commanded at Harper's Ferry, is engaged at Winchester in organizing, arming and equipping a regiment of free negroes, said to number full 1,000. The negroes are reported to be very enthusiastic in their new position.

ARRIVALS AT MRS. PLANT'S BOARDING-HOUSE.

Mr. George Smith, of Philadelphia.
Mr. Wm. M. Polk, of Bridgeport, Conn.
Mr. Edgar Harlet, of Philadelphia.
Mr. John Caraway, of Brooklyn.
Mr. John Ridley, from Kingston, Jamaica.
Mr. Black, from Sweden.
Mr. Pellen, of Newburg, N. Y.
Isaac Bradley, from Washington, D. C.

Special Notices.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

I take great pleasure in introducing to the public CHARLES A. DORSEY, A.B. On the 28th of August last, he took his departure from Oberlin College, having completed his collegiate course. As far as we are able to learn, he stood well in his classes, performing the tasks assigned him. We are warranted in saying, that as this young man has just entered the field of life, will do credit to himself and his race. We wish him success. Hoping that as difficulties present themselves, he will meet them with courage. He is the son of Augustus Dorsey, residing in Philadelphia, Pa. This city should be proud, as he is the first, we believe, who has received a thorough collegiate course. His father educated him without any assistance, and we earnestly desire that his efforts will not go unrewarded. May many follow his example.

Cleveland "Leader" please copy.

E. F. C.

SHILOH RE-UNION.

The Ladies of Shiloh Church, situated at the corner of Prince and Marion Sts., (Pastor, Rev. J. N. GLOUCESTER,) will give, in happy concert with all its Officers, a highly intellectual and social

Re-Union Entertainment,

THURSDAY EVENING, DEC. 12th, 1861,

In the Basement of the Church.

For the consolidation of their own interest, the increase of their Church treasury, so that in these perilous, but yet joyous times for freedom, they may more perfectly secure the blessings of the Gospel, and stand prepared to aid, as they have ever aimed to do, the cause of bleeding Humanity.

The meeting will commence at precisely 8 1-2 o'clock.

ORDER OF EXERCISES.

1. Reading of the Scriptures, by a lady.
2. Hymn—by the Choir—

"Blest be the tie that binds,
Our hearts in Christian love."

3. Prayer.
4. Brief addresses from different visiting clergymen and distinguished laymen of this City and Brooklyn.
5. Tea at 9 1-2 o'clock [illegible]
6. The Box intended for the suffering brothers and sisters, the "Contrabands" at Fortress Monroe, will be [illegible] from a distinguished brother, and an anthem of Freedom from that well known vocalist, ROBT. HAMILTON, assisted by Professor [illegible] and his Choir.
7. Presentation at 12 o'clock, by Committee on Presentation, composed of the wives and daughters of the Members of the Board of Trustees and others, with an address by Mrs. H. Ross, and received by the President of the Board in an address in behalf of his associates and the Church they represent.
8. Conclusion. Hymn—[illegible]

"[illegible] Jehovah's awful throne."

N. B.—All contributions of goods for the box must be brought in on or before Wednesday evening, the 11th inst.

TICKETS 37 1-2 CENTS.

To be obtained of Mrs. J. N. Gloucester, 290 Bridge St.; Mrs. N. B. Lewis, 55 Carll St.; Mrs. W. H. Ross, 80 High St., Brooklyn; John L. Hudson, 4 East Houston St.; at the Drug Store (Dr. Smith's), 55 West Broadway, and the office of the Anglo-African, 48 Beekman St., New York.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Mrs. Thomas Jackson, Sr.,	Miss Helen Clow,
Jacob Butler,	Adeline Ogden,
Henry Hardy,	Sharp,
N. B. Lewis,	Bending,
James N. Gloucester,	F. Bodee,
Thomas Howard,	Mary Felix,
Frances Selby,	Isabella Demarest,
Wm. H. Carney,	Jane Merit,
— Ferguson,	Emily Thurston,
Henry Green,	Nancy Jane Benson,
Warren Stewart,	H. S. Demarest,
Miller Pierce,	Elder Thomas Jackson,
Samuel Demarest,	Jacob Butler,
Christopher Clow,	N. B. Lewis,
James Bays,	Thomas Howard,
John L. Hudson,	Henry Hardy,
Wm. H. Ross,	Dea. Stackhouse,
Thomas Jackson, Jr.,	Mr. J. L. Hudson,
A. Zabriskie,	C. Clow,
Lewis Frazier,	Wm. H. Ross,
Foster,	Thos. Jackson, Jr.,
John Rock,	A. Zabriskie,
Stackhouse,	S. Demarest,
Benj. Landrine,	Miller Pierce,
Jane Corbit.	Jas. Bays,
Miss Margaret Clark,	James Tolbert,
Mary Harris,	Amos Davis,
E. Denis,	Thomas Davis,
Margaret Smith,	T. S. Demarest,
A. A. Vandyke,	Wm. Smith,
	Elymus Reeve,
	John Rock,

"UNITED WE STAND, DIVIDED WE FALL."

FIRST ANNUAL BALL AND SUPPER OF THE COLORED SEAMEN'S

BOARDING - HOUSE KEEPERS

AND OUT-FITTERS

Of the City of New York, will be given on Thursday Eve'g, Dec. 26th, 1861,

AT THE

METROPOLITAN ASSEMBLY ROOMS,

178 PRINCE ST.

The Proprietors of this Association will spare no pains to make this Entertainment one of the most entertaining nights of the season, and also assure the public that nothing on their part will be wanting to render them happy.

Music under direction of Mr. J. DOUGLASS.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

William E. Slater,	Henry Beverley,
George F. Thompson,	William Butler.

The Floor will be under the gentlemanly management of Mr. GEORGE H. WILLIAMS and Mr. JOHN WILSON.

Tickets, admitting Gent. and Lady, $2; Single Ticket, $1.

Tickets to be had of the following Committee:

George F. Thompson, 4 Catherine Lane.
William E. Slater, 3 Catherine Lane.
William Butler, 1 Benson St.
Manuel Gilbert, 42 Baxter St.
Susan Williams, 105 Park St.
Henry Beverley, 76 Roosevelt St.
Albro Lyons, 20 Vandewater St.
Samuel Porter, 21 Batavia St.
Charles M. Fortes, 199 South St.
William Spriggs, 1 Mechanics' Alley.
Thomas Lewis, 49 Marion St.

Tickets may also be had at the following places:—Eldorado, 154 Church St., Messrs. Suel & Spencer; Geo. H. Williams, 189 Church St.; Francis & Rogers, 56 Leonard St.; R. D. Kinney, 178 Prince St.; Robt. Tappen, 42 Ridge St.; J. A. Trower, 279 S. 4th St., Williamsburgh; Phineas Spriggs, 37 N. Bowery.

WM. E. SLATER, Pres.
HENRY BEVERLEY, Treas.
G. F. THOMPSON, Sec'y.
WM. BUTLER, Cashier. 18 4t

GEORGE OTON'S

QUADRILLE BAND.

BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC, at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,

PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; F. F. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton.
18tf

MASONIC

DIRECTORY,

FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W.G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N.Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwich, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14. Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, New York City.

MASONIC NOTICE.

The members of OLIVE BRANCH LODGE, No. 5, working under the jurisdiction of the Philanthropic United Grand Lodge, will take notice that the annual meeting of said Lodge will be held at their Lodge Rooms, 178 Prince St., on Monday evening, Dec. 16th.

Punctual attendance is requested.

By order of

CHAS. T. BROWN, W M.
R. D. KINNEY, Sec. 18 3t

Thanksgiving Sermon.

Rev. J. N. GLOUCESTER will preach on Sabbath evening, in the Shiloh Church, cor. of Prince and Marion Sts., at half-past seven o'clock, a Thanksgiving Sermon. Subject—"Gratitude to God due for the Sublime Hope, in the Country, for impartial, universal Liberty, and the imperative duty of the Government to its 'Contrabands.'"

A GRAND

MUSICAL FESTIVAL

WILL BE GIVEN AT

Turn Hall, 63 and 65 Meserole Street,

WILLIAMSBURGH,

On Wednesday Evening, Dec. 11, 1861.

The Committee pledge themselves that no pains will be spared to make this equal to any that has been given.

Music under the direction of

Prof. S. WALDRON'S BAND.

Prof. LaMATIEU, the celebrated TIGHT ROPE PERFORMER, has been engaged to give one of his performances on this occasion. He will WALK A ROPE one inch thick, with his hands and feet chained together. He will also walk a rope blindfolded, hang by his feet with his head down, and beat a drum, and perform many other daring and interesting feats.

TICKETS 50 CENTS,

REFRESHMENTS INCLUDED.

Persons wishing to see the performance can have a seat in the Gallery for 25 Cts. Children half price.

Performance to commence at 8 o'clock.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Mr. George Poole,	Mr. Joseph H. Nixon,
Mr. Wm. Moore,	Mr. Charles Trower,
Mr. Chas. Smith,	Mr. Wm. R. Conner,
Mr. Benjamin Clark,	Mr. James Mitchell,
Mr. J. F. Jackson,	Mr. Alexander Corprew.

N. B.—Cars leave Peck Slip and Grand Street Ferry every five minutes, and go within one block of the Hall. J. A. TROWER, Conductor.
17 3t

A GRAND TEA ENTERTAINMENT

For the benefit of Mrs. MARY REDDEN, gotten up by a Committee of Ladies and Gentlemen, will be given on

TUESDAY EVENING, DEC. 3, 1861,

AT THE

Metropolitan Assembly Rooms,

178 Prince street.

The Committee being satisfied that Mrs. Redden is worthy of this demonstration, assure the public that no pains will be spared to entitle it to their patronage.

Tickets 38 cents. 17 2t

LECTURES.

THE UNDERSIGNED is prepared to fill engagements to deliver single Lectures, on the following subjects:

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY WITH REFERENCE TO NATURAL THEOLOGY;

THE ADAPTATIONS OF THE EARTH, OR TERRESTRIAL ADAPTATIONS;

MENTAL PHILOSOPHY

THE ANCIENT HONORS OF THE BLACK AND COLORED RACES OF THE EARTH;

—Being a series of popular discourses recently delivered, founded on the following texts:

1. "Look not upon me because I am black." [Song of Sol.—1.6.
2. "Princes shall come out of Egypt." [Psalm 68—31.
3. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin." [Jer.—13.23.
4. "Cursed be Canaan.'—Gen.—9.25.
5. "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus." Philemon.

TERMS—The lecturer's passage both ways, and one-fourth of profits.

[From the Detroit Daily Advertiser, March 1, 1860.]

"Mr. BERRY's lecture last night is stated to have displayed much thought, and to have been in every respect meritorious."

THE BALL IS UP!

FLOOR SKATING, FLOOR SKATING!

BOSTON'S

SKATING ACADEMY.

FOR LADIES.

Mr. T. S. BOSTON respectfully announces to his friends and the public, that he will re-open his SKATING SCHOOL, for Ladies and Gentlemen, at the

ASSEMBLY ROOMS,

178 PRINCE STREET,

Terms of Admission—10 cts. Doors open at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Terms for Skating—15 cts. half hour; 20 cts. per hour.

TUESDAY and FRIDAY Evenings, for Classes.

Persons wishing to engage the Rooms for private parties, can do so by communicating to

THOS. S. BOSTON,
No. 87 Sullivan St.,
15 5t New York City.

NOTICE.

All members of the Annual Conferences of the A.M.E. Zion Church who have taken shares in the stock of the Book Concern of said church, are hereby informed that the payment is now due, and they are requested to make remit[illegible] the Treasurer, Rev. Jos. P. Thompson, B[illegible]n,N.Y., through the mail or by express.

N B. All who have not taken shares can do so by forwarding the amount of $10 to the Secretary, at New Bedford, Mass.

SAMUEL M. GILES,
Secretary of the Board,
New Bedford, Oct. 18th, 1861.

AGENCY

FOR TROY AND VICINITY.

James R. Benham is the regularly appointed Agent for the Anglo-African in Troy, Lansingburg, Waterford and vicinity. All orders or communications for the paper may be left with Mr Benham on board of the steamer "Cornelius Vanderbilt."

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delsart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING

To consider measures with reference to a settlement of the

GERRIT SMITH LANDS,

will be held, agreeable to adjournment, at Prince Street Hall, on Monday evening, December 2d, 1861. The public are invited to attend.

Charles L. Reason, Ch'mn.
Wright Seaman, Jr., Sec'y.

LECTURES.

The Rev. Alex. Crummell, of Liberia, W.A., is prepared to deliver the following Lectures, either singly or as a course, during the months of November and December:

1. The customs, genius, and characteristics of native tribes in Western Africa.
2. The growth of civilization along the Western Coast of Africa.
3. The progress and prospects of the Republic of Liberia.

Letters are to be addressed to Rev. A. Crummell, 311 Spring Street, New York. 12—4t

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, near Hudson Avenue.

REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock, ... A. M.
" . . . . P. M.
" . . . . P. M.

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 1 " . . . . P. M.

12–1y

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock, ... P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—

10½ . . . . A. M.
3 . . . . P. M.
7½ . . . . P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.
13-1y.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,

FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,

In all its branches—such as

BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH

GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,

Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.

18 26t

OYSTERS IN EVERY STYLE—GOOD Music, splendid Dancing; Ice Cream and other delicacies of the season—all for Fifty Cents. Remember, Wednesday evening, the 27th inst., at the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms, 178 Prince street.

PETER S. PORTER,

GENERAL AGENT FOR

HOUSE LETTING,

170 WEST 29TH STREET,

NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate LADIES and GENTLEMEN with FIRST CLASS BOARD, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand. 16 13t

---

MRS. M. E. EDY,

EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.

RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING

IN BROOKLYN,

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

---

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston-st., or of the Janitor 225 West 15th-st.

POCKET WATER-FILTER

AND

DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weighs one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing

DAY & CO.,
3 -13t. Box 464 P.O., Newark, N. J.

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and the public, that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 66 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK. Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,

BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

DON'T FORGET,

168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,

EMPIRE STATE HOTEL

AND

UNION HOUSE,

541 BROOME STREET,

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Pease call and examine the premises

HATS CAPS & FURS

IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.

The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co., N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE

BY

MRS. W. S. WILKINS & Co

610 PINE, ABOVE SIXTH STREET,

PHILADELPHIA 7-13t.

LADIES' FURNISHING STORE.

CHILDREN'S CLOTHING

READY-MADE AND MADE TO ORDER, BY

MRS. S. WILKINS & CO.,

610 Pine, above Sixth Street, Philadelphia.
7-13t.

MRS. ANDERSON,

CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

---

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE, CAN ACCOMOdate a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf.

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 26 MULBERRY STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

---

HENRY G. LEASK,

HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS

AND FURS.

COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.

Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) REspectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. or sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold F d Frankfort Sts.

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.

79 Thompson St., N. Y

MRS. E. LEONARD,

FASHIONABLE

DRESS- MAKER,

25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.

Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies,	$2,50
" " Gentleman,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

y12t

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,

CARD AND JOB PRINTER,

219 CENTRE STREET, NEW YORK.

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts., 2 tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk Street. Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with

Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.

BENJ. E. BROWN,
70 Bleecker St
between Broadway & Crosby St. 4t.

P. A. WHITE,

Corner of Frankfort & Gold [illegible]

GENERAL

COMMISSION MERCHANT,

[illegible]

A FRESH AND PURE ASSORTMENT

DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS,

GENUINE

LUBIN'S EXTRACTS

AND OTHER PERFUMERY,

FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES, FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA SEGARS, &c., &c.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S

VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR

FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH, AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Gray.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh, and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea-voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hairbrush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off; always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that occasional failure will, no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S

STRENGTHENING PLASTER.

AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR

LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT, SPRAINS, BRUISES, &c., &c.

Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly serviceable.

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent relief from its use, as it keeps a continued [illegible] action as a gentle counter irritant, removing the inflammation of the stomach without breaking the skin. Persons engaged in sedentary pursuits should [illegible] constantly, as they give strength [illegible] by constant sitting and stooping.

For STRAINS and SPRAINS they are [illegible], affording relief [illegible].

For RHEUMATISM there is no [illegible] application equal to them, promoting the [illegible] circulation, and of the excruciating [illegible].

PREVENTING A RETURN

These plasters [illegible] the best material [illegible] you will be deceived.

P. A. WHITE, Sole Proprietor.

Poetry.

[For the Weekly Anglo-African.]

YES, OFT I THINK OF THEE.

Dearest Ellen, I think of thee
When morn's first flush streams on high,
Or when the twilight's crimson flush
Is fading in the western sky.
I'll think of thee in mirth's gay hours,
When song and jest pass fleeting by,
When o'er me memory has one power,
That is—to think of thee.

Through all the hours of blessed light,
Amid my daily toil and care,
And through the watches of the night
For thee to Heaven ascends my prayer;
I'll think of thee through shade and light—
Fondly and truly I'll think of thee—
Loving thee ever through evil and right,
And ask in return that you "remember me."

THEODOCIA DALTON.

Nyack, Nov. 12th, 1861.

FORMATION OF COLORED REGIMENTS.

[CONCLUDED.]

I think I am quite safe in assuming that there is no scrap of history that can be brought by analogy to prove "that we must either succumb to the numerical preponderance of power which our enemies may bring to bear against us, or cease to exist on the continent." I think the history of the aborigines of this country goes but a short distance in proof of this mode of reasoning; they sunk by thousands in the very pursuits under which our race have steadily increased. Besides, there are very many reasons why they have diminished, aside from the aggressive war of extermination forced upon them by the whites; while the sword among them has slain its thousands, the introduction of rum of the most poisonous character has slain its tens of thousands. Delirium tremens, mania potua, and a thous. and other hereditary diseases more fruitful of death and the entire destruction of the human family than the sword, through the wily craft of white men have been thrust among them, then what has followed? Internal dissensions among the different tribes by which means the sword in the hands of brethren have done more for their extermination than enemies of the opposite race. But our people usually drink good whisky, or the best of brandy, and I therefore do not exactly look for the same results to them in this direction; and with their knowledge of the descriptive character of our oppressors, I cannot think we will ever be induced by them to slay each other indiscriminately, as the Indians have. My friend speaks of world's fairs, agricultural pursuits, arts and sciences, etc., versus momentary admiration for exhibitions of well disciplined men, well drilled in military tactics &c. He brings wealth education, industry, &c., against efficient military drill, well contested battles, bravery and gallant exploits in active service, etc. But he evidently does not draw his conclusions from a very careful study of his subject and the nations to whom he refers. Great Britain first made herself free, then became the governess of her numerous colonies, then became mistress of the seas, before she turned her attention to these social and civil pursuits that my friend cites us to. France had pillaged the world by her superior perfection in artillery and infantry tactics, before she was satisfied to go to work at worlds fairs and what not. But the slaves of every nation are those who challenge competition in mechanics, agriculture, and the fine arts. Why then have they not been freed by this means without an appeal to arms! My friend refers to Hayti, and says they are not more respected though "they wielded the sword to desperation, etc." Thank God they are at least free and independent. Besides this the colored planters, though they were acknowledged the most wealthy, educated, industrious and thrifty of the Haytians, challenging competition by their industry and wealth, and commanding respect by their education and refinement; yet they never were recognized or respected at home or abroad till they grasped the sword and taught their oppressors and the world a lesson of African chivalry; versus so much mock morality, peaceful submission etc., in this stirring age of human progress. By this means the blacks of Hayti are felt in a way that world's fairs &c., &c.; would not have made them felt for centuries yet to come. My friend inquires how we could influence the administration more than Gen. Fremont? And whether the states could thrust upon the war department persons whom interest or necessity might dictate they should reject?

Or whether they could accept the services of those who are legally disqualified. He then says if this may not be constitutionally done, would not my policy environ the administration and force that evil I would obviate? I think I fairly met these questions in my previous article. I will again for the esteem I have for my friend answer him as best I can. First no one can tell how much Gen. Fremont has or can influence the war department; the fact that Mr. Cameron visited Fremont in person and that Fremont has made no public protest against the ruling of the cabinet; looks very suspicious that they understood each other and were only acting up to the necessity of keeping their own counsel. Fremont evidently wields an influence that would require but a very few men of his stamp to emancipate the entire south. Secondly the states have and are doing every day all that we would require them to do; i. e., they are raising troops, preparing them by all available means for the time the government will need them; and may they not as readily prepare colored as white men! Would this not be a step in the direction of enfranchisement. And after all, is it not through this medium; the recognition of our rights by the people, that we may ever hope to reach the general government. As to legal disqualification, and constitutional necessity being in our way, I would refer my friend to Mr. Lincoln's speech at Independence Hall, in this city when he said that "after all decisions of the supreme court, our constitutional obligations are not eternal principles, but must vary with the necessities of the times, etc." A solution of these strange words are given in the Rev. H. H. Garnet's passports by Mr. Seward; and Mr. Lincoln's answer to the writ of habeas corpus issued by the highest judicial authority of the country. Garnet's passport and the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus are the best of argument against constitutional and legal restrictions, preventing the recognition of a hundred thousand men of the best muscle and determined bravery in the federal ranks.

As to what southern emissaries may do by throwing information into the hands of the Rebels of our movements, etc., I have only to say that it is an abstract question that should have no weight with men willing to do their duty in a great crisis like the present; follow this rule of reasoning and we should have no army, no president, no freemen, no free-soil nor aught else to defend. Seven years ago the serfs of Russia were homeless slaves; the nobility had frustrated the efforts of every Cabinet for the amelioration of their condition. At length a war broke out between Russia, Turkey, France and England. The Czar driven to an extremity proposed to place in the field 250,000 serfs. The nobility protested against it fearing the result to themselves. The serfs opposed it because they could see no issue in the war favorable to their interest, they believed England and France to be far more favorable to them than Russia. The war raged and finally Alexander over the heads of nobility and serfs drafted 75,000 serfs and sent them off to the Crimea; and in less than three years from that time, nearly thirty millions of slaves are freed by the result of that policy. There was no way to dispossess these people of the influence they swayed by that one stroke of war policy; but to emancipate them was inevitable. Is not our condition analogous to theirs in many respects; and may we not by the same policy expect a similar result? I must thank my friend for two considerations of kindness toward his old misguided suicidal friend; first for his anxiety "that I might receive my sight." Second, for his anxiety that I should be lost while performing an unpleasant duty. There are two kinds of blindness mentioned in scripture, an unfortunate blindness and a wilful one; as my friend has placed me among the first class, by Moses' law Leviticus 19: 14, I am entitled to commisseration, and by the same law Deut. 27: 18, he should be sorely punished for trying to lead me to wander out of the way, etc. I am somewhat fearful that my friend may be of the opposite class mentioned in the ¶ from 37 to 52 verses of the 12th chapter of John. If so a solution to his unfortunate state may be found in Matthew 15: 14.

A. M. GREEN.

Letter from Toronto.

TORONTO, C. W., Nov. 22, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:—Nothing of a very startling character has transpired since I last wrote you. It is true we have had the pleasure of hearing the truly talented and eloquent lecturer, W. J. Watkins, Esqr., whose streaming eloquence electrified our citizens on two occasions during last week. The gentleman was, as on former occasions, greeted with large and attentive audiences. He is, as you are aware, in the interest of the Haytian emigration movement, consequently the force of his lectures was entirely aimed in that direction, but with what success, your correspondent will be better able in a few days, than now, to tell, as another lot intends leaving on the 25th inst.

Mr. Watkins is rather a favorite with Toronto audiences, hence his success, as far as numbers are concerned, in attendance upon his lectures, and is attributable to that fact more than to any partiality for the movement in which he is engaged. I am not disposed to give a partizan or biased opposition to the Haytian emigration movement, and I think I also speak the sentiments of the colored citizens generally, but we cannot be but opposed to the exaggerated coloring that is often given to the disadvantages under which we labour in Canada, in order to enhance their project.

We are told that we must select one of two things—either voluntarily emigrate, or submit to expatriation or extermination, then immediately following we are told by the same parties that they do not favor an en masse emigration from the fact that they consider it impracticable. Pray, how are we to harmonize statements so divergent. I submit that with my limited logical acumen I am quite unable to solve a matter so paradoxical. I quite agree with your Trenton correspondent that education and wealth, are chiefly the two great levers by which we are to attain a proper position in this or any other country, more especially in this where we enjoy rights and immunities in common with others. I do not, by any means, disfavor emigration when it can be properly demonstrated that it is to our benefit, for in so doing we are only following in the wake of those who have all the advantages that we are deprived of—the whites. That I hold is one of the many ways by which we are to be elevated, therefore, those who advocate Haytian emigration, and those who oppose it, should take up the matter, and deal with it dispassionately, and by such means good may result from the agitation, rather than harm. And while on this point I will allude to a portion of a letter written by Mr. Simon P. J. Spencer, and published in the "Pine and Palm" of the 9th inst., respecting the Haytian emigration feeling in this city. He there states that "many of the wealthiest of the colored folk of Toronto and vicinity, have made up their minds to emigrate."

Unfortunately we cannot boast of a very large number of wealthy colored persons, nevertheless we can compare favorably with many other cities of the same size, and of the same number of inhabitants here in Canada or in the United States. And as I have been raised in this city from my boyhood, covering over a period of nearly twenty-six years, and am pretty well acquainted with almost every colored man of wealth among us, ought to know something of the "many" spoken of by Mr. Spencer, but I can assure you that I have yet to find them out, that is, those who are going to emigrate. I will admit that W. R. Abbot, Esqr., (who, by the way, is a very wealthy gentleman) stated to Mr. Spencer at one of his meetings, that he intended visiting Hayti, and taking out his son, &c. That was said, however, by way of encouragement to the gentleman who was speaking of his despondency, &c., in the matter. But I fancy Mr. Abbot's extreme modesty will not allow him to assume the appellation "many," so fondly promulgated by Mr. Spencer.

I see from an advertisement in the Toronto "Globe," that an application is made for one hundred colored refugees in Canada, for the use of the Australian Cotton Growing Association. Persons who have experience in the cotton fields of the Southern States are required. They are to proceed to New South Wales and Queensland, their passage will be paid, and an engagement made for two years, at £21 sterling per annum, with rations and lodgings. Application is to be made to R. H. Cameron, No. 90 Beaver st., New York, and of T. A. Ambridge, Hamilton, C. W.

The course of lectures for the winter, under the auspices of the "Association for the education and elevation of colored persons," will commence early in December. This is an incorporated association, brought into existence some three or four years ago, mainly through the active exertions of Dr. A. T. Augusta; it is managed by a board of trustees, and they have, through the agency of the doctor, who was chairman of the board, procured suitable lecturers during the winter months, to lecture for the benefit of the colored people generally, free of charge. I regret that the board has no longer the valuable services of the learned gentleman, he having withdrawn from it. However, I am happy to state that they are going ahead with a will in the prosecution of their laudable design. The lecturers will be composed of colored and white gentlemen. A word, Mr. Editor;—one does not like to be made to appear as saying ridiculous things, by the printer, such as substituting these for there, &c., &c. "A word to the wise, &c."

G. W. C.

LETTER FROM REV. W. P. NEWMAN.

MY DEAR ANGLO:—I hope it is well with thee. May success attend thee. Be assured that your name is to us, as dear as one loved, and lost, and found again. We have often thought of thee since we left thy birthplace—especially while rolled almost to death, on the troubled sea, by the storms of the old traitor—Cape Hatteras. We had four days of heavy weather. Our passage across the ocean, in other respects, was very pleasant.

We left North America with pleasure, except those little regrets on leaving our friends. I was a little sad when our steamer fired her parting gun, and my brethren in the ministry, who came to see me off, lifted their hats and bid me farewell—among whom I name the Revs. George Whipple and J. O. Beardslee, as they are not members of my own denomination.

It is a public blessing to have a British steamer to come to the West Indies. On such vessels ALL nations fare alike. Even James Redpath's "Virginia Negro," (?) in the order of arrangement, was honored with a seat, at the captain's right hand, at meals; notwithstanding we had on board the American Consul for Jamaica and Lieutenant Hall of our army, as well as other persons of distinction. I was treated with marked respect by all on board the steamer. Capt. Russell is a Presbyterian, and an Irish gentleman. He is wise, careful and courteous. The passengers unanimously invited me to draw up a letter of approval of him, his officers and crew, for their conduct towards us, which I did in my own plain style, and which they signed and presented to him. Had he been a wine-bibber, many bottles would have been uncorked, after his graceful reply. Thank God, there was not one.

Would a "Virginia negro" be treated with such respect on any American mail steamer? We saw several vessels on shore, among them a man-of-war of our navy. She had run a long ways out of her way, and had been doubtless chased by a privateer, or feared it. She seemed to make for Cuba, on discovering us, but when the "Union Jack" went up, we soon saw the "Stars and Stripes," and her course was changed for the United States.

We were at sea ten days, and had no little joy when a pure African man took command of our steamer as pilot.

We had a fine view of many beautiful sugar estates, highly cultivated, as we passed up the south side of Jamaica. There was a striking contrast between it and slave-cursed Cuba, and barbarous Hayti. We entered Port Royal at nightfall, amid the thundering of cannon and the cloud-piercing rockets. There we rested quietly at anchor till morning. During the night we were visited by many of our citizens to learn of the anticipated "sham" battle in Virginia, by the two Republics' armies. The rainy season is on us. Everything looks green and flourishing. Jamaica tends upwards.—Much interest is being felt about internal improvements. We expect a warm time of it, at the next meeting of the Legislature. Sir Edward Jordon and his followers are dead set against the present administration. The colored influence will be dominant.

"When Jews and Maroons equal meet,
The Maroons will the Jews defeat."

The subject of emigration has awakened much interest here. The Coolies and Africans are still coming. But we need men of Northern stamp and capital. A new agent of emigration has been appointed for the East Indies, and yet there is a strong desire for North Americans to come here. I see two letters of mine on the subject have been published by the "Jamaica Guardian," the government organ, with most favorable comments. It urges on the government action, action, and at once.

I have been congratulated for having given to Redpath and Hayti what they deserved, during my late visit to the North—notwithstanding my insanity and intention to invade Cuba, according to the heartless trader in the woes of my people. I have just been informed by the Rev. L. Thompson that the Governor of Jamaica desires to have an interview with me on the subject of emigration, before the Legislature meets again. A bill will be passed by that body, when it meets, to aid emigrants from the Canadas and the United States. At that I will rejoice, for several reasons: 1st, because here the afflicted will obtain happy homes and the rights of men; 2d, because here their posterity will grow up with spirits uncrushed by a sense of degradation—they will be high-souled and independent; 3d, because of the interest of Jamaica itself; 4th, because to come here will be but a manifestation of self-respect. Who would not leave a white man's country, as he would his company, if he is not wanted in it? And, 5th, because it will be but a just rebuke to the CHRISTIAN HYPOCRITES of North America, to leave them to prey upon one another, as they have preyed upon us. Let them raise their own cotton and bread, and wear their own cloth and cook their own food. Let them fight their own battles, and pay the expenses of the war. Let no colored man so degrade himself and his race as to take up arms for any people who permit them to do so because they CAN'T do without him. Does not one degrade himself who allows himself to be made a political tool of by the aspirants to the Presidency of that country of which he is not a citizen?

Respectfully,

W. P. NEWMAN.

Jamaica, Oct. 18, 1861.

CONFIRMED IN HER HABITS.—A gentleman of excellent habits and very amiable disposition, was so unfortunate as to have a wife of a very different character; in short, one that would get beastly drunk. Being in company with a few intimates, one of them remarked to him, that if she was his wife—since all other things had failed—he would frighten her in some way, so that she would quit her evil habit, and proposed the following method: that sometime when dead drunk, she should be laid in a box shaped like a coffin, and left in that situation until her fit should be over, and consciousness restored.

A few evenings after, the dame being in a proper state, the plan was put into execution; and after the box lid was properly secure, the party before alluded to watched each in turn, to witness the result. About daylight next morning the watch heard a movement, laid himself down by the box, when her ladyship, after bumping her head a few times, was heard to say:

"Bless me? why, where am I?"

The outsider answered in a sepulchral tone;

"Madame, you are dead, and in the other world."

A pause ensued, after which the lady again inquired;

"Where are you?"

"O! I am dead too," said he.

"Can you tell me how long I have been dead?"

"About three weeks."

"How long have you been dead?"

"Four months."

"Well, you have been here so much longer than I have, can't you tell me where I can get a little gin?"

MEMORABLE SPEECHES.—We desire to embalm the following extraordinarily sublime, eloquent, and elegant perorations. The first is said to have been delivered before a court of justice in Pennsylvania:

"Your honor sits high upon the adorable seat of justice, like the Asiatic rock of Gibralter, while the eternal streams of justice, like cadaverous clouds of the valley, flow meandering at your extended feet."

The next is by a celebrated lawyer of New Jersey:

"Your honors, I fancy, do not sit there like marble statues, to be wafted about by every idle breeze."

Next, the soul-stirring opening of a western oration:

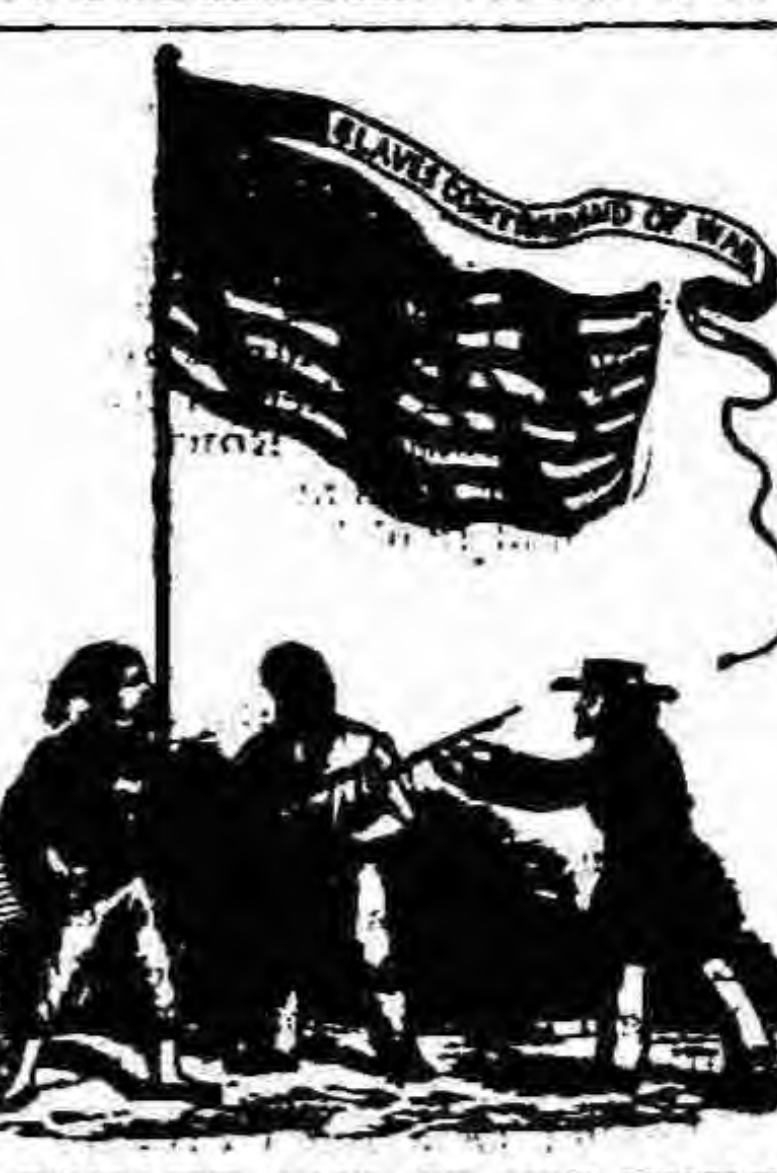
"The important crisis which were about to have arriven, have arroven."

Last, but not least, one that locates itself:

"The court will please to observe that the gentleman from the East has given them a very learned speech. He has roamed with old Romulus, soaked with old Socrates, ripped with Euripides, and canteree with Cantharides! but what—your honor—what does he know about the law in old Arkansaw?"

"I DON'T SEE IT."—Lord Nelson was undoubtedly the author of this popular slang phrase. At the celebrated naval battle of Copenhagen, Nelson, who was determined to continue the battle, but whose attention had been called to a signal of the commanding officer to cease hostilities, placed his hand over his good eye, and pretending to look with his blind one, said "I don't see it!" and at once ordered a brisk renewal of the engagement.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED, BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. for washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

MRS. WINSLOW'S
SOOTHING SYRUP.

Every mother should be prepared to act in the capacity of both nurse and physician to her children she can, if she will, discharge these duties much better than any one she can employ. If she does not, she ought to know that there is a Medicine prepared by an old nurse and female physician which has stood the test of many, many years, and is the most perfect thing on earth for children teething; it also cures Wind Colic, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, and is sure to regulate the bowels. We say to every mother, do not let your own prejudices, or the prejudices of others stand in the way of the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP certainly does, as the name implies, "soothe" the little sufferer into a quiet, natural sleep, from which it awakes invigorated and refreshed. And for the cure of diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Wind Colic, &c., we have never seen its equal.

We have always been, and still are, opposed to the practice of drugging infants. This article has no deleterious effects whatever, and from our own experience (we speak advisedly) we have every confidence in it, and can heartily recommend it to all mothers. Take our advice—use it—and you will as strongly recommend it to others as we have to you.

When we say that MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP acts like a charm, we do but reiterate the language of every person who ever used it for their children, for all diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery and Diarrhœa, Wind Colic and Cholera Infantum. It will produce quietude and rest, relieve all suffering, and the infant will awake invigorated and refreshed, and not with the dull and stupefying effects of preparations of opium

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States.

During the thirty years of unprecedented and increasing popularity of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, innumerable "Consears" and other nostrums prepared by pretended M.D.'s, have sprung up and lived but a mushroom existence, the SOOTHING SYRUP has been constantly increasing in popularity, and become a household word, and for the health of their children, by the use of valuable article.

THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS THANK
MRS. WINSLOW

PRICE 20 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

For sale by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St., N.Y.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Billous Colic, Billous Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordiary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMSIONER TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS;

EMBELLISHMENT.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or the Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Sélas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture —by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S. Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly.
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Merce Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sell Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas. and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Associatian 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, and the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added.

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
60 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred engraved plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 19 NEW YORK, DECEMBER 7, 1861. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African.
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY,
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
No. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY

PART I.

> "By myself, the Lord of Ages,
> I have sworn to right the wrong;
> I have pledged my word unbroken,
> For the weak against the strong."
> [H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XII

THE DISCOVERY.

'It can't be; I wont believe it!' said Franks, at the breakfast table on Sunday morning, after hearing that little Joe was missed; 'he certainly must be lost in the shrubbery.'

After breakfast a thorough search was made, none being more industrious than Ailcey in hunting the little fugitive, but without success.

'When was he last seen?' inquired Franks.

'He was put to bed las' night while we was at de suppeh seh!' replied Ailcey.

'There's something wrong about this thing, Mrs. Franks, and I'll be hanged if I don't ferret out the whole before I'm done with it!' said the Colonel.

'I hope you dont suspect me as—'

'Nonsense! my dear, not at all—nothing of the sort, but I do suspect respectable parties in another direction.'

'Gracious, Colonel! whom have you reference to? I'm sure I can't imagine.'

'Well, well, we shall see! Ailcey call Judy.'

'Maus Stephen, yeh sen' for me?' enquired the old woman, puffing and blowing.

'Yes Judy. Do you know anything about little Joe? I want you to tell me the truth!' sternly inquired Franks.

'Maus Stephen! I can't lie! so long as yeh had me, you nor missus neveh knows me tell lie. No bless de Laud! I sen' my soul to de ole boy dat way? No maus Stephen, I would'n give wat I feels in my soul—'

'Well never mind Judy about your soul, but tell us about—'

'Ah! maus Stephen, I 'specs to shout wen de worl's on fieh! an'—'

'Tell us about the boy Judy, and we'll hear about your religion another time.'

'If you give her a little time Colonel, I think she'll be able to tell about him!' suggested Mrs. Franks on seeing the old woman weeping.

'Sho, mammy!' said Ailcey in a whisper with a nudge, standing behind her; 'wat yeh stan' hear cryin' befo' dese ole wite tolks for!'

'Come, come, Judy! what are you crying about! let us hear quickly what you've got to say. Don't be frightened!'

'No maus Stephen, I's not feared: I could run thru troop a. hosses an' face de debil! My soul's happy, my soul's on fieh! Whoo! blessed Jesus! ride on King!' when the old woman tossed and tumbled about so dextrously, that the master and mistress considered themselves lucky in getting out of the way.

'The old thing's crazy! We'll not be able to get anything out of her Mrs. Franks.'

'No maus Stephen, blessed be God a'mighty! I's not crazy, but sobeh as a judge! an—'

'Then let us hear about little Joe, as you can understand so well what is said around you, and let us have no more of your whooping and nonsense, distracting the neighborhood!'

'Blessed God! blessed God! Laud sen' a nutheh gale! O, for a nutheh showeh!'

'I really believe she's crazy! We've now been here over an hour, and no nearer the information than before.'

'I think she's better now!' said Mrs. Franks.

'Judy, can you compose yourself long enough to answer my questions?' inquired Franks.

'O yes, mausta! I knows wat I's 'bout, but w'en mausta Jesus calls, ebry body mus' stan' back, case he's 'bove all!'

'That's all right Judy, all right; but let us hear about little Joe; do you know anything about him, where he is, or how he was taken away?'

'He was dar Sattiday night, maus Stephen.'

'What time Judy, on Saturday evening was he there?'

'W'en da was eatin' suppeh seh.'

'How do you know, when you were at the lower quarters, and he in your hut?'

'He was put to bed den.'

'Who put him to bed, you?'

'No, seh, Ailcey.'

'Ailcey—who went with her, any one?'

'Yes seh, Van Winteh Ben went wid her.'

'Van Winter's Ben! I thought we'd get at the thieves presently; I knew I'd ferret it out! Well now Judy, I ask you as a Christian, and expect you to act with me as one Christian with another—has not Mrs. Van Winter been talking to you about this boy?'

'No seh, neveh!'

'Nor to Henry?'

'No seh!'

'Did not she, to your knowledge, send Ben there that night to steal away little Joe?'

'No seh!'

'Did you not hear Ailcey tell some one, or talking in her sleep, say that Mrs. Van Winter had something to do with the abduction of that boy?'

'Maus Stephen, I do'n undehstan' dat duckin or "duckshun," dat w'at yeh call it—dat big wud!'

'O! "abduction" means stealing away a person, Judy.'

'Case I want gwine tell nothin 'bout it.'

'Well, what do you know Judy?'

'As dar's wud a troof in me, I knows nothin' 'bout it.'

'Well Judy, you can go now. She's an honest old creature I believe!' said Franks, as the old fat cook turned away.

'Yes, poor old black fat thing! she's religious to a fault,' replied Mrs. Franks.

'Well Ailcey, what do you know about it?' enquired the master.

'Nothin' seh, o'ny mammy Judy ask me toat 'im up to de hut an' put 'im in bed.'

'Well, did you do it?'

'Yes seh!'

'Did Ben go with you?'

'Yes seh!'

'Did he return with you to the lower quarters?'

'Yes seh!'

'Did he not go back again, or did he remain in the house?'

''E stay in.'

Did you not see some one lurking about the house when you took the boy up to the hut?'

'I tho't I hearn some un in de bushes, but Ben say 'twan no one.'

'Now Ailcey, dont you know who that was?'

'No seh!'

'Was'nt it old Joe?'

'No seh, lef' 'im in de low quarteh.'

'Was it Henry?'

'Don no seh!'

'Was'nt it Mrs. Van Winter's—'

'Why Colonel!' exclaimed Mrs. Franks with surprise.

'Negroes I mean! You did'nt let me finish the sentence my dear!' explained he, correcting his error.

'I don'o seh!'

'Now tell me candidly, my girl, who and what you thought it was at the time?'

'I do'n like to tell!' replied the girl, looking down.

'Tell Ailcey! who do you think it was, and what they were after!' enquired Mrs. Franks.

'I do'n want tell missus!'

'Tell, you goose you! did you see any one?' continued Franks.

'I jis glance 'em.'

'Was the person close to you?' farther inquired Mrs. Franks.

'Yes um, da toched me on de shouldeh an' run.'

'Well, why don't you tell then Ailcey, who you thought it was, and what they were after, you stubborn jade you, speak!' stormed Franks, stamping his foot.

'Don't get out of temper, Colonel! make some allowance for her under the circumstances. Now tell Ailcey, what you thought at the time?' mildly asked Mrs. Franks.

'I tho't 'twas maus Stephen afteh me.'

'Well, if you know nothing about it, you may go now!' gruffly replied her master. 'These negroes are not to be trusted. They will endeavor to screen each other if they have the least chance to do so. I'll sell that girl!'

'Colonel don't be hasty in this matter, I beg of you!' said Mrs. Franks, earnestly.

'I mean to let her go to the man she most hates; that's Crow.'

'Why do you think she hates Crow so badly?'

'By the side looks she gives him when he comes into the house.'

'I pray you then Colonel, to attempt no more auction sales, and you may avoid unpleasant associations in that direction.'

'Yes, by the by, speaking of the auction, I really believe Mrs. Van Winter had something to do with the abduction of that little negro.'

'I think you do her wrong, Colonel Franks; she's our friend, and aside from this, I dont think her capable of such a thing.'

'Such friendship is worse than open enmity my dear, and should be studiously shunned.'

'I must acquit her Colonel, of all agency in this matter.'

'Well mark what I tell you Mrs. Franks, you'll yet hear more of it, and that too at no distant day.'

'Well it may be, but I can't think so.'

'May be!' I'm sure so. And more: I believe that boy has been induced to take advantage of my clemency, and run away. I'll make an example of him, because what one negro succeeds in doing, another will attempt. I'll have him at any cost. Let him go on this way and there wont be a negro in the neighborhood presently.'

'Whom do you mean Colonel?'

'I mean that ingrate Henry, that's who!'

'Henry gone!'

'I have no doubt of it at all!' as he had a pass to Woodville and Jackson; and now the child is stolen by some one, I've no doubt himself. I might have had some leniency towards him had he not committed a theft, a crime of all others the most destestable in my estimation.'

'And Henry is really gone?' with surprise again inquired Mrs. Franks.

'He is my dear, and you appear to be quite inquisitive about it!' remarked Franks as he thought he observed a concealed smile upon their lips.

'I am inquisitive Colonel, because whatever interests you should interest me.'

'By Monday evening, hanged if I don't know all about this thing. Ailcey, call Charles to get my saddle horse!'

'Charles ain' hear maus Stephen.'

'Where's old Joe?'

'At de hut, seh.'

'Tell him to saddle Oscar immediately and bring him to the door.'

'Yes seh!' replied the girl, lightly tripping away.

The horse was soon at the door, and with his rider cantering away, the Colonel to return in the evening.

'Tony, what is mammy Judy about?' enquired Mrs. Franks as evening approached.

'She's sif'en meal missus to make mush for our suppeh.'

'You must tell mammy not to forget me Tony, in the distribution of her mush and milk.'

Yes missus, I tell 'er right now! when away ran Tony bearing the message, eager as are all children to be the agents of an act of kindness.

Mammy Judy smiling received the message with the assurance of 'Yes, dat she shall hab much as she want!' when turning about she gave strict orders that Ailcey neglect not to have a china bowl in readiness to receive the first installment of the hasty pudding.

The hut of mammy Judy served as a sort of head quarters on Saturday and Sunday evenings for the slaves from the plantation, and those in the town belonging to the 'estate,' who this evening enjoyed a hearty laugh, at the expense of daddy Joe.

Slaves are not generally supplied with light in their huts, consequently, except from the fat of their meat and that gathered about the kitchen with which they make a 'lamp,' and the use of pine wood tapers, they eat and do everything about their dwellings in the dark.

Hasty pudding for the evening being the bill of fare, all sat patiently awaiting the summons of mammy Judy, some on blocks, some on logs of wood, some on slab benches, some on inverted buckets and half barrel wash tubs, and whatever was convenient, while many of the girls, and other young people, were seated on the floor around against the wall.

'Hush chilen!' admonished mammy Judy, after carefully seeing that each one down to Tony, had been served with a quota from the kettle.

'Laud, make us truly tankful for wat we 'bout to 'ceive!' petitioned daddy Joe with uplifted hands. 'Stop dar wid yo' nause an' nonesense ole people can' hear der years to eat!' admonished the old man as he took the pewter dish between his knees and commenced an earnest discussion of its contents. 'Do'n yeh hear me say hush dar? Do'n yeh hear!'

'Joe!' was the authorative voice from without.

'Sar!'

'Take my horse to the stable!'

'Yes, sar!' responded the old man, sitting down his bowl of mush and milk on the hearth in the corner of the jam. 'Do'n any on yeh toch dat, yeh hear?'

'We ain gwine to daddy Joe,' replied the young people.

'How cum de young folks gwine eat yo' mush and milk?' Sho, ole man, g' long whar yeh gwine, an' let young folks 'lone!' retorted mammy Judy.

On returning from the stable, in his hurry, the old man took up the bowl of a young man who sat it on his stool for a moment.

'See hear daddy Joe, dat my mush!' said the young man.

'How cum dis yone?' replied the old man.

'Wy I put it dar; yeh put yone in de chimbly corneh.

'Ah! dat I did!' exclaimed he, taking up the bowl eating heartily.

'Wat dat yeh all been doin' hear?' Some on yeh young tolks been prankin' long wid dis mush an' milk!' continued the old man, champing and chewing in a manner which indicated something more solid than mush and milk.

'Deed we did'n daddy Joe; did'n do nothin' to yo' mush an' milk so we did'n!' replied Ailcey, whose word was always sufficient with the old people.

'Hi, what dis in hear! Sumpen mighty crisp!' said daddy Joe, still eating heartily and now and again blowing something from his mouth like course meal husks. 'Sumpen hear mighty crisp I tells yeh! Ole umin, light dat pine knot dar; so dabk yeh can't see to talk. Git light dar quick ole umin! Sumpen hear mighty crisp in dis mush an' milk!—Mighty crisp!'

'Good Laud! see dar now! I tole yeh so!' exclaimed mammy Judy when on producing a light, the bowl was found to be partially filled with large black house roaches.

'Reckon daddy Joe do'n thank im for dat!' said little Tony, referring to the blessing of the old man; amidst an outburst of tittering and snickering among the young people.

Daddy Joe lost his supper, when the slaves retired for the evening.

CHAPTER XIII.

PERPLEXITY.

Early on Monday morning, Colonel Franks arose to start for Woodville and Jackson, in search of the fugitive.

'My dear, is Ailcey up? Please call Tony,' said Mrs. Franks, the boy soon appearing before his mistress. 'Tony, call Ailcey,' continued she; 'your master is up and going to the country.'

'Missus Ailcey ain' dar!' replied the boy, returning in haste from the nursery.

'Certainly she is; did you go into the nursery?'

'Yes um!'

'Are the children there?'

'Yes um boph on 'em.'

'Then she can't be far—she'll be in presently.'

'Missus, she ain' come yit,' repeated the boy after a short absence.

'Did you look in the nursery again?'

'Yes um!'

'Are the children still in bed?'

'Yes um, boph sleep, only maus George awake.'

'You mean one asleep and the other awake!' said Mrs. Franks smiling.

'Yes um boph wake!' replied the boy.

'Did'nt you tell me Tony that your master George only was awake?' asked the mistress.

'Miss Martha sleep fus, den she wake up and talk to maus George,' explained the boy, his master laughing, declared that a negro's skull was too thick to comprehend anything.

'Don't mistake yourself, Colonel!' replied Mrs. Franks; 'that boy is anything but a blockhead, mind that!'

'My dear, can't you see something about that girl?' said the Colonel.

'Run quickly Tony, and see if Ailcey is in the hut,' bade Mrs. Franks.

'Dear me!' continued she; since the missing of little Joe, she's all gossip, and we need'nt expect much of her until the thing has died away.'

'She'll not gossip after to-day, my dear!' replied the Colonel decisively; 'as I'm determined to put her in my pocket in time, before she is decoyed away by that ungrateful wretch, who is doubtless ready for anything, however vile, for revenge.'

Ailcey was a handsome black girl, graceful and intelligent, but having been raised on the plantation, had not the opportunity of a house maid for refinement. The Colonel having had a favorable opinion of her as a servant, frequently requested that she be taken from the field, long before it had been done. This had not the most favorable impression upon the mind of his lady, who since the morning of the interview, the day before, had completely turned against the girl.

Mrs. Franks was an amiable lady and lenient mistress, but did a slave offend, she might be expected to act as a mistress; and still more, she was a woman; but concerning Ailcey she was mistaken, as a better and more pure hearted female slave, there was not to be found; and as true to her mistress and her own honor, as was Maggie herself.

'Missus, she ain't dare nuther! aun' Judy 'ain seed 'er fom las' night!' said the boy who came running up the stairs.

'Then call Charles immediately!' ordered she; when away went he and shortly came Charles.

'Servant mist'ess!' saluted Charles, as he entered her presence.

'Charles, do you know anything of Ailcey?' enquired she.

'No mist'ess, I don't.'

'When did you see her last?'

'Last night ma'am.'

'Was she in company with any one?'

'Yes ma'am, Potter's Rachel.'

'What time in the evening was it Charles?'

'After seven o'clock ma'am.'

'O, she was home after that and went to bed in the nursery, where she has been sleeping for several nights.'

'My dear, this thing must be probed to the bottom at once! things are taking such a strange course, that we don't know whom to trust. I'll be hanged if I understand it!' The carriage being ordered, they went directly down to 'squire Potter's.

'Good morning Mrs. Potter!—you will pardon us for the intrusion at so early an hour, but as the errand may concern us all, I'll not stop to be ceremonious—do I find the 'squire in?'

'The answer being in the affirmative, a servant being in attendance, the old gentleman soon made his appearance.

'Good morning Colonel and Madam Franks!' saluted he.

'Good morning 'squire! I sha'nt be ceremonious, and to give you a history of my errand, and to make a short story of a long one, we'll 'make a lump job of it,' to use a homely phrase.'

'I know the 'squire will be interested!' added Mrs. Franks.

No doubt of it at all ma'am!' replied Mrs. Potter who seemed to anticipate them.

'It is this:' resumed the Colonel. 'On Friday I gave my boy Henry verbal permission to go to the country, when he pretended to leave. On Saturday evening during the negro-gathering at the old quarters, my little negro boy Joe was stolen away, and on last evening, our negro girl Ailcey the nurse, cleared out, and it seems was last seen in company with your negro girl Rachel.'

'Titus, call Rachel there! No doubt but white men are at the bottom of it,' said Potter.

'Missus, hear I is!' drawled the girl awkwardly, with a courtsey.

'Speak to your master there; he wants you,' ordered Mrs. Potter.

'Mausta!' saluted the girl courtseying.

'Rachel my girl, I want you to tell me, were you with Colonel Frank's black girl Ailcey on last evening?'

'Yes seh, I war.'

'Where Rachel!' continued the master.

'Hear seh, at our house.'

'Where did you go to?'

'We go down to docteh Denny.'

'What for—what took you down to Dr. Denny's, Rachel?'

'Went 'long with Ailcey.'

'What did Ailcey go there for—do you know?'

Went dar to see Craig' Polly.'

'Craig's Polly; which of Mr. Craig's negro girls is that?'

'Dat un w'ot mos' white.'

'Well, was Polly there?'

'She want dar w'en we go, but she soon come.'

'Why did you go to Dr. Denny's to meet Polly?'

'Ailcey say Polly go'n to meet er dar.'

'Well, did they leave there when you did?'

'Yes seh.'

'Where did you go to then?'

'I come home, seh.'

'Where did they go?'

'Da say da go'n down undeh de Hill.'

'Who else was with them besides you?'

'No un seh.'

'Was there no man with them, when they left for under the Hill?'

'No seh.'

'Did you see no man about at all Rachel?'

'No seh.'

'Now don't be afraid to tell: was there no white person at all spoke to you when together last night?'

'None but some wite gent'men come up an' want walk wid us, same like da al'as do we black gals w'en we go out.'

'Did the girls seem to be acquainted and glad to see them?'

'No seh, de gals run, and de gent'men cus—.'

'Never mind that Rachel, you can go now,' concluded her master.

'Well 'squire, hanged if this thing mus'nt be stopped! Four slaves in less than that many days gone from under our very eyes, and we unable to detect them! It's insufferable! and I believe whites to be at the head of it. I have my suspicions on a party who stands high in the community, and—

'Now Colonel, if you please!' interrupted Mrs. Franks.

'Well, I suppose we'll have for the present, to pass that by,' replied he.

'Indeed, something really should be done!' said the 'squire.

'Yes, and that quickly, if we would keep our negroes to prevent us from starving.'

'I think the thing should at once be seen into: what say you Colonel?'

'As I have several miles to ride this morning,' said Franks, looking at his watch; 'it now being past nine o'clock, I must leave so as to be back in the evening. Any steps that may be taken before my return, you have the free use of my name. Good morning!'

A few minutes and the Colonel was at his own door, astride of a horse, and on his way to Woodville.

CHAPTER XIV.

GAD AND GOSSIP.

This day the hut of mammy Judy seemed to be the licensed resort for all the slaves of the town; and even many whites were seen occasionally to drop in and out, as they passed along. Every one knew the residence of Colonel Franks, and many of the dusky inhabitants of the place, were solely indebted to the purse-proud occupants of the 'great house,' for their introduction to that part of Mississippi.

For years he and Major Armsted were the only reliable traders upon whom could be depended for a choice gang of field negroes and other marketable people. And not only this section, but the whole Mississippi Valley to some extent, was to them indebted. First as young men the Agents of Woodfolk, in maturer age their names became as household words and known as the great proprietory Mississippi or 'Georgia Negro Traders.'

Domestic service seemed for the time suspended, and little required at home to do, as the day was spent as a kind of gala-day, in going about from place to place talking of every thing.

Among the foremost of these was mammy Judy, for although she partially did, and was expected to stay and be at home to-day, and act as an oracle, yet she merely stole a little time to run over to Mrs. Van Winter's, step in at 'squire Potter's to speak a word to Milly, drop by Dr. Denny's, and just poke in her head at Craig's a moment.

'I been tellin' on 'em so! All along I been tellin' on 'em, but da ud'n bleve me!' solliloquised mammy Judy, when the first dash of news through the boy Tony reached her, that Ailcey had gone and taken with her some of 'squire Potter's people, several of Dr. Denny's, a gang of Craig's and a half of Van Winter's. 'Dat jis wat I been tellin' on 'em all along, but da ud'n blevo me!' concluded she.

'Yeh hear de news!' exclaimed Potter's Winney to Van Winter's Biddy.

'I hearn dat Ailcey gone!' replied Biddy.

'Dat all; no mo'!' inquired the girl with a high turban of Madras on her head.

'I hearn little Joe go too!'

'Didn' yeh hear dat Denny' Sookey, an' Craig' Polly, took a whole heap ob Potteh' people an' clar'd out wid two po' wite mens, and dat da all seen comin' out Van Winteh de old ablish'neh, soon in de monin' fo' day?'

'No!' replied the good natured simple hearted Biddy; 'I did nt!'

'Yes sho's yeh baun dat true, case urly dis mornin' Cunel Frank' an' lady come see mausta—and yeh know 'e squieh 'an make de law—an' mausteh g'in 'em papehs, an' da go arter de Judge to put 'er in Jail?'

'To put who in jail?'

'Wy dat ole ablishineh, Miss Van-Winteh! I wish da a'l dead dese ole ablishinehs, case da steal us an' sell us down souph to haud maustas, w'en we got good places. Any how she go'n to jail, an' I's glad!'

Looking seriously at her, Biddy gave a long sigh, saying nothing to commit herself, but going home, communicated directly to her mistress that which she heard, as Mrs. Van Winter was by all regarded as a friend to the negro race, and at that time the subject of strong suspicion among the slave holders of the neighborhood.

Eager to gad and gossip, from place to place the girl Winney passed about relating the same to each and all with whom she chanced to converse, they imparting to others the same strange story, until reaching the ears of intelligent whites who had heard no other version, it spread through the city as a statements of facts.

Learning as many did by sending to the house, that the Colonel that day had gone in search of his slaves, the statement was confirmed as having come from Mrs. Franks, who was known to be a firm friend of Mrs. Van Winter.

'Upon my word!' said Captain Grason on meeting Sheriff Hughes; 'Sheriff, things are coming to a pretty pass!'

'What's that Captain?' inquired the Sheriff.

'Have you not heard the news yet, concerning the negroes?'

'Why no! I've been away to Vicksburg the last ten days, and just getting back.'

'O, Heavens! we're no longer safe in our own houses. Why sir, we're about being overwhelmed by an infamous class of persons who live in our midst, and eat at our tables!'

'You surprise me Captain! what's the matter?'

'Sir, it would take a week to relate the particulars, but our slaves are running off by wholesale. On Sunday night a parcel of Colonel Frank's negroes left, a lot of Dr. Denny's, some of 'squire Potter's, and a gang of Craig's, aided by white men, whom together with the negroes were seen before day in the morning coming out of the widow Van Winter's, who was afterwards arrested, and since taken before the judge on a writ of habeas corpus, but the circumstances against her being so strong she was remanded for trial, which so far strengthens the accusation. I know not where this thing will end!'

'Surprising indeed sir!' replied Hughes; 'I had not heard of it before, but shall immediately repair to her house, and learn all the facts in the case. I am well acquainted with Mrs. Van Winter—in fact she is a relation of my wife—and must hasten. Good day sir!'

On ringing the bell, a quick step brought a person to the door, when on being opened, the Sheriff found himself in the warm embraces of the kind hearted and affectionate Mrs Van Winter herself.

After the usual civilities, she was the first to introduce the subject, informing him of the loss by their mutual friends Colonel Franks and lady, with others, and no surprise was greater than that on hearing the story current concerning herself.

Mammy Judy was as busy as she well could be, in hearing and telling news among the slaves who continually came and went through the day. So overwhelmed with excitement was she, that she had little else to say in making a period, than 'All a long I been tellin' on yeh so, but yeh would'n bleve me!'

Among the many who thronged the hut was Potter's Milly. She in person was black stout and fat, bearing a striking resemblance to the matronly old occupant mammy Judy. For two hours or more letting a number come in, gossip and pass out, only to be immediately succeeded by another; who like the old country woman who for the first time in visiting London stood all day upon the sidewalk of the principal thoroughfare waiting till the crowd of people and cavalcade of vehicles passed, before she made the attempt to cross the street: she sat waiting till a moment would occur by which in private to impart a secret to her friend alone. That moment did at last arrive.

'Judy!' said the old woman in a whisper; 'I been waitin' all day long to see yeh for sumpen' ticlar!'

'W'at dat Milly?' whispered mammy Judy scarcely above her breath.

'I's gwine too!' and she hurried away to prepare supper for the white folks before they missed her, though she had been absent full two hours and a half, another thirty minutes being required for the fat old woman to reach the house.

'Hear dat now!' whispered mammy Judy; 'I tole yeh so!'

'Well my dear, not a word of that graceless dog, the little negro, nor that girl,' said Franks who had just returned from the country; 'but I am fully compensated for the disappointment, on learning of the arrest and imprisonment of that—!'

'Who Colonel!' interrupted his wife.

'I hope after this you'll be willing to set some estimation on my judgment—I mean your friend Mrs. Van Winter the abolitionist!'

'I beg your pardon Colonel, as nothing is farther from the truth! From whom did you receive that intelligence?'

'I met Captain Grason on his way to Woodville, who informed me that it was current in town, and that you had corroborated the statement. Did you see him?'

'Nothing of the kind sir, and it has not been more than half an hour since Mrs. Van Winter left here, who heartily sympathizes with us, though she has her strange notions that black people have as much right to fredom as white.'

'Well my dear, we'll drop the subject!' concluded the Colonel with much apparent disappointment.

'The leading gentlemen of the town and neighborhood assembled inaugurating the strictest vigilant police regulations, when after free and frequent potations of brandy and water, of which there was no scarcity about the Colonel's mansion, the company separated, being much higher spirited, if not better satisfied, than when they met in council.

This evening Charles and Andy met each other in the street, but in consequence of the strict injunction on the slaves by the patrol law recently instituted, they only made signs as they passed, intending to meet at a designated point. But the patrol reconnoitred so closely in their track they were driven entirely from their purpose, retiring to their homes for the night,

CHAPTER XV.

INTERCHANGE OF OPINION.

The landing of a steamer on her downward trip, brought Judge Ballard and Major Armsted to Natchez. The Judge had come to examine the country, purchase a cotton farm, and complete the arrangements of an interest in the 'Merchantman.' Already the proprietor of a large estate in Cuba, he was desirous of possessing a Mississippi cotton place. Disappointed by the absence of his wife abroad, he was satisfied to know that her object was accomplished.

Major Armsted was a man of ripe intelligence, acquired by years of rigid experience and close observation, rather than literary culture; though his educational attainments as a business man, were quite respectable. He for years had been the partner in business with Colonel Stephen Franks. In Baltimore, Washington City, Annapolis, Richmond, Norfolk, Charlestown, and Winchester, Va., a prison or receptacle for Coffle Gangs of Slaves purchased and sold in the market, comprised their principal places of business in the slave growing states of the Union.

The Major was a great jester, full of humor, and fond of a joke, ever ready to give and take such even from a slave. A great common sense man, by strict attention to men and things, and general observation, he had become a philosopher among his fellows.

'Quite happy to meet you Judge, in these parts!' greeted Franks; 'wonder you could find your way so far south, especially at such a period, these being election times!'

'Don't matter a bit, as he's not up for anything I believe just now, except for negro trading! and in that he is quite a proselyte, and heretic to the teachings of his northern faith!' jocosely remarked Armsted.

'Don't mistake me gentlemen, because it was the incident of my life to be born in a non-slaveholding state. I'm certain that I am not at all understood as I should be on this question!' earnestly replied the Judge.

'The North has rather given you a bad name Judge, and it's difficult to separate yourself now from it, holding the position that you do, as one of her ablest jurists,' said Armsted.

'Well gentlemen!' seriously replied the Judge; 'as regards my opinion of negro slavery, the circumstances which brought me here, my large interest and responsibility in the slave-labor products of Cuba, should be I think sufficient evidence of my fidelity to southern principles, to say nothing of my official records, which modesty should forbid my reference to.'

'Certainly, certainly, Judge! The Colonel is at fault. He has lost sight of the fact that you it was, who seized the first runaway negro by the throat and held him by the compromise grasp, until we southern gentlemen sent for him and had him brought back!'

'Good, good, by hookie!' replied the Colonel, rubbing his hands together.

'I hope I'm understood gentlemen!' seriously remarked the Judge.

'I think so Judge, I think so!' replied Armsted, evidently designing a full commitment on the part of the Judge; 'and if not, a little explanation will set us right.'

'It is true that I have not before been engaged in the slave trade, because until recently I had conscientious scruples about the thing—and I suppose I'm allowed the right of conscience as well as other folks'—smilingly said the Judge; 'never having purchased but for peopling my own plantation. But a little sober reflection set me right on that point. It is plain that the right to buy implies the right to hold, also to sell; and if there be right in the one, there is in the other; the premises being right the conclusion follows as a matter of course. I have therefore determined, not only to buy and hold, but buy and sell also. As I have heretofore been interested for the trade I will become interested in it.'

'Capital, capital, by George!—that's conclusive. Charles! a pitcher of cool water here; Judge, take another glass of brandy.'

'Good, very good!' said Armsted; 'so far, but there is such a thing as feeding out of two cribs—present company you know, and so—ahem!—therefore we should like to hear the Judge's opinion of equality, what it means, anyhow. I'm anxious to learn some of the doctrines of human rights, not knowing how soon I may be called upon to practice them, as I may yet marry some little Yankee girl, full of her Puritan notions. And I'm told an old bachelor can't come it up that way, except he has a 'pocket full of rocks,' and can talk philanthropy like old Wilberforce.'

'Here gentlemen, I beg to make an episode, before replying to Major Armsted,' suggested the Judge. 'His jest concerning the Yankee girl reminds me—and I hope it may not be amiss in saying so—that my lady is the daughter of a clergyman, brought up amidst the sand-hills of New England, and I think I'll not have to go from the present company, to prove her a good slaveholder. So the Major may see that we northerners are not all alike.'

How about the Compromise measures Judge? Stand up to the thing all through, and no flinching.'

'My opinion sir, is a matter of record, being the first judge, before whom a case was tested, which resulted in favor of the South. And I go farther than this; I hold as a just construction of the law, that not only has the slaveholder a right to reclaim his slave when and wherever found, but by its provision every free black in the country north and south, are liable to enslavement by any white person. They are freemen by sufferance or slaves at large, whom any white person may claim at discretion. It was a just decision of the Supreme Court—though I was in advance of it by action—that persons of African descent have no rights that white men are bound to respect!'

'Judge Ballard, with this explanation, I am satisfied; indeed as a southern man I would say, that you've conceded all that I could ask, and more than we expected. But this is a legal disquisition; what is your private opinion respecting the justice of the measures?'

'I think them right sir, according to our system of government.'

'But how will you get away from your representative system Judge? In this your blacks are either voters, or reckoned among the inhabitants.'

'Very well sir, they stand in the same relation as your negroes. In some of the states they are permitted to vote, but can't be voted for, and this leaves them without any political rights at all. Suffrage sir, is one thing, franchisement another; the one a mere privilege—a thing permitted—the other a right inherent, that which is inviolable—cannot be interfered with. And my good sir, enumeration is a national measure, for which we are not sectionally responsible.'

'Well Judge. I'm compelled to admit that you are a very good southerner, upon the whole, you are severe upon the negroes; you seem to allow them no chance.'

'I like negroes well enough in their place!'

'How can you reconcile yourself to the state of things in Cuba, where the blacks enter largely into the social system?'

'I don't like it at all, and never could become reconciled to the state of things there. I consider that Colony as it now stands, a moral pestilence, a blighting curse, and it is useless to endeavour to disguise the fact: Cuba must cease to be a Spanish Colony, and become American Territory. Those mongrel Creoles are incapable of self-government, and should be compelled to submit to the United States.'

'Well Judge, admitting the latter part of that, as I rather guess we are all of the same way of thinking—how do you manage to get on with society when you are there?'

'I cannot for a moment tolerate it! One of the hateful customs of the place is, that you must exchange civilities with whomsoever solicits it, consequently, the most stupid and ugly negro you meet in the street, may ask for a 'light' from your cigar.'

'I know it, and I invariably comply with the request. How do you act in such a case?'

'I invariably comply, but as invariably throw away my cigar! If this were all, it would not be so bad, but then the idea of meeting negroes and mulattoes at the Levees of the Captain General is intolerable! It will never do to permit this state of things so near our own shores.'

'Why throw away the cigar, Judge? What objection could there be to it, because a negro took a light from it?'

'Because they are certain to take hold of it with their black fingers!'

'Just as I've always heard Judge Ballard. You northerners are a great deal more fastidious about negroes than we of the south, and you'll pardon me if I add, 'more nice than wise,' to use a homily. Did ever it occur to you that black fingers made that cigar, before it entered your white lips!—all tobacco preparations being worked by negro hands in Cuba—and very frequently in closing up the wrapper, they draw it through their lips to give it tenacity.'

'The deuce! Is that a fact Major!'

'Does that surprise you Judge?' I'm sure the victuals you eat is cooked by black hands, the bread kneaded and made by black hands, and the sugar and molasses you use, all pass through black hands, or rather the hands of negroes pass through them; at least you could not refrain from thinking so, had you seen them as I have frequently, with arms full length immersed in molasses.'

'Well Major, truly there are some things we are obliged to swallow, and I suppose these are among them.'

'Though a Judge, your honor, you perceive that there are some things you have not learned.'

'True Major, true; and I like the negro well enough in his place, but there is a disposition peculiar to the race, to shove themselves into the notice of the whites.'

'Not peculiar to them Judge, but common to mankind. The black man desires association with the white, because the latter is regarded his superior. In the south it is the poor white man with the wealthy, and in Europe the common with the gentlefolks. In the north you have not made these distinctions among the whites, which prevents you from noticing this trait among yourselves.'

'Tell me Major, as you seem so well to understand them, why a negro swells so soon into importance?'

'Simply because he's just like you Judge, and I! It is simply a manifestation of human nature in an humble position, the same as that developed in the breast of a conqueror. Our strictures are not just on this unfortunate race, as we condemn in them, that which we approve in ourselves. Southerner as I am, I can joke with a slave just because he is a man; some of them indeed, fine warm-hearted fellows, and intelligent, as was the Colonel's Henry.'

'I can't swallow that Major! Joking with a negro, is rather too large a dose for me!'

'Let me give you an idea of my feeling about these things; I have on my place two good natured black fellows, full of pranks and jokes—Bob and Jeff. Passing along one morning Jef was approaching me, when just as we met and I was about to give him the time of day, he made a sudden halt, placing himself in the attitude of a pugilist, grasping the muscle of his left arm, looking me full in the eyes exclaimed: 'Maus Army, my arm aches for you!' when stepping aside he gave the path to me to pass by.'

'Did you not rebuke him for the impudence?'

'I laid my hand upon his shoulders as we passed, and gave him a laugh instead. At another time, passing along in company, Bob was righting up a section of fence, when Jef came along. 'How is yeh, Jef!' saluted Bob, without a response. Supposing he had not seen me, I halloed out: 'How are you Jef!' but to this, he made no reply. A gentleman in company with me who enjoyed the joke, said: 'Why Jef, you appear to be above speaking to your old friends!' Throwing his head slightly down with a rocking motion in his walk, elongating his mouth after the manner of a sausage—which by the way needed no improvement in that direction—in a tone of importance; still looking down he exclaimed, I 'totes a meat!' He had indeed, a fine gammon on his shoulder from which that evening, he doubtless intended a good supper with his wife, which made him feel important, just as Judge Ballard feels when he receives the news that 'sugar is up,' and contemplates large profits from his crop of that season.'

'I'll be plagued, Major, if your love of the ludicrous dont induce you to give the freest possible license to your negroes! I wonder they respect you!'

'One thing Judge, I have learned by my intercourse with men, that pleasantry is the life and soul of the social system; and good treatment begets more labor from the slave than bad. A smile from the master, is better than cross looks, and one crack of a joke with him, is worth a hundred cracks of the whip. Only confide in him, and let him be satisfied that you respect him as a man, he'll work himself to death to prove his worthiness.'

'After all, Major, you still hold them as slaves, though you claim for them the common rights of other people.'

'Certainly! and I would just as readily hold a white as a black in slavery, were it the custom and policy of the country to do so. It is all a matter of self interest with me; and though I am morally opposed to slavery, yet while the thing exists, I may as well profit by it, as others.'

'Well Major,' concluded the Judge; 'let us drop the subject, and I hope that the free interchange of opinion, will prove no detriment to our future prospects and continued friendship.'

'Not at all sir, not at all!' concluded the Major with a smile.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, DECEMBER 7, 1861.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

The President's Message.

Will have more readers than such documents usually do; people will read and re-read it because it is not only short, but half puzzling in the novelty of the style, a half reticent half curt mode of expression very difficult to get the hang of.

Yet the people will rise from the reading of the "message" with an almost universal feeling of disappointment. It does not contain one word of generous trust, generous cheer or cordial sympathy with the "great uprising" of the nation which the nation had a right to expect from its chief magistrate. The only states which meet with praise and cheer at the president's hands, are mean little Delaware, blood-treacherous Maryland, hollow hearted Kentucky and ——— Missouri! These are near the executive heart, they stir the presidential respect and admiration and hope, while New York and Massachusetts and the entire noble north, whose blood and treasure have preserved the republic—to say nothing of the President's own life—have no word of praise nor cheer awarded them! A warm message truly, a cheering message verily, a stirring message indeed for the hundreds of thousand houseless soldiers who bivouack on the Potomac—nay the confederates there congregated must feel cheered at the apathy of the federal chief

There are many topics in the message evidently above Mr. Lincoln's comprehension, such as our "foreign relations," and the question of capital vs. labor, in which Mr. Seward might have helped him a little for the credit of the cabinet which allowed so disgraceful a "muggle" to pass, as having been understood, even by them.

RECOGNITION OF HAYTI AND LIBERIA.

One of the most amusing aspects of American caste-hate, is, when a white American not entirely free from its influence is placed in a position in which he is obliged to introduce a black, as a man, a gentleman, or a brother. It works against the grain most frightfully, and the contortions of face wherewith words are uttered which the soul believes out, are a perfect study. President Lincoln "makes months" after this fashion:

"If any good reason exists why we should remain longer in witholding our recognition of the independence and sovereignty of Hayti and Liberia, I am unable to discern it. Unwilling, however, to inaugurate a novel policy in regard to them without the approbation of Congress, I submit for your consideration the expediency of an appropriation for maintaining a Charge d'Affaires near each of those new States It does not admit of doubt that important commercial advantages might be secured by favorable treaties with them."

In this paragraph the President evidently squirms as wretchedly in introducing two negro states into the family of nations, as he will one of these days when Mr. Seward shall introduce the black minister of Hayti to the chief magistrate of our Union. For we earnestly hope that both Hayti and Liberia will accede to no treaty of amity, &c., unless one of their citizens (who must be black) shall be accredited to this government. What does the President mean by "these new States?" Surely Hayti is a government at least sixty years old, and there is nothing new nor novel in the fact of its recognition by one of the great powers of the earth.

THE DISPOSAL OF THE FREEDMEN

is thus glanced at by Mr. Lincoln:

"Under and by virtue of the act of Congress, entitled "An Act to confiscate property used for insurrectionary purposes," approved August 6th, 1861, the legal claim of certain persons to the labor and service in certain other persons have become forfeited, and numbers of the latter, thus liberated are already dependent on the United States, and must be provided for in some way. Besides this, it is not impossible that some of the States will pass similar enactments for their own benefits respectively, and by the operations of which persons of the same class will be thrown upon them for disposal. In such cases I recommend that Congress provide for accepting such persons from such States according to some mode of valuation in lieu, pro tano of direct taxes, or upon some other plan to be agreed on with such States respectively that such persons on such acceptance by the general government be at once deemed free, and that in any event steps be taken for colonizing both classes, or the one first mentioned if the other shall not be brought into existence, at some place or places in a climate congenial to them. It might be well to consider too, whether the free colored people already in the United States could not, so far as individuals may desire, be included in such colonization. To carry out the plan of colonization may involve the acquiring of territory, and also the appropriation of money beyond that to be expended in the territorial acquisition Having practised the acquisition of territory for nearly sixty years, the question of constitutional power to do so is no longer an open one with us.

The power was at first questioned by Mr. Jefferson, who, however, in the purchase of Louisiana, yielded his scruples to the plea of great expediency. If it be said that the only legitimate object of acquiring territory is to furnish homes for white men, this measure effects that object for the emigration of colored men, leaves additional room for white men remaining or coming here. Mr. Jefferson, however, placed the importance of procuring Louisiana more on political and commercial grounds than on providing room for population.

On this whole proposition, including the appropriation of money with the acquisition of territory, does not the expediency amount to absolute necessity, that without which the Government cannot be perpetuated. The war continues. In considering the policy to be adopted for suppressing the insurrection, I have been anxious and careful that the inevitable conflict for this purpose shall not degenerate into a violent and remorseless revolutionary struggle. I have therefore, in every case, thought it proper to keep the integrity of the Union prominent as the primary object of the contest on our part, leaving all questions which are not of vital military importance to the more deliberate action of the Legislature. In the exercise of my best discretion, I have adhered to the blockade of the ports held by the insurgents, instead of putting in force by proclamation the law of Congress, enacted at the late session, for closing those ports. So, also obeying the dictates of prudence, as well as the obligations of law, instead of transcending, I have adhered to the act of Congress to confiscate property, and for insurrectionary purposes. If a new law upon the same subject shall be proposed, the propriety will be duly considered. The Union must be preserved, and hence all indispensable means must be employed. We should not be in haste to determine, that radical and extreme measures which may reach the loyal as well as the disloyal, are indispensable. The inaugural address at the beginning of the Administration and the Message to Congress at the late special session were both mainly devoted to the domestic controversy, out of which the insurrection and consequent war have sprung. Nothing now occurs to add or substract to or from the principles or general purposes stated and expressed in those documents."

"Which means, being interpreted," "Gentlemen, I really don't know what to do with the irrepressible negro. I have said my say, and done the best I could. I cannot be too hard on my wife's relations. They are in rebellion to be sure; but they cannot, when conquered, live on equal terms with their former slaves. They are the government, I feel it, daily, and nightly. If you would have them perpetual this necessity must occur, the negro must be moved out of their sight. I say no more. You are wiser; do as you please about it, but, I beg you, spare their feelings. A few hundred or thousand millions, to pay them for slaves they have forfeited will be cheerfully borne by the Northern mudsills. A short war to acquire more territory to settle these freed negroes upon will just keep our hands in." As free colored men, we thank Mr. Lincoln for nothing, when he asks Congress to provide for the expatriation of such of us as may be desirous to leave the country. We are decidedly of the opinion that we will stay; any surplus change Congress may have can be appropriated "with our consent" to expatriate and settle elsewhere the surviving slaveholders.

We find the following complimentary notice of the performances of Prof Wm. Johnson and Troupe, of Rhinebeck, N. Y., in the Delhi Express of the 20th inst. From the testimony of parties who have heard them, we are prepared to indorse all that the Express has said in regard to the musical attainments of this company.

"Prof Johnson and company, of Rhinebeck, colored, gave a Concert at this place a few evenings since. Though not engaged all the time in giving public performances, they displayed considerable artistic skill. Some of the pieces—such as "Star of the Evening," and "Ellsworth's Lament,"—were admirably performed. With a little careful cultivation, this company would be able to execute in as fine and acceptable a manner as some of the first class troupes of singers."

Letter from Washington.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1st, 1861.

Mr. Editor.—Winter is again upon us with its biting influence; and like death, prepared or unprepared, we must meet it. But few of us have made every preparation for it, and I fear that many will suffer much for three months to come.

Thanksgiving day here was a delightfull day, and was generally observed by our white churches as a day of prayer and other religious exercises; but our colored congregations, with a very few exceptions, made it a day and night of frolic. Mr. Lynch's congregation in Georgetown observed the night by giving a public supper, at which was a large assemblage of persons of both sexes, and a worthy trustee placed at the door to receive the dimes from the pockets of gay folks of all creeds. I think that the churches at least should set a better example to the public. It has been too much the practice here of late years for the colored people to set aside this kind of holiday for their church sprees.

In Washington we notice many strangers from Baltimore; among them Rev. S. W. Chase, Wm. E. Matthews, and Mr. John Henry Butler.

On the evening of the 28th, a grand masonic celebration and installation of the officers of Mount Vernon Chapter of Free Masons came off at the Presbyterian Church, at which the Rev. S. W. Chase, John A. Gray, and others, made fine addresses. A large number was in attendance, who seemed much pleased. In the early part of the evening a large company assembled to witness a marriage ceremony. The parties were Mr. Pennington, of Baltimore, Maryland, and Mrs. Elizabeth Young, of Washington. In the afternoon of Thanksgiving-day large numbers of sorrowing friends and relatives attended the funeral of Mrs. Delia Younger, the wife of Edward C. Younger, who departed this life on Tuesday, the 26th ult., at two o'clock, leaving a husband and seven children to mourn the loss of an affectionate wife and an indulgent mother. This amiable lady had resided long among us, and was loved by all who knew her for her sweet and forgiving disposition, and her constant effort to please and make happy all who came in contact with her. Her many warm friends in the North and West will receive this intelligence with deep regret, but will be rejoiced to know that a few days before her decease she gave her spiritual advisers, the Rev. M. Hamer, and the Rev. Robert Dyson, and all the sorrowing family and friends around her bed side every assurance that she had made her peace with God, and was ready and willing to go; and on the morning of the day on which she died, she, with evident composure, gave all directions respecting the arrangements for her funeral, and assigned particular duties to selected friends, and after a few hours of hard suffering died without a struggle.

Some slight effort was made to get up a Haytian meeting in Washington for Thursday evening last, but, like all previous attempts, failed. The Haytian Fever in Washington has never yet been above zero.

BOX.

Letter from Newark.

NEWARK, Dec. 2, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:

In this city on Thanksgiving day, (Nov. 28th,) business of every kind was generally suspended, reminding one of the sabbath. Services were held in most of the churches during the day, and in the evening there were several concerts and festivals. The Plane street Church had services in the afternoon. Mr. Adams the pastor, preached an interesting discourse from the Psalm, "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord," during which he remarked that we had reason to thank God for the glorious prospects of emancipation.

In the evening the Passaic Lodge of the G. U. O. O. F., gave an entertainment at the Union Hall at which addresses were made by Mr. J. Murray Wells of Elizabeth City and others, interspersed with music by Prof. P. P. O'Fake's Band. In the midst of the exercises the Samaritan Lodge entered the Hall and was received by the Passaic Lodge, on whose behalf a fine address was made by Mr. John H. O'Fake, W. G. C. The festivities continued until a late hour.

A festival was to have been given on the same evening in the lecture room of the Bethel Church, but whether it came off or not I cannot say.

Mr. J. Burley, a graduate of Oberlin College, lectured on Tuesday evening last at the Friendship Hall; subject, "Characteristics of the Races." The lecture was an interesting one and ably handled.

Dr. M. R. Delany is announced to lecture to-night in the South Park Presbyterian Church on the moral and social relations of the races; and to-morrow night in the Baptist church upon the commercial advantages of Africa. These churches being two of the most popular in the city, we hope that the Doctor will make a fine and lasting impression on his audiences.

The Ladies Sewing Circle connected with the Plane street church, are making preparation for the coming holidays. The ladies cut and baste while the gentlemen help to sew and entertain the ladies.

A lady in this city declined taking our paper any longer, because it contains no ball advertisements, (!) and on the same day I received two new subscribers more than off-setting the loss.

ISAAC TEMBROOK.

Letter from Bethlehem.

BETHLEHEM, Northampton Co., Pa.,
Nov. 19, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:—Several weeks ago in the "ANGLO" I saw an article entitled "Heathenism in New Jersey." I take the liberty of sending you a word about heathenism in Pennsylvania. The town of [illegible], in this county, has a population of colored people estimated from three to four hundred, and a more abject class I do believe does not exist in the State—ekeing out an existence disgraceful to humanity. They have neither church, school or society; no disposition to do anything, except to destroy themselves by drinking all the corn whisky possible for them to get hold of—living with no higher aspiration than to excel at a game of euchre, or a dance; consequently morality is considerably below par—a failing peculiar to the democracy, for truly a democratic people they are, being too independent to hear a white minister preach, and too stubborn and overbearing to hear a black one.

Why, in 1852–3, they actually thrashed a minister of the gospel who considered it his duty to tell them of their faults. (He was, I think, from Newark.) Recently they made an attempt to start a benevolent society, which ended in a general breaking of heads and damaging of countenances; and so they go, every little gathering, social or otherwise, ending with a fight. Subsequently to the undertaking of the benevolent society, the white citizens gave them ground as a place of interment for the dead, and a start in the shape of money for a school, several contributions being made. A public meeting of the colored citizens was held and a committee appointed to make arrangements to commence the school. The committee met on several occasions, but cavil succeeding cavil, order would not come out of chaos, consequently no school made its appearance; but the money they had, and to do something with it they determined; so the committee concluded, for the benefit of parties concerned, to have a dance, and a dance they had—which terminated with a descent upon the hall by a gang of white rowdies, and a general demolition of furniture, countenances, ladies' dresses, etc. Their condition is little better than were their ancestors at their emancipation. Prospects they have none, and never will have, unless Mr. Redpath can induce them to emigrate to Hayti to re-establish the Connecticut colony.

S. E.

Servile Insurrections Probable.

The following is an extract from a letter to a lady in Philadelphia from a relative in Charleston, and published in the Philadelphia "Enquirer" of a recent date:

Disguise the truth as we may, all thinking men here feel their position peculiarly unsafe; and those who are surrounded by female relatives, have their anxiety increased a thousand fold. We do not fear for the clash of contending armies, though that is sufficiently terrible to excite much apprehension; but even amid the carnage of war, the veriest boor within the armies would respect women; though traitors try to teach us that the Northern war cry is "Beauty and Booty;" but we do dread lest at midnight the fearful sound of servile insurrection shall salute our ears. You know the negroes are far superior in numbers to the whites, and now that so many are absent in the army their majority is greatly increased. If they rise we are in their power. Do you know what that means? Remember the history of all servile insurrections, and recall the horrors enacted by the race whom oppression has helped to brutalize. Of course the masters would fight desperately; but how could the small number of male whites defend their helpless wives and daughters against a tenfold force of maddened slaves, whose strength and ferocity are well known.

Much as I miss your society, and as keenly as I feel our long separation, I had rather know you shared the humblest cottage in the North in safety, than see you mistress of a palace with such danger threatening you.

Do not think our apprehension is expressed. When the difficulties began we looked daily for some uprising among the slaves. No general insurrection has taken place, though several revolts have been attempted; two quite recently, and in these cases whole families were murdered before the slaves were subdued. Then came retaliation of the most fearful character. At any time where servants assail or murder white persons, speedy and severe punishment is administered: but now they do not wait for the action of the law; Lynch law prevails. In these revolts, which occurred in the interior of the State, most of the servants who participated were either shot in the conflict, or, as soon as captured, and two of them were burned to death.

To say they were burned to death seems a simple sentence, devoid of any special horror; but the scene, as described to me by a witness, was too dreadful for mortal eye. Imagine the poor wretches, red with the blood of their masters, cowering in the hands of those from whom they need not look for pity; not even for time to repent of deeds which exclude them from hope hereafter. They are dogged and defiant towards their captors, until their doom is pronounced—a fate of which they have a special horror. Dragged to the place of execution, within sight of their own houses, surrounded by their fellow-servants, who are compelled to witness the sight, they are bound to strong trees, with great heaps of pine knots piled close around their persons. Directly the torch is applied, and the inflammable pine bursts into a vivid flame. When the blaze reaches the bodies, and the sensitive flesh peels and crackles, their cries are too fearful to be heard by human ears. Nor is the torment soon over. The flames scorch the upper part of the bodies, producing exquisite agony, but slowly burn into the vitals, until the wretched sufferers go to judgment, with all their crimes upon their heads.

Do you wonder I am shocked? Suppose it had been Nelly, or Andrew, or Hiram, to whom we are so strongly attached? Yet these tortured criminals were favorite household servants of unusual intelligence. [illegible] ought not to tell you of those terrible things, but they haunt my memory so I cannot refrain. Thank Heaven, you are safe!

I undertook to [illegible] the apprehension of servile insurrection [illegible] its power when, as time passed, all [illegible] peaceful; so we easily fell back into dreams of security until these events aroused us to watchfulness. This news is suppressed as far as possible, and kept entirely from the papers, for the negroes hear what is published if they do not read it, and such examples might produce disastrous consequences.

The Slavery Question in Congress.

In the House of Representatives on Monday 2nd inst.:

Mr. Eliot, (rep.) of Mass. offered the following:—

Resolved, by the House of Representatives of the United States of America:—

First—That in behalf of the people of these States we do again solemnly declare that the war in which we are now engaged against the insurgent bodies now in arms against the government has for its object the suppression of such rebellion and the re-establishment of the rightful authority of the national constitution and laws over the entire extent of our common country.

Second—That while we disclaim all power under the constitution to interfere by ordinary legislation with the institutions of the several States, yet the war now existing must be conducted according to the usages and rights of military service, and that during its continuance we recognize the authority of the maxim that the safety of the State, as the highest law subordinates right of property, and dominates over civil relations.

Third—That, therefore, we do hereby declare that in our judgment the President of the United States, as the Commander-in-Chief of our army, and the officers in command under him, have the right to emancipate all persons as slaves in any military district in a state of insurrection against the national government, and that we respectfully advise that such order of emancipation be issued, whenever the same will avail to weaken the power of the rebels in arms, or to strengthen the military power of the loyal forces.

Mr. Dunn, (rep.) of Ind., moved to lay the resolution on the table, but the motion was disagreed to by yeas 56, against 70.

The question recurring on Mr. Eliot's resolution, Mr. Roscoe L. Conkling, (rep.) of N. Y., proposed an amendment, which Mr. Eliot accepted, so as to make the resolution apply to the slaves of disloyal citizens.

On motion of Mr. Stevens, the further consideration of the resolution was postponed until to-morrow week; in order that it may be discussed and amendments submitted. He was in favor of the main features of the proposition, but desired modification.

ANOTHER EMANCIPATION PROPOSITION.

Mr. Campbell, (rep.) of Pa., gave notice that he would call up the following on next Tuesday week:—

Resolved, That in legislating to meet the exigencies of the present rebellion, Congress should confiscate the property, slaves included, of all rebels, and protect the property and rights, under the constitution and laws, of all loyal citizens.

STILL ANOTHER PLAN OF EMANCIPATION.

Mr. Stevens, (rep.) of Pa., submitted the following for future consideration:—

Whereas, slavery has caused the present rebellion in the United States; and whereas, there can be no solid and permanent peace and union in the republic so long as that institution exists within it; and, whereas, slaves are now used by the rebels as an essential means of supporting and protracting the war; and, whereas, by the law of nations it is right to liberate the slaves of an enemy to weaken his power; therefore,

Be it enacted, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled, that the President be requested to declare free, and to direct all our generals and officers in command to order freedom to, all slaves who shall leave their masters or shall aid in quelling the rebellion.

Second—And be it further resolved, That the United States pledge the faith of the nation to make full and fair compensation to loyal citizens who are or shall remain active in supporting the Union for all loss they may sustain by virtue of this resolution.

Rev. J. Sella Martin in London.

Last night a meeting was held in John street chapel, John street, Bedford row, to hear an address on "The American War and Slavery," by the Rev. J. Sella Martin, formerly a slave, but now pastor of a colored church, at Boston, Massachusetts, United States.

The chair was taken by the Hon. and Rev. Baptist Noel, minister of the chapel, who, after opening the proceedings with devotional services, proceeded at some length to advocate the cause of the North against the South in the present struggle, on imperial, territorial, political, commercial, moral and religious grounds. Quoting the authority of Washington, Webster, and other high authorities cited by Mr. Motley in his pamphlet, Mr. Noel held that the struggle involved nothing less than national existence, and so far from being of the opinion, which he frequently saw stated in the journals of this country, that delay would enable the South to conquer, he believed the very contrary. The Northern States had a population of 26,000,000—The Southern only 6,000,000. Ireland, with 6,000,000 in rebellion, had no chance against Great Britain with 20,000,000. Could a different result take place in America? The people of the North were religious, moral, wealthy and enterprising, and fully aware of the mighty game at stake now and for the future. The Southerners were poor; their cotton crop was worth two hundred million dollars a year, but it was all locked up, while their expenditure in war was two hundred million dollars, and they were already in that state that Mr. Memminger was calling upon the planters for money, while the planters in return asked for assistance from the government. He could not believe that, with all the advantages on the side of the North, battling in a righteous cause, that the weaker belligerent would ultimately triumph in a bad cause.

The Rev. J. Sella Martin then came forward to address the audience, evidently suffering from severe indisposition. He said he had just left his bed, to which he had been confined since seven o'clock the previous evening, to address that meeting, but he feared he should be unable to go over the ground he had traced out for himself with great care and thoughtfulness. He had been grieved and pained by the criticisms which the moral and religious portion of the British people had passed upon what they called a fratricidal and futile war since his arrival in this country. Now, he deprecated bloodshed as much as any christian man could, but it should be remembered that there were worse things than war, and above all that slavery was itself a chronic war, in which thousands of slaves were murdered outright yearly, while in the cotton and sugar growing States the average duration of life was only nine years. Slavery also corrupted and weakened the free States themselves.

The reverend gentleman here became so ill that he was compelled to resume his seat. After expressing a hope that he should have another opportunity of stating his views at length.

The Hon. and Rev. Chairman intimated that such an opportunity would be given.

Mr. Craft, an escaped slave, who has been ten years in this country, expressed his belief that two great benefits would arise from the present war, First, That Great Britain would be supplied with cotton from India and West India colonies, and thus be liberated from all dependence on the blood stained cotton of the Southern States of America; and Second, That the North would be driven ultimately in self defense to decrease the abolition of slavery in America.

Much sympathy was expressed for Mr. Martin, and the proceedings were brought to a premature close in consequence of his indisposition.—London Advertiser, Nov. 15.

School Exhibition at Bergen.

MR. EDITOR:

An exhibition of the Bergen district school took place last Thursday evening. At an early hour the house was crowded, and over a hundred persons stood out side anxious to gain admission, but were unable to do so. At the hour appointed the children made their appearance on the stage, neat and tastefully dressed; and if we are to judge by the applause we must come to the conclusion they done well. At the close of the exercises the Rev. R. H. Cain made a brief but eloquent address; after which the concourse of people retired to the basement, where a large table was spread loaded with all the good things of the season. Much credit is due Miss Lynch, the worthy teacher for the success of this exhibition. Miss L. is a young lady of fine talents, and good education, and has done much for the moral, and intellectual improvement of this people. The school under her care is in a flourishing condition, and by her kind and gentle manner, she has won the affections of parents and children. May God bless her; and may she long continue to be useful.

H. J.

Bergen, N. J., Nov. 28th, 1861.

DON'T LEND YOUR PAPERS.—There are many persons, too mean to expend four cents a week for a copy of our paper, who are calculating to get the reading of the great story now being published in our columns, by borrowing from such of their neighbors as do take and pay for it. That this class of literary spungers may be disappointed in their calculations, we would suggest to our patrons that they refuse to lend their copies, except in cases where extreme poverty renders it impossible to buy

---

☞ Our readers will observe in another column the advertisement of Messrs. Rice & Co., for agents. The articles there mentioned are genuine—of real merit and practical utility, and are rapidly selling. Some of their agents are making from $2 to $5 per day. Any one with proper energy can make good wages in selling their articles, even these hard times. Give them a trial, as but a small capital is required to commence with.

The funeral of JORDON W. SHEPARD, who was drowned on the 23d of last month, took place from the Zion Baptist church, Sullivan street, Thursday 28th inst. The church was densely filled by our citizens, many of whom were intimately acquainted with the deceased.

The King Solomon Lodge A. Y. M. was out in full force, also many members of the Grand Lodge; and quite a large number of Royal Arch Masons.

The "Sons of Wesley" were also out in large numbers.

The Rev. J. T. Raymond preached a very interesting sermon, tracing the history of the deceased from the place of his birth to the day of his death.

We have long been acquainted with the deceased, and we desire to bear our testimony to the worthiness of his character.

Mr. Shepard was the son-in-law of Mr. Whitney, whose decease we chronicled a few weeks since.

ERRATTA.—Mr. Editor: Owing, I fear to the illegibility of my MS., the meaning of several sentences in the article on "Confidence and Cotton," was entirely destroyed. The corresponding phrases should have read as follows: "their acts, so far as, &c.;" "how much soever, I might, &c.;" "because the malignity, &c.;" "the late scurrilous attack, &c.;" and "Considering the facts with which, &c."

A. P. S.

Saddle River, N. J.

A communication from Mrs. M. A. S. Cary on Haytian Emigration, intended for this week's paper reached us too late for insertion in this issue. It will appear in our next.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Annual Festival of the J. W. B. Smith Tabernacle, No. 2.—This Tabernacle of the Order of Love and Charity held its annual feast on Wednesday evening, Nov. 27th, in the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms.

The company began to assemble at a rather late hour; but by midnight the rooms were well filled, by a highly respectable audience, who, it was easily to be seen, had prepared themselves for an evening's enjoyment, so joyous did they appear.

Although the dancing had commenced at an early hour, yet you could very readily tell that the ladies were not Prof. Voorhees' scholars. This was manifest, not only by their dancing, but by their general appearance, there being but few ball dresses worn.

Of course the assemblage was not without a "Belle;" but whether it was the "petite" Miss R., of White street, whose pretty form clothed in pink silk waist and lawn skirt, with it myriad of tucks, or the stately Miss E., of Marion street, whose dress consisted of "pineapple," four flounces, bound with black velvet, we cannot say: but we heard many remarks in favor of the latter.

The supper, which is pronounced by those who tasted it to have been all right, was under the direction of Mr. Moses Coss.

We think that a great deal of the success attendant on this festival is due to our friend Mr J. D Bagwell, who, by making ample use of our advertising columns, kept the attention of the public attracted to the affair. It is hardly necessary to say that every member present put forth their best exertions to make the affair agreeable.

Grand Mental Feast of Leah Tent No. 6.—Mr. Editor:—I had the pleasure of being present at the aforesaid entertainment, which took place on the evening of Thursday Nov. 28th, at the Adelphi Hall, Williamsburgh, and listened to a very entertaining address by the Rev. Moses Manning, pastor of Zion Church, who had selected for his subject "the secrets of women which had never been revealed." The speaker succeeded in relieving the sex from the charge of communicativeness, so generally made; and even made it clear that mother Eve had been grossly slandered when charged with the crime of ta king too much.

The company was not large but very respectable, and the refreshments were fine and abundant.

J. A. T.

Proposed Plan for the Emancipation of Slaves in Western Virginia.—In the Wheeling Convention, on Monday, Dec. 2d, Mr. Hogan, of Barne, offered the following:

Whereas, Negro slavery is the origin and foundation of our national troubles, and the cause of the terrible rebellion in our midst that is seeking to overthrow our government; and whereas, slavery is incompatible with the Word of God, detrimental to the interests of a free people as well as wrong to the slaves themselves; therefore,

Resolved, That the Convention inquire into the expediency of making the proposed new State a free State, and a provision be inserted for the gradual emancipation of all slaves within the proposed boundaries of the new State, to be submitted to the people of the same for their approval or rejection.

Referred to the committee on fundamental and general provisions.

An Insurrection in North Carolina.—A correspondent of the Boston 'Traveller' writing from Exeter, N. H., states that a lady who arrived in that town from Lexington, N. C., reports that the slaves generally in North Carolina sympathize with the North, and improve every opportunity to run away from their masters. A slight insurrection recently occurred near Lexington, in which three negroes were shot. The masters tell their slaves that on reaching Fortress Monroe they are either sold to Cubans or have their hands cut off; but the majority disbelieve such fabrications, and "look away" to Butler for deliverance.

MARRIED.

Smith—Thompson.—In Newark, N. J., on Nov. 7th, by Rev. E. J. Adams, Elijah Smith to Mrs Elizabeth Thompson.

Gasten—Nichols.—In Brooklyn, Nov. 28, by Rev. George W. Levere, George Gasten, of New Jersey, to Dianah Nichols, of Newtown, L. I.

Royal—Henson.—In Williamsburgh, on Sunday, Dec. 1st, 1861, by Rev. Moses Manning, Coleman Royal, of Richmond, Va., to Miss Eliza Ann Henson, of the former place.

DIED.

Jackson.—At Paterson, N. J., an aged lady and faithful follower of the cross, known as Aunt Polly Jackson. She was buried the 21st ult, her funeral sermon being preached by Rev. Mr. Duryea, of the Reformed Dutch Church.

Sturms.—In this city, on Friday, Nov. 29th, of consumption, Miss Mary Alice Sturns, aged 21 years and 5 days.

Her funeral took place from St. Philip's church, on the following Sunday afternoon, and was attended by a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends, and on which occasion an able and appropriate discourse was preached by the pastor of the church, Rev. Wm. J. Alston.

Special Notices.

Zion Methodist Church, Sag Harbor, L. I.

At a meeting of the officers of aforesaid church held Oct. 9th, 1861, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we heartily indorse the action of this church and congregation in unanimously voting it an Independent Methodist Church.

Resolved, That the insults and injuries done to this church fully justify our act of independence; and that we also demur against the conduct of Mr. Decker in attempting to take charge of our church against our will and after being rejected by large majorities, first by the trustees, and then the society, and we charge him with causing discord among us. We also declare against the acts of Mr. Clinton, Superintendent of the African Zion Methodist Conference, in coming here and attempting to take possession of our meeting house as if he owned it. This we view as a high-handed act in a Bishop. We denounce the acts of the Quarterly Conference of New York City, in the pretence case of Mr. Posey, our pastor, who has served us two years faithfully and acceptably, believing that if Mr. Posey was to be tried at all, our Quarterly Conference is the only competent body to do it according to the discipline and not a church in New York that knew nothing at all about the case.

Resolved, That we say to all whom it may concern, that the said parties have taken the trial out of our hands and proceeded with it in their own way—that we knew the charges to be untrue, gotten up for malice and the publication of them but an attempt to slander.

Resolved, That we hold brother Posey, as ever, in good and honorable ministerial standing in our church, and recommend him to all sister churches.

Resolved, Know all men that on the 6th day of October, 1861, that the Zion Methodist Church of Eastville, Sag Harbor L. I., did vote and declare herself free from the African Methodist Zion Conference, and is an independent Methodist Church, by the Grace of God.

Jason Cuffee, Chairman.

King W. Ward, }
A. Sweeney, } Trustees.
Samuel Butler, }

M. N. Ashmon, Secretary.

C. Brant, }
S. Butler, } Class Leaders.

A CARD.

As I consider myself insulted by Mr. Clinton, in May last, in the New York Conference, and afterwards pursued to Sag Harbor by the said Clinton, and treated in a very ungentlemanly manner by himself and sub-agent, Mr. Decker, endorsed by the ignorance of the Quarterly Conference of Zion Church, New York City; I do, this 22nd day of November, say to all whom it may concern, that I now dissolve all further relations with Mr. Clinton, his aids, and Conferences.

Alexander Posey.

SCIENCE, LITERATURE AND AMUSEMENT.

Professor A. M. GREEN

Will give ONE of his highly interesting Exhibitions of Descriptive

Geography, Astronomy, Natural Science and History,

— at the —

Zion Baptist Church, Sullivan Street,

above prince,

ON FRIDAY EVE'G, DEC. 13,

commencing at 7½ o'clock precisely. The programme will consist of a variety of beautiful Diagrams, brilliantly illustrated by the aid of the

ORIGINAL DRUMMOND LIGHT,

and not least in contributing to beautify the Exhibition is the masterly ability with which Mr. GREEN lectures, in explanation of his truly interesting Paintings.

PART FIRST.

CHEMICAL DIORAMA.

Scene 1.—The old Ptolmaic theory of the Solar System exhibited, and the defects in this theory explained and accounted for.

Scene 2.—The Copernicum theory, first introduced by Pythagoras, beautifully illustrated:—The Planets—Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Asteroids, Jupiter, Saturn, Herschel and Leverier, all revolving at their respective distance from the Sun.

Scene 3.—Kepler's Laws of Motion beautifully presented—View of Mercury and Venus, as seen from the earth in superior conjunction.

Scene 4.—The boundary of the Earth geographically described—Beautiful view of an approaching vessel seen in the distance on the smooth surface of the ocean.

Scene 5.—The eccentric revolution of a Comet around the Sun, showing the different appearance of its train at different points of its orbit.

Scene 6.—The great Comet of 24th of September, 1858, as seen through Professor O. M. Mitchell's great Refractor at the Cincinnati Observatory on the night of the 26th of September.

PART SECOND.

Scene 1.—Waterloo Bridge, London, with a distantview of the Dome of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Scene 2.—The Tower of London, built by William, the famous Norman Conqueror.

Scene 3.—Evening on the River Thames—Moonlight View of the famous Tower of London.

Scene 4.—Southwark Bridge, and full view of St. Paul' Cathedral.

Scene 5.—The Mosque of Omar—A Mahommedan Temple—The hour of morning prayer

Scene 6.—Moonlight view of the celebrated Temple.

Scene 7.—The Mosque illuminated for the midnight service on Christmas Eve.

Scene 8.—View of Melrose Abbey—Beautiful View of the Tombs of the Departed Saints.

PART THIRD.

Scene 1.—The Deluge—The Ark in the distance resting on the bosom of the waters. Those men of giant frame, who lived in that age of the world, are seen attempting to resque their wives and children from the power of the devouring elements.

Scene 2.—Site of the ancient city of Jerusalem—the city now in ruins.

Scene 3.—The destruction of the Temple of Diana, at Baalbec, in Syria.

Scene 4.—Summer scene at the birth-place and residence of Robert Burns, the distinguished Scotch Poet.

Scene 5.—A winter morning at Burns' home—A tremendous snow storm.

Scene 6.—Splendid view of the Military Hospital at Paris, in France.

Doors open at 7 o'clock—to commence at 7½ o'clock precisely.

Admission Reduced to 15 Cents.

Tickets, admitting a Lady and Gentleman, 25 Cents: To be had at the door.

SECOND GRAND CONCERT.

The Trustees of the A. M. E. Church, Bridge Street, Brooklyn, (R. H. Cain, Pastor,) returning grateful thanks to the public for its generous response to the efforts of the Sabbath School at their last Concert, respectfully announce that the School, by public request, will give a Second Concert and Exhibition, in the church for the benefit thereof, on TUESDAY EVENING, Dec. 10th, 1861. At the conclusion of the Concert, the Ladies of the Church will give a TEA FESTIVAL in the basement of the church, the admission to which will be six cents.

The Concert given by the children on the 22d Oct., having been received with every demonstration of applause, and the Festival given by the ladies of the church on the same evening, being a most brilliant success, we confidently promise an entertainment of equal pleasure on the evening of the 10th.

Doors open at 6½ o'clock: Concert to commence at 8 o'clock precisely.

Michael Thompson, Supt.
Miss Victoria Price, Pianist.
Robt. Hamilton, Conductor.

LOVE, PURITY AND TRUTH.

Good Samaritan Lectures.

The fourth of the Course will be delivered by R. H. JOHNSON, Esq., on Thursday evening next, the 12th inst., under the patronage of Fountain Union Lodge, No. 7, I. O. of G. S., at their Rooms, Masonic Hall, corner of Broome and Forsyth Sts. Subject—"Temperance its Influence upon Benevolent Institutions." The public are cordially invited to be present. N. B.—Admission Free.

SHILOH RE-UNION.

The Ladies of Shiloh Church, situated at the corner of Prince and Marion Sts., (Pastor, Rev. J. N. Gloucester,) will give, in happy concert with all its Officers, a highly intellectual and social

Re-Union Entertainment,

THURSDAY EVENING, DEC. 12th, 1861,

In the Basement of the Church.

For the consolidation of their own interest, the increase of their Church treasury, so that in these perilous, but yet joyous times for freedom, they may more perfectly secure the blessings of the Gospel, and stand prepared to aid, as they have ever aimed to do, the cause of bleeding Humanity.

The meeting will commence at precisely 8 1-2 o'clock.

ORDER OF EXERCISES.

1. Reading of the Scriptures, by a lady.
2. Hymn—by the Choir—

"Blest be the tie that binds,
Our hearts in Christian love."

3. Prayer.
4. Brief addresses from different visiting clergymen and distinguished laymen of this City and Brooklyn.
5. Tea at 9 1-2 o'clock.
6. The Box intended for our suffering brothers and sisters, the "contrabands" at Fortress Monroe, will be closed by an address from a distinguished brother, and an anthem of Freedom from that well known vocalist, Robt. Hamilton, assisted by Professor Dias and his Choir.
7. Presentation at 12 o'clock, by Committee on Presentation, composed of the wives and daughters of the Members of the Board of Trustees and others, with an address by Mrs. H. Ross, and received by the President of the Board in an address in behalf of his associates and the Church they represent.
8. Conclusion. Hymn—

"Before Jehovah's awful throne."

N. B.—All contributions of goods for the box must be brought in on or before Wednesday evening, the 11th inst.

TICKETS 37 1-2 CENTS:

To be obtained of Mrs. J. N. Gloucester, 290 Bridge St.; Mrs. N. B. Lewis, 55 Carll St; Mrs. W. H. Ross, 80 High St., Brooklyn; John L. Hudson, 4 East Houston St.; at the Drug Store (Dr Smith's), 55 West Broadway, and the office of the Anglo-African, 48 Beekman St., New York.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Mrs. Thomas Jackson, Sr.,
Jacob Butler,
Henry Hardy,
N. B. Lewis,
James N. Gloucester,
Thomas Howard,
Frances Selby,
Wm. H. Carney,
— Ferguson,
Henry Green,
Warren Stewart,
Miller Pierce,
Samuel Demarest,
Christopher Clow,
James Bays,
John L. Hudson,
Wm. H. Ross,
Thomas Jackson, Jr.,
A. Zabriskie,
Lewis Frazier,
Foster,
John Rock,
Stackhouse,
Benj. Landrine,
Jane Corbit,
Miss Margaret Clark,
Mary Harris,
E. Denis,
Margaret Smith,
A. A. Vandyke,
Miss Helen Clow,
Adeline Ogden,
Sharp,
Bending,
F. Bodee,
Mary Felix,
Isabella Demarest,
Jane Merit,
Emily Thurstorf,
Nancy Jane Benson,
H. S. Demarest,
Elder Thomas Jackson,
Jacob Butler,
N. B. Lewis,
Thomas Howard,
Henry Hardy,
Dea. Stackhouse,
Mr. J. L. Hudson,
C. Clow,
Wm. H Ross,
Thos. Jackson, Jr.,
A. Zabriskie,
S. Demarest,
Miller Pierce,
Jas. Bays,
James Tolbert,
Amos Davis,
Thomas Davis,
T. S. Demarest,
Wm. Smith,
Elymus Reeve,
John Rock,

"United we Stand, Divided we Fall."

FIRST ANNUAL BALL AND SUPPER

of the

COLORED SEAMEN'S

BOARDING - HOUSE KEEPERS

AND OUT-FITTERS

Of the City of New York, will be given on Thursday Eve'g, Dec. 26th, 1861,

at the

METROPOLITAN ASSEMBLY ROOMS,

178 Prince St.

The Proprietors of this Association will spare no pains to make this Entertainment one of the most entertaining nights of the season, and also assure the public that nothing on their part will be wanting to render them happy.

Music under direction of Mr. J. DOUGLASS.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

William E. Slater,
Henry Beverley,
George F. Thompson,
William Butler.

The Floor will be under the gentlemanly management of Mr. George H. Williams and Mr. John Wilson.

Tickets, admitting Gent. and Lady, $2; Single Ticket, $1.

Tickets to be had of the following Committee:

George F. Thompson, 4 Catherine Lane.
William E. Slater, 3 Catherine Lane.
William Butler, 1 Benson St.
Manuel Gilbert, 42 Baxter St.
Susan Williams, 105 Park St.
Henry Beverley, 76 Roosevelt St.
Albro Lyons, 20 Vandewater St.
Samuel Porter, 21 Batavia St.
Charles M. Fortes, 199 South St.
William Spriggs, 1 Mechanics' Alley.
Thomas Lewis, 49 Marion St.

Tickets may also be had at the following places:—Eldorado, 154 Church St., Messrs. Suel & Spencer; Geo. H. Williams, 189 Church St.; Francis & Rogers, 56 Leonard St.; R. D. Kinney, 178 Prince St.; Robt. Tappen, 42 Ridge St.; J. A. Trower, 279 S. 4th St., Williamsburgh; Phineas Spriggs, 37 N. Bowery.

Wm. E. SLATER, Pres.
HENRY BEVERLEY, Treas.
G. F. THOMPSON, Sec'y.
Wm. BUTLER, Cashier. 18 4t

GEORGE OTON'S

QUADRILLE BAND.

Balls, Parties, &c., furnished with music, at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,

Professor of Music,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton. 18tf

MASONIC

DIRECTORY,

FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A. D. 1849, A. L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No. 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14 Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwick, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No. 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 29, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, New York City.

MASONIC NOTICE.

The members of Olive Branch Lodge, No. 5, working under the Jurisdiction of the Philanthropic United Grand Lodge, will take notice that the annual meeting of said Lodge will be held at their Lodge Rooms, 178 Prince St., on Monday evening, Dec. 16th.

Punctual attendance is requested.

By order of

CHAS. T. BROWN, W. M.

R. D. Kinney, Sec. 18 3t

A GRAND

MUSICAL FESTIVAL

will be given at

Turn Hall, 63 and 65 Meserole Street,

WILLIAMSBURGH,

On Wednesday Evening, Dec. 11, 1861.

The Committee pledge themselves that no pains will be spared to make this equal to any that has been given.

Music under the direction of

Prof. S. WALDRON'S BAND.

Prof. LaMATIEU, the celebrated Tight Rope Performer, has been engaged to give one of his performances on this occasion. He will WALK A ROPE one inch thick, with his hands and feet chained together. He will also walk a rope blindfolded, hang by his feet with his head down, and beat a drum, and perform many other daring and interesting feats.

TICKETS 50 CENTS,

refreshments included.

Persons wishing to see the performance can have a seat in the Gallery for 25 Cts. Children half price.

Performance to commence at 8 o'clock.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Mr. George Poole,
Mr. Wm. Moore,
Mr. Chas. Smith,
Mr. Benjamin Clark,
Mr. J. F. Jackson,
Mr. Joseph H. Nixon,
Mr. Charles Trower,
Mr. Wm. R. Conner,
Mr. James Mitchell,
Mr. AlexanderCorprew.

N. B.—Cars leave Peck Slip and Grand Street Ferry every five minutes, and go within one block of the Hall. J. A. TROWER, Conductor.

17 3t

LECTURES.

The undersigned is prepared to fill engagements to deliver single Lectures, on the following subjects:

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY WITH REFERENCE TO NATURAL THEOLOGY;

THE ADAPTATIONS OF THE EARTH, OR TERRESTRIAL ADAPTATIONS;

MENTAL PHILOSOPHY

THE ANCIENT HONORS OF THE BLACK AND COLORED RACES OF THE EARTH;

—Being a series of popular discourses recently delivered, founded on the following texts:

1. "Look not upon me because I am black." [Song of Sol.—1.6.
2. "Princes shall come out of Egypt." [Psalm 68—31.
3. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin." [Jer.—13.23.
4. "Cursed be Canaan." —Gen.—9 25.
5. "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus." Philemon.

Terms—The lecturer's passage both ways, and one-fourth of profits.

[From the Detroit Daily Advertiser, March 1, 1860.]

"Mr. Berry's lecture last night is stated to have displayed much thought, and to have been in every respect meritorious."

AGENCY

FOR TROY AND VICINITY.

James R. Benham is the regularly appointed Agent for the Anglo-African in Troy, Lansingburg, Waterford and vicinity. All orders or communications for the paper may be left with Mr Benham on board of the steamer "Cornelius Vanderbilt."

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delsart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING

To consider measures with reference to a settlement of the

GERRIT SMITH LANDS,

will be held, agreeable to adjournment, at Prince Street Hall, on Monday evening, December 9th, 1861. The public are invited to attend.

Charles L. Reason, Ch'mn.
Wright Seaman, Jr., Sec'y.

LECTURES.

The Rev. Alex. Crummell, of Liberia, W. A., is prepared to deliver the following Lectures, either singly or as a course, during the months of November and December:

1. The customs, genius, and characteristics of native tribes in Western Africa.
2. The growth of civilization along the Western Coast of Africa.
3. The progress and prospects of the Republic of Liberia.

Letters are to be addressed to Rev. A. Crummell, 311 Spring Street, New York. 12—4t

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

Rev. Eli N. Hall, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock, . . . A. M
" . . . P. M.
" . . . P. M

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue, Rev. John Frisby, Pastor. Residence 69 Madison Avenue.

hours of worship:

10½ o'clock, . . . A. M.
3 " . . . P. M.
7½ " . . . P. M.

12-1y

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(protestant episcopal)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. Wm J. Alston, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

hours of worship

10 1-2 o'clock, . . . A. M.
3 " . . . P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock, . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

Rev Chas H Thompson, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev Richard H. Cain, Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship —

10½ . . . A. M
3 . . . P. M
7½ . . . P. M

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn. 13-1y.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. John T. Raymond, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

hours of worship.

10 1-2 o'clock, . . . A. M.
3 " . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.

Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.

Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

BOSTON HOUSE,

MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,

105 Park Street, near Mott,

NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

Established in 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,

FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,

In all its branches—such as

BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH

GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,

Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.

18 26t

PETER S. PORTER,

general agent for

HOUSE LETTING,

170 WEST 29TH STREET,

NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate Ladies and Gentlemen with first class Board, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand. 16 13t

MRS. M. K. EDY,

EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.

Residence—131 Christie Street, N. Y.

26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING

IN BROOKLYN,

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston st., or of the Janitor 225 West 15th-st.

POCKET WATER-FILTER

AND

DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weighs one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing

DAY & CO.,
3-13t Box 464 P.O., Newark, N. J.

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and the public, that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 60 Sullivan Street, New York. 4-1

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this or any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,

bet. stagg & wyckoff sts., williamsburg

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,

CASSIMERES

AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

Don't Forget,

168 EWEN ST.,

9 1y. Williamsburg.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,

EMPIRE STATE HOTEL

and

UNION HOUSE,

541 BROOME STREET.

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N. Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. Ramsey.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS

IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.

The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.

10 1y.

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co., N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E. 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.

10 5t

PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE

by

MRS. W. S. WILKINS & Co

610 PINE, above SIXTH STREET,

PHILADELPHIA. 7-13t.

LADIES' FURNISHING STORE.

CHILDREN'S CLOTHING

Ready-Made and Made to Order, By

MRS. S. WILKINS & CO.,

610 Pine, above Sixth Street, Philadelphia.

7-13t.

MRS. ANDERSON,

CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMOdate a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate. 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf.

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. Fortes, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 26 Mulberry Street, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

HENRY G. LEASK,

HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS AND FURS,

cor. pearl & chatham sts., n. y.

Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly Richardson) REspectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St., N. Y

MRS. E. LEONARD,

fashionable

DRESS MAKER,

25 Sullivan Street, New York.

Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

3t.

BOARDING AND LODGING

By Mrs. Mary Johnson, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies,	$2,50
" " Gentleman,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

y13t

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,

CARD AND JOB PRINTER,

219 Centre Street, New York.

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts., 2 tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk, Street. Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with

Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.

BENJ. F. BROWN,

70 Bleecker st. between Broadway & Crosby St. 4t.

P. A. WHITE,

Corner of Frankfort & Gold Sts.,

GENERAL

COMMISSION MERCHANT,

KEEPS CONSTANTLY ON HAND

A FRESH AND PURE ASSORTMENT

of

DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS

GENUINE

LUBIN'S EXTRACTS

AND OTHER PERFUMERY,

FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES, FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA SEGARS, &C., &C.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS

carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S

VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR

FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH, AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Grey.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hair-brush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off, always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S

STRENGTHENING PLASTER.

AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR

LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT, SPRAINS, BRUISES, &c., &c

Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly servicable.

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent relief from its use, as it keeps a continued heat, acting as a gentle counter irritant, removing the inflamation of the stomach without breaking the skin. Persons engaged in sedentary pursuits should use these Plasters constantly, as they give strength to parts weakened by constant sitting and stooping.

For STRAINS and SPRAINS they are infallible, affording relief immediately and without fail.

For RHEUMATISM there is no external application equal to them, promoting the general circulation, and

PREVENTING A RETURN

of the excruciating pain.

These plasters are prepared with great care, and of the best material, and to prevent fraud the name of the originator, is placed on the back of each one. In purchasing ask for BADEAU'S PLASTER. See that the name BADEAU is written on the back, or you will be deceived.

P. A. WHITE, Sole Proprietor.

Poetry.

"STAND LIKE AN ANVIL."

"Stand like an anvil!" when the strokes
Of stalwart strength fall fierce and fast:
Storms but more deeply root the oaks,
Whose brawny arms embrace the blast.

"Stand like an anvil!" when the sparks
Fly far and wide, a fiery shower;
Virtue and truth must still be marks
Where malice proves its want of power.

"Stand like an anvil!" when the bar
Lies red and glowing on its breast;
Duty shall be life's leading star,
And conscious innocence its rest.

"Stand like an anvil!" when the sound
Of ponderous hammers pains the ear;
Thine be the still and stern rebound
Of the great heart that can not fear.

"Stand like an anvil!" noise and heat
Are born of earth and die with time;
The soul, like God, its source and heat,
Is solemn, still, serene, sublime.

[Bishop Doane.

PRAYER FOR LIBERTY.

Roll on, thou cheerful day,
When tyranny's proud sway,
Stern as the grave,
Shall to the ground be hurled,
And freedom's flag unfurled
Shall wave, throughout the world,
O'er every slave.

Trump of grand jubilee,
Echo o'er land and sea
Freedom for all!
Let the glad tidings fly,
And every tribe reply,
Glory to God on high,
At slavery's fall.

Free, too, the captive mind
By darkness long confined
In slavery's night:
The Savior's name extend,
Virtue with freedom blend,
And full salvation send
With freedom's light.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Headquarters of Hooker's Division,
Near Budd's Ferry, Charles County,
Md., Nov. 19, 1861.

Mr. Editor:—It has been my fortune to witness much of life in the Southern States. I was arrested in the city of Charleston, S. C., in the year 1858, for merely standing upon that slavery cursed soil, in spite of my regular enlistment in the navy of the United States, as a seaman. Virginia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, and lastly Maryland, have all furnished painful scenes and incidents for the imagination to dwell upon. I have seen old, grey-haired men of toil-worn frame and tottering step, old women and young women, driven like very beasts to shambles and a market. I have seen wives and daughters torn from husbands and parents, and their charms sold to the highest bidder, to lecherous masters. My own dear father was exiled from Northampton county, Virginia, before I was born—in 1830—by the persecutions which followed the Nat Turner insurrection. From infancy up to my manhood he has been relating the wrongs of my people. Many a tale of woe has he impressed upon my mind and heart. The thousand-fold crimes of this guilty nation against our race, pass in solemn sorrow before me. The fangs of the serpent of oppression has pierced my own bosom until it swells with the hot blood of a revenge which nothing but the blood of a slaveholder can satiate. This is a stern school for a man who has passed the terrible ordeal of life under American slavery and oppression. This land must be consecrated to freedom, and we are to-day the only class of people in the country who are earnestly arrayed on the side of freedom. True it is that thousands of our enfranchised brethren are ready and willing to offer up their lives upon the altar of liberty. Tens and hundreds of thousands would rejoice to see the great national sin eradicated; but could they restore what was supposed to be by the credulous a "Glorious Union," and the Constitution and laws, with all of the crimes and iniquities which hover around it, they would passively submit and forget under the sophistries and blandishments of polished rhetoric, the claims of millions of enslaved men, to all of the blessings and benefits of liberty and civilization. Three quarters of a century of complicity to the guilt of man-stealing has demoralized a people who in 1776, for their love of liberty, gained the admiration of the civilized world, secured the valor of Lafayette, DeKalb and others, and called forth the eloquence of England's most popular statesmen. In that memorable struggle for nationality the purest and most imperishable sentiments gushed forth, as if from the fountain-head of liberty. It seemed but the prelude to that great social symphony—Liberty, Fraternity, Equality—which Republican France sounded throughout monarchial Europe, when the old State House bell in Independence Hall rung out the declaration of freedom to all. Compare that brilliant epoch with the present. Recount in your minds the noble deeds of "'76," and mark the events of "'61."—Whom of the noble spirits of that age dreamed that in the year of our Lord 1861, the only powerful Republic on the face of the earth was sanctioning, directly and indirectly, those monstrous wrongs against an entire race of men which I have thus meagerly epitomised. Nearly a million of men in arms, one half unblushingly declaring its purpose to be the unlimited extension of slavery; the other half daring not to raise its hands against the iniquitous purpose. Oh, sir, in the present instance the righteous sword is unsheathed, and I honestly believe there are enough freedom loving allies to our cause to keep that sword unsheathed until every wythe that binds the slave shall be cast asunder.

I am perfectly astonished at the many reports which appear in the daily papers about the "Blockade." The reports generally sent from this region are generally unreliable, and will always be so, if all newspaper correspondents do as I see one of the New York Herald correspondents do. Well, he had any quantity of note paper, seated in a captain's tent; the captain spreading himself, and relating all the most extravagant stories he could rattle off, and which are gathered from the thousand and one statements straggling soldiers bring in. The truth is, we know nothing sure of the number, location or purposes of the enemy. With powerful glasses we can discover squads of cavalry and infantry over toward Acquia Creek; can see one rebel battery with C. S. flag flying; two large guns visible, and on an island directly opposite Budd's Ferry fresh earth thrown up, which may be a rifle pit, or boat or raft; building operations to the rear of this; on a bluff is an earthwork with no guns visible. Large rewards are said to be offered to the individual who will make a reconnoisance of the enemy's position, and bring back information of his number and location. There is scarcely any danger of your humble servant's undertaking—the hazardous task. The rebels take great delight in practicing with their big guns. They are constantly throwing shot and shell over on this side, and as we lay some two miles inside, we feel a perfect indifference to their death-dealing missiles. Of our own batteries and intrenchments I dare not say anything. Suffice it to say, they are almost completed. We have river communication regularly with Washington, and our telegraph is completed which connects us with headquarters. General Hooker is all activity, and from what I can learn from him he does not apprehend any attempt to cross. In my opinion, nothing is more desirable than that they should do so. There is not provision enough in all Maryland to support an army of 5,000 men. There are but a very few points from which their guns could command the river; that is where the channel runs close to the Virginia shore. The river varies in width 1 1-2 to 4 1-2 miles; hence should they cross over here in force, and we should all have to take to our heels for dear life, the river could be inundated with gunboats of light draught, and cut off all supplies and re-enforcements. The traitor population of Maryland is already drained of arm-bearing men, and there are no arms in the State to put into the hands of the few which are left. The sycophant croakers say that Maryland is loyal, too.—Well, nothing but disaster or defeat to the rebel army could result from an invasion of the sacred soil of Maryland. The most hypocritical thing in the world is this much talked of loyalty. Everybody you meet says he is "for the Union," and they laugh, talk and drink with you—are even glad to converse and drink with a Northern "nigger!" But hear one withering proof of the utter disloyalty. Just here in the vicinity of Budd's Ferry the rebels used to congregate; they kept up a regular ferry between the two shores, and their engineers had surveyed the positions now occupied by the Union troops, and yet in the face of all this, it is impossible to gather any information from these people here that would be of advantage to us. Can it be possible that they are ignorant of the plans, and purposes, and force and position of their accomplices? The lawyers tell us that the "manner and appearance" of the criminal have great bearing on his case. If this be true, the Marylanders, so far as I have seen of them, stand adjudged guilty of the crime of treason.—Well, I am told a sheep thief is about the meanest looking wretch on earth. Well, take a score of sheep thieves, extract the essence, then the quintessence of all their meanness, and you have pictured in your mind's eye of a hang-dog Marylander—heart and soul an enemy he is—conscious of his entire subjection, in spite of his negro-driving propensities; and although I hate a slaveholder from the innermost recesses of my heart, and also when I consider the dough-faced negro-hating propensities of the horde by which I am surrounded, I must admire his consistency.

The rebel batteries are continually throwing shot and shell over here, but as yet done no harm. They are ugly looking missiles, and I should not wonder if a tap from one of them should do one's physical frame considerable damage.

You will remember that a year or two (I think) ago, it was published in the various papers, and stated publicly, that a man by the name of Harry Green sold three of his children to the far South. I disremember all the details of the story, but I have learned from the woman who gave the children their supper on the night of their departure for Richmond, Va., that it was through the infernal machinations of a wretch by the name of "Skinner," that this poor man was compelled to sell into bondage his own flesh and blood. I have seated myself at the same table where that last supper to them was partaken; have looked upon the inhuman wretch who was party to the infernal deed. I shall try, at some future time, to give the details of the painful story, if I should be able to seize sufficient time from amidst the whirl and excitement of camp life.

Hopkins, the Sheriff of Prince George county, was up here on a slave hunt. We pointed him out to the Indiana cavalry boys. It would have done your heart good to have heard the jeers and imprecations they heaped upon him. Mr. Lambert Dutrenielle (the General's steward) while he (Hopkins) was seated at the General's table eating cold beefsteak, sat down directly opposite to him, and called for hot steak. By a preconcerted arrangement, one of the white servants asked, "How dare you sit down to the table with a white man?" "I thought this was a colored gentleman, he sticks so close to the colored people." Hopkins dared not whisper, and, if I am not very much mistaken, will not visit these parts again soon.

It gives me great pleasure to announce that the tide of emigration Northward continues to flow, all barriers to the contrary notwithstanding.

G. E. S.

Asbury Church, near Budd's Ferry,
Maryland, Nov. 20, 1861.

Dear Anglo:—We are now encamped in the graveyard of the above church—rather a strange place for a General's headquarters, but nevertheless true. Gen. Hooker has made a telegraph office of the church, and has his tent in the abode of the dead. It reminds me of the saying, "in the midst of life we are in death." I am now seated in the pulpit of this great church. It is not as large as a small school-house in the country towns of New York. The residents hereabouts can not, of course, hold service while we use it; when they do, they do not admit colored people in the body of the church; they have a little coop built up above, which is reached by means of a ladder on the outside, for the poor slave. I think after death the slave will be, at least, that much nearer heaven than their masters, whose religion, I think, is of equal magnitude with their church. The whites throughout this section are the most villainous looking set of people I have ever seen. They are dressed in the same material worn by the slaves. We see more intelligent looking colored men than white. The lord of the manor here is one Posey, of Secesh renown, who is now running loose on his parole of honor (!), which is not worth a ha'penny. He was arrested on the charge of giving aid and comfort, and of showing signals to the rebels, and released about a week ago. He has ninety-four head of slaves, and is considered the richest man in Charles county, Md. A few days since the rebels fired at a large schooner belonging to a colored man. It was running the blockade. The rebels came out into the channel of the river and boarded the schooner, whereupon her crew, thinking discretion the better part of valor, took their own boat and made their escape to our shore; in the meantime Gen. Hooker ordered a couple of pieces of flying artillery down to the beach, and they in turn commenced firing upon the rebels, who thought best to retire—doing so in good order, after setting fire to her. A company of the Massachusetts 1st then went on board and took her up to the flotilla off Indian Head.

We are in daily receipt of rebel compliments in the shape of shell and shot, varying in size from 10 to 64 pounds, none of which have as yet done any damage.

I find that the slaves have a very true conception of the present state of affairs, and can talk very sensibly on the points bearing on their case. They know that the Confederates will fight and die, to the man, and they hope the Federals will carry the war into Africa. If the war lasts long there must of course be a very great diminution in the number of masters, and they cherish the hope of finding again a John Brown to lead them on "to liberty or death." It gives me pleasure to hear the rebel guns; "it is music to mine ears;" for I know that every shot they fire loosens the chains that binds the poor slave to an unwilling servitude. God speed the day when liberty shall be proclaimed to them! If it is not done soon there will be a storm bursting o'er our heads, worse than the one that now threatens this country.

Though deprived of the rights of a man under the star-spangled banner, my heart feels joyous at the sight of it, and I can not but look on the Confederate flag with contempt and scorn, knowing as I do—aye, as all do—that it is the emblem of the great slave oligarchy of the South, that has for its foundation and corner stone my enslavement. A few more triumphs for it will be good for us. The North will yet be obliged to proclaim the slaves free. How it galls the hot rich Southern blood to see free negroes from the North—from the hot-bed of abolitionism—transplanted to their very plantations, and thriving grandly, sowing seeds of liberty in the hearts and minds of their chattels. These seeds will surely grow, and the slaveholder shall reap the crop to his sorrow!

The fugitive slave law is strictly enforced here, as the State promises to stay in the Union. Slaves are given up on the presentation of the proper papers, but I am happy to say that they are not always found, for frequently by the time the hounds get their papers countersigned, the victims are gone on their way rejoicing.

The rebels are now firing from a gun said to be the monster that the great thief Floyd stole from Pittsburgh, to help him regain his power in Washington, for he anticipated his political death several months ahead. They planted it yesterday and tried it last night on a couple of steamers passing down the river. We are nearly opposite to Cock-pit Point, where they have a four gun battery, but they cannot hurt anything on this side. They have fired since I have been here about five hundred shot, without doing a particle of damage. This is the most God-forsaken country that ever I saw. The plantations as they are called, are stony, hilly, and generally used up by tobacco. They do not yield scarcely a decent living for their owners and slaves. The former live mostly on salt meat and oysters, except when they have company, then they kill the fatted calf and are merry off their ill gotten gains. I am not ashamed to say openly that I will advise the slaves to line their pockets well from their Master's coffers, then make tracks for the Northern states. An agent of the U. G. R. R., could do a large business just now in these parts. Send one along, and oblige,

Duke.

LETTER FROM PATERSON.

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 28th, 1861.

Mr. Editor;

Two lectures (the 20th and 22nd,) have been given here by William Wells Brown, the first on Haytian Emigration, and the other on Elevation. The speaker has visited the Island (but returned to live and lecture in this country) and speaks very favorably of its qualities; and he recommends enterprising persons to investigate the matter, and grasp the golden opportunities awaiting them on its free shores. He further said that every one should not go; for unless the emigrant makes up his mind to work earnestly, to use all his energy, he might as well stay at home. Our people are religious, don't feel at home in white churches, and hence he thinks we gather together in towns; but he would advise all those occupying low positions, such as waiters, ostlers, white-washers, boot-blacks, to go into the country, purchase land, and become honest farmers. This is the most independent, respectable position they can occupy. Indeed he thinks it possible for some to do as well at farming here as in Hayti. But for the rest of the lecture, please read the "Guide to Hayti" by Jas. Redpath. In handling his subject Mr. Brown exhibited much tact; and as a lecturer, won the highest opinion of our people for his ability and eloquence.

One thing, however, puzzles the writer. Why is it that men who have been years before the public as lecturers, never by the faintest whisper advocated an emigration to Hayti until they became the hired agents of the disinterested James Redpath? Did the shining orbs of the Bureau cast any new light on the subject? Like Miss Dartle, "I only ask for information."

Occasional.

◆

Domestic Duties.—A knowledge of domestic duties, says Mrs. Child, is beyond all price to a woman. Every one of our sex ought to know how to sew, and knit and mend, and cook, and superintend a household. In every situation of life, high or low, this sort of knowledge is of great advantage. There is no necessity that the gaining of such information should interfere with intellectual acquirement or elegant accomplishment. A well regulated mind can find time for all. When a girl is nine or ten years old, she should be accustomed to take some regular share in the household duties, and to feel responsible for the manner in which her part is performed, such as her own mending, washing the cups and putting them in place, cleaning silver or dusting and arranging parlors. This should not be occasionally, and neglected whenever she feels it convenient; she should consider it her department. When older than twelve, girls should begin to take turn in superintending the household, making puddings, pies, cake, etc.; to learn effectually to do these things themselves, and not stand by and see others do them.

Had Him There.—The Washington correspondent of the Bridgewater Standard writes:

"Our hotels are full. An officer on asking for his bill a few days ago, found that a quart of wine was charged, when he had had but a pint. He took exceptions to the items. Landlord was incorrigible—said there never was any mistake about the wine bills. Officer paid it, went to his room to pack his carpeting. Having made purchases, his bag was too full to get in an extra pair of boots. Landlord was sent for—came. Says the officer, 'I can't get these boots into this d——d bag.' Landlord—'If you can't I'm sure I cant." Officer—'Yes you can, for a man who can put a quart of wine into a pint bottle, can put these boots into that bag.' Landlord cancelled the whole bill and returned the amount."

An ancient, impertinent fellow divides female beauty into four orders, as follows:

Long and lazy, little and loud,
Fair and foolish, dark and proud.

Arrant rascal! the following is the true reading:

Tall and splendid, little and neat,
Fair and pleasant, dark and sweet.

Or, the exact translation should be—

High and beauteous, little and witty,
Fair and lovely, dark and pretty.

This is our version:—Exchange.

Lofty and queen-like, little and talkative,
Fair and winning dark and "walkative."

And this is ours:

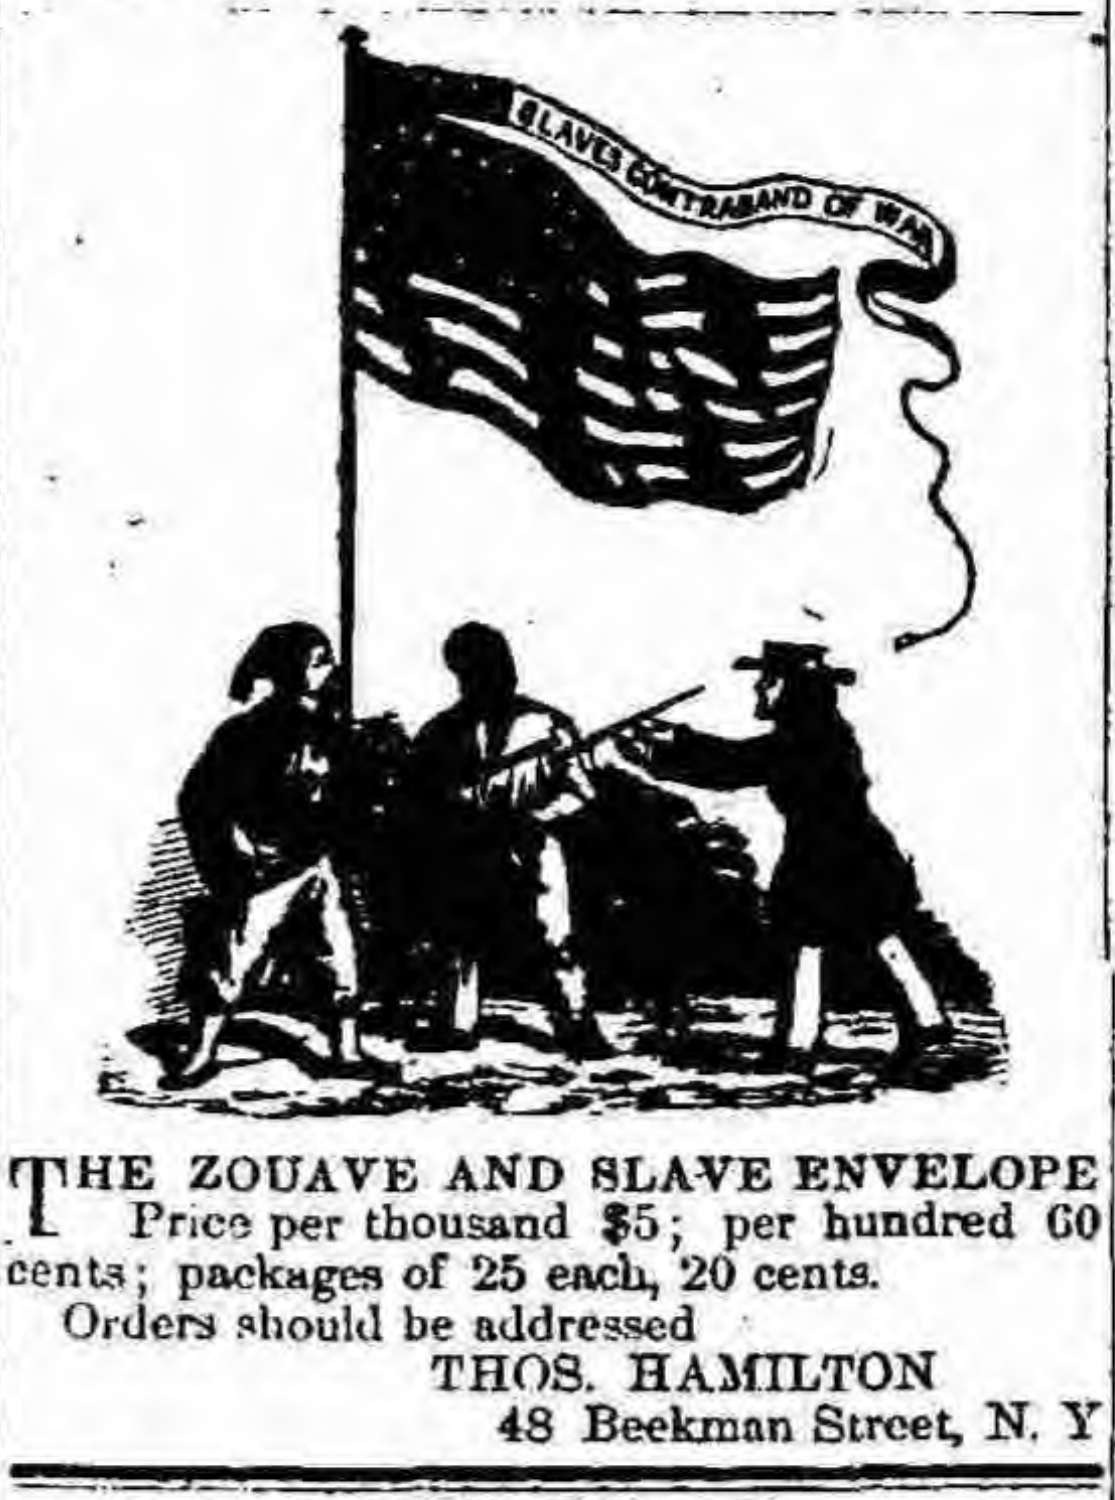
Proud and pouty, pretty and sweet,
Bonnets and crinoline take up the street.

How He got Used to it.—Somewhere in our neighborhood lives a farmer of such social habits, that his coming home intoxicated was once no unusual thing. His wife urged him in vain to sign the pledge.

"Why, you see," he would say, "I'll sign it after a while, but I don't like to break right off at once; it ain't wholesome. The best way is to get used to a thing by degrees, you know."

The Solitude of Death.—We must die alone. To the very verge of the stream our friends may accompany us; they may bend over us, they may cling to us, there; but that one long wave from the sea of eternity washes up the lips, sweeps us from the shore and we go forth alone! In that untried and utter solitude, then, what can there be for us but the pulsation of that assurance—"I am not alone because the Father is with me!"

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE

Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.

Orders should be addressed

THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, Diptheria and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, Diptheria, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.

10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the Original Inventor of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we Challenge the World to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.

2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.

3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.

4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.

5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.

6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. for washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.

7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

Every mother should be prepared to act in the capacity of both nurse and physician to her children she can, if she will, discharge these duties much better than any one she can employ. If she does not, she ought to know that there is a Medicine prepared by an old nurse and female physician which has stood the test of many, many years, and is the most perfect thing on earth for children teething; it also cures Wind Colic, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, and is sure to regulate the bowels. We say to every mother, do not let your own prejudices, or the prejudices of others stand in the way of the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP certainly does, as the name implies, "soothe" the little sufferer into a quiet, natural sleep, from which it awakes invigorated and refreshed. And for the cure of diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Wind Colic, &c., we have never seen its equal.

We have always been, and still are, opposed to the practice of drugging infants. This article has no deleterious effects whatever, and from our own experience (we speak advisedly) we have every confidence in it, and can heartily recommend it to all mothers. Take our advice—use it—and you will as strongly recommend it to others as we have to you.

When we say that MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP acts like a charm, we do but reiterate the language of every person who ever used it for their children, for all diseases incident to the period of teething, such as Dysentery and Diarrhœa, Wind Colic and Cholera Infantum. It will produce quietude and rest, relieve all suffering, and the infant will awake invigorated and refreshed, and not with the dull and stupefying effects of preparations of opium.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States.

During the thirty years of unprecedented and increasing popularity of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP, innumerable "Certificates" and other nostrums prepared by pretended M.D.'s, have sprung up and lived but a mushroom existence, the SOOTHING SYRUP has been constantly increasing in popularity, and become a household word, and for the health of their children, by the use of this valuable article.

THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS THANK
MRS. WINSLOW

PRICE 20 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

For sale by

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St., N.Y.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of

THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes of people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equral in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

Price, 25 Cents per Bottle.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

Price.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS;

Embellishment.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
Music.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James McCune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture —by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Merce Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Horland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—b Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sell Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to

THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY THOMAS HAMILTON,

48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. Contents: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell. Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

ife of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Associatian 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 294 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents) must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated, 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe,
60 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 20 NEW YORK, DECEMBER 14, 1861. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

The Weekly Anglo-African:
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY,
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
No. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed
ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART I.

By myself, the Lord of Ages,
I have sworn to right the wrong;
I have pledged my word unbroken,
For the weak against the strong.
—[H. Beecher Stowe.

CHAPTER XVI.

SOLICITUDE AND AMUSEMENT.

Mrs. Franks sought the earliest opportunity for an interview with the Major, concerning her favorite Maggie. The children now missed her, little George continued fretful, and her own troubled soul was pressed with anxiety.

On conversing with the Major to her great surprise she learned that the maid had been sold to a stranger, which intelligence he received from Mrs. Ballard herself, whom he met on the quay as he left Havana. The purchaser was a planter formerly of Louisiana, a batchelor by the name of Peter Labonier. This person resided twelve miles from Havana, the proprietor of a sugar estate.

The apprehensions of Mrs. Franks on learning these facts, were aroused to a point of fearful anxiety. These fears were mitigated by the probable chance in her favor, by a change of owners, as his first day's possession of her, turned him entirely against her. He would thus most probably part with her, which favored the desires of Mrs. Franks.

She urged upon the Major as a favor to herself, to procure the release of Maggie, by his purchase and enfranchisement with free papers, of unconditional emancipation.

To this Major Armsted gave the fullest assurance, at the first possible opportunity. The company were to meet at no distant day, when he hoped to execute the orders.

'How did you leave cousin Arabella, Judge?' enquired Mrs. Franks, as he and the Colonel entered the parlor, directly from the back porch where they had been engaged for the last two hours in close conversation.

'Very well Maria! when last heard from, a letter reaching me just before I left by the kindness of our mutual friend the Major. By the way, your girl and she did not get on so well I be—!'

An admonitory look from Franks, arrested the subject before the sentence was completed.

Every reference to it was carefully avoided, though the Colonel ventured to declare, that henceforth, towards his servants, instead of leniency, he intended severity. They were becoming every day more and more troublesome, and less reliable. He intended in the language of his friend the Judge, to 'lay upon them a heavy hand' in future.

'I know your sentiments on this point,' he said in reply to an admonition from Armsted; 'and I used to entertain the same views, but experience has taught me better. Well Judge as you wish to become a southerner, you must first see the sights,' as children say, and learn to get used to them. I wish you to ride out with me to Captain Grason's, and you'll see some rare sport; the most amusing thing I ever witnessed,' suggested Franks.

'What is it?' enquired the Major.

'The effect is lost by previous knowledge of the thing,' replied he. 'This will suit you Armsted, as you're fond of negro jokes.'

'Then Colonel let's be off,' urged the Major.

'Off it is!' replied Franks, as he invited the gentleman to take a seat in the carriage already at the door.

'Halloo, halloo, here you are Colonel! Why Major Armsted, old fellow, 'pon my word!' saluted Grason, grasping Armsted by the hand as they entered the porch.

'Judge Ballard! sir,' said Armsted.

'Just in time for dinner gentlemen! Be seated,' invited he holding the Judge by the hand. 'Welcome to Mississippi sir! What's up gentlemen?'

'We've come out to witness some rare sport the Colonel has been telling us about,' replied the Major.

'Blamed if I don't think the Colonel will have me advertised as a showman presently! I've got a queer animal here; I'll show him to you after dinner,' rejoined Grason: 'Gentlemen, help yourselves to brandy and water.'

Dinner over, the gentlemen walked i the pleasure grounds, in the rear of the mansion.

'Nelse, where is Rube? Call him!' said Grason to a slave lad, brother to the boy for whom he sent.

Shortly there came forward, a small black boy about eleven years of age, thin visage, projecting under teeth, rather ghastly consumptive look, and emaciated condition. The child trembled with fear as he approached the group.

'Now gentlemen,' said Grason, 'I'm going to show you a sight!' having in his hand a long whip, the cracking of which he commenced, as a ring master in a circus.

The child gave him a look never to be forgotten; a look beseeching mercy and compassion. But the decree was made, and though humanity quailed in dejected supplication before him, the command was imperative, with no living hand to stay the impending consequences. He must submit to his fate, and pass through the ordeal of training.

'Wat maus gwine do wid me now! I knows wat maus gwine do;' said this miserable child of pity; 'he gwine make me see sights!' when going down on his hands and feet, he commenced trotting around like a brute.

'Now gentlemen, look!' said Grason; 'he'll whistle, sing songs, hymns, pray, swear like a trooper, laugh, and cry, all under the same state of feelings.'

With a peculiar swing of the whip, bringing the lash down upon a certain spot on the exposed skin, the whole person being prepared for the purpose, the boy commenced to whistle almost like a thrush; another cut changed it to a song, another to a hymn, then a pitiful prayer, when he gave utterance to oaths which would make a Christian shudder, after which he laughed outright; then from the fulln ss of his soul he cried:

'O, maussa, I's sick! Please stop little!' casting up clots of hemorrhage.*

Franks stood looking on with unmoved muscles. Armsted stood aside whittling a stick; but when Ballard saw, at every cut the flesh turn open in gashes streaming down with gore, till at last in agony he appealed for mercy, he involuntary found his hand with a grasp on the whip, arresting its further application.

'Not quite a southerner yet Judge, if you can't stand that!' said Franks on seeing him wiping away a stealing tear.

'Gentlemen help yourselves to brandy and water. The little negro don't stand it nigh so well as formerly. He used to be a very trump!'

'Well Colonel'' said the Judge; 'as I have to leave for Jackson this evening, I suggest that we return to the city.'

The company now left Grason's; Franks for the enjoyment of home, Ballard and Armsted for Jackson, and the poor boy Reuben from homorrage of the lungs, that evening left time for eternity.

CHAPTER XVII.

HENRY AT LARGE.

On leaving the plantation carrying hanging upon his arm, thrown across his shoulders, and in his hands, Henry had a bridle, halter, blanket, girt, and horsewhip, the emblems of a faithful servant in discharge of his master's business.

By shrewdness and discretion such was his management as he passed along, that he could tell the name of each place and proprietor, long before he reached them. Being a scholar, he carefully kept a record of the plantations he had passed, that when accosted by a white, as an overseer or patrol, he invariably pretended to belong to a back estate, in search of his master's race horse. If crossing a field, he was taking a near cut; but if met in a wood, the animal was in the forest, as being a great leaper no thing could debar him, though the forest was fenced and posted. The blanket a substitute for a saddle, was in reality carried for a bed.

With speed unfaltering and spirits unflinching, his first great strive was to reach the Red River, to escape from his own state as quickly as possible. Proceeding on in the direction of the Red River country, he met with no obstruction, except in one instance, when he left his assailant quietly upon the earth. A few days after an inquest was held upon the body of a deceased overseer—verdict of the Jury, 'By hands unknown.'

On approaching the river, after crossing a number of streams, as the Yazoo, Ouchita, and such, he was brought to sad reflections. A dread came over him, difficulties lay before him, dangers stood staring him in the face at every step he took. Here for the first time since his maturity of manhood responsibilities rose up in a shape of which he had no conception. A mighty undertaking, such as had never before been ventured upon, and the duty devolving upon him, was too much for a slave with no other aid than the aspirations of his soul panting for liberty. Reflecting upon the peaceful hours he once enjoyed as a professing Christian, and the distance which slavery had driven him from its peaceful portals, here in the wilderness, determining to renew his faith and dependence upon Divine aid, when dropping upon his knees, he opened his heart to God, as a tenement of the Holy Spirit.

'Arm of the Lord awake! renew my faith, confirm my hope, perfect me in love. Give strength, give courage, guide and protect my pathway, and direct me in my course!' Springing to his feet as if a weight had fallen from him, he stood up a new man.

The river is narrow, the water red as if colored by iron rust, the channel winding. Beyond this river lay his hopes, the broad plains of Louisiana with a hundred thousand bondsmen, seeming anxiously to await him.

Standing upon a high bank of the stream contemplating his mission, a feeling of humbleness, and a sensibility of unworthiness impressed him, and that religious sentiment which once gave comfort to his soul now inspiring anew his breast, Henry raised in solemn tones amidst the lonely wilderness:

'Could I but climb where Moses stood,
And view the landscape o'er;
Not Jordan's streams, nor death's cold flood,
Could drive me from the shore!'

To the right of where he stood was a cove, formed by the washing of the stream at high water, which ran quite into the thicket, into which the sun shone through a space among the high trees.

While thus standing and contemplating his position, the water being too deep to wade, and on account of numerous sharks and alligators, too dangerous to swim, his attention was attracted by the sound of a steamer coming up the channel. Running into the cove to shield himself, a singular noise disturbed him, when to his terror he found himself amidst a squad of huge alligators, which had sought the advantage of the sunshine.

His first impulse was to surrender himself to his fate and be devoured, as in the rear and either side, the bank was perpendicular, escape being impossible except by the way he entered, to do which would have exposed him to the view of the boat, which could not have been avoided. Meantime the frightful animals were crawling over and among each other, at a fearful rate.

Seizing the fragment of a limb which lay in the cove, beating upon the ground and yelling like a madman, giving them all possible space, the beasts were frightened at such a rate, that they reached the water in less time than Henry reached the bank. Receding into the forest, he thus escaped the observation of the passing steamer, his escape serving to strengthen his faith in a renewed determination of spiritual dependence.

While gazing upon the steamer in solemn reflection for Divine aid to direct him, logs came floating down, which suggested a proximity to the raft with which sections of that stream are filled, when going but a short distance up, he crossed in safety to the Louisiana side. His faith was now fully established, and thenceforth, Henry was full of hope and confident of success.

Reaching Alexandria with no obstruction, his first secret meeting was held in the hut of aunt Dilly. Here he found them all ready for an issue.

'An dis you chile!' said the old woman stooping with age, sitting on a low stool in the chimney corner; 'dis many day, I hearn on yeh!' though Henry had just entered on his mission. From Alexandria he passed rapidly on to Latuer's making no immediate stops, prefering to organize at the more prominent places.

This was a mulatto planter, said to have come from the isle of Guadaloupe. Riding down the road upon a poney at a quick gallop, was a mulatto youth, a son of the planter, an old black man on foot keeping close to the horse's heels.

'Whose boy are you?' inquired the young mulatto, who had just dismounted, the old servant holding his pony.

'I'm in search of master's race horse.'

'What is your name?' farther enquired the young mulatto.

'Gilbert sir.'

'What do you want?'

'I am hungry sir.'

'Dolly,' said he to an old black woman at the woodpile; 'show this man into the negro quarter, and give him something to eat; give him a cup of milk. Do you like milk my man?'

'Yes sir, I have no choice when hungry; anything will do.'

'Da is none hear but claubeh, maus Eugene,' replied the old cook.

'Give him that,' said the young mastet. 'You people like that kind of stuff I believe; our negroes like it.'

'Yes sir,' replied Henry, when the lad left.

'God knows 'e needn' talk 'bout wat we po' black folks eat, case da don' g'in us nothin' else but dat an' caun bread,' muttered the old woman.

'Dont they treat you well, aunty?' inquired Henry.

'God on'y knows my chile, wat we suffeh.'

'Who was that old man who ran behind your master's horse?'

'Dat Nathan, my husban'.'

'Do they treat him well, aunty?'

'No chile, wus an' any dog, da beat 'im for little an nothin'.'

'Is uncle Nathan religious?'

'Yes chile ole man an' I's been sarvin' God dis many day, 'fo yeh baun! Wen any on 'em in de house git sick, den da sen for 'uncle Nathan' come pray for dem; 'uncle Nathan' mighty good den!'

'Do you know that the Latuers are colered people?'

'Yes, chile; God bless yeh soul yes! Case 'er mammy ony dead two-three years, an' she black as me.'

'How did they treat her?'

'Not berry well; she nus de childen, an eat in de house arter all done.'

'What did Latuer's children call her?'

'Da call 'er 'mammy' same like wite folks childen call de nus.'

'Can you tell me aunty why they treat you people so badly, konwing themselves to be colored, and some of the slaves related to them?'

'God bless yeh hunny, da wite folks, dese plantehs make 'em so; da run hear, an' tell 'em da mus'n treat der niggehs well, case da spile 'em.'

'Do the white planters frequently visit here?'

'Yes, hunny, yes, da hear some on 'em all de time eatin' an' drinkin' long wid de old man; da on'y tryin' git wat little 'e got, dat all! Da 'tend to be great frien' de ole man; but laus a messy hunny, I don' mine dese wite folks no how!'

'Does your master ever go to their houses and eat with them?'

'Yes chile, some time 'e go, but den half on 'em got nothin' fit to eat; da hab fat poke an' bean, caun cake an' sich like, dat all da got, some on 'em.'

'Does Mr. Latuer give them better at his table?'

'Laws hunny, yes; yes'n deed chile! 'E got mutton—some time whole sheep mos'—fowl, pig, an' ebery tum ting a nudder, 'e got so much ting dar, I hardly know wat cook fus.'

'Do the white planters associate with the family of Latuer?'

'One on 'em 'ten 'e coatin de darter; I don't recon 'e gwine hab 'er. Da can' fool long wid 'Toyeh's gals dat way.'

'Whose girls, Metoyers?'

'Yes chile.'

'Do you mean the wealthy planters of that name?'

'Dat same chile.'

'Well, I want to understand you. You don't mean to say that they are colored people.'

'Yes, hunny, yes; da good cul'd folks any body. Some five-six boys an five-six gals on 'em; da all rich.'

'How do they treat their slaves?'

'De boys all mighty haud maustes, de gals all mighty good; sahvants all like em'

'You seem to understand these people very well aunty. Now please tell me what kind of masters there are generally in the Red river country.'

'Haud 'nough, chile, haud 'nough, God on'y knows!'

'Do the colored masters treat theirs generally worse than the whites?'

'No hunny, 'bout de same.'

'That's just what I want to know. What are the usual allowances for slaves?'

'Da 'low de fiel' han' two suit a year for umin, one long linen coat,* make suit, an' for man, pantaloon an' jacket.'

'How about eating?'

'Halt peck meal a day for family ob fo'!'

'What about weekly privileges?' Do you have Saturday to yourselves?'

'Laud hunny, no! no chile, no! Da do'n 'low us no time, 'tall. Da 'low us ebery udder Sunday wash our close; dat all de time we git.'

'Then you don't get to sell anything for yourselves?'

'No, hunny, no? Da don' low pig, chicken, tucky, goose, bean, pea, tatch, nothin' else.'

'Well aunty, I'm glad to meet you, and as evening's drawing nigh, I must see your husband a little, then go.'

'God bless yeh chile whar eber yeh go! Yeh ain' artch no race-hos, dat yeh aint.'

'You got something to eat my man, did you?' inquired the lad Eugene, at the conclusion of his interview with uncle Nathan.

'I did sir, and feasted well!' replied Henry in conclusion; 'Good bye!' and he left for the next plantation suited to his objects.

'God bless de baby!' said old aunt Dolly as uncle Nathan entered the hut, referring to Henry.

'Ah, chile!' replied the old man with tears in his eyes; 'my years has hearn dis day!'

CHAPTER XVIII.

FLEETING SHADOWS.

In high spirits Henry left the plantation of Latuer, after sowing seeds from which in due season, he anticipated an abundant harvest. He found the old man Nathan all that could be desired, and equal to the task of propagating the scheme. His soul swelled with exultation on receiving the the tidings, declaring that though nearly eighty years of age, he never felt before an implied meaning, in the promise of the Lord.

'Now Laud!' with uplifted hands exclaimed he at the conclusion of the interview; 'my eyes has seen, and my years hearn, an' now Laud! I's willin' to stan' still an' see dy salvation!'

On went Henry to Metoyers, visiting the places of four brothers, having taken those of the white planters intervening, all without detection or suspicion of being a stranger.

Stopping among the people of Col. Hopkins at Grantico summit, here as at Latuer's and all intermediate places he found the people patiently looking for a promised redemption. Here a pet female slave, Silva, espied him and gave the alarm that a strange black was lurking among the negro quarters, which compelled him to retire sooner than intended.

Among the people of Dickson at Pine Bluff, he found the best of spirits. There was Newman, a young slave man born without arms, who was ready any moment for a strike.

'How could you fight?' said Henry; 'you have no arms!'

'I am compelled to pick with my toes, eighty pound of cotton a day,† and I can sit on a stool and touch off a cannon!' said this promising young man whose heart panted with an unsuppressed throb for liberty.

Heeley's, Harrison's, and Hickman's slaves were fearfully and pitiably dejected. Much effort was required to effect a seclusion, and more to stimulate them to action. The continual dread that 'maus wont let us!' seemed as immovably fixed as the words were constantly repeated; and it was not until an occasion was made for an another subject of inquest in the person of a pest of an old black slave man, that an organization was effected.

Approaching Crane's on Little River, the slaves were returning from the field to the gin. Many being females, some of whom were very handsome, had just emptied their baskets. So little clothing had they on, and so loosely hung the tattered fragments about them, that they cowered themselves behind the large empty vessels tilted over on the side, to shield their person from exposure.

The overseer engaged in another direc*tion, the master absent,* and the family at the great house, a good opportunity presented for an inspection of affairs.

'How do you do, young woman?' saluted Henry.

'How de do sir!' replied a sprightly, comely young mulatto girl, who stood behind her basket with not three yards of cloth in the tattered relic of the only garment she had on.

'Who owns this place?'

'Mr. Crane sir,' she politely replied with a smile.

'How many slaves has he?'

'I don'o, some say five'a six hund'ed.'

'Do they all work on this place?'

'No sir, he got two-three places.'

'How many on this place?'

'Oveh a hund'ed an' fifty.'

'What allowances have you?'

'None sir.'

'What! no Saturday to yourselves?'

'No sir.'

'They allow you Sundays, I suppose.'

'No sir, we work all day ev'ry Sunday.'

'How late do you work?'

'Till we can' see to pick no mo' cotton; but w'en its moon light, we pick till ten o'clock at night.'

'What time do you get to wash your clothes?'

'None sir; da on'y 'low us one suit ev'ry New Years day,* an' us gals take it off ev'ry Satady night afteh de men all gone to bed and wash it for Sunday.'

'Why do you want clean clothes on Sunday, if you have to work on that day?'

'It's de Laud's day, an' we wan' to be clean, and we feel bettch.'

'How do the men do for clean clothes?'

'We wash de men's clothes afteh da go to bed.'

'And you say you are only allowed one suit a year? Now young woman, I don't know your name but—'

'Nancy, sir.'

'Well Nancy, speak plainly, and dont be backward; what does your one suit consist of?'

'A frock, sir, made out er coase tow linen.'

'Only one piece, and no under clothes at all?'

'Dat's all sir!' replied she modestly looking down and drawing the basket which sufficiently screened her, still closer to her person.

'Is that which you have on a sample of the goods your clothes are made of?'

'Yes sir, dis is de kine.'

'I would like to see some other of your girls.'

'Stop sir, I go call Susan!' when gathering up, and drawing around and before her, a surplice of the back section, the only remaining sound remnant of the narrow tattered garment that she wore, off she ran behind the gin, where lay in the sun, a number of girls to rest themselves during their hour of 'spell.'

'Susan!' she exclaimed rather loudly; 'I do'n want you gals!' she pleasantly admonished, as the whole twelve or fifteen rose from their resting place, and went hurriedly around the building, Nancy and Susan in the lead. They instinctively, as did Nancy, drew their garments around and about them, on coming in sight of the stranger, standing on the outside of the fence, who politely bowed as they approached.

'Dis is Susan, sir!' said Nancy, introducing her friend with bland simplicity.

'How de do sir!' saluted she, a modest and intelligent, very pretty young black girl, of good address.

'Well Susan!' replied Henry, 'I dont want anything but to see you girls; but I will ask you this question: how many suits of clothes do they give you a year?,

'One sir.'

'How many pieces make a suit?'

'Jus' one frock;' and they simultaneously commenced drawing still closer before, the remnant of coarse garment, which hung in tatters about them.

'Dont you have shoes and stockings in winter?'

'We no call for shoes, case 'taint cole much; on'y some time little fros'.'

'How late in the evening do you work?'

'De fiel' hans dar;' pointing to those returning to the field; 'da work till bed time, but we gals hear, we work in de gin, and spell each other ev'ey twelve ours.'

'You're at leisure now; who fills your places?'

'Nutha set a han's go to work, fo' you come.'

'How much cotton do they pick for a task?'

'Each one mus' pick big basket full, an' fetch it in f'om da fiel' to de gin, else da git thirty lashes.'

'How much must the women pick as a task?'

'De same as de men.'

'That can't be possible!' said Henry, looking over the fence down upon their baskets; 'how much do they hold?'

'I dis membeh sir, but good 'eal.'

'I see on each basket marked 125 lbs., is that the quantity they hold?'

'Yes sir, dat's it.' 'All mus' be in gin certain our else da git whipped; sometime de men help 'em.'

'How can they do this when they have their own to carry?'

'Da put derse on der head, an' ketch hole one side de women basket. Sometime da leave part in de fiel', an' go back afteh it.'

'Do you get plenty to eat?'

'No sir, da feeds us po'ly; sometime, we do'n have mo'n half nough!

'Did you girls ever work in the field?'

'O yes sir! all uv us, on'y we wan't strong nough to fetch in our cotton, den da put us at da gin.'

'Where would you rather be, at the gin or in the field?'

'If 'twant for carryin' cotton, we drather work in de fiel'.'

'Why so girls?'

'Case den da would'n be so many ole wite plantehs come an' look at us, like we was show!'

'Who sees that the tasks are done in the field?'

'De Driveh.'

'Is he a white man?'

'No sir, black.'

'Have you no white overseer?'

'Yes sir, Mr. Dorman.'

'Where is Dorman when you are at work?'

'He out at de fiel' too.'

'What is he doing there?'

'He watch Jesse, de driveh.'

'Is Jesse a pretty good fellow?'

'No sir, he treat black folks like dog, he all de time beat 'em, when de no call to do it.'

'How did he treat you girls when you worked in the field?'

'He beat us if we jis' git little behind de res' in pickin'! De wite folks make 'im bad.'

'Point him out to me and after to night, he'll never whip another.'

'Now girls, I see that you are smart intelligent young women, and I want you to tell me why it is, that your master keeps you all here at work in the gin, when he could get high prices for you, and supply your places with common cheap hands at half the money?'

'Case we gals won' go! Da been mo'n a doz'n plantehs hear lookin' at us, an' want to buy us for house keepehs, an' we wont go; we die fus!' said Susan with a shudder.

'Yes,' repeated Nancy, with equal emotion, "we die fus!'

'How can you prevent it girls; wont your master sell you agianst your will?'

'Yes sir, he would, but de plantehs da dont want us widout we willin' to go.'

'I see! Well girls, I believe I'm done with you; but before leaving let me ask you, is there among your men, a real clever good trusty man? I dont care either old or young, though I prefer an old or middle aged man.'

'O yes sir,' replied Nancy; 'da is some mong 'em.'

'Give me the name of one,' said Henry, at which request Nancy and Susan looked hesitatingly at each other.

'Dont be backward,' admonished he; 'as I shan't make a bad use of it. But they still hesitated, when after another admonition Nancy said—

'Dare's uncle Joh—'

'No, uncle Moses, uncle Moses!' in a suppressed tone interrupted the other girls.

'Who is uncle Moses?' inquired Henry.

'He is my father!' replied Susan; 'an—'

'My uncle!' interrupted Nancy.

'Then you two are cousins?'

'Yes sir, her father an' my motha is brotha an' sisteh,' replied Nancy.

'Is he a religious man, girls?'

'Yes sir, he used to preach but'e do'n preach now,' explained Susan.

'Why?'

'Case da 'ligious people won' hear him now.

'Who, colored people?'

'Yes sir.'

'When did they stop hearing him preach?'

'Good while ago.'

'Where at?'

'Down in de bush meetin', at da Baptism.'

'He's a Baptist then—what did he do?'

Again became Susan and Nancy more perplexed than before, the other girls in this instance failing to come to their relief.

'What did he do girls, let me know it quick, as I must be off?'

'Da say—da say—I do'n want tell you!' replied Susan hesitating with much feeling.

'What is it girls, cant some of you tell me?' earnestly inquired Henry.

'Da say befo' 'e come hear way down in Fagins, he kill a man, ole po' wite ovehseer!'

'Is that it girls? inquired he.

'Yes sir' they simultaneously replied.'

'Then he's the very man I want to see!' said Henry. 'Now don't forget what I say to you; tell him that a man will meet him to-night below here on the river side, just where the carcass of an ox lies in the verge of the thicket. Tell him to listen, and when I'm ready, I'll give the signal of the runaway—the screech of the panther*—when he must immediately obey the summons. One word more, and I'll leave you. Every one of you, as you have so praiseworthily concluded, die before surrendering to such base purposes as that for which this man who holds you wishes to dispose of you. Girls, you will see me no more.—Fare—'

'Yo' name sir, yo' name!' they all exclaimed.

'My name is—Farewell, girls, farewell!'—when Henry darted in the thickest of the forest on observing the approach of a white man, leaving the squad of young maiden slaves in a state of bewildering inquiry concerning the singular black man.

The next day Jesse the driver was missed, and never after heard of. On inquiry being made of the old man Moses concerning the stranger, all that could be elicited was—

'Stan' still child'en, and see de salvation uv de Laud!'

CHAPTER XIX.

COME WHAT WILL.

Leaving the plantation of Crane with high hopes and great confidence in the integrity of uncle Moses and the maiden gang of cotton girls, Henry turned his course in a retrograde direction so as again to take the stream of Red River. Little River where he then was, being but a branch of that water.

Just below its confluence with the larger stream at the moment when he reached the junction, a steam cotton trader hove in view. There was no alternative but to stand like a freeman, or suddenly escape into the forest, thus creating suspicions and fears, as but a few days previous a French planter of the neighborhood lost a desperate slave, who became a terror to the country around. The master was compelled to go continually armed, as also other white neighbors, and all were afraid after nightfall, to pass out the threshold of their own doors. Permission was given to every white man to shoot him if ever seen within rifle shot, which facts having learned the evening be*fore, Henry was armed with this precau*tion.

His dress being that of a race-groom—small leather cap with long front piece, neat fitting roundjacket, high boots drawn over the pantaloon legs, with blanket, girt, halter, whip and bridle—Henry stood upon the shore awaiting the vessel.

'Well boy!' hailed the captain as the line was thrown out, which he caught making fast at the root of a tree; 'do you wish to come aboard?'

'Good man!' approvingly cried the mate, at the expert manner which he caught the line and tied the sailor knot.

'Have you ever steamboated my man?' continued the captain.

'Yes sir,' replied Henry.

'Where?'

'On the Upper and Lower Mississippi sir.'

'Who do you know as masters of steamers on the Upper Mississippi?'

'Captains Thogmorton, Price, Swan, and—'

'Stop, stop: that'll do,' interrupted the captain; 'you know the master of every steamer in the trade I believe. Now who in the Lower trade?'

'Captains Scott, Hart, and—'

'What's Captain Hart's Christian name?' interrupted the captain.

'Jacob, sir.'

'That'll do; be George you know every body! Do you want to ship?'

'No sir.'

'What are you doing here?'

'I am hunting master's stray race horse.'

'Your 'master's' race horse! Are you a slave boy?'

'Yes sir.'

'How did you come to be on the Mississippi River?'

'I hired my time sir.'

'Yes, yes, boy, I see.'

'Who is your master?'

'Colonel Sheldon; I used to belong to Major Gilmire.'

'Are you the boy Nepp, the great horse trainer the Major used to own?'

'No sir, I'm his son?'

'Are you as good at horse training as the old chap?'

'They call me better, sir.'

'Then you're worth your weight in gold. Will your master sell you?'

'I dont know sir.'

'How did your horse come to get away?'

'He was bought from the Major by Colonel Sheldon to run at the great Green Wood Races, Texas, and while training he managed to get away, leaping the fences, and taking to the forest.'

'Then you're Major Tom's race rider Gilbert! eh heh, yes, yes!' You're a valuable boy; I wonder the Major parted with you.'

The bell having rung for dinner, the captain left, Henry going to the deck.

Among those on deck was a bright mulatto young man, who immediately recognized Henry as having seen him on the Upper Mississippi, he being a free man. On going up to him, Henry observed that he was laden with heavy manacles.

'Have I not seen you somewhere before?' enquired he.

'Yes; my name is Lewis Grimes, you saw me on the Upper Mississippi,' replied the young man; 'your name is Henry Holland!'

'What have you been doing?' enquired Henry, on seeing the handcuffs.

'Nothing at all!' replied he with eyes flashing resentment and suffused with tears.

'What does this mean?' continued he, pointing at the handcuffs.

'I am stolen and now being taken to Texas, where I am to be enslaved for life!' replied Lewis sobbing aloud.

'Who did this vile deed?' continued Henry in a low tone of voice, pressing his lips to suppress his feelings.

'One Dr. Johns of Texas, now a passenger on this boat!'

'Was that the person who placed a glass to your lips which you refused, just as I came aboard?'

'Yes, that's the man.'

'Why dont you leave him instantly?' said Henry, his breast heaving with emotion.

'Because he always handcuffs me before the boat lands, keeping me so during the time she lies ashore.'

'Why don't you jump overboard when the boat is under way?'

'Because he guards me with a heavy loaded rifle, and I can't get a chance.'

'He 'guards' you! you can't get a chance!' Are there no nights, and dont he never sleep?'

'Yes, but he makes me sleep in the state room with him, keeping his rifle at his bedside.'

---

* This is a true Mississippi scene.

* Coat—a term used by slaves for frock.

† At the age of thirteen his daily task was 36 lbs. with his oes. This fact was received from the master by the writer.

* Some Red River planters do not allow their slaves but one suit a year.

* This outlandish yell is given by runaway slaves in imitation of what they consider the screech of the panther, so as to frighten people, thus—'WHO-WEE!' dwelling long on both syllables.

'Are you never awake when he is asleep?'

'Often, but I'm afraid to stir lest he wakens.'

'Well dont you submit, die first if thereby you must take another into eternity with you! Were it my case and he ever went to sleep where I was, he'd never waken in this world again!'

'I never thought of that before, I shall take your advice the first opportunity. Good bye sir!' hastily said the young man, as the bell tapped a signal to start, and Henry stepped on shore.

'Let go that line!' sternly commanded the captain, Henry obeying orders on the shore, when the boat glided steadily up the stream, seemingly in unison with the lively though rude and sorrowful song of the black firemen—

'I'm a goin to Texas—O! O-O!
'I'm a goin to Texas, O! O-O!

In consequence of the scarcity of stopping houses and larders along his way in so level and thinly settled country, Henry took in his pouch from the cook of the boat an ample supply of provisions for the succeeding four or five days. Thus provided for, standing upon the bank for a few minutes, with steady gaze listening to the sad song of his oppressed brethren as they left the spot, and reflecting still more on the miserable fate of the young mulatto freeman Lewis Grimes held by the slave-holder Dr. Johns of Texas, he with renewed energy determined that nothing short of an interference by Divine Providence should stop his plans and progress. In soliloquy said Henry:

'Yes!

If every foe stood marshalled in the van.
I'd fight them single combat, man to man!'

and again he started with a manly will, as fixed and determined in his purpose as though no obstructions lay in his pathway.

From plantation to plantation did he go, sowing the seeds of future devastation and ruin to the master and redemption to the slave, an antecedent more terrible in its anticipation, than the warning voice of the destroying Angel, in commanding the slaughter of the first born of Egypt. Careworn, distressed and hungry, scarcely justbeing supplied with nourishment for the system, Henry went forth a welcome messenger, casting his bread upon the turbid waters of oppression, in hopes of finding it after many days.

Holding but one seclusion on each plantation, his progress was consequently very rapid, in whatever direction he went.

With a bold stride from Louisiana, he went into Texas. Here he soon met with the man of his wishes. This presented in the person of Sampson, on the cotton place of proprietor Richardson. The master here though represented wealthy, with an accomplished and handsome young daughter, was a silly, stupid old dolt, an inordinate babbler and wine bibber. The number of his slaves was said to be great, and he the owner of three plantations, one in Alabama, and the others in Texas.

Sampson was a black, tall, stoutly built and manly, possessing much general intelligence, and a good looking person. His wife a neat, intelligent, little woman, the complexion of himself, was the mother of a most interesting family of five pretty children, three boys and two girls. This family entered at once into the soul of his mission, seeming to have anticipated it.

With an ample supply of means,* buried in a convenient well marked spot he only awaited a favorable opportunity to effect his escape from slavery. With what anxiety did that wife gaze smilingly in his face, and a boy and girl cling tightly each to a knee, as this husband and father in whispers recounted his plans and determination of carrying them out. The scheme of Henry was at once committed to his confidence, and he requested to impart them wherever he went.

Richardson being a sportsman and Sampson his body servant, they traveled through every part of the country, thus affording the greatest opportunity for propagating the measures of the secret organization. From Portland in Maine to Galveston in Texas, Sampson was as familiar as a civil engineer.

'Sampson, Sampson, stand by me! Stand by me my man; stand at your master's back!' was the language of this sottish old imbecile to his faithful manly attendant, whom he kept continually upon his feet for hours at a time when reveling at a gambling table, who from excessive fatigue would sometimes squat or sit down upon the floor behind him. 'Sampson, Sampson! are you there? Stand by your master, Sampson!' again would he exclaim so soon as the tall commanding form of his black protector was missed from his sight.

Sampson and wife were both pious people, believing much in the providence of God, as he said having recently had it 'shown to him'—meaning a presentiment—that a messenger would come and reveal the plan of deliverance.

'I am glad to see that you have money,' said Henry; 'you are thereby well qualified for your mission. With money you may effect your escape almost at any time. Your most difficult point is an elevated obstruction, a mighty hill, a mountain; but through that hill there is a gap; and money is your passport through that White Gap to freedom. Mark that. It is the great range of White mountains and White river which are before you and the White Gap that you must pass through to reach the haven of safety. Money alone will carry you through the White mountains or across the White river to liberty.'

'Brother my eyes is open, and my way is clear!' responded Sampson to this advice.

'Then,' said Henry; 'you are ready to 'rise and shine' for—'

'My light has come!' interrupted Sampson; 'but—'

'The glory of God' is not yet shed abroad!* concluded Henry, who fell upon Sampson's neck with tears of joy in meeting unexpectedly one of his race so intelligent in that region of country.

Sampson and wife Drusilla, taking Henry by the hand wept aloud, looking upon him as the messenger of deliverance foreshown to them.

Kneeling down a fervent prayer was offered by Sampson for Henry's protection by the way, and final success in his 'mighty plans,' with many Amens and 'God grants,' by Drusie.

Partaking of a sumptuous fare of 'ash cake' and sweet milk—a dainty diet with many slaves—and bidding with a trembling voice and tearful eye a final 'Farewell!' in six hours he had left the state of Texas to the consequences of a deep laid scheme for a terrible insurrection.

CHAPTER XX.

ADVENT AMONG THE INDIANS.

From Texas Henry went into the Indian Nation near Fort Towson, Arkansas.

'Make yourself at home sir!' invited Mr. Culver the intelligent old Chief of the United Nation; 'and Josephus will attend to you,' referring to his nephew Josephus Braser, an educated young chief and councellor among his people.

'You are slaveholders I see Mr. Culver!' said Henry.

'We are sir, but not like the white men,' he replied.

'How many do you hold?'

'About two hundred on my two plantations.'

'I cant well understand how a man like you can reconcile your principles with the holding of slaves and—'

'We have had enough of that!' exclaimed Dr. Donald, with a tone of threatening authority.

'Hold your breath sir, else I'll stop it!' in a rage replied the young chief.

'Sir,' responded the Doctor; 'I was not speaking to you, but only speaking to that negro!'

'You're a fool!' roared Braser springing to his feet.

'Come, come, gentlemen!' admonished the old Chief; 'I think you are both going mad! I hope you'll behave something better.'

'Well uncle I cant endure him! he assumes so much authority!' replied he, 'He'll make the Indians slaves just now, then Negroes will have no friends.'

Donald was a white man, married among the Indians, a sister of the old Chief and aunt to the young, for the sake of her wealth and a home. A physician without talents, was unable to make a business and unwilling to work.

'Mr. Bras—'

'I want nothing more of you,' interrupted the old Chief; 'you will surely let the Doctor speak!'

'Josephus, Josephus!' interrupted the old Chief; 'you will surely let the Doctor speak!'

Donald stood pale and trembling before the young Choctaw born to command, when receiving no favor he left the company muttering 'nigger!'

'Now you see,' said Mr. Culver as the Doctor left the room; 'the difference between a white man and an Indian holding slaves. Indian work side by side with black man, eat with him, drink with him rest with him, and both lay down in shade together; white man wont even let you talk? In our Nation Indian and black all marry together. Indian like black man very much, only he dont fight 'nough. Black man in Florida fight much, and Indian like 'im heap!'

'You make, sir, a slight mistake about my people. They would fight if they were in their own country, and united as the Indians here, and not scattered thousands of miles apart as they are. You should also remember, that the Africans have never permitted a subjugation of their country by foreigners as the Indians have theirs, and Africa to day is still peopled by Africans, whilst America the home of the Indian who is fast passing away, is now possessed and ruled by foreigners.'

'True, true!' said the old Chief looking down reflectingly; 'too true! I had not thought that way before. Do you think the white man could nt take Africa if he wanted?'

'He might by a combination, and I am doubtful whether then he could if the Africans were determined as formerly to keep him out. You will also remember, that the whites came in small numbers to America, and then drove the Indians from their own soil, whilst the blacks got in Africa as slaves, are taken by their own native conquerers, and sold to foreign white men as prisoners of war.

'That is true sir, true!' sighed the old Chief; 'Indian like game before the bow, is passing away before the gun of the white man!'

'What I now most wish to learn is, whether in case that the blacks should rise, they may have hope or fear from the Indian?' asked Henry.

'I'm an old mouthpiece, been puffing out smok and talk many seasons for the entertainment of the young and benefit of all who come among us. The squaws of the great men among the Indians in Florida were black women, and the squaws of the black men were Indian women. You see the vine that winds around and holds us together. Dont cut it, but let it grow till bimeby, it gits so stout and strong, with many, very many little branches attached that you can't separate them. I now reach to you the pipe of peace and hold out the olive-branch of hope! Go on young man, go on. If you want white man to love you, you must fight 'im!' concluded the intelligent old Choctaw.

'Then sir, I shall rest contented, and impart to you the object of my mission,' replied Henry.

'Ah hah!' exclaimed the old Chief after an hour's seclusion with him; 'ah hah! Indian have something like that long ago. I wonder your people aint got it before! That what make Indian strong; that what make Indian and black man in Florida hold together. Go on young man, go on! may the Great Spirit make you brave!' exhorted Mr. Culver, when the parties retired for the evening. Henry rooming with the young warrior Braser.

By the aid of the young Chief and kindness of his uncle the venerable old brave, Henry was conducted quite through the nation on a pony placed at his service, affording to him an ample opportunity of examining into the condition of things. He left the settlement with the regrets of the people, being the only instance in which his seclusions were held with the master instead of the slave.

---

* This person had really $2,000 in gold, securely hid away unknown to any person but wife, until showing it to the writer.

* A real incident which took place between a slave and a free black adviser.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, DECEMBER 14, 1861.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

Hints and Queries.

In the absence from Northern homes of three-fourths of a million of white men, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, there is a vacuum of workers in their various callings, which our colored young men may partly fill up by a prompt offer of services; and a little of what Scotsmen call CHEEK; or, what might be better be termed, elbow-a-tive-ness. Now is your time young men to look higher than waiter-dom and tender dom, steamboat-dom and hotel dom, cards-dom and dice-dom! Necessity knows no law; not even caste-law; men in want of help have not time to "take a candle," &c., as Governor Andrews well said.

If twenty millions of free white men (WITHOUT negro aid) with abundance of money, arms, ammunition, naval forces, &c., &c., are held at bay seven months by three hundred and fifty thousand slave-holders (WITH negro aid) without money, clothing, scant of food, without naval force, &c., &c., does it not follow that negro aid is the preponderating aid in the conflict?

When lawyer C. S. Spencer, in the board of County Canvassers, threatened County Clerk elect Genet, with a reduction of fees and salary from twenty thousand to two thousand dollars per year, he evidently had him as the monkey caught the rooster. Genet has been seen in the Board of Canvassers only once, since.

If it takes five hundred thousand Northern troops seven months to conquer fifteen miles by a hundred of Southern territory, how long will it take two millions of such troops to fight their way "way down South to Dixie?"

The Hon. Mr. Gurley proposes to take the slaves of the South from their so-called masters, and re-enslave them under the name of apprentices in the State of Florida, for six or seven years. Mrs Glass of comfortable memory, says "first catch your hare," &c., &c.

The "Evening Post" takes Mr. Gurley to task for giving up such a nice State as Florida to the blacks; "it is fit," says the 'Post,' "for white men to cultivate; give the negroes the narrow marshy swamps of South Carolina, where white men cannot live," &c., &c. May God enlarge your "little piddling" soul, Mr. Evening Post; for so large and cool a brain, you have the very meanest heart which ever beat in a white man's breast—which is saying a great deal.

In view of the gallantry of the act, should not our young men, by a twenty-five cent subscription, raise enough money to present a handsome pair of navy revolvers to Lieut. Benedict, of the Liberian navy, for the reason that he did not know any better than to blaze away at the Spanish war steamer until she was compelled "to leave" the harbor of Monrovia? A nice little "tea" could be got up, and the "tools" could be presented by Professor Wilson in a neat little speech, to the Rev. Alexander Crummell, who would appropriately receive them and faithfully present them to the worthy Lieutenant, on his arrival home.

A neat sett of white ostrich feathers might in like manner be sent to President Geffrard, through J. R.

A lady correspondent, who claims to be "posted," informs us that our musical friend Luca has taken to dress-making in Monrovia, and has quite a run. His "breech cloths a la mode" quite astonish the natives.

One of the first best fruits of the great French Revolution was the destruction of the Bastile. From the assaults made on our national bastile at Washington we have some promise of a revolution, if not a war.

President Lincoln, in answer to one who urged a belligerent policy towards England, is said to have replied "one war at a time." Good. But when is the "time" coming.

"Give us our liberty, let us stay here, and pay us for our work, and we will be satisfied," was the answer of a confiscated slave to an enquiring army officer at Port Royal. Let these words be enacted by Congress, and applied to all held in slavery, and the war will be ended, and a happy peace restored in six months.

"Say"—our "say"—is one of the things which will be heard in the not very distant future. We have been hushed up a long while. Gentlemen of the jury, you have never heard ou "say;" members of corporations, city and financial, you have never heard our "say;" members of the legislature, you have seldom heard our "say;" members of Congress you have never heard our "say;" nations, principalities, and powers of the earth, you have never heard our "say;" yet the black man's "say" must be heard one of these days, because the black man is rapidly becoming a "power on the earth," thus far blindly, but soon intelligently weaving into the warp and woof of affairs. President Lincoln's last message is remarkable for its recognition of this fact, when he speaks of "the free colored peoples," and their "desires." The British Government also recognized this "say" of ours, when it sealed up Abbeokuta by seizing upon Lagos. Some among us think it is about time that we should initiate this "say," by a combined expression of opinion emanating from our Northern States, in the form of a "say" which shall find an echo in the West Indies and on the African coast. Dr. Delany is of this opinion, and it is worth thinking about—"say?"

Aid for the Contrabands at Fortress Monroe.

On Sunday, Nov. 8th, the Rev. L. C. Lockwood, a missionary from the American Missionary Association to the "contrabands" at Fortress Monroe, delivered three addresses; the first at Bridge street church, Brooklyn, and in the evening at Zion and Shiloh churches, in this city.

At Zion church, at the conclusion of his address, which was full of interest, and occupied about half an hour in its delivery, the Elder of the church, the Rev. D. Stevens, dismissed the congregation, and immediately thereafter a public meeting was organized.

The Rev. D. Stevens was called to the chair, Mr. Smart Drayton appointed Vice Chairman, and Messrs. T. M. Eato and Sadler were appointed Secretaries.

After a few remarks from different persons in approbation of the objects of the meeting, the following gentlemen and ladies were appointed a committee to solicit donations for the unfortunates at the Fort:

Mr. Robt. Hamilton,
Mrs. Ellen Stevens,
Mr. Isaac Purnell,
Mr. Edward Lawrence,
Mr. Neah Atkinson,
Miss Eliza Smith,
Mr. Smart Drayton,
Miss Cornelia King,
Mrs. Susan Church,
Mr. Bird,
Mr. Robt. Thomas,
Mr. Wash. Williams,
Mr. Geo. Gillett,
Mr. S. J. Howard,
Mr. F. Williams,
Mr. J. Turner,
Mr. J. Downs,
Mr. Wm. Reeves, and others.

Subsequently the committee held two or three meetings, and at the conclusion of their labors they found, on comparing notes, that they had collected clothing to the amount of about two hundred and fifty dollars ($250.). They were greatly assisted by Messrs. Champion, S. J. Howard, F. Thompson and Harget & Caraway, of Brooklyn.

The committee were enabled to fill four large boxes, which were forwarded to Fortress Monroe, on Saturday last, by the American Missionary Association.

At Shiloh church, the Rev. J. N. Gloucester, Pastor of the church, at the conclusion of Mr. Lockwood's remarks, invited the people to bring to the church whatever they had to give. How far this invitation has been complied with, we will be able to state in our next issue, as the boxes were to be closed on Thursday evening of this week.

Martyr's Day in New York City.

A meeting was held on the evening of this day (Dec. 2nd), in Shiloh Presbyterian Church, agreeably to the request of the Pastor, (Rev. H. H. Garnet), who is now in England.

Rev. Jas. N. Gloucester acted as chairman of the meeting.

After singing John Brown's favorite hymn, "Blow ye the trumpet, blow," prayer was offered by the chairman, who, afterwards stated to the audience that as the meeting would be a free one, he would be glad to hear remarks from any person or persons who might feel inclined to offer any; whereupon, remarks were made at length by Messrs. Butler, Howard (who by the way suggested the singing of the "Captives' Hymn" by the audience, who joined right heartily with him), and several other gentlemen whose names we did not learn. A letter from Mr. Garnet to the church was then read, and after more singing the meeting adjourned.

The attendance was quite slim, owing mainly to the fact that sufficient publicity had not been given to it.

H. W., a fine Virginian gentleman, of seventy winters, in splendid keep, and recently set free by the Confiscation Act, called in at our sanctum to-day. He had witnessed the fight at Hilton Head, and landed at Beaufort, returning to this city in one of the transports a week or two ago. He insists that the worst SECKSCHERS are in the North, men owning lands and slaves in Dixie, who dare not speak out, but are working "mighty" in the dark. He also says that the reputed robberies by the slaves at Beaufort were really committed by the officers and soldiers of the invading army. The officers would station men around the houses, go in first and help themselves, and then let the soldiers do likewise. An officer who landed at New York, brought several heavy trunks ashore, one of which it took four men to lift. The soldiers having seized all they could carry, made a general smash of what was left; charging these barbarisms on the slaves.

A SAD CASUALTY.—Robert H. Hollister, a colored boy, residing at No. 113 West 27th street, died from the effects of burns accidentally received by his clothes catching fire from a lighted candle, on the 5th inst. Deceased, it appears, was sent to get some coal, and while carrying a lighted candle for the purpose of seeing his way, he set fire to his clothes and was fatally burned.

Coroner Jackman held an inquest upon the body.

Letter from Dr. Pennington.

LIVERPOOL, Eng., Nov. 21, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:

A column of smoke from the burning of an American ship in British waters has been added to the dingy atmosphere of this land of November fogs and mists. It seems that the full rigged ship, Harvey Birch, 1,487 tons, owned by one Brown, of your city, left Havre in ballast on the 17th inst., for New York. On the 19th she fell in with the paddle steamer Nashville, which had run the blockade at Charleston. Commander Peagrim, of the Nashville, with his officers, boarded the Harvey Birch, and ordered Captain Nelson and the crew of the same on board the Nashville as prisoners. They were put in irons and the ship burnt. All this was done in the English Channel, and the crew were taken into Southampton. This daring act has created in this country a strange development of feeling and opinion. Some regard it as a bold bid to the cotton interest of England. This is made plausible by the fact that Col. Peyton was a passenger on the Nashville, and who has business, it is said, with W. L. Yancey, Southern Commissioner at London, managed on the breeze of the excitement to bring out before the public in the very papers that contain the sensation news of the act of the ship burning, a statement that there is now behind the blockade, of the old crop 750,000 bales of cotton, of the new 4,000,000, and of tobacco and naval stores more than fifty millions worth! Was it a desperate plot to run the blockade, and do some such daring act as this in the British waters, and then throw this tempting piece of information before the people of this country just now? Others suppose that it is aimed at British pride, to compel the nation to operate upon the Government to take position on the issue between the North and the South. At all events the pride of the people just now is quite keenly touched. The idea of the "American War in British Waters," as the "Daily Post" heads a leader this morning, is all the talk on 'Change, in the hotels, on the street and shops; and I hear such expressions as these: "We have not troubled them, and they had better keep their quarrel at home." "They had better not come into John Bull's way." "Hi, hi, this is pretty well too; our Government will have to look into this." Others think that it is intended to raise some new question in diplomacy, in which some of the Southerners will have a chance to display themselves. Com. Peagrim, it is said, declares that he holds no commission from the Confederate Government as a war steamer, and that he is not a privateer. What is he then? He says he has been a U. S. N. officer thirty-two years, and that the hauling down and burning of the Harvey Birch was the most painful act of his life. What did he do it for? All yet is mystery. I shall watch the case.

The American passport question is exciting considerable interest. I have had occasion to correct through the press here some erroneous statements as to its bearings upon colored people. The question how far a passport guarantees the right of citizenship at home is yet the most vital point of all. They ask whether the fact of having a passport to travel in a distant country will protect a colored New Yorker to ride in any other car on the Sixth Avenue than "the colored car," or "black Maria?" The answer must obviously be in the negative. A passport from James Buchanan has carried me over the Continent, and yet, with it in my pocket, I have been dragged out of the Sixth Avenue cars, and I should be with the one I have from W. H. Seward.

In England a colored man needs no passport, unless he wishes to go to the Continent as an American citizen, or go home as an American citizen. In either case he must solemnly swear without mental reservation to support and defend the Constitution and the Government of the United States against all enemies, whether domestic or foreign, &c., &c.

In the midst of all that is being said, you may depend upon it that the British people are taking wise caution. You have little idea of the pressure upon the cotton interests at the present time. But a solid conviction rests upon the minds of the people that they will not in future be dependent upon a cotton aristocracy.

J. W. C. PENNINGTON.

A CLEVER HIT.—A correspondent of the "Sunday Mercury" furnishes its readers with a document purporting to be a message of the Brigadier of the "justly popular Mackerel Brigade," from which the following is an extract:

THE RECOGNITION OF HAYTI AND LIBERIA.

If any good reason exists why we should longer refuse to notice Hayti and Liberia, I should just like to know it. Unwilling, however, to inaugurate the novel policy of recognizing colored people in public, I would recommend the sending of a few reduced consuls to Hayti, as there are several persons with carpet-bags yet to be provided with positions.

DEATH OF MISS BARBARA STEWARD.—By a letter just received from Mr. Austin Steward, we learn that his beloved daughter, the able lecturer, Barbara Stewart, departed this life on Nov. 25th, at Wilkesbarre, Pa., where she had been engaged for some time past in school teaching. She died in the full triumph of faith. In her death the oppressed have lost an able advocate, and society a bright ornament.

Movements of Superintendent Bishop.

DEAR ANGLO:

I left my residence, 12 Webster street, Newark, N. J., Oct. 31st, on my parochial tour in the New England Conference District, viz: Boston, New Bedford, Providence, Worcester, Springfield, &c., in all of which I have been met with cheerfulness and Christian courtesy, not only by my own, but also by other of our city churches; in short, the good Lord is with us. In our beloved Zion, as a general whole, as far as I have been able to ascertain, there is peace and unanimity in, or among, the officials and the laity of the churches, with slight exceptions. I am thankful that I can say that I believe that the pleasure of the Lord seemeth to prosper us in spiritual and temporal matters. The brethren in the ministry generally seem to be in good spirits, and looking for better days.

N. B. I leave for Hartford on the 10th inst., and shall, by Divine permission, be at home about the 22nd inst., to spend the Holidays, after which will resume my labours.

WM. H. BISHOP,
Superintendent of the 1st District of the A. M. Zion Connexion.
Springfield, Mass., Dec. 6, 1861.

Letter from Springfield.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Dec. 8th, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:—The young ladies and gentlemen connected with the Rev. Wm. F. Butler's congregation, Springfield, Mass., expressed their love and respect for their pastor—on the evening of the 3d inst.—by surprising and presenting him with a beautiful morning robe, and a purse well filled. At the conclusion of the presentation, which was made by Miss Sarah Massey, in behalf of the young ladies, the Reverend Sir responded in a brief but touching address, thanking them for their kindness and attention towards him. After participating of an abundant supply of refreshments, which were furnished by the gentlemen, the happy throng dispersed, with a closer and warmer affection for their beloved pastor.

J. A.

Highly Important Documents.

ORDER FROM THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Dec. 5, 1861.

The Secretary of the Treasuay has just issued the following general regulations relative to securing and disposing of the property found or brought within the territory now or hereafter occupied by the United States forces in the disloyal States.

TREASURY DEP'TMENT, Nov. 30, 1861.

In order to the security and proper disposition of the production of the soil, and all other property found within the limits of States or parts of States declared to be in insurrection against the United States, and now occupied or to be hereafter occupied by the troops and authority of the Union, the following regulations are established:

There shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approbation of the President, agents to reside at such ports or places as are, or may be, occupied by forces of the United States, whose duties shall be to secure and prepare for market the cotton and such other products and property as may be found or brought within the lines of the army, or under the control of the Federal authorities.

To enable such agents to fulfill the duties devolved upon them, the military and naval authorities, under proper instructions, will render such military protection and aid as may be required to carry out the intentions of the Department. Persons held to service for life, under State laws, who may be found within such limits, may be employed by the agent, who will prepare lists, embracing the name, sex and condition of such persons, and, as near as may be, their respective ages, together with the name of any person claiming their services; which lists shall be in triplicate—one for the military commandant, one for the files of the agent, and one to be immediately forwarded to the Secretary of the Treasury.

The persons so listed will be organized for systematized labor in securing and preparing for market the cotton, rice, and other products found in the Territory brought under Federal control. Pay rolls will be prepared, and a strict account of the labor daily performed by each person thereon, for which a proper compensation shall be allowed and paid to the laborers. The amount of such compensation will be fixed in proportion to the service rendered by the agent, and approved by the commandant, and by the Secretary of the Treasury. An inventory of all horses, mules, and other stock, vehicles of transportation and other property, will be carefully made, and a copy transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury, signed by such agent.

A record of all products taken possession of will be made, and those of each plantation kept distinct. When prepared for shipment, the packages from the several plantations will be plainly marked, so as to be easily distinguished. An account of all provisions of whatsoever character, found on such plantation, will be taken, and such provisions will be used so far as may be necessary for the sustenance of the laborers thereon. Any deficiencies of subsistence will be supplied by the United States Commissary upon the requisition of the agent, to whom they will be charged, and for which he will account.

The cotton and other articles when prepared for market, shall be shipped to New York, and so far as practicable, by the returning Government transports, and all shipments shall be consigned to the designated agent at New-York, unless otherwise specially directed by the Secretary of the Treasury. A carefully detailed account will be kept by the Agent of all supplies furnished by the Government, and of all expenditures made. Each agent will transmit a weekly report of his proceedings to the Secretary of the Treasury, and render his account in duplicate monthly for settlement.

All requisitions, bills of lading, and invoices will be countersigned by the military commander, or by each officer as he may designate for the purpose. Each agent will so transact his business and keep his accounts that as little injury as possibel may accrue to private citizens, who may maintain or may within reasonable time resume the character of loyal citizens of the United States.

ORDER FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

The following order has been issued from the State Department:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington,
Dec. 4, 1861.

To Major-General George B. McClellan,
Washington.

GENERAL; I am directed by the President to call you attention to the following subject; Persons claimed to be held to service or labor under the laws of the State of Virginia, and actually employed in hostile service against the Government of the United States, frequently escape from the lines of the enemy's forces, and are received within the lines of the army of the Potomac. This Department understands that such persons, after coming into the City of Washington, are liable to be arrested by the City Police, upon the presumption, arising from color, that they are fugitives from service or labor, by the fourth section of the act of Congress, approved Aug. 6, 1861, entitled an act to confiscate property used for insurrectionary purposes, such hostile employment is made a full and sufficient answer to any further claim to service or labor. Persons thus employed and escaping are received into the military protection of the United States, and their arrest as fugitives from labor or service should be immediately followed by the military arrest of the parties making the seizure.

Copies of this communication will be sent to the Mayor of the City of Washington, and to the Marshal of the District of Columbia, that any collision between the military and civil authorities may be avoided.

I am, General, your very obedient servant,
WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

The Freedmen at Fortress Monroe.

Extract from a letter of a correspondent of the N. Y. "Daily Times."

FORTRESS MONROE, Thurs. Dec. 5, 1861.

On my journey to Hatteras, I have called at "Old Point Comfort," and here I shall spend a few days. During the past day I have moved about to see the 'sights,' and they are not few. The "contrabands" attract considerable attention. I have conversed with many of them, and they appear contented and happy. They are well clothed, and generally in a good state of health.

It may interest your readers to know that Ex-President Tyler's residence, at Hampton, is now occupied by these "fugitives from labor." There are several families in the house. The basement is occupied as a contraband school-room. To-day, when I rode out to see the house, I found the school in session. I took a look and my eyes scarcely ever beheld so interesting a sight. There stood about fifty little black children as eagerly pursuing their studies as any children could; and up in the midst of the crowd stood a well-built, honest and bright looking man—a contraband too—who, although a slave, learned to read and write by taking books from his "massa's children" and going away to the woods where he would sit alone, and thus, after years of perseverance, he has become able to instruct others. I met an old woman of pleasing and interesting address, and I asked how she got along? to which she replied, "Wal, reckon's well as can be 'spected dese times." "But do you have enough to eat?" I asked. She replied, "La me, I never had more since I been born." She had all her trouble from the unborn future. What was to become of her at the end of the war? was her chiefest concern.

Her idea was this. She knew the Lord heard prayer. That was her starting point. And she knew the Lord heard her prayers. "Bless de Lord!" She knew that often her "massa" was very cruel, "and sometimes very wicked" to her; and that in her sorrow she went and told it "to de Lord," and so had thousands of slaves; and now the Lord visits the masters with his displeasure. She had faith to believe that, if this war was not overruled by the Almighty for the punishment of the cruel master, that the time must come when he would be punished. She soon burst into a fit of solemn earnest, and exclaimed—"Look dare! that boy is my massa's son, and I was married and had a husband at de time; and I know de good Lord hates such bad." It is easy to comprehend the idea set forth here, and it will need no comment from me.

These "contrabands" have one or two preachers from their own class, who preach to them. The school-teacher is one of them. The woman of whom I have spoken, said she was learning to read, and that soon she would be able to "go to preachin and hear de text, and know de place." In the mysteriousness of their present condition, it is a matter of astonishment to notice how eager these poor souls are for knowledge. A history awaits them which, to my mind, will demonstrate that the hand of an all-wise Providence is in this thing. The cultivation of their minds is to keep pace with the changes made in their history and condition. Crushed by man, as if they were but things, they are raised by the Almighty to the dignity of humanity! From the future we will see these things in the light of sublime developments.

COLORED SOLDIERS IN THE REBEL ARMY.—An intelligent colored boy, who says that he was born free in New Orleans, and has just escaped from the rebel army, states that there are two regiments of colored men at Centreville, under the command of Jordan, an old colored veteran of 1812, having been a drummer boy under General Jackson. One of these numbers eleven hundred, and the other fourteen hundred. Two other colored regiments were sent to Missouri since the last battle there. These regiments are composed of both free and slave. They are not allowed to do picket duty, but are drilled and encamped separate from the white men. Their officers are all colored.

Children's Concert

Another brilliant assemblage greeted the children of the Bridge-street A. M. E. Church Sabbath School at their concert on Tuesday evening last The Rev. Messrs. R. H. Cain, and S. White, occupied the pulpit.

The concert was opened by Miss Victoria Rice, who performed "The Star Spangled Banner" on the piano in a very artistic manner

This young lady, who is a native of Harrisburgh, Pa., promises much as an artist, if she will apply herself closely to the art. She is the organist of Siloam Church.

The children acquitted themselves in the recitations, particularly those of Misses Mary Brown, Cynthia Wilson, Clarissa Winslow; and Masters Albert Wilson, Wesley Jones, Francis Gilbert, — Cosby, and Thomas Williams.

The solo singers evinced much latent ability, which we hope to see developed. Misses Mary Brown, Catherine Anderson, Caroline Bell, and Cynthia Wilson, elicited much applause, as did also Master William Bronaugh; the duet sung by him and Miss Brown being honored by an encore. But the bright particular star of the evening was Miss Caroline Brown, whose singing elicited unbounded applause. This young lady has a fine, soprano voice, which is quite full in the upper register. We hope that her friends may be induced to give her a musical education, as we KNOW that she has all the requisites of a good singer. We would suggest that she reserve her smiles to her young friends for a more suitable place than the public stage.

The ladies of the church closed the evening's entertainment by a festival in the basement of the church, which was fully attended. So rapid were the sales that the refreshments were soon used up. We are pleased to announce that these entertainments have been crowned with the best of (silver) success, the church having realized quite an amount from them.

Distressing Intelligence from Hayti.—The brig King Brothers, from St. Marks, Hayti, arrived at this port on Sunday, 8th inst. She brought as passengers, Mr. Chas. P Ramsey and wife, of Providence, Mr. Thomas, of Boston, and Mr. Cook, whose residence we could not learn. They are, with the exception of Mr. Thomas, returned emigrants. We had the pleasure of an interview with Mr. Ramsey, and the tale of suffering and death among our people in that island, as recited by him, is enough to bring tears to the eyes of the most indifferent. Many deaths among them have resulted from the actual want of the necessaries of life. They charge the government agents with a neglect of duty, and with a conduct toward emigrants amounting almost to brutality. The majority of the emigrants are desirous of returning to this country, but cannot from the want of means and what is very strange, communication, from some cause, is cut off, to a great extent, from their friends here.

Want of time compels us to postpone the details as given by Mr. Ramsey until next week, but we cannot close without suggesting that immediate steps be taken to assist our brethren in getting away from that land of sufferings and death.

Mrs. Freshington About.—"I node 'e was like a young waus (wasp), a great 'eal bigger at the start dan he'd ever be agin," said Mrs Freshington, when Gabe told her of the position assumed by General McClellan toward the Report of Secretary Cameron.

Longevity.—The Grass Valley (Cal.) National states that a colored man by the name of Rains, who had been living in Rough and Ready since 1849 or 1850, died in that place on Friday, Oct. 11th, at the extraordinary old age of 115 years.

Washboards! Washboards!! Washboards!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

ARRIVALS AT MRS. PLANT'S
BOARDING-HOUSE.

Mr. Geo. J. Reynolds, of Sandusky City, O.
Mr. Henry Burgoyne, of Washington, D. C.
Mr. Rich'd L. Richardson, Philadelphia.
Mr. Shepherd R Patterson, "
Mr. William H. Dunbar. "
Mr. John H. Auter, "
Mr. Louis Williams, "
Mr. Wm. H. Gasaway, Wilmington, Del.

MARRIED.

Harris—Gipson.—In this city, on Sunday, September 22d by the Rev. David Stevens, Mr. Louis James Harris of New York, to Miss Lizzie Gipson, of Baltimore, Md.

DIED.

Sturms.—In this city, Friday, Nov. 29th, Mary Alice, only daughter of Lloyd and Flora Sturms, aged 21 years.

Peacefully lay her down to rest,
Place the turf kindly on her breast;
Sweet is her slumber beneath the sod,
While the pure soul is resting with God.

Quietly sleep beloved one,
Rest from thy toil, thy labor is done:
Rest till the trump from the opening skies,
Bid thee from dust to glory rise.

Brister.—In Williamsburg. Sunday, Dec. 8th, of pleurisy, Mrs. Frances Hopkins Brister, aged 56 years.

Titus.—In Brooklyn, on the 3d inst., of dropsy on the brain, Charles Augustus Titus, aged 1 year and 1 month.

Also, on the 6th inst., of consumption, John Williams Titus, aged 12 years.

Pugsley.—In this city, Nov 29th, of paralysis, Margaret Pugsle, aged 66.

Special Notices.

FRALANDO'S OPERA TROUPE

Appear every evening until further notice, at R. W. GEORGE'S, 85 Mercer St, Between Spring and Prince.

Admission 10 Cents. Doors open 7½ performances commence at 8 o'clock precisely. Grand Soiree after the performances.

ROBERT W. GEORGE
Proprietor.
THOS. FRALANDO,
Stage Manager and Musical Director.
20 4t

Amicitia Amor et Veritas.

NOTICE.

The officers and members of Terry Lodge, No. 900, G. U. O. of O. F., are hereby requested to attend their semi-monthly meeting, on Monday evening, Dec 16th, at the Lodge room, Cottage Place, cor of Bleecker St., at 8 o'clock precisely.

N. B.—Punctual attendance is requested, as matters of vital importance are to be laid before all the members. By order of

DANIEL A. BROWN, N. G.,
JAMES H. LEWIS, Sec.

Office of the R. W. G. Secretary
I. O. of G. S. and D. of S.,
No. 70 Grove St., N. Y.

The officers of, and representatives to the R. W. (Eastern District) Grand Lodge of the I. O. of G. S. and D. of S., will please to take notice—that the Quarterly meeting of the G. L. will be held on Wednesday evening, Dec 18th, at the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms, 178 Prince St., N. Y., at 8 o'clock precisely.

Subordinate Lodges will therefore cause their representatives to be present.

By order of the R. W. G. C.,
MOSES B. COSS.
JOHN R. PORTER, G. S.

Christmas Week Among the American Slaves.

Ready, Tuesday, December 10th,
Beadle's Christmas Story,

MAUM GUINEA
AND HER PLANTATION CHILDREN;
OR,
Christmas Week Among the American Slaves.
By Mrs. Victor,
Author of "Alice Wilde," etc.

Louisiana Plantation Life during the Holidays is seized upon by the author to weave around the barbecues, night-dancing, story-telling and love-making of the Slaves a romance embodying all the tragedy and pathos, the sorrow and enjoyment, the happiness and humor of Slave Life and its two fold experiences. The negro and white characters introduced are all "representative"—each illustrative of some peculiar phase of a strange history.

220 Pages Complete, beautifully illustrated. Price Twenty Cents. For sale by all Booksellers, Newsdealers and Army Sutlers. Sent postpaid on receipt of price. BEADLE & CO., Publishers, New York. 2utf

A FAIR! A FAIR!!

The ladies of the 3d Baptist Church, W'msburgh, will open a Fair in the above named church, commencing on Tuesday, Dec. 24, and will continue 8 days, closing with a Grand Entertainment on the 2d of January, 1862, at which time the Committee pledge themselves to spare no pains to make the Entertainment agreeable to all who may favor them with their company. Admission to the Fair 6 cents. Admission to the Entertainment, 25 cents.

COMMITTEE.
Mrs. M. A. GALE, 1st Directress;
" M. GILES, 2d "
" JANE L. FISHER, Sec. 20 3t

AFRICAN CIVILIZATION SOCIETY.

RECEIPTS FROM MAY 1st TO DEC. 10th, 1861.

Seventh Av Presbyterian Church, N. Y.	$ 3 74
Perth Amboy, N. J	16 11
Jonathan Sturges, $10 00; A R Wetmore, $10 00; J M Shaw, 5 00; N. Hayden, 5 00; D. Hoadley, 5 00; Rev R Loomis, 1 00; O D Mann 5 00; N Y City	41 00
Baptist Church, Flushing, L I	1 94
Congregational Ch,	5 50
P P Stewart, Troy, N Y	20 00
Mr D Buffum, 5 00; G C Platt, $1 00; Cash, $2 00; Rev Dr Rockwell $1 00; Mrs S E Austin, $2 00; H Skidmore, $1 00; Cash, 25c.; D L Wallace, $5 00; Mr Rockwell, $1 00;	18 25
Mr — Beebe, N Y	2 50
Congregational Church, Flushing, L I	4 12
Rev A A Willets $1 00, Mr McMullen, $2 00; Cash, $2 00; Brooklyn, N Y	5 00
Mr. — Beebe, $5 00; Wm A Booth, $25 00; Allan Hay, $25 00; Wm C Gilman, $10 00; N Y	65 00
Baptist Church, Somerville, N J	24 57
M E Church,	3 65
Mrs C Lyon, per Rev H M Wilson, N Y	5 00
Baptist Church, Scotchplains, N J	8 13
Wm E Dodge, Esq, N Y	50 00
Baptist Church, E Wallingford, Vt	3 50
Baptist Church, Hudson City, N J	17 08
Wm Ruggles, Esq. Washington, D C	10 00
Rev D Irving, $1 W O Baker, $10; T A Hartwell, $3; C M Mulford, $1; J L Voorhees, $2; H Ayres, $1; F B Johnson, $1; Mary Macbride, $1; C M Hall, $2; H Kipp, $1; Ann Thompson, $1; Morristown, N J	24 00
Chanceville Baptist church, N J	15 85
Baptist church, Riceville, N J	4 00
First Congregational church, Jersey City	18 57
Baptist church, Millington, N J	7 25
Union Baptist church, Jersey City	17 46
Baptist church, Lyon's Farms, N J	6 05
Fifth Baptist church, Newark, N J	15 50
Toronto, C W, $61 45; Montreal, $212 22; Quebec, $104; Kingston, $30; per Rev H A Sizer, agent	407 67
Geo Douglass, Esq, $20; Peter Lawrence, $1; J Bowers, 1; N Y—per Rev H M Wilson, Secretary	22 00
South Baptist church, Newark, N J	19 00
	$862 44

A. A. CONSTANTINE,
Secretary and General Agent.

Help the Worthy.

There will be a Giving Visit held in the basement of Zion Church, corner of Church and Leonard streets, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. the 17th, 18th and 19th, for the Rev. Thomas Johnson, who has been laboring among the people of this city and vicinity for many years, as a minister of the Gospel

People of New York—you know his worth; may we not anticipate a generous response to our appeal?

All donations will be thankfully received by the following committee, and at the church on the evenings advertised:

Sister Ellen Stevens,
" Elizabeth A. Purnell,
" Ann Derry,
" Sarah Johnson,
" Ann M. Matthews,
Miss Susanna Coss,
Brother John Purnell,
" Edward Lawrence,
" Abram Edwards,

Refreshments will be served by the ladies of the committee on the evening of the donation.

NOTICE.

An adjourned communication of the R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, will be held on the 16th inst., at their room, No. 231 West 16th street. Members and representatives are hereby notified to attend. By order of the R. W. G. M.

Samuel M. Till,
Grand Secretary.

FESTIVAL OF ST. JOHN, THE EVANGELIST.

Stone Square Lodge, No. 6, will celebrate the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, by a Public Installation of their officers for the ensuing year, by the M. W. United States Grand Lodge, of the State of New York, and a Musical Entertainment, at their Hall, 309 Grand St, near 11th St., Williamsburgh, on Friday evening, Dec. 27, 1861, upon which occasion all the Lodges working under the above named jurisdiction will be present in full Masonic clothing.

Admission 25 Cents.

Refreshments will be abundantly supplied, as well as a splendid Band of music.

COMMITTEE.
P. W. RAY, M. PINE,
L. T. WHARTON, GEO. POOLE,
Wm. R. CONNOR, L. TREADWELL.

Tickets may be obtained at the door.

SCIENCE, LITERATURE AND AMUSEMENT.

Professor A. M. GREEN

Will give ONE of his highly interesting Exhibitions of Descriptive Geography, Astronomy, Natural Science and History,

— AT THE —
Zion Baptist Church, Sullivan Street,
ABOVE PRINCE,
ON FRIDAY EVE'G, DEC. 13,

commencing at 7½ o'clock precisely. The programme will consist of a variety of beautiful Diagrams, brilliantly illustrated by the aid of the

ORIGINAL DRUMMOND LIGHT,

and not least in contributing to beautify the Exhibition is the masterly ability with which Mr. GREEN lectures, in explanation of his truly interesting Paintings.

PART FIRST.
CHEMICAL DIORAMA.

Scene 1.—The old Ptolmaic theory of the Solar System exhibited, and the defects in this theory explained and accounted for.

Scene 2.—The Copernicum theory, first introduced by Pythagoras beautifully illustrated;—The Planets—Mercury, Venus Earth, Mars, Asteroids, Jupiter, Saturn, Herschel and Leverier, all revolving at their respective distance from the Sun.

Scene 3.—Kepler's Laws of Motion beautifully presented—View of Mercury and Venus, as seen from the earth in superior conjunction

Scene 4.—The boundary of the Earth geographically described—Beautiful view of an approaching vessel seen in the distance on the smooth surface of the ocean.

Scene 5.—The eccentric revolution of a Comet around the Sun, showing the different appearance of its train at different points of its orbit.

Scene 6.—The great Comet of 24th of September, 1858, as seen through Professor O. M. Mitchell's great Refractor at the Cincinnati Observatory on the night of the 26th of September.

PART SECOND.

Scene 1.—Waterloo Bridge, London, with a distant view of the Dome of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Scene 2.—The Tower of London, built by William the famous Norman Conqueror.

Scene 3.—Evening on the River Thames—Moonlight View of the famous Tower of London.

Scene 4.—Southwark Bridge, and full view of St. Paul' Cathedral.

Scene 5.—The Mosque of Omar—A Mahommedan Temple—The hour of morning prayer

Scene 6.—Moonlight view of the celebrated Temple.

Scene 7.—The [illegible] Illuminated for the midnight service on Christmas Eve.

Scene 8.—View of [illegible]—Beautiful View of the Tombs of the Departed Saints.

PART THIRD.

Scene 1.—The Deluge—The Ark in the distance resting on the bosom of the waters. Those men of giant frame, who lived in that age of the world, are seen attempting to rescue their wives and children from the power of the devouring elements.

Scene 2.—Site of the ancient city of Jerusalem—the city now in ruins.

Scene 3.—The destruction of the Temple of Diana, at Baalbec, in Syria.

Scene 4.—Summer scene at the birth-place and residence of Robert Burns, the distinguished Scotch Poet.

Scene 5.—A winter morning at Burns' home—A tremendous snow storm.

Scene 6.—Splendid view of the Military Hospital at Paris, in France.

Doors open at 7 o'clock—to commence at 7½ o'clock precisely.

Admission Reduced to 15 Cents.

Tickets, admitting a Lady and Gentleman, 25 Cents: To be had at the door.

"United we Stand, Divided we Fall."

FIRST ANNUAL BALL AND SUPPER
OF THE
COLORED SEAMEN'S
BOARDING - HOUSE KEEPERS
AND OUT-FITTERS

Of the City of New York, will be given on Thursday Eve'g, Dec. 26th, 1861,
AT THE
METROPOLITAN ASSEMBLY ROOMS,
178 Prince St.

The Proprietors of this Association will spare no pains to make this Entertainment one of the most entertaining nights of the season, and also assure the public that nothing on their part will be wanting to render them happy

Music under direction of Mr. J. DOUGLASS.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.
William E. Slater, Henry Beverley,
George F. Thompson, William Butler.

The Floor will be under the gentlemanly management of Mr. George H. Williams and Mr. John Wilson.

Tickets, admitting Gent. and Lady, $2; Single Ticket, $1.

Tickets to be had of the following Committee:
George F. Thompson, 4 Catherine Lane.
William E. Slater 3 Catherine Lane.
William Butler, 1 Benson St.
Manuel Gilbert, 42 Baxter St.
Susan Williams, 105 Park St.
Henry Beverley, 76 Roosevelt St.
Albro Lyons, 20 Vandewater St.
Samuel Porter, 21 Batavia St.
Charles M. Fortes, 199 South St.
William Spriggs, 1 Mechanics' Alley.
Thomas Lewis, 49 Marion St.

Tickets may also be had at the following places:—Eldorado, 154 Church St., Messrs Suel & Spencer; Geo. H Williams, 189 Church St.; Francis & Rogers, 56 Leonard St.; R. D. Kinney 178 Prince St.; Robt. Tappen 42 Ridge St; J A. Trower, 279 S. 4th St., Williamsburgh; Phineas Spriggs, 37 N. Bowery.

Wm. E. SLATER, Pres.
HENRY BEVERLEY, Treas.
G. F. THOMPSON, Sec'y.
Wm. BUTLER, Cashier. 18 4t

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND.

Balls, Parties, &c., furnished with music, at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,
Professor of Music,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St, and with G. Oton. 18tf

MASONIC
DIRECTORY,
FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D. suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co, State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwick, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct, meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14. Knights Templars, meets at No 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, New York City.

MASONIC NOTICE.

The members of Olive Branch Lodge, No. 5 working under the Jurisdiction of the Philanthropic United Grand Lodge, will take notice that the annual meeting of said Lodge will be held at their Lodge Rooms, 178 Prince St., on Monday evening, Dec. 16th

Punctual attendance is requested.

By order of
CHAS. T. BROWN, W M.
R. D. Kinney, Sec. 18 3t

LECTURES.

The undersigned is prepared to fill engagements to deliver single Lectures, on the following subjects:

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY WITH REFERENCE TO NATURAL THEOLOGY;

THE ADAPTATIONS OF THE EARTH, OR TERRESTRIAL ADAPTATIONS;

MENTAL PHILOSOPHY

THE ANCIENT HONORS OF THE BLACK AND COLORED RACES OF THE EARTH;

—Being a series of popular discourses recently delivered, founded on the following texts:

1. "Look not upon me because I am black." [Song of Sol.—1.6.
2. "Princes shall come out of Egypt" [Psalm 68—31.
3. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin." [Jer —13.23.
4. "Cursed be Canaan.' —Gen.—9 25.
5. "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus." Philemon.

Terms—The lecturer's passage both ways, and one fourth of profits.

[From the Detroit Daily Advertiser, March 1, 1860.]

"Mr. Berry's lecture last night is stated to have displayed much thought, and to have been in every respect meritorious."

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delsart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING

To consider measures with reference to a settlement of the

GERRIT SMITH LANDS,

will be held, agreeable to adjournment, at Prince Street Hall, on Monday evening December 16, 1861. The public are invited to attend.

Charles L. Reason, Ch'mn.
Wright Seaman, Jr., Sec'y.

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.
DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

Rev. Eli N. Hall, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, ... A. M.
" . . . . P. M.
" . . . . P. M.
10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o clock, . A. M.
3 " . P. M.
7 1 " . P. M.
12-1y

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,
(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. Wm. J. Alston, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1 2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock A. M.

Rev. Chas. H. Thompson, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—
10½ . . . A.M.
3 . . . P.M.
7½ . . . P.M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn, 13-1y.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.
Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. John T. Raymond, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, . . A. M.
3 " . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement for mending furniture, crockery &c.; Patent Match Safe for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St. N. Y. 19 13t

BOSTON HOUSE,
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

Established in 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH
GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC,

Residence—120th St, between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
18 26t

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate Ladies and Gentlemen with first class Board, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No 13 Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand 16 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.

Residence—134 Chrystie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING
IN BROOKLYN.

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts per week. 15tf

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston st., or of the Janitor 225 West 15th-st.

POCKET WATER-FILTER
AND
DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weighs one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing

DAY & CO.,
3-13t Box 464 P.O., Newark, N J.

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and the public, that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 66 Sullivan Street New York. 4-I

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.
Don't Forget,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET,

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. Ramsey.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY,

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS. The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co., N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk, Street. Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, Diptheria and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, Diptheria, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

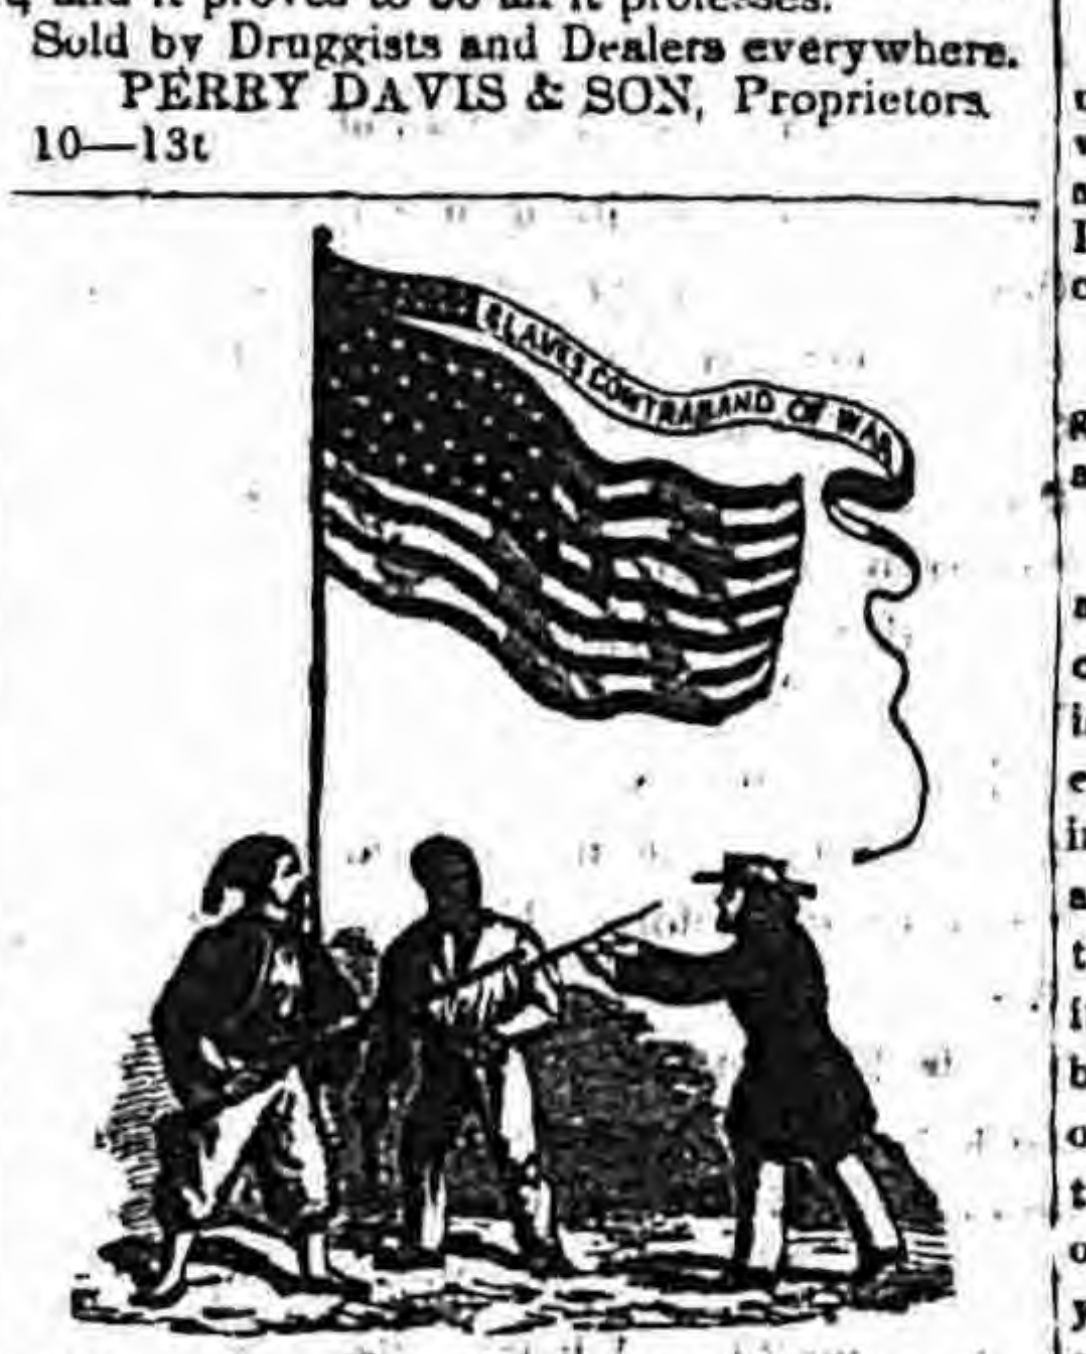
Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents. Orders should be addressed

THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE
BY
MRS. W. S. WILKINS & Co
610 PINE, ABOVE SIXTH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA 7-13t.

LADIES' FURNISHING STORE.
CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
Ready-Made and Made to Order, By
MRS. S. WILKINS & CO.,
610 Pine, above Sixth Street, Philadelphia. 7-13t.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMOdate a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. Fortes, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 South Street, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS AND FURS.
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly Richardson) REspectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

MRS. E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS-MAKER,
25 Sullivan Street, New York.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

By Mrs. Mary Johnson, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in a very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies,	$2,50
" " Gentleman,	3,00
Lodging per week,	75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER,
219 Centre Street New York.

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts, 2 tf.

P. A. WHITE,
Corner of Frankfort & Gold Sts.,
GENERAL
COMMISSION MERCHANT,
KEEPS CONSTANTLY ON HAND
A FRESH AND PURE ASSORTMENT
OF
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS
GENUINE
LUBIN'S EXTRACTS
AND OTHER PERFUMERY,
FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH
BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES,
FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA
SEGARS, &c., &c.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS
carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S
VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR
FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH,
AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Gray.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long, without cutting; long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood, through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hair-brush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward, and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S
STRENGTHENING PLASTER.
AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR
LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT, SPRAINS, BRUISES, &c., &c.

Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly servicable

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent relief from its use, as it keeps a continued heat, acting as a gentle counter irritant, removing the inflamation of the stomach without breaking the skin. Persons engaged in sedentary pursuits should use these Plasters constantly, as they give strength to parts weakened by constant sitting and stooping.

For STRAINS and SPRAINS they are infallible, affording relief immediately and without fail.

For RHEUMATISM there is no external application equal to them, promoting the general circulation, and

PREVENTING A RETURN

of the excrutiating pain.

These plasters are prepared with great care, and of the best material, and to prevent fraud the name of the originator is placed on the back of each one. In purchasing, ask for BADEAU'S PLASTER. See that the name BADEAU is written on the back, or you will be deceived.

P. A. WHITE, Sole Proprietor.

THE HAYTIAN FEVER AND ITS DIAGNOSTICS IN CANADA.

MR. EDITOR:

I promised in my last to draw a parallel between the Haytian scheme, now under public consideration, and the African Colonization scheme, as known to our people years ago. Your readers were also led to expect the arrival, at Chatham, of Mr. W. J. Watkins, the itinerant great gun of the Eastern and Western bureaux. If, as the chicken-cock in the story, you have read the papers, you will guess why I defer, for the present, the first, and continue the much less imposing task of giving you these diagnoses. However, everything in its order in future.

As announced before, the meeting called at the suggestion of the Haytians for Mr. Watkins, consisted of less than one hundred colored persons, and about two hundred whites, among whom was our worthy Mayor. It was organized by the unanimous appointment of Rev. H. H. Hawkins to the chiar, and Mr. I. D. Shadd, as Secretary. After ascending the platform, the speaker, who had learned how matters stood among the colored citizens, assured the people there should be free speech, a point about which all were decided, except the wire-workers, who looked chop fallen; for, alas! their threats, their caucuses for the chairship and positions, had been entirely disregarded; their orator had succumbed, and anti-Haytians had been appointed. "Jerusalem" was again looking aloft. After these preliminaries, the "oration" commenced, and such an oration! Could I but do it justice! Imagine to yourself, good reader, sandwiches of rhetoric, gesticulation and foreign phrases; a mighty big word now and then, flying away from the "Ionic column" of thought—to quote the speaker, as if such a thing could be—and hitting us ignoramuses slap on our thick sculls with here and there a latin term to keep it company, and you have it. It was a Haytian speech, minus Hayti, and with the "logic" put away from it entirely; like my Western friend's manners, which had not been used for twenty-five years, the logic, wherever it is, is doubtless as good as ever, as it was not used before us. Though, could I but daguerreotype it, your readers might know it.

The Secretary, who declares there were no minutes to take which could do credit to the speaker, took down the speech, and keeps it for Barnum, or any other lover of the curious. It was, in short, that "old withered arm."

You may remember something of an old withered arm speech that went the round of your meetings for half-a-dozen or more years, until the poor old member had become worn out, and it applied to whisky—no, whisky applied to it, how it stumped the State of New York; got in the lock-up somewhere about Rochester, for running away from anti-slavery after the woman question; came out of durance almost as good as new; took to tremendous stumping for Weed, Seward, and company, and finally, when it came out at their back door, to lie, as every one supposed, upon the shelf, during at least one Canada winter, to air up and get passable, it was thrust into a fresh cut Haytian suit and set to work. It is now looking forward with the most flattering prospects for a resting place in the Haytian Legislature I am told. Well, old bones may do out there.

After the speech, several parties opposed the scheme, and supposing they were to have meetings the next evening, and offered to discuss, should it take a week, but the orator told the Chairman it was quite unnecessary for another night's discussion, as it would probably be a repetition. Only think of giving that old arm any more!

So ended the great Haytian farce here, over which the ex-cook of the Michigan regiment, "Menard," is in ecstacies, on paper.

There was one little episode during the evening, which may not be out of place just now, as it furnishes a key to the legion of inuendoes, attacks, and simulated indifference of these magnates; and shows how it is that falsehood, abuse, and impertinence, are their stock-in-trade.

Old Mr. Shadd, from Raleigh, who knew colonization by heart, said some unpalatable things, when the orator in reply, after repeating the anecdote of the old grey ass, made a diversion, and thinking, no doubt, that there was less risk to abuse a woman, poured forth a string of second-hand charges and personalities upon your most humble servant, in a manner peculiar to a devoted servant and abject sycophant of Redpath; it was intended to be a second edition of the Dawn-Henson-Haytian programme, but failed of the mark, and the audience cried "no!" and after the reply to him, an old fashioned "nay," in earnest.* It is not a little remarkable how these Haytian agents like to call names, make mischief, fight old men with broken arms, or women; blow their own trumpets, and most singular of all, to expose one another. From A, to Z, they are steadily at such work. What think you could not be said of them were anti-Haytians to pour forth on all occasions the many faux pas known to the public—not hear-say—of them.

To illustrate the foregoing: Conscientious opponents are stigmatized by Blackpath as 'curs;' resolutions are drawn up and sent to a Canadian village, to "show up a woman," by parties so pretendedly conscious of their own importance, that they would not for the world add to her notoriety by the most remote allusion, when lo! their stupid tools have not the gumption to conceal the paternity of the slander, but send them forth with the finger marks of that "fousty" Bureau full upon them. The affair was almost as much of a bungle as the story of a colored woman's son, that Gregory-Kansas case you wot of. What would the colored people of America do, were the measles, small-pox, or cholera to come along and clean out these Bureaux, or, at least, "put them to bed?" from the importance assumed by Blackpath, et al, it is to be feared that our nation would disappear from the face of the earth: at least, there would be no great Colored-path left to make them

"Tremble when he awakes."

They would have to grovel on in their chains. Your Tappan is a fossil, Wendell Phillips a myth, and Garrison a relict of the past, in comparison to Redpath, to hear him boast; and you colored men are nothing and nowhere.

From the beginning of the anti-slavery enterprise, I have been interested in its movements; though but a child at its commencement, I watched, with the deepest sympathy, the struggles made by the handful of white men and their colored co-adjutors—not servants—who worked hard to make solid its broad foundations, and now grand and imposing superstructure. I have followed those workmen and women steadily along, until to-day

"You, and I, and all of us,"

see those same white men with the old forethought in full exercise, preparing in Boston to open up the way of the fugitive to Canada; as they are at John street, and as is friend Jocelyn, laboring for and among the "contrabands," to give them mental and spiritual food, working within the walls of the old citadel.

I see yourselves, the old, the young, the honest, the honorable men among us, vindicating before Europe, slaveholding America and the world, the capacity of this people, by demonstrating with figures which do not lie, the concessions their integrity, industry and ability, have wrung from the oppressor North;—by opening up to science, commerce, Christianity and freedom through our discoverers, territory large enough to use against slavery—by maintaining, in the face of bribes of Haytian gold, of braggart insolence—of that noisy and vaunting but impotent opposition, begotten of vulgarity, immorality and bad notoriety, the integrity of a growing literature, freedom of speech, and the right of the free colored man in North America as elsewhere to attend to his own affairs without the interference or management of self-constituted overseers for Hayti, and their black satellites—the broken down, disappointed, unreliable and profligate—the would be leaders of our people.

I see you doing these, and feel proud; and value more the approval, as you have it, of the bruised among this people, than the thunderings for Hayti of an hundred acres of Redpaths; yes, or that one hundred and twenty millions of dollars to be realized by the sale of four millions of black men to "Eden." That is it. Let's see—at "thirty dollars a head," four millions of colored people for Hayti would just be one hundred and twenty millions of dollars. It exactly.

If "two dollars" per head profit would cause the Chief of the Bureau to burst, one hundred and twenty millions should, by reasonable calculation, cause him to evaporate.

I have said that the agents expose one another, in their fury and "spoiling," as some of them seem to be, for a fight; they rap unmercifully over the knuckles of their own associates in iniquity.

Mr. Wm. J. Watkins is in a very dangerous state indeed. He who would not be personal, gives through the last "Palm" a peep into one or two drawers of the Bureau.—While attempting to be very clever, to charge nobody at all with begging for fugitives, and lying, he unfortunately advises "snuff," "a cocktail," etc., etc.; had he added a little opium, an agency to buy a wife, to buy a colored woman's little son, with a lottery ticket or two thrown in by way of variety, the picture as a historical piece of those Bureaux, would have been a treasure. The charges he enumerates against the nobodies of the opposition, of begging, tippling, filching—of following his trades—his occupations, for lo! these many years, should never have been touched by him at any time, as not only himself but other male and female members of the Board are thereby made to cry hold, when sober! and the public to exclaim: "What a perfect picture." Watkins must have been drunk when he wrote that. What a pity.

Oh the brass, the metal, I mean, of these maggots in the Haytian carcass, that wiggle away to, and in Canada, to fatten on the fugitives, and then cry out to those who have "a record," read, known and approved of by responsible societies in the old and new world—by heads of communities and families in Canada;—to those who destroy the prejudice he would build up, that there may be no excuse for his cupidity; to people who realize the responsibility of working to educate those whom oppression has deprived of wealth and information; "you live off the fugitives."

The mental and pecuniary condition of the colored refugee is well known; to be known to secure educational and religious conveniences for their use, settles the charge against any number of nobodies, by whomsoever made; not so easily are the Haytian agents vindicated.

While men and women who instruct the ignorant in temporal and spiritual knowledge, should be paid, and well paid, although none so working ever have been well paid in this country, so far as I know, the Haytian agents receive pay at the rate of "about three thousand five hundred dollars per annum" per big daddy, down to eight hundred per annum per little "skunk," with the pickings and stealings from about fifty thousand besides; and all to send fugitives where they know that pestilential fevers, licentiousness, drunkenness, heathenism and superstition abound; and where they know there is not one advantage which may truthfully be urged to redeem the movement from the severest condemnation of tried abolitionists and Christians of whatever color—not even the fact that Geffrard imports negroes, mulattoes and coolies to work his estates.

But that men whose "record" must be given, by somebody, and will be by one of the nobodies, do they persist by gross personalities and false issues, in throwing up obstacles to careful and logical investigation; or determine to continue this new slave trade, that they should be so crazy for notoriety, and so fool-hardy, when New York, Boston, Rochester, Windsor, Kansas, and the memory of old John Brown's persecutions, have not been swallowed up in the sea of forgetfulness, is to me incomprehensible.

MARY A. SHADD CARY.

---

*Mr. J. Holden, strongly opposition, moved a vote of thanks at a late stage, as a matter of courtesy, but it was lost.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HEADQUARTERS OF HOOKER'S DIVISION,
Near Budd's Ferry, Doncaster, Md.,
Nov. 30, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:—Although the charges are grave and numerous which we have to prefer against the Union troops, the fact that they have opened up avenues of free intercourse between Northern and Southern black men, compels us to admit their invasion of Southern soil to be grand and beneficent. The minds of our brethren of the Southern States have been crowded and confused with the most strange and extravagant stories of life and customs in the North. I find a great many of the people about here who really believe that the Northern people intend to sell the negroes of rebels, and all they can get. The wily master points his slave to this returned fugitive and the other, and says—"Now Jim, Sambo, Dick, don't you see these people are opposed to letting you go free? If I was a rebel they would take you and sell you to some outlandish place. Which would you rather do—stay with me or go with them?" The poor slave, who always dreads the auction block, gives the desired answer. If you ask him of what party his master is, Union or Rebel, he will say Union. How can they know the truth, when they see the Northern troops doing the dirty work of their masters, which a gentlemanly Confederate would scorn to do, and they see the Northern troops arresting supposed rebels, and guarding their slaves until executive clemency releases them. For instance, about the time our Division marched down here, the Indiana cavalry arrested a man by the name of Big Dick Posey. This is his universal cognomen. He is the king rebel of Charles county. As soon as the arrest was made, his slaves were placed under guard. He was detected making signals with lights to the rebels, on the Virginia shore. A man by the name of John Waite, colored, who was employed to work one of Posey's boats, also testified that he had frequently communicated with the other shore for him, carrying men and provisions. There is not a slave or free man within twenty miles that does not know that this man is in collusion with the enemy, and they see the Union troops holding his slaves while he undergoes the form and ceremony of govermental arrest. It is hard to convince these people that we are on the side of freedom. Untutored minds are always, more or less, material like the Pagan of India, who believes in no God unless he can feel him and see him with the natural eye. They want the fact and the evidence practically, that we are on the side of freedom. No theory will satisfy them. That innate principle of man—love of liberty—tells them that the rights of man can bear no compromises. Another false notion impressed upon their minds is that the colored people of the North are in a suffering and starving condition. The falsehoods have been so earnestly and unblushingly stated by their masters, and corroborated by others, that there is no wonder their minds are influenced in some degree thereby.

I have taken pains to investigate the customs, living and condition of the folks here about. The houses are generally built of logs, mansions as well as quarters; that of the master sometimes floored, that of the slave the bare earth. One, two, or ten slaves, married and single, male and female, bundle in together. The interior of these hovels present perfect pictures of discomfort, yet the people here are those that talk so glibly of the poverty and misery of the Northern people. No den of misery, or sink of iniquity, in the lowest purlieu of any of our Northern cities, ever presented a scene of squalid misery equal to some of those I have witnessed during my sojourn here. I say again, that the war so far has produced at least one good result for us (if the devil does us a good turn, we must give the devil his due, and say he is a devilish good fellow): all these old false notions are being rapidly dissipated, and we are enabled now, in a small degree, to indulge in the pleasure of an interchange of sentiments.

I see by recent advices that the advocates of emigration are hard at work in the preparation of their various schemes, as if affairs at home demanded no attention whatever. I believe emigration to be a good thing if kept within natural bounds, that is, not superinduced by undue and extravagant representations—it will then stimulate society in an industrial point of view, enlarge and extend social and commercial intercourse, unite and harmonize the various great families of men, and thus pave the way to a larger liberty, a more radical fraternity, and perfect equality, morally and politically, as well as socially amongst mankind; but I cannot, to save my heart, perceive the wisdom of raising the hue and cry of emigration about the ears of a nation at a time when we should be working might and main, tearing down a government, if unfriendly to our cause, or, if friendly, building it up.

I find the ANGLO to be a welcome visitor even here, in this region of darkness and slavery. One individual could hardly believe when he saw the ANGLO, "dat niggers could do dat," and I am importuned continually by men in the army for chances to read your paper. They find in it matter of interest and importance which they can gather from no other source.

I see in Skinner's store a handbill posted which offers a reward of $50 for the return of a slave belonging to a Mr. Cox, who lives near Port Tobacco, but if I mistake not Mr. Cox need not be so lavish with his money.

Folks across the river continue to pay their addresses to us in the form of shot and shell, but they have been so very frequent we disdain to notice them. I am full of expectancy, for during the coming week we may take up the line of march to join some one of the Southern Expeditions now preparing. This to me is good news, for I long to be transported to the very heart of Cottondom if needs be. Query. Did Secretary Cameron sound the key-note of the war, when he endorsed the speech of Col. Cochrane? Times change and men change with them. The question of emancipation is vehemently discussed among the officers; the sentiments uttered by Col. Cochrane reflecting those of the majority here. A violent discussion took place between a Colonel and Lieut. Colonel of the regiments a few days ago, during which one of them declared that before he would allow a slaveholder to take a fugitive from his camp he would throw up his commission. Since the Division has been here there has been a marked improvement in the appearance and condition of the men. Access to the whiskey jug is almost cut off; but although the General has done all in his power to prevent the entrance of liquor into camp, still it finds its way there by some unknown means. A sailor and a soldier will do almost anything for a glass of grog. One fellow discovered that his musket barrel would hold just one pint, he straightway gets a pass, has himself and his musket filled, and comes into camp, and fills a famishing comrade. Another nearly fills a stone jar, covers the top of it with butter, and passes in. Another buys a sack of potatoes, half of which prove to be whisky-skins, and so they go, resorting to every device whereby the baneful beverage can be obtained.

G. E. S.

PLAIN TALK ABOUT THE GREAT GENERAL HALLECK.

(From the Cincinnati Gazette, Nov. 25th.)

The Germans of this city turned out in large numbers on Saturday night last to attend a meeting held at Turner Hall, for the purpose of expressing sympathy with Gen. Fremont, in the course lately pursued towards him by the Administration. The meeting was called to order by Dr. A. Bauer. Frederick Werner was appointed Secretary. Judge Stallo and the Rev. Mr. Eisenlohr addressed the assemblage in the German, and Rev. M. D. Conway in the English language. A series of resolutions in German censuring the Administration for the supersedure of General Fremont, were passed. Mr. Conway spoke as follows:

"Judge Stallo has alluded to me as a Virginian who can answer for the South. I certainly have lived there long enough, and felt the heavy hand of slavery enough, to know that this government is not strong enough to preserve the Union and African slavery also. And whilst this Administration is now bending itself to that impossible and undesirable work, the people will be in this conflict like Issacher of old, a strong ass crouching between two burdens; between an imbecile Administration on the one hand, and a gigantic rebellion on the other. Both Issacher cannot bear; and such an assembly inspires me with the hope that he will not much longer crouch, but bravely bear on to the "goodly rest and pleasant land," with the burthen of liberty on his shoulders—no longer a strong ass for the government to crush with its wretched pro-slavery pack, but a strong man, with the blood which defied George III throbbing in his heart.

Now that the standard of liberty has been unfurled by Fremont over the contending parties—a higher standard than stars and stripes or stars and bars—how wretched and despicable appear the standards raised by the pigmy Generals who have gone out warm from the wing of the Administration.

What think you, my countrymen, of Sherman taking our young men from the classic shade of our colleges, and from their free homes, and offering them to the "proud and hospitable citizens of the Sovereign State of South Carolina" as the patrol of the negroes! What think you of Dix, down in Wise's district, proclaiming that his army is under strict orders to guard Slavery even to the treasonable extent of refusing to take into their lines—whether belonging to traitors "or any other man"—those black corn producers and earthwork builders. If a man sends a barrel of corn to Virginia he is imprisoned; the man who sends there the hands which produce 10,000 barrels of corn, is Major General of the U. S. Army.

Can you imagine a lower depth than this? All depths are possible with this Administration. The one who comes out and proclaims latest from that glorious Republican circle at the White House, always gets a little lower than the rest. So here came "Young Lochinvar" Halleck out of the West—the mysterious Halleck. The country argued itself unknown by knowing nothing of and never having heard a word from Halleck. In breathless suspense we listen for the first utterance of him sent out to replace the nation's darling here. At last Halleck breaks the mystical silence. Halleck pronounces. In fact he "proclaims." His first word is a lie—his second an order for his men to deliberately betray the country. If there is any man who does not know it to be a mean, malignant lie to say that fugitive slaves have been spies against us, he should be placed, soon as possible, in the Asylum for Idiots at South Boston. The meanness of the lie appears infernal by the side of the salvation of Sturgis' brigade, in that very State, by a fugitive slave's information, and the blunder of McDowell upon batteries of whose existence he was ignorant—and ignorant simply because he refused fugitives an entrance within his lines. But his second word is treasonable, for it commands his soldiers to send out to the enemy alleged spies and foes of the country. Either Halleck knows he lies when he accuses the fugitives, or else he should be hung as a traitor for sending from his lines, unarrested, alleged and charged spies against the United States. Suppose Wigfall and Pryor should seek Halleck's lines in disguise, and he should say, 'I misdoubt ye are spies; return to your homes, gentlemen," would he not be hung as an abettor of treason? He would certainly be hung; only our President dislikes to hang traitors, lest it might occasion them some personal inconvenience. This, then, Americans, is the infamous, sneaking, crawling policy which replaces the electric watchword sounded by Fremont for this great nation. The idea our Government has of fidelity is a Chinese fidelity. A missionary tell us that his coat being patched on the elbow, torn under the arm, and with a big grease-spot on it, he desired another; but wishing it made after the same pattern, he took the old coat and the new cloth to the Chinese tailor. In a week the tailor brought him the new coat, but what was his horror to find that the pattern of the old one had been so faithfully copied that the new one had a patch ingeniously made on the elbow, and a tear under the arm, and a big grease-spot that must have taken an hour in making on the fine, new cloth! Such is the Government's idea of restoring this Union. The South having forced the nation to put on a new coat, this grand Cabinet cross their legs, take their goose, and aim to bring us the new coat with the patch, the tear, and the grease-spot, the cause of which it was that we needed a new one, because of which we elected Lincoln instead of Breckinridge or Douglas!

Mr. Conway then proceeded to show that a military conquest over the South, preserving Slavery, would be a subjugation of ourselves as much as the South. From thenceforth the nation must leave the peaceful progress of its destiny to sit and hold the rebellious States—turning into a military Government, doing nothing but watching the monster whose soul is slavery, and see that it doesn't poke its ugly head out again, and coil about our States again.

He concluded by assuring the Germans that many thousand native Americans were appreciating their devotion to liberty, and would join them when the hour came to root up, whatever be the obstacle, the root of bitterness in our land. The policy of the Administration will be swept away, or else the Administration itself, just so soon as the real truth is apprehended in all its full power, that it is only the interest of a pitiful 350,000 of our people—this number of slaveholders—who, after keeping us in hot water for 85 years, now precipitate us in civil war; and that it is only because of the servility which fears to touch the impudent claim of that handful to scourge and own men and women, which makes civil war possible. A decree that this Government ignores the relation of slavery, ends the war. There is no army in the South, but a home guard from that moment.

One thing the war will teach, that Slavery ends in military despotism; that liberty ends in equality to all, black or white.' The moment which decides between the two has arrived to this nation.

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING

B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.

2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.

3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.

4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.

5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.

6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. for washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps) but will cleanse and soften the skin.

7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by
G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist,
79 Thompson St., N.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rhenbarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb hat grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.
PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1 00
CONTENTS;

EMBELLISHMENT.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend.
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson
Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S. Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Horland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with
Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.

BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker
between Broadway & Crosby St. 4t.st

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell. Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell. Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S. H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787-9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, aund the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz. or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1 Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
80 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly on ehundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 21 NEW YORK, DECEMBER 21, 1861. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African,
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY,
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
No. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed
ROBT. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART I.

> By myself, the Lord of Ages,
> I have sworn to right the wrong;
> I have pledged my word unbroken,
> For the weak against the strong.
> [H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XXI.

WHAT NOT.

Leaving the United Nation of Chickasaw and Choctaw Indians, Henry continued his travel in this the roughest apparently of all the States. Armed with bowie knives and revolvers openly carried belted around the person, he who displays the greatest number of deadly weapons seems to be considered the greatest man. The most fearful incivility and absence of refinement was apparent throughout this region. Neither the robes of State nor gown of authority is sufficient to check the vengeane of awakened wrath in Arkansas. Law is but a fable, its ministration a farce, and the pillars of justice but as stubble before the approach of these legal invaders.

Hurriedly passing on in the darkness of the night, Henry suddenly came upon a procession in the wilderness, slowly and silently marching on, the cortege consisting principally of horsemen, there being but one vehicle, advanced by four men on horseback. Their conversation seemed at intervals, of low muttering, awe-stricken voices. The vehicle was closely covered, and of a sad, heavy sound by the rattling of the wheels upon the unfinished path of the great Arkansas road. Here he sat in silence listening, waiting for the passage of the solemn procession, but a short distance from whence in the thicket stood the hut of the slave to whom he was sent.

'Ole 'umin! done yeh hear some un tramppin' round de house? Hush! evedroppehs 'bout!' admonished Uncle Jerry.

'Who dat?' inquired Aunt Rachel, as Henry softly rapped at the back window.

'A friend!' was the reply.

'What saut frien' dat go sneak roun' people back windeh stid comin' to de doh!'

'Hush, ole umin, yeh too fas! how yeh know who 'tis? Frien', come roun' to de doh,' said the old man.

Passing quickly around, the door was opened, a blazing hot fire shining full in his face, the old man, holding in his hand a heavy iron poker in the attitude of defence.

'Is dis you, my frien', inquired Uncle Jerry, to whom Henry was an entire stranger.

'Yes, Uncle, this is me,' replied he.

'God bless yeh, honey! come in; we didn know 'twas you, chile!'

'God bless de baby!' added Aunt Rachel. 'Ole man hear yeh comin' and we been lookin' all-day-long. Dis evenin' I git some suppeh, an' I don'o if yeh come er no.'

'How did you know I was coming, Aunty?'

'O! honey, da tell us,' replied she.

'Who told you?'

'De folks up dar.'

'Up where?'

'Up dar, 'mong de Injins, chile.'

'Indians told you?'

'No, honey; some de black folks, da all'as gwine back and for'ard, and da larn heap f'om dem up dar; an' da make 'ase an' tell us.'

'Can you get word from each other so far apart, that easy?'

'Yes 'ndeed, honey! some on em' all de time gwine; wite folks know nothin' 'bout it. Some time some on 'em gone two-three day, an' ain miss; wite folks tink da in de woods choppin'.'

'Why, that's the very thing! you're ahead of all the other States. You folks in Arkansas must be pretty well organized already.'

'Wat dat yeh mean, chile, dat 'organ' so?'

'I mean by that, Aunty, a good general secret understanding among yourselves.'

'Ah, chile, dat da is. Da comin' all de time, ole man haudly time to eat mou'full wen 'e come in de hut night.'

'Tell me, Aunty, why people like you and Uncle here, who seem to be at the head of these secrets, are not more cautious with me, a stranger?'

'Ole umin, I lisenin at yeh!' said Uncle Jerry, after enough had been told to betray them; but the old people well understood each other, Aunt Rachel by mutual consent being the mouth-piece.

'How we knows you!' rejoined the old woman; 'wy, chile, yeh got mark dat so soon as we put eye on ye, we knows yeh. How come ye tink we gwine tell yeh so much wen we don'o who yeh is? Sho! chile, we ain' dat big fool!'

'Then you know my errand among you, Aunty?'

'Yes, me son, dat we does, an' we long been waitin' for some sich like yeh to come 'mong us. We thang God dis night in our soul! We long been lookin' for yeh chile!' replied Uncle Jerry.

'You are closely watched in this State, I should think, Uncle.'

'Yes, chile, de patrolers da all de time out an' gwine in de quatehs an' huntin' up black folks wid der 'nigga-dogs' as da call 'em.'

'I suppose you people scarcely ever get a chance to go anywhere, then?'

'God bless yeh, honey, da blacks do'n mine dem nor der 'nigga-dogs' nuther.—Patroles feared uv de black folks, and da black folks chaum de dogs, so da ca'n hurt 'em,' said Aunt Rachel.

'I see you understand yourselves! Now, what is my best way to get along through the State?'

'Keep in de thicket, chile, as da patrolers feard to go in de woods, da feard runaway ketch 'em! Keep in de woods, chile, an' da ain' gwine dar bit! Da talk big, an' sen' der dog, but da ain' gwine honey!' continued the old woman.

'I spose, me son, yeh knows how to chaum dogs?' inquired Uncle Jerry.

'I understand the mixed bull, but not the full bred Cuba dog," replied Henry.

'Well, chile, da keeh boph kine hear, de bull dog an' bloodhoun,' an' fo' yeh go I larn yeh how to fix 'em all! Da come sneakin' up to yeh! da ca'n bite yeh!'

'Thank you, Uncle Jerry! I'll try and do as much for you in some way.'

'Yeh no call for dat, me son; it ain' nothin' mo' nor our—'

'Hush! old man; ain' dat dem?' admonished Aunt Rachel, in a whisper, as she went to the door, thrusting out her head in the dark.

'Who! Patrols?' with anxiety inquired Henry.

'No chile, de man da kill down yondeh; all day long da been lookin' for 'im to come.'

'A procession passed just before I came to your door, which I took for a funeral.'

'Yes, chile, dat's it, da kill 'im down dar.'

On inquiry, it appeared that in the State Senate a misunderstanding on the rules of order and parliamentary usage occurred, when the Speaker conceiving himself insulted by the Senator who had the floor, deliberately arose from his chair, approaching the Senator, drove a bowie-knife through his body from the chest, which laid him a corpse upon the Senate floor.

'There he is! there he is!' stormed the assassin, pointing with defiance at the lifeless body, his hand still reeking hot with blood. 'I did it!' slapping his hand upon his own breast in triumph of his victory.

They were just returning with the body of the assassinated statesman to the wretched home of his distracted family, some ten miles beyond the hut of Uncle Jerry.

'Is this the way they treat each other here, Aunty?'

'Yes, chile, wus dan dat! da kill one-nuther in cole blood, sometime at de table eatin'. Da all'as choppin' up some on 'em.'

'Then you black people must have a poor chance among them, if this is the way they do each other!'

'Mighty po', honey; mighty po' indeed!' replied Uncle Jerry.

'Well, Uncle, it's now time I was doing something; I've been here some time resting. Aunty, see to your windows and doors; are there any cracks in the walls?'

'No, honey, da dob good!' whispered the old woman as a well-patched woollen quilt to shield the door was hung, covering nearly one side of the hut, and a thickly-patched linsey petticoat fully shielded the only window of four eight by ten lights.

These precautions taken, they drew together in a corner between the head of the bed and well-daubed wall to hold their seclusion.

'Laud!' exclaimed Uncle Jerry, after the secrets were fully imparted to them; 'make bear dine all conquerin' arm! Strike off de chains dat dy people may go free! Come, Laud! a little nigheh!'

'Honer to 'is name!' concorded Aunt Rachel. 'Wuthy all praise! Tang God for wat I seen an' hearn dis night! night long to be membed! My soul feels it! It is hear!' pressing her hand upon her breast, exclaimed she.

'Amen! Laud hear de cry uv dy childen! Anseh prar!' responded the old man, in tears; when Aunt Rachel, in a strain of sorrowful pathos, sung to the expressive words in the slaves' lament:

> 'In eighteen hundred and twenty-three
> They said their people should be free!
> It is wrote in Jeremiah,
> Come and go along with me!
> It is wrote in Jeremiah,
> Go sound the Jubilee!'

At the conclusion of the last line, a sudden sharp rap at the door startled them, when the old woman, hastening, took down the quilt, inquiring,

'Who dat?'

'Open the door, Rachel!' was the reply, in an authoritative tone from a posse of patrols, who on going their evening rounds were attracted to the place by the old people's devotion, and stood sometime listening around the hut.

'You seem to be happy here, Jerry;' said Ralph Jordon, the head of the party. "What boy is this you have here?'

'Major Morgan's, sir,' replied Henry, referring to the proprietor of the next plantation above.

'I don't remember seeing you before, boy,' continued Jordan.

'No sir; lately got me,' explained Henry.

'Aye, aye, boy; a preacher, I suppose.'

'No sir.'

'No, Maus Rafe, dis brotheh no preacheh; but 'e is 'ligious, an' come to gib us little comfort, an' bless God I feels it now; dat I does, blessed be God!' said the old woman.

'Well, Rachel, that's all right enough; but, my boy, it's high time that you were getting towards home. You've not yet learned our rules here; where are you from?'

'Louisiana, sir.'

'Yes, yes, that explains it. Louisiana negroes are permitted to be out at a much later hour than our negroes.'

'Maus Rafe, I hope yeh let de brotheh eat a mou'full widius fo' 'e go?'

'O yes, Rachel! give the boy something to eat before he goes; I suppose the 'laborer is worthy of his hire,'' looking with a smile at his comrades.

'Yes 'ndeed, seh, dat he is!' replied the old woman with emphasis.

'Rachel, I smell something good!—What have you here, spare rib?' inquired Ralph Jordon, walking to the table and lifting up a clean check apron which the old woman had hurriedly thrown over it, to screen her homely food from the view of the gentlemen patrols. 'Good, spare rib and ash cake, gentlemen! What's better? Rachel, give us some seats here!' continued Ralph.

Hurrying about, the old woman made out to seat the uninvited guests with a half barrel tub, an old split bottom chair, and a short slab bench, which accommodated two.

'By gum! this is fine,' said Ralph Jordon, smacking his mouth, and tearing at a rib; 'gentlemen, help yourselves to some spirits,' sitting on the table a large flask of Jamaica rum, just taken from his lips.

'Nothing better,' replied Tom Hammond; 'give me at any time the cooking in the negro quarters before your great house dainties.'

'So say I,' sanctioned Zack Hite, champing like a hungry man; 'the negroes live a great deal better than we do.'

'Much better, sir,' much better,' replied Ralph. 'Rachel, do you or Jerry ever take any spirits?'

'No, Maus Rafe, not any,' replied the old woman.

'May be your friend there will take a little.'

'I don't drink, sir,' said Henry.

Rising from the homely but palatable and substantial meal at the humble board of Aunt Rachel and Uncle Jerry, they emptied their pockets of crackers, cold biscuits and cheese, giving the old man a plug of honey-cured tobacco, to be divided between himself and wife, in lieu of what they had, without invitation, taken the liberty of eating. The patrol this evening were composed of the better class of persons, principally business men, two of whom being lawyers who went out that evening for a mere 'frolic among the negros.'

Receiving the parting hand, accompanied with a 'good bye, honey!' and 'God bless yeh, me son!' from the old people, Henry left the hut to continue his course through the forest. Hearing persons approaching, he stepped aside from the road to conceal himself, when two parties at the junction of two roads met each other, coming to a stand

'What's up to-night, Colonel?' inquired one.

'Nothing but the raffle.'

'Are you going?'

'Yes, the whole party here; wont you go?'

'I don'o; what's the chances?'

'Five dollars only.'

'Five dollars a chance! What the deuce is the prize?'

'Oh, there's several for the same money."

'What are they?'

'That fine horse and buggy of Colonel Sprout, a mare and colt, a little negro girl ten years of age, and a trail of four of the finest negro-dogs in the State.'

'Hallo! all them! why, how many chances, in the name of gracious, are there?'

'Only a hundred and fifty.'

'Seven hundred and fifty dollars for the whole; that's cheap. But, then, all can't win, and it must be a loss to somebody.'

'Will you go, Cap'n?'

'Well, I don't care—go it is!' when the parties started in the direction of the sport, Henry following to reconnoiter them.

On approaching the tavern, the rafflers, who waited for the rest of the company to gather, could be seen and heard through the uncurtained windows and the door, which was frequently opened, standing around a blazing hot fire, and in groups over the bar-room floor, amusing themselves with jests and laughter. Henry stood in the verge of the forest in a position to view the whole of their proceedings.

Presently there was a rush out of doors with glee and meriment. Old Colonel Sprout was bringing out his dogs, to test their quality previous to the raffle.

'Now gentlemen!' exclaimed he, 'them is the bes' trained dogs in this part of the State. Be dad, they's the bes' dogs in the country. When you say 'nigger,' you need'n fear they'll ever go after anything but a nigger.'

'Come, Colonel, give them a trial; we must have something going on to kill time,' suggested one of the party.

'But what will he try 'em on?' seid another; 'there's no niggers to hunt'

'Send them out, and let them find one, be George,' suggested a third.

'Where the deuce will they get one?' rejoined a fourth.

'Just as a hunting dog finds any other game,' answered a fifth; "where else?'

'O, by golly, gentlemen, you need'n give yourselves no uneasiness about the game. They find a nigger, once started, if they have to break into some negro quarter and drag 'em out o' bed. No mistake 'bout them, I tell you gentlemen!' boasted Sprout.

'But won't a nigger hurt 'em when he knows he's not a runaway!' inquired Richard Rutherford.

'What, a nigger hurt a bloodhound! By gracious, they're fearder of a bloodhoun' than they is of the devil himself! Them dogs is dogs, gentlemen, an' no mistake; they is by gracious!' declared Sprout.

'Well, let them loose, Colonel, and let's have a little sport, at any rate!' said Ralph Jordon, the patrol, who had just arrived; 'we're in for a spree tonight, anyhow.'

'Here! Ceaser, Major, Jowler here! Pup! niggers about! Seek out!' hissed the Colonel, with a snap of the finger, pointing toward the thicket, in the direction where stood Henry. With a yelp which sent a shudder through the crowd, the dogs started in full chase for the forest.

'By George, Colonel,' that's too bad!' Call them back!' said Ralph Johnson, as the savage brutes bounded in search of a victim.

'By thunder, gentlemen, it's too late! they'll have a nigger before they stop. They'll taste the blood of some poor black devil before they git back!' declared Sprout.

Having heard every word that passed between them, in breathless silence Henry awaited the approach of the animals. The yelping now become more anxious and eager, until at last it was heard as a short, impatient, fretful whining, indicating a near approach to their prey, and growing less and less, they ceased entirely to be heard.

'What the Harry does it mean? the dogs has ceased to bay?' remarked Colonel Sprout.

'Maybe they caught a nigger," replied John Spangler.

'It might be a 'Tartar!' rejoined Ralph Jordon.

'Maybe a nigger caught them!' said the Sheriff of the county, who was present to superintend the raffle, and receive the proceeds of the hazard.

'What!' exclaimed the old gentleman to enhance the value of the prizes; 'what! my Ceaser, Major, Jowler, and Pup, the bes' dogs in all Arkansas!—a nigger kill them! No, gentlemen, once let loose an' on their trail, an' they's not a gang o' niggers to be found out at night they could'nt devour! Them dogs! Hanged if they didn't eat a nigger quick as they'd swaller a piece o' meat!'

'Then they're the dogs for me!' replied the Sheriff.

'And me" added Spangler, a noted agent for catching runaway slaves.

'The raffle, the raffle!' exclaimed several voices eager for a chance, estimating at once the value of the dogs above the aggregate amount of the stakes.

'But the dogs, the dogs, gentlemen! they're not here! Give us the dogs first,' suggested an eager candidate for competition in the prizes.

'No matter, gentlemen, be sartin,' said the Colonel; 'when they's done they'll come back agin.'

'But how will they be managed in attacking strange negroes!' inquired Ralph Jordon.

'O, the command of any white man is sufficient to call 'em off, an' they's plenty o' them all'as wherever you find niggers.'

'Then, Colonel, we're to understand you to mean, that white men can't live without niggers.

'I'll be hanged, gentlemen, if it don't seem so, for wherever you find one you'll all'as find tother, they's so fully mixed up with us in all our relations!' peals of laughter following the explanation.

'Come, Colonel, I'll be hanged if we stand that, except you stand treat!' said Ralph.

'Stand what? Let us understand you; what'd I say?'

'What did you say? why, by George, you tell us flatly that we are related to niggers!'

'Then, gentlemen, I'll stand treat; for on that questi'n I'll be consarned if some of us don't have to knock under!' at which there were deafening roars of laughter, the crowd rushing into the bar-room, crying:

'Treat! treat!' that's too good to be lost!'

Next day after the raffle, the winners having in the morning presented the prizes back to their former owner, it was whispered about that the dogs had been found dead in the woods, the mare and colt were astray, the little slave girl was in a pulmonary decline, the buggy had been upset and badly worsted the day before the raffle, and the horse had the distemper; upon which information the whole party met at a convenient place on a fixed day, going out to his house in a body, who ate, drank, and caroused at his expense during the day and evening.

'Sprout,' said Ralph Jordon; 'with your uniform benevolence, generosity and candor, how did you ever manage to depart so far from your old principles and rule of doing things? I can't understand it.'

'How so? explain yourself,' replied Sprout.

'Why you always gave rather than took advantage, your house and means always being open to the needy, even those with whom you were unaquainted.'

'I'm sure I haint departed one whit from my old rule,' said Sprout; 'I saw you was all strangers to the thing, an' I took you in; I'm blamed if I didn't!' the crowd shouting with laughter.

'One word, Sprout,' said Jordon; 'when the dogs ceased baying, didn't you suspect something wrong?'

'I know'd at once when they stopped, that they was defeated; but I thought they'd pitched headlong into a old well-hole some sixty foot deep, where the walls had tumbled in, an' made it some twenty foot wide at the top. I lis'ened every minute 'spectin' to hear a devil of a whinin' among 'em; but I was disapinted.'

'Well, it's a blamed pity, anyhow, that such fine animals were killed; and no clue as yet, I believe, to the perpetration of the deed,' said the Sheriff.

'They was, indeed,' replied Sprout, 'as good a breed o' dogs as ever was, an' if they'd a been trained right, nothin' could a come up with 'em; but consarn their picters, it sarves 'em right, as they was the [illegible] cowards I ever seed! 'Sarn them, if a nigger ony done so—jis' made a pass at 'em, an' I'll be hanged if they didn't yelp like wild cats, an' almost kill 'emselves runnin' away!' at which explanation the peals of laughter were deafening.

'Let's stay a week, stay a week, gentlemen!' exclaimed Ralph Jordon, in a convulsion of laughter.

'Be gracious gentlemen!' concluded Sprout; 'if you stay till etarnity it won't alter the case one whit; case the mare an' colt's lost, the black gal's no use to anybody, the buggy's all smashed up, the hos' is got the distemper, and the dogs is dead as thunder!'

With a boisterous roar, the party already nearly exhausted with laughter, commenced gathering their hats and cloaks, and left the premises, declaring never again to be caught at a raffling wherein was interested Colonel Joel Sprout.

The dogs were indeed the best animals of the kind, and quickly trailed out their game; but Henry, with a well-aimed weapon, slew each ferocious beast as it approached him, leaving them weltering in their own blood instead of feasting on his, as would have been the case had he not overpowered them. The rest of the prizes were also valuable and in good order, and the story which found currency depreciating them, had its origin in the brain and interest of Colonel Sprout, which resulted as designed, entirely in his favor.

Hastening on to the Fulton* landing, Henry reached it at half past two o'clock in the morning, just in time to board a steamer on the downward trip, which barely touched the shore to pick up a package. Knowing him by reputation as a great horse master, the captain received him cheerfully, believing him to have been, from what he had learned, to the Texas races with horses for his master.

Being now at ease, and faring upon the best the vessel could afford, after a little delay along the cotton trading coast, Henry was safely landed in the interesting and pretentious city of New Orleans.

CHAPTER XXII.

NEW ORLEANS.

The season is the holidays, it is evening, and the night is beautiful. The moon, which in Louisiana is always an object of impressive interest, even to the slave as well as those of enlightened and scientific intelligence, the influence of whose soft and mellow light seems ever like the enchanting effect of some invisible being, to impart inspiration—now being shed from the crescent of the last day of the first quarter, appeared more interesting and charming than ever.

Though the cannon at the old fort in the Lower Faubourg had fired the significant warning, admonishing the slaves as well as free blacks to limit their movements, still there were passing to and fro with seeming indifference, negroes, both free and slave, as well as the whites and creole quadroons, fearlessly along the public highways, in seeming defiance of the established usage of negro limitation.

This was the evening of the day of Mar digras, and from long established and time-honored custom, the celebration which commenced in the morning was now being consummated by games, shows, exhibitions, theatrical performances, festivals, masquerade balls, and numerous entertainments and gatherings in the evening. It was on this account that the negroes had been allowed such unlimited privileges this evening.

Nor were they remiss to the utmost extent of its advantages.

The city which always at this season of the year is lively, and Chartier street gay and fashionable, at this time appeared more lively, gay and fashionable than usual. This fashionable thoroughfare, the pride of the city, was thronged with people, presenting complexions of every shade and color. Now could be seen and realized the expressive description in the popular song of the vocalist Cargill:

> I suppose you've heard how New Orleans
> Is famed for wealth and beauty;
> There's girls of every hue, it seems,
> From snow white to sooty.'

The extensive shops and fancy stores presented the presence behind their counters as saleswomen in attendance, of numerous females, black, white, mulatto and quadroon, politely bowing, courtesying, and rubbing their hinds,—in accents of broken English inviting to purchase all who entered the threshold, or even looked in at the door:

'Wat fa you want somet'ing? Walk in, sire, I vill sell you one nice presant fa one young ladee.'

And so with many who stood or sat along the streets and at the store doors. Courtesying and smiling they gave the civil banter;

'Come, sire, I sell you one pretty ting.'

The fancy stores and toy shops on this occasion were crowded seemingly to their greatest capacity. Here might be seen the fashionable comely young white lady of French or American extraction, and there the handsome, and frequently beautiful maiden of African origin, mulatto, quadroon, or sterling black, all fondly interchanging civilities, and receiving some memento or keepsake from the hand of an acquaintance. Many lively jests and impressive flings of delicate civility noted the greetings of the passers-by. Freedom seemed as though for once enshrouded by her sacred robes and crowned with cap and wand in hand, to go forth untrammeled through the highways of the town. Along the private streets, sitting under the verandas, in the doors with half closed jalousies, or promenading unconcernedly the public ways, mournfully humming in solace or chanting in lively glee, could be seen and heard many a creole, male or female, black, white, or mixed race, sometimes in reverential praise of—

> Father, Son and Holy Ghost—
> Madonna, and the Heavenly Host!

in sentimental reflection on some pleasant social relations, or the sad reminiscence of ill-treatment, or loss by death of some loved one, or worse than death, the relentless and insatiable demands of slavery.

In the distance, on the levee, or in the harbor among the steamers, the songs of the boatmen were incessant. Every few hours landing, loading and unloading, the glee of these men of sorrow was touchingly appropriate and impressive. Men of sorrow they are in reality; for if there be a class of men anywhere to be found, whose sentiments of song and words of lament are made to reach the sympathies of others, the black slave-boatmen on the Mississippi river is that class. Placed in positions the most favorable to witness the pleasures enjoyed by others, the tendency only is to augment their own wretchedness.

Fastened by the unyielding links of the iron cable of despotism, reconciling themselves to a life-long misery, they are seemingly contented by soothing their sorrows with songs and sentiments of apparently cheerful, but in reality wailing lamentations. The most attracting lament of the evening was sung to words, a stanza of which is presented in pathos of delicate tenderness, which is but a spray from the stream that gushed out in insuppressible juts from the agitated fountains of their souls, as if in unison with the restless current of the great river upon which they were compelled to toil, their troubled waters could not be quieted. In the capacity of leader, as is their custom, one poor fellow in pitiful tones lead off the songs of the evening:

> 'Way down upon the Mobile river,
> Close to Mobile Bay;
> There's where my thoughts are running ever,
> All through the livelong day:
> There I've a good and fond old mother,
> Though she is a slave;
> There I've a sister and a brother,
> Lying in their peaceful graves.'

Then in chorus joined the whole company—

> 'O, could I somehow a'nother,
> Drive these tears away;
> When I think about my poor old mother,
> Down upon the Mobile Bay.'

Standing in the midst of and contemplating such scenes as these, it was, that Henry determined to finish his mission in the city and leave it by the earliest conveyance over Pontchartrain for Alabama—Mobile being the point at which he aimed. Swiftly as the current of the fleeting Mississippi was time passing by, and many states lie in expanse before him, all of which, by the admonishing impulses of the dearest relations, he was compelled to pass over as a messenger of light and destruction.

Light, of necessity, had to be imparted to the darkened region of the obscure intellects of the slaves, to arouse them from their benighted condition to one of moral responsibility, to make them sensible that liberty was legitimately and essentially theirs, without which there was no distinction between them and the brute. Following, as a necessry consequence, would be the destruction of oppression and ignorance.

Alone and friendless, without a home, a fugitive from slavery, a child of misfortune, an outcast upon the world, floating on the cold surface of chance, now in the midst of a great city of opulence, surrounded by the most despotic restrictions upon his race, with renewed determination Henry declared that nothing short of an unforeseen Providence should impede his progress in the spread of secret organizations among the slaves. So aroused, he immediately started for a house in the Lower Faubourg.

'My frien', who yeh lookin' for?' kindly inquired a cautious black man, standing concealed in the shrubbery near the door of a low, tile-covered house standing back in the yard.

'A friend,' replied Henry.

'Wats 'is name?' continued the man.

'I do not rightly know.'

'Would yeh know it ef yeh heared it, my frien'?'

'I think I would.'

'Is it Seth?'

'That's the very name!' said Henry.

'Wat yeh want wid 'im, my frien'?'

'I want to see him.'

'I spose yeh do, frien'; but dat ain' answer my questin' yit. Wat yeh want wid 'im?'

'I would rather see him, then I'll be better able to answer.'

'My frien',' replied the man, meaningly; 'I see da is somethin' in yeh; come in!' giving a significant cough before placing his finger on the latch-string.

On entering, from the number and arrangement of the seats, there was evidence of an anticipated gathering; but the evening being that of the Mar di gras, there was nothing very remarkable in this. Out from another room came a sharp, observing, shrewd little dark brown-skin woman, called in that community a griffe." Bowing, sidling and courtesying, she smilingly came forward.

'Wat brotha dis, Seth?' inquired she.

'I don'o,' carelessly replied he with a signal of caution, which was not required in her case.

'Ah!' exclaimed Henry; 'this is Mr. Seth! I'm glad to see you.'

After a little conversation, in which freely participated Mrs. Seth, who evidently was deservingly the leading spirit of the evening, they soon became reconciled to the character and mission of their unexpected and self-invited guest.

'Phebe, go tell 'em,' said Seth; when lightly tripping away, she entered the door of the other room, which after a few moments' delay was partially opened, and by a singular and peculiar signal, Seth and the stranger were invited in. Here sat in one of the most secret and romantic-looking rooms, a party of fifteen, the representatives of the heads of that many plantations, who that night had gathered for the portentious purpose of a final decision on the hour to strike the first blow. On entering, Henry stood a little in check.

'Trus' 'em!' said Seth; 'yeh fine 'em da right saut uv boys—true to der own color! Da come f'om fifteen diffent plantations.'

'They're the men for me!' replied Henry, looking around the room; 'is the house all safe?'

'Yes, brotha, all safe an' soun', an' a big dog in da yard, so dat no one can come nigh widout our knowin' it.'

'First, then, to prayer, and next to seclusion,' said Henry, looking at Seth to lead in prayer.

'Brotha, gib us word a' prar,' said Seth to Henry, as the party on their knees bowed low their heads to the floor.

'I am not fit, brother, for a spiritual leader; my warfare is not Heavenly, but earthly; I have not to do with angels, but with men; not with righteousness, but wickedness. Call upon some brother who has more of the grace of God than I. If ever I were a Christian, slavery has made me a sinner; if I had been a saint, it would have made me a devil! I feel more like cursing than praying—may God forgive me! Pray for me, brethren!'

'Brotha Kits gib us word a prar, my brotha!' said Seth to an athletic, powerful black man.

'It's not for our many words, nor long prayer—our 'pinion uv our self, nor sich [illegible] dat Dou [illegible] us; but de 'cerity ob our hearts an' our 'tentions. Bless de young man dat come 'mong us; make 'im fit for 'is day, time an' genration! Dou knows, Laud, dat for wat we 'semble; anseh dis our 'tition, an' gib us token ob Dine 'probation!' petitioned Kits, slapping his hand at the conclusion down upon and splitting open a pine table before him.

'Amen!' responded the gathering.

'Let de word run an' be glorify!' exclaimed Nathan Seth.

The splitting of the table was regarded as ominous, but of doubtful signification, the major part considering it as rather unfavorable. Making no delay, lest a dispondency ensued through fear and superstition, Henry at once entered into seclusion, completing an organization.

'God sen' yeh had come 'long dis way befo'!' exclaimed Phebe Seth.

'God grant 'e had!' responded Nathan.

'My Laud! I feels like a Sampson! I feels like gwine to take de city meself!' cried out Kits, standing erect on the floor, with fists clenched, muscles braced, eyes shut, and head thrown back.

'Yes, yes!' exclaimed Phebe; 'blessed be God, brotha Kits, de King is in de camp!'

'Poweh, poweh!' responded Seth: 'da King is hear!'

'Praise 'is name!' shouted Phebe, clapping and rubbing her hands; 'for wat I feels an' da knowledge I has receive dis night! I been all my days in daukness till now! I feels we shall be a people yit! Thang, God, thang' God!" when she skipped over the floor from side to side, keeping time with a tune sung to the words—

> 'We'll honor our Lord and Master,
> We'll honor our Lord and King;
> We'll honor our Lord and Master,
> And bow at His command!
> Oh brothers, did you hear the news?
> Lovely Jesus is coming!
> If ever I get to the house of the Lord,
> I'll never come back any more.'

"It's good to be here!" shouted Seth.

"Ah, dat it is, brotha Seth;" responded Kits. De Laud is nigh, dat 'e is. 'E promise dat wharsomeveh two-three 'semble' to be in de mids' an dat to bless 'em, an' 'is promise is not vain, case 'E here to-night!"

At the moment when Phebe took her seat, nearly exhausted with exercise, a loud rap at the door, preceded by the signal for the evening, alarmed the party.

"Come in brotha Tib—come quick, ef yeh comin," bade Seth, in a low voice, hastily, as he partially opened the door, peeping out into the other room.

"O, pshaw!" exclaimed Phebe, as he and her husband yet lingered; "I wish he stay away. I'm sho, nobody want im! he allas half drunk, anyhow. Good evenin, brotha Tib. How yeh been sense we see yeh, early paut de night?"

"Reasable, sisteh—reasable, thang God. Well, what yeh all 'cided on? I say dis night, now er neveh!" said Tib, evidently bent on mischief.

"Foolishness, foolishness!" exclaimed Phebe, "it makes me mad to see people make fool uv demself! I wish 'e stay home, an' not bother here."

"I spose I got right to speak as well as de rest on yeh. Yeh all ain' dat high yit to keep body from talkin' I spose. Betta wait tell yeh git free fo' ye 'temp' scrow oveh people dat way! I kin go out yeh house!' retorted the mischievous man, determined on distracting their plans.

---

*A town in Arkansas.

'Nobody o'deh yeh out, but I like see people have sense, pecially befo' strangehs' an' know to behave demself!'

'I is gwine out yeh house,' gruffly replied the man.

'My friend,' said Henry, 'listen a moment to me. You are not yet ready for a strike; you're not yet ready to do anything effective. You have barely taken the first step in the matter, and—'

'Strangeh!' interrupted the distracter, 'don'o yeh name, yeh strangeh to me—I see yeh talk bout 'step;' how many step man got take fo' he kin walk? I likes to know dat! Tell me dat fus, den yeh may ax me what ye choose!'

'You must have all the necessary means, my brother,' persuasively resumed Henry, 'for the accomplishment of your ends. Intelligence among yourself on everything pertaining to your designs and project. You must know what, how, and when to do. Have all the instrumentalities necessary for an effective effort before making the attempt. Without this you will fail, utterly fail.'

'Den ef we got wait all dat time, we neveh be free!' gruffly replied he. 'I goes in for dis night! I say dis night! Who goes—'

'Shet yo' big mouth! Sit down! Now make a fool o' yo'self!' exclaimed several voices with impatience, which evidently only tended to increase the mischief.

'Dis night, dis night or neveh!' boisterously yelled the now infuriated man at the top of his voice; 'now's de time!' when he commenced shuffling about over the floor, stamping and singing at the top of his voice—

'Come all my brethren, let us take a rest,
While the moon shines bright and clear;
Old master died and left us all at last,
And has gone at the bar to appear!
Old master's dead and lying in his grave;
And our blood will now cease to flow;
He will no more tramp on the neck of the slave,
For he's gone where slave-holders go!
Hang up the shovel and the hoe-o-o!
I don't care whether I work or no!
Old master's gone to the slave-holders rest—
He's gone where they all ought to go!'

pointing down and concluding with an expression which indicated anything but a religious feeling.

'Shame so it is dat he's lowed to do so! I wish I was man for 'im, I'd make 'im fly!' said Phebe, much alarmed, as she heard the great dog in the yard, which had been so trained as to know the family visitors, whining and manifesting an uneasiness unusual with him. On going to the back door, a person suddenly retreated into the shrubbery, jumping the fence, and disappearing.

Soon, however, there was an angry low heavy growling of the dog, with suppressed efforts to bark, apparently prevented by fear on the part of the animal. This was succeeded by cracking in the bushes, dull heavy foot-steps, cautious whispering, and stillness.

'Hush! Lis'en!' admonished Phebe; 'what is dat? wy don't Tiger bark? I don't understan' it? Seth, go out and see, will you? Wy don't some you men make dat fool stop? I wish I was a man, I'd break 'is neck, so I would!' during which the betrayer was shuffling, dancing, and singing at such a pitch as to attract attention from without.

Seth seized him from behind by a firm grasp of the collar with both hands; Tib sprang forward, slipping easily out of it leaving the overcoat suspended in his assailant's hands, displaying studded around his waist a formidable array of deathly weapons, when rushing out of the front door, in terrible accents he exclaimed:—

'Insurrection! Insurrection! Death to every white!'

With a sudden spring of their rattles, the gens d'armes, who in clusters had surrounded the house, and by constant menacing gestures with their maces kept the great dog which stood back in a corner in a snarling position in fear, arrested the miscreant, taking him directly to the old fort calaboose. In the midst of the confusion which necessarily ensued, Henry, Seth and Phebe, Kits and fellow-leaders from the fifteen plantations, immediately fled, all having passes for the day and evening, which fully protected them in any part of the city away from the scene of disturbance.

Intelligence soon reached all parts of the city, that an extensive plot for rebellion of the slaves had been timely detected. The place was at once thrown into a state of intense excitement, the military called into requisition, dragoons flying in every direction, cannon from the old fort sent forth hourly through the night, thundering peals to give assurance of their sufficiency, and the infantry on duty traversed the streets, stimulating with martial air and voluntary vocalists, who readily joined in the chorus to the memorable exciting words in the Southern States, of—

'Go tell Jack Coleman,
The Negroes are a rising!'

Alarm and consternation succeeded pleasure and repose, sleep for the time seemed to have departed from the eyes of the inhabitants, men, women, and children ran in every direction through the streets, seeming determined if they were to be massacred, that it should be done in the open highways rather than secretly in their own houses. The commotion thus continued till the morning: meanwhile editors, journalists, reporters, and correspondents, all were busily on the alert, digesting such information as would form an item of news for the press, or a standing reminiscence for historical reference in the future.

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE REBEL BLACKS.

For the remainder of the night secreting themselves in Conti and Burgundi streets, the rebel proprietors of the house in which was laid the plot for the destruction of the city and seizure of the State, were safe until the morning, their insurrectionary companions having effected a safe retreat to the respective plantations to which they belonged, that evening.

Jason and Phebe Seth were the hired slaves of their own time from a widower master, a wealthy retired attorney at Baton Rouge, whose only concern about them was to call every ninety days at the counter of the Canal Bank of New Orleans, and receive the price of their hire, which was there safely deposited to his credit by the industrious and faithful servants. The house in which the rebels met, had been hired for the occasion, being furnished rooms kept for transient accommodation.

On the earliest conveyance destined for the city of Mobile, Henry left, who before he fled, admonished each member of the organization, as his parting counsel, to 'stand still and see the salvation;' the next day being noted by General Ransom, as an incident in his history, by receiving a formal visit of a fortnight's sojourn, in the person of his slaves Jason and Phebe Seth.

The inquisition held in the case of the betrayer Tib, developed fearful antecedence of extensive arrangements for the destruction of the city by fire and water, thereby compelling the white inhabitants to take refuge in the swamps, whilst the blacks marched up the coast, sweeping the plantations as they went.

Suspicions were fixed upon many, among whom was an unfortunate English schoolteacher, who was arrested and imprisoned, where he died, to the last protesting his innocence. McFarland was a good and brave hearted man, disdaining to appeal for redress to his country, lest it might be regarded as the result of cowardice.

Taking fresh alarm at this incident, the municipal regulations have been most rigid in a system of restriction and espionage toward negroes and mulattoes, almost destroying their self-respect and manhood, and certainly much impairing their usefulness.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, DECEMBER 21, 1861.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

The Narrowing of the Circle.

It is remarkable to see how, in the providence of God, all stratagems designed in reference to the continued oppression of the colored man have failed.

Nor is it the least interesting phase of the subject to witness how the failures occur.

In the days of the early colonizationists no efforts were spared by its advocates to drive the free colored people to Africa, in order that the slaveholder might enjoy his human property in safety. Our fathers had the wisdom to know that their salvation and the freedom of the slave, was wholly dependent upon the overthrow of this infernal scheme, and hence they fought it to the death. This battle lasted about thirty years; but during this time many persons had been sent to Liberia without the slightest preparation being made there for their care or protection; of course many of them died. But those who survived have gone on increasing until the present time.

But during all this time the South plunged deeper and deeper into its "peculiar" iniquity. From an evil, slavery had grown to be a blessing to the community; hence slavery was the normal condition of the black man. This being the case, the Colinization Society being based upon the idea that a black man could be a man somewhere, became unpopular, and finally expired in the South—the very logical ground being taken, that if slavery is right, then instead of sending negroes to Africa, that they ought by all means to be brought from Africa to this country, in order that they might enjoy the rich blessings of the Patriarchal institutions of the South.

Now during all this time the leaven of abolition was working in the national heart, and prejudice began to give way. The editor of the Tribune, and other negro-haters, began to talk about sending the blacks to Central America—the circle began to get narrower,—Africa was too far off. "They must be under our protection nearer home," &c., &c.

The slave power during all these discussions marched steadily on. It knew that it must either rule or be ruined; hence when it saw that all other methods must fail, and that delay was death, it madly determined to strike, and strike it did.

But look at the charming effect of all this. No sooner did all this take place, than the Tribune began to advocate the colonization of all the colored people in Florida!

Now reader! do you not call that narrowing the circle? If Horace Greeley goes on at this rate, how long will it be before he, the very embodiment of hypocrisy, will be found acknowledging our right to live on any part of God's footstool that we please, without any one daring to questron that right. We are proud of our African descent, and hope to see the day that we shall stand on its illustrious soil, and we have our own reasons for this, but we feel that there is a question which infinitely transcends all others, it is the previous question of a man's right to "life and the pursuit of happiness."

This being the case, we say to all questions that intervene, stand back!

We "move the previous question."

The Smith Land Enterprise.

This enterprise, so long inviting our interest and attention, is again afloat before the people upon a basis more cheering and satisfactory than any heretofore presented.

The principal excuses held forth to cover the neglect of the three thousand grantees holding these lands, have been, that we are not all farmers: that we are too poor to undertake their settlement; and that the localities are destitute of the needed conveniences, and an encouraging population. Now we shall not urge that in the face of all such objectors the colored people, like the Germans and Irish, go forth in the unbroken districts and make settlements, and by their own stern efforts sweep before them the obstacles of complaint, assisting and instructing one another in the means of accomplishing a success,—for it would be useless: our education has been, (unfortunately) different from theirs. We must first become inspired with a consciousness of the great need of, and benefit accruing from such lofty enterprise, before we can hope for an appreciation of such examples. Our present purpose herein is to dispel if possible the above objections. A few weeks ago we published a few extracts from a letter received from a colored gentleman (Mr. Silas Frazer) living on his grant in Essex Co. This gentleman speaks of the success of Mr. Epps, Mr. Appo, music teacher and others who have settled their lands there, with no knowledge of farming, and declares himself and others willing and anxious to assist as far as possible, all who may come. The population is fast increasing. Five years ago there were thirty-seven farmers within seven miles square around him; in his last letter he says that the population has 'wonderfully increased;' at that time they were sorely pressed for a mill in that neighborhood, now they boast of three. They have good schools, and Mr. Epps is their road master. Like good news we have heard from Franklin and Hamilton counties. The Vermonters, he says, are settlling the lands rapidly. Now to the want of money. We believe that some dozen or more years ago an association was formed to assist jointly its members who desired to improve their grants, believing that such a course would redound to the interest directly and indirectly of the colored people as a class. But few, if any, availed themselves of the opportunity, and the effort broke down by the weight of its discouragement.

Mr. Epps went off about this time, and after a struggle of the first year or two, took his place among the forward men of the enterprise, and now, we are informed, stands in their esteem A No. 1. We speak more particularly of Mr. Epps, because he is among the names more familiarly known in this community. Then followed Pierce, Frazer, Appo, and others, whose lofty example now invites our imitation. We have now established another organization, and again unfurl our banner to the public,—"The Gerrit Smith Land Association."

We shall not urge that which should seem to ourself unwholesome or impracticable, but with the examples shown and facilities offered, we should be remiss to our own interest if not unfortunate in self-respect, if in the present emergencies we allow this laudable enterprise to suffer and die in our hands. Let land-holders throughout the state co-operate. Types.

Letter from Washington.

Washington, Dec. 9th, 1861.

Mr. Editor:—The Washington public are being delightfully entertained by a company of operatic singers from the city of Baltimore. They have given already two concerts of vocal and instrumental music. On Monday evening, Dec. 2, the first of these concerts came off at Israel Church, on which occasion the following array of talent appeared:—Mrs. E. Tilghman, Miss S. T. Braddicks, Mr. J. H. Wilkins, Mr. R. A. Mason, Prof. H. W. Webb, conductor and pianist. This concert, like those given at the Presbyterian and Ebenezer Churches in this city, was very creditable to Mr. Webb and his talented performers, and, in fact, to his city and race. I cannot conclude my comments on this concert without giving some of the pieces sung, adding that they could not have been performed in a more satisfactory manner, the performers being frequently encored.

Bright Star of Hope,
Miss S. S. Braddicks.
Robert le Diable, do.
Dear Mother I will come home.
Mr. Mason.
Vive la America,
Mr. H. Wilkins.

We never witnessed a larger and more select audience at Israel Church. It was made up of the beauty, intelligence, and fashion of Washington, together with a number of distinguished colored strangers. One half of the proceeds of this splendid concert was generously donated to said church, which act speaks volumes for this excellent company, and its gentlemanly conductor, Mr. Harrison Webb, Jr. On Friday this company visited various public buildings, where much attention was shown them, and on Saturday they visited the Smithsonian Institution, and were much pleased with what they saw. It oftimes happens that at or near the close of a fine feast Death bends his gigantic form, and whispers in the ear of some one who had bid fair for a long life—

"Thou fool, this night thy soul is required of thee."

On the night of Friday, Dec. 6, the painful news went through this community that Prof. James H. Fleet was no more! Oh how powerful was the shock to me when I remembered that, but a few days before, I struck hands with the Doctor, on Pennsylvania avenue, and whom I had never seen look better. Little did he or your humble correspondent think that a messenger of Death had been dispatched for his soul to appear at the High Tribunal of God.

"As my soul liveth, there is but one step between me and death."

Mr. James H. Fleet has been long known and universally respected by both white and colored. He had been a successful music teacher in Washington and Georgetown for many years, and was associated with the lamented Rev. John T. Cook, in establishing the 15th street Presbyterian Church. He had filled various positions of usefulness in said church, being for many years the conductor and leader of the choir. Dr. Fleet possessed rare educational attainments, and was considered one of the most refined and talented gentlemen in Washington. He studied medicine under Dr. Sewell, of this city, many years ago, and graduated honorably, and his field of labor was to have been Africa, but owing to the delicate state of his health, he declined emigrating at that time. He did not practice medicine, but preferred the profession of music, which brought him in contact with the families of some of our best white citizens. The "Evening Star" has the following notice of his death in its Saturday's issue, Dec 7th:

Dead.—Hundreds of our fellow-citizens will learn with sincere sorrow of the death, last night, in Georgetown, of Mr. James H. Fleet, the so well known colored music teacher. His disease was typhoid fever.—He was universally respected and regarded where known, by those whose respect and regard was credible to him.

The remains of Mr. Fleet were brought to the 15th St. Presbyterian church, on Sunday afternoon, where a large concourse had assembled to hear the funeral discourse. As the remains were entering the church, the choir in a solemn manner chanted a funeral air, accompanied by the organ. After an appropriate prayer by the Rev. Benj. T. Tanner, the Rev. Dr. John C. Smith, of the 4th Presbyterian church, delivered a most eloquent and feeling discourse, selecting his text from the Book of Job—14th chapter, and the latter clause of the 20th verse:

"Thou changes his countenance, and sendeth him away"—

after which the remains were taken back to Georgetown for interment.

An exposition has been made of the condition of our county jail and its colored prisoners, by Mr. Wilson, of Mass., in Senate. I here send his report, hoping you will print it in full, as it will be very interesting to many of your Northern readers, who do not know how things have been and are being conducted down here.

Mrs. Caroline Jackson, your recently appointed agent for Washington, seems to be moving in a right direction for success. She is a lady possessing much energy and industry, and I think if anything can be done in Washington, this lady will certainly do it. Indeed, I must congratulate the Anglo-African on its choice of this fair agent—for he must have an iron heart who could, with the best of reasons, refuse to take the paper from so excellent a lady as Mrs. Caroline Jackson. Box.

Letter From Paterson.

Paterson, N. J., Dec. 14th, 1861.

Mr. Editor: More than once I have seen people, who were unacquainted with the full extent of human depravity, shocked to the soul when learning that the black sells black to the slave trader on the coast of Africa; but horrid as this may appear similar acts are daily perpetrated under our eyes by the hired agents of Jas. Redpath.

An Emigration Club, with about twenty names on the roll has been formed in this place. You must not, however, infer that there will be any great emigration from this part of New Jersey. A couple of men and several ladies comprise the whole number that desire to go; the latter wishing to go out and marry dukes, of whom Mr. Brown thinks there must be some left!

The professed object of the club is to acquire information. I therefore invite its attention to two incontrovertible facts.

First—The wages of a laboring man in Hayti are only from 18 to 25 cents per day. This, so far as I know, Mr. Redpath, brazen-faced though he is, has never dared to deny.

Second—The cost of many of the necessaries of life are much greater in Hayti than here. In proof, I refer to the fact that axes, alewives, boots, bedsteads, bricks, candles, chairs, codfish, crockery, crinoline, combs, drugs, drygoods, essence, flour, furniture, firearms, grindstones, grain, groceries, glass, hams, hats, hardware, ink, lookng-glasses, leather, lard, mackerel, matches, needles, oil, pork, pins, paper, refrigerators, shirts, shovels, soap, shoes, tallow, thread, trimmings, tubs, tombstones, &c. &c., with many other important articles, are all imported from this country. (See Pine and Palm, June 20th, 1861.) Commenting on this fact, which is significant of high prices, the paper lets off the following:—

"In reading over the list one is sometimes struck with the ludicrous jumble which is inadvertently made in the enumeration of the exports. Thus, for instance, we have beef, butter and bricks—codfish, crinoline, and crackers—herring, hatchets, and horses—pails, pistols, and pork—all strung together in 'a state of the most admired disorder.' Funny as this may appear, it only proves most emphatically the diversity of the demands which Hayti makes upon the industry of the people of the United States. It shows that her citizens consume large quantities of American food—that many of the fabrics they wear are of American manufacture,—that her physicians prescribe American drugs,—that her mechanics use American tools,—that her husbandmen employ American implements of agriculture,—that her newspapers are printed with American type—that her merchants write advices on American paper, with American pens, and American ink—that her children, in infancy, amuse themselves with American toys—and that even after death their places of sepulture are frequently marked by tombstones fashioned by American hands, and taken from American quarries."

True; and it needs no arguments to show any person capable of putting two and two together that all the articles named—the American food, American tools, American manufactures, &c., imported into Hayti, must necessarily, in consequence of such importation, be much dearer than in this country. And with the value of labor less, and the necessaries and comforts of life higher than here, how in the name of common sense, I would ask, do people expect to benefit by emigration?

Not only, though, it seems, is Jas. Redpath and other intermedling Englishmen or Irishmen, whichever he is, in favor of such a movement, but other silly gentlemen at Washington want to colonize us in some 'congenial clime." That message reminded me of a saying of ex-Senator Wigfall—"Kentucky produces nothing but asses and jackasses!" The Hoosier English in which it was written, is the only language fitted to express that silly, diabolical proposition referring to colonization. At the rate of a thousand a day, all the negroes cannot be removed in ten years. If, however, the diabolical scheme is to be consummated, let blood be spilled before we go, and let the first to pay for his infamous crimes be Jas. Redpath, the heartless trader in our people's woes. A. P. S.

Letter from Ithaca.

Ithaca, N. Y., Dec. 14th, 1861.

Mr. Editor:—With pleasure I inform you of the state of things in Ithaca. There has been a new church edifice erected here, and it is a splendid affair. The Church prospers both spiritually and temporally. There is a thriving Sabbath school attached to it, which gains steadily in numbers each Sabbath. The Sons and Daughters of Bishop of Ithaca held a supper at Zion Hall (formerly of the old church), on the evening of the 12th. An interesting company there assembled to partake of the bounties of a well laden table, and truly they did the viands thereon ample justice. The proceeds, which were $17 18 clear of all expenses, went to pay for a new chandalier for the new church, and which is very handsome indeed, and cost about $15. It seems as if the conflict of war is raging, and bids fair to be fearful and long, and it becomes us as people to be zealous in every good enterprise, hoping and praying that the Lord will bring right out of every wrong.

Rev. John Thomas.

The Fire in Charleston S. C.

We hardly know what to say of this ominous affair. If we look at it from the stand-point of an American citizen,—a friend to the perpetuity of an American Union, we have great reason to rejoice at the fact, that there are men in that infernal den, whose hearts still beat true to the Union, and out of whose breasts, the traitors have utterly failed to drive the undying spirit of patriotism.

If the torch which fired that nest was handled by a white man, his name ought to be handed down to posterity with the names of the most daring who may perish in or survive this war. But if, on the contrary, it was the act of a black hand, neither a monumental slab, or the most eloquent epistle could do him justice, of so much importance is the act to the future of this country.

If a black man did it, it is the key to the solution of the war, a key which the the President of the United States may yet be obliged to tune, notwithstauding his attempt in his late message to stay the flowing of the anti-slavery current.

This fire assumes gigantic importance when taken in connection with the Mason and Slidell affair.

Great Britain is now talking about going to war with this country, because of the manner of the arrest of those individuals.

Now this is the ostensible reason; but the real one is, that they want the cotton of the South, and by raising the blockade they hope to get it. But if the President will but declare, by proclamation, that the country is in danger, and call upon all her sons, of whatever color, to rally to its defence; and if he at the same time should order the Slaves of the South to seek their freedom through fire and rapine, a few such illuminations as that of Charleston would soon settle the whole question.

There were 576 houses burned in Charleston, the value of which was about $7,000,000. Many reports were rife in reference to the slaves; some papers stating that those in the interior of the State were in full insurrection. These reports have not been confirmed, but they indicate the apprehensions of the slave-holders of the South.

New Work by a Colored Author.

We have received a circular by which we are informed that our former fellow-townsman, Rev. Alex. Crummell, is about issuing from the press a collection of his several writings, in a volume of some 300 pages. The book will be published by subscription; and, at the cheap price at which it is offered, gives Mr. C.'s old schoolmates and friends a good opportunity of testing their regard for him personally, their interest in the work he is doing in West Africa, and the esteem of New York, for her sons who maintain her character in foreign lands.

We subjoin a part of the circular:

The Future of Africa: Miscellanies.—By Rev. Alexander Crummell, B. A., of Liberia, Africa.

The undersigned proposes to issue in a 12mo. volume, of about 300 pages; Orations, Addresses and other Papers, mostly prepared for National and Missionary occasions, in Liberia, West Africa; and pertaining to National Life and Duty.

The following is a list of the articles:—

1. The English Language in Liberia.
2. The Duty of a Rising Christian State to contribute to the World's Well-being and Civilization.
3. Address on laying the Corner Stone of St. Mark's Hospital, Cape Palmas.
4. Duty and Relations of Free Colored Men in America, to Africa.
5. Eulogum on the Life and Character of Thomas Clarkson, Esq.
6. God and the Nation—An Anniversary Sermon.
7. The Fitness of the Gospel for its own Work—A Convocational Sermon.
8. The Progress and Prospects of the Republic of Liberia.
9. Progress of Civilization along the West coast of Africa.
10. The Negro Race not under a Curse—From the London Christian Observer of August, 1853.

The volume will be printed on good white paper; in clear type; neatly bound; and at $1 (one dollar) per copy.

Orders for copies may be left at this office.

We are glad to see that Mr. Crummell's projected work has received the patronage of such distinguished persons as—

Rt. Rev. Alonzo Potter, D. D.,
Benjamin Coates, Esq.,
Mrs. Eli K. Price,
Rev. J. W. Cracraft,
John S. Crozer, Esq.,
Hon. Edward Coles,
Rev. B. T. Noakes,
Rev. Stephen Smith,
Rev. William Douglass,
Rev. James Gloucester,
Rev. Albert Barnes,
Rev. S. H. Tyng, D. D., of N. Y.,
John Welsh, Esq.,
Samuel Welsh, Esq.,
Rev. Thomas S. Malcom,
Hon. Geo. W. Woodward,
John Bohlen, Esq.,
W. Parker Foulke, Esq.,
U. B. Vidal, Esq., &c., &c.

DEATH OF REV. WALTER PROCTOR.

We learn from the last number of the "Christian Recorder" that the venerable Father Proctor, of Philadelphia, with whom many of our readers enjoyed an acquaintance, departed this life, on the 10th inst., in that city. From an obituary notice in the "Recorder" we make the following extract:—

"Father Proctor was troubled very much with the asthma for many years, and that, in conjunction with a dropsical affection, was probably the means of terminating his life. The deceased had been a member of Bethel Church about forty-eight years. He was ordained a Deacon by the Rev. Richard Allen, the first Bishop of the A. M. E Church. His life was one grand page, free from spot or blemish, and he was greatly beloved by all who knew him. It is said that he was sensible of the hour of his departure being near at hand, and he called his family around him, and exhorted them to look to God. He also gave out the hymn,

'Plunged in a gulf of dark despair,
We, wretched sinners, lay,' &c.

He recited the entire hymn in as strong a voice as he had ever done, and at the conclusion offered up a fervent prayer to the Throne of Grace. He told his wife that he was about to leave her, and wished her to be resigned to the will of God. He also exhorted all who called to see him to put their trust in the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sins of the world. He told us, some time ago, when engaged in conversation in the book-room, that he would drop off some time when it would be least expected, and that he was living in expectation of that event. He was confined to his bed but a few days previous to his death. But he is no more—he has paid the debt that all must pay.

"He leaves behind him to mourn his loss a dear and affectionate companion, who is now in her sixty or sixty-first year, and six children—four daughters and two sons—but their loss is his infinite gain. The Church, also, and many friends, are left to mourn his loss."

The good people of Boston have a splendid chance to get the government out of the Slidell-Mason-British-Lion-scrape. They are heaping kindness on the imprisoned traitors; let them go one step farther, and "kill them with kindness." Let a few dozen go down to Fort Warren, disguised as blacks; let them seize upon Mason and Slidell, and out of pure love for "old massa," squeeze and hug the breath out of them—"so glad fer see 'um;" then let them get a butt of sack, or Malmesbury wine, and neatly make a vinous infusion of the old gentlemen (thereby giving them by exdosmosis what they have been all their lives accustomed to by cudosmosis), so "chemically prepared" that they will "keep" in "good order" for any British demand for the article. Such an act would relieve the government at Washington from a great deal of inkshed, and our British cousins from a little bloodshed.

What Is It?

We copy the following from the 31st No., December 14th, of the "Pine and Palm"

A Preparatory Word.—Having become sincerely convinced that many of the political doctrines that I have advocated in my writings are dangerous and abhorrent to the higher insight; the murderous policy, for instance, of inciting the slaves to insurrection;—which I have urged repeatedly and with terribly mistaken zeal—I wish to announce here that I shall retire from any participation in the political management of this journal, excepting for the purpose of retracting past errors, until such time as I feel that I have attained a clearer and more human and Christian view of the duties of the freeman to the enslaved.

I shall confine myself exclusively to the editing of the outside pages of the paper. The name of the acting editor will be duly announced. The articles signed with an asterisk (*) were mine; of these I will retract many; my associates who indicate their respective writings by the initial L. and by the marks †, ‡, and §, are alone responsible for their thoughts thus labelled, I repudiate my war doctrines, utterly and forever. James Redpath.

We don't know what to make of this "Preparatory Word," or proclamation. We must hand it over to our Canadian correspondent—Mrs. Mary Shadd Cary. Her "insight" in such matters is decidedly "higher" than ours. We pray that she will deal tenderly with our brother editor, for he is evidently on the "anxious seat, groping about for conviction." He is quite mistaken in supposing that he is "sincerely convinced" of any thing, except that the world is an oyster which J. R. is destined to open; and that his present "lay," as the tool of the black president of Hayti, does not pay quite as well as if he could become "available" to the white president of the United States. In "laying for" the latter, he has wit enough to understand that he must entirely wash all the "JOHN BROWN" spots from his antecedents. He seeks to hide this tar by a coat of self-imposed feathers. He need not labor hard. The world had more difficulty in believing him to be a brave and honest man than it will find in regarding him as a renegade and a charlatan. If "sincerely convinced" that he should repudiate war doctrines and insurrection, why does he maintain his connection with the Haytian Government, which is based upon and grew out of the doctrine of the divine right of insurrection? What is the matter, any how! Have the murdered Banquos of Geffrard's estate and St. Mark, troubled the unrest of J. R?

No Slave-catching in the Army.—In Congress on Wednesday last the resolution offered by Mr. Sumner that the army shall not be used to surrender fugitive slaves, was taken up.

Mr. Sumner said he had various letters stating abuses of this kind in the army. Brig. Gen. Stone was adding to his achievement at Ball's Bluff, by busying himself in surrendering up slaves. He (Gen. Stone) had made Massachusetts soldiers do this vile duty. The Governor of Massachusetts had already complained of this. This outrage must be stopped.

Mr. Cowan (Rep., Pa.) thought that the one great trouble was, that every General thought that he must make up his mind as to what he will do in a contingency which never arises. He (Cowan) thought that Generals had no right to settle the question as to who was the owner of a slave, and that the whole matter should be left to the Executive, and need not be put on the statute book. The fact that the army were in the Rebel States was enough. He thought that Generals must take the natural result which comes with each fact, without a special legislation for emancipation or confiscation. They had nothing to do with these questions in the Senate, whiuh were only keeping up angry agitation.

Mr. Sumner's resolution was then agreed to.

GOD BLESS GEN. HEINTZELMAN

The Washington correspondent of the "Tribune" writes:

"Gen. Heintzelman has within the past few weeks added to the population of Alexandria several Virginians whose desire to recover fugitive slaves outran their discretion. When they presented themselves at his headquarters in search of their lost bondsmen, he informed them that the soldiers of the National Army were not slave catchers, and when, satisfied that he meantwhat he said, they essayed to return to their farms, he declared that he could not permit civilians to go beyond or to remain within his lines. One of them has, in consequence, been a month in Alexandria, waiting for the Army to advance to the other side of his plantation. 'Dark-skinned Union men' continue to seek Gen. Heintzelman's camp, but fewer rebel owners visit him."

Infamous.—The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Daily Times, in his letter of Dec. 15th, makes the following statement, which has not yet been contradicted:

"When our troops crossed the river, previous to the battle of Ball's Bluff, the slaves in the vicinity on the Virginia side were of invaluable service as guides and boatmen in transporting our troops across. When our troops retreated, two slaves, belonging to a rebel named Smart, resident south of Leesburgh, and who had thus aided our troops, reached the Maryland side and remained in our camps, and have been devoted and faithful servants. On Friday, Gen. Stone sent orders to have the two men conveyed across the river under a flag of truce, to be conveyed to their master. The rebels at first refused to receive them, but on assurance being given that Gen. Stone's only purpose was to return the slaves, they were received, and the flag of truce returned."

The Freedmen at Fortress Monroe.

Rev. L. C. Lockwood, after a short visit to New York, has resumed his labors in Virginia. The Committee have engaged Rev. W. E. Sheldon, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as an assistant missionary. Rev. S. S. Jocelyn, one of the Secretaries of the American Missionary Association, supplied Mr. Lockwood's place, during his absence, and has returned deeply impressed with the great importance of sustaining this interesting mission. Mr. Lockwood writes, under date of November 25th:

"Brother Sheldon is very acceptable to the colored people. . . . The Lord has blessed Brother Jocelyn's labor here. All things now go on harmoniously."

In letter dated Nov. 27th, he says:

"In my last, I promised to give you some account of last Sabbath's services. The sunrise prayer meeting was, as usual, interesting. So with the Sabbath-schools. The 11 o'clock service at Wood's Mill, near Hampton, was also very interesting. Mr. Hobson — a 'contraband' — who is rapidly learning to read—made some sensible, Scriptural and even eloquent impromptu remarks on the text, 'Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation,' etc., adapted to make a good and deep impression upon both saints and sinners. He said he felt diffident in speaking in the presence of one of so much more knowledge and experience than himself, yet he was not ashamed to speak of Jesus. Though he could not yet perfectly read the Holy Scriptures, God had taught them to him by the Spirit."

He proceeded as follows:

"The joy of salvation! You, Christian, know what it is. When first converted, it was to you a joy unspeakable and full of glory. Then you could tell to sinners around, what a dear Saviour you had found. Jesus all the day long, was your joy and your song. When the Christian is cold in religion, he has no joy, no freedom, no heart to praise, no tongue to speak what God has done for his soul. But when God has restored to him the joy of his salvation, and once more upholds him with his free Spirit, his heart overflows, and his tongue is loosed. David lost this great blessing by sin, and regained it by repentance. Without this, Christians will meet and moil and toil together, and not a lisp is spoken of Jesus or his word; but when joy and freedom are restored, out of the abundance of the hear the mouth will speak. O then it is very easy to talk religion, because it is felt.

"Then a man will speak with power. The words will catch fire, and go from heart to heart. I see sinners out of Christ, going to hell. This is a hard word, but true. They have no joy of salvation, no free spirit; they are in Satan's chains. Can I help warning them? If I saw a child near the fire, the flames darting out to seize its clothes, would I not run and pull it away? And so I would pull a soul out of the fire. O sinner, it will double my joy to save your soul from death. One brother told me he was always talking to a sinner, and he was at first offended, but, by-and-by, he was converted. Where is he now? IN GLORY. O sinner, hasten to be wise. The rising sun will not be sure of setting. O let me point you to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world. Let me point you to his redeeming blood, and say, Behold the way to God. Then may you have this joy of salvation and this free spirit."

In the afternoon, Mr. Sheldon discoursed at the Seminary, from the words, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." After additional remarks by Mr. Lockwood, Mr. Carey, an aged "contraband," of whom mention has been made several times, and who is unable to read, made a remarkable address. Mr. Lockwood gives a specimen of it, as follows:

"Christ, said he, told his disciples to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature, but they wanted to hang around Jerusalem, so that God had to send persecution to scatter them abroad, that they might go every where preaching the word. This persecution broke out in connection with the death of Stephen, who died the first Christian martyr, crying, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. When the secessionists left Hampton, I tried to pray for our enemies, but I could not pray that they might succeed in their rebellion, and so God taught me to pray that if they died in battle, penitent, they might be forgiven.

"To go into all the world and preach as they should do, the disciples had to be cured of their prejudices, and so God let down before Peter a sheet full of all kinds of animals, teaching him, in his figure, not to call any thing common or unclean that He had cleansed. And God is my witness," exclaimed the aged saint, "that I have ever told masters and fellow-servants that God is no respecter of persons, but that in every nation, he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted of him; that whoever, free or bond, white or colored, believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; and he that believeth not shall be damned."

In the evening, Mr. Lockwood says, they held their first service in their new quarters near the fort. It of course partook very much of the nature of a dedication. There were about two hundred and fifty present. Had it been generally known that the service was to be held there, the attendance would have been much larger. 'We need' says Mr. Lockwood, 'a house of worship for this people, and should not the matter be brought before the public and the churches? A plain building, suitable for a church and school-house could be put up for $500. I feel sure that the benevolence of the North would be delighted to furnish that sum.'

Mr. Lockwood adds: 'It is impossible for me to give you an adequate description of the meeting last Sabbath evening. A large number of those present were from a distance of thirty and sixty miles, representing a great variety of slaveholding peculiarities. One man rejoiced in his improved condition, having come from a place where slaves had been shot for fear of their falling into the hands of the Union. A young man, who has been at the fort three months, said he was thankful and hopeful; he believed that God was mysteriously but surely working out deliverance; he dismissed all fear of going back into the hands of his former masters. God, said he, is working in a mysterious way to fulfil his counsels of liberty for the oppressed. His remarks were full of native eloquence, and couched in good language.

'Brother Sheldon and myself,' says Mr. Lockwood, congratulated them on their new and comfortable quarters, and their good and warm clothing, and exhorted them to cultivate a spirit of gratitude and hope, and to behave so as to force all to say, these men are worthy of liberty. We earnestly asked their prayers for the Quartermaster and Sergeant in charge of them, and for the Union and all of its officers, civil and military. Our remarks met with a hearty response. I cannot describe their gratitude to us, to all the friends at the North who have remembered them, and to the Committee that had sent us to go in and out before them. Mr. Lockwood adds:

'Tuesday was the day for the distribution, of clothing, and O, what gladness was awakened by the benefactions of Northern charity. A large number were well supplied and those who were not, were assured that they would be soon. I have just received a letter from Brother W. L. Coan, of Chelsea, Mass., containing a promise of thirty-two more barrels of clothing, in addition to the large quantity already sent. This dear brother is doing a vast service to this people, and will receive a large reward when God recompenses for what is done for his little ones. Last evening we held a prayer-meeting at our colored Brother Pritter's, in the Red Cottage, east of the Seminary. His little child lay before us a corpse, and the occasion was a very solemn one.'

AMUSEMENTS.

That "tea," at the Shiloh church, under the auspices of the Rev. James M. Gloucester, was a glorious success. The temporary pastor of this distinguished flock, seemed perfectly at home, in his half fatherly, half politico-leadership method of moving among and leading along his family. It seemed such as a large and patriotic family party should be in these stirring times, with a good and loved father in their midst. There was a fine turn out of the beauty and manliness of the congregation, with a fair sprinkling of old Knickerbockers who worship elsewhere, but whom the good things for the physical and intellectual man, had attracted across the fence denominational. The speeches were brief, pointed and hopeful. The Rev. Mr. Gloucester opened with a vigorous and timely speech, in which, at times his clear ringing voice, made us listen for the boom of cannon and the clash of arms (by the way, we think there is a good deal of fight hid beneath that reverend breast bone), rather than the clatter of cups and saucers.

Of the other speakers; we think the Rev. Mr. Thompson of Siloan church, Brooklyn, evidently mistook what has been the mission of the church, for what ought to be the mission of the church: and his statement, "that the present enlightened state of the public mind on the great moral and political questions of the day is due to the Church," is broadly contradicted by the facts, in our land, at least, where this enlightenment has been shed forth not only without the aid, but in the teeth of the opposition of the Church.

The Rev. Mr. Peath———— of ———— is a capital off-hand speaker, yet it occurred to our youthful fancy that we heard very similar remarks made many years ago, by James Hudson in reply to Rev. Dr. Leavitt, in Shiloh church; and the initiated then claimed it was all—masonry.

Rev. Geo. W. Levere, in the poise of his head, the tone of his voice, and the impromptu sprightliness of his vivid remarks, reminded us strongly of his colored brother, the minister of a fashionable Episcopal church in this city; we do not mean St. Phillip's.

The remarks of Prof. Wm. J. Wilson were the gem of the evening. The topic was the glorious "future of our youth."—On this theme the Professor spread himself, in a few extemporaneous remarks. He knew and felt that he was successful, for the gaze of the young was fixed on him (especially of the gentler sex). He felt and enjoyed the magnetic triumph of the hour; and in conclusion brought down the house.

The delicious incense of applause carried us away into the halls of eloquence. When we "came too" sufficiently, we indulged in the excellent viands which were profusely spread out before the audience.

We repeat, the tea was a success, the pastor was at home with his flock, and the flock with their pastor. We would suggest that our other churches might get up similar re-unions; the general result would be very good.

THE GRAND MUSICAL FESTIVAL which took place at Williamsburg, on the evening of Wednesday, Dec. 11th, under the superior management of Mr. J. A. Trower, was a brilliant affair, the company being large and highly respectable, the music fine, and the comforts provided "for the inner man" abundant, and fully coming up to the standard of the most fastidious epicure; and then, in addition to these desirable features, the novel one introduced by Mr. Trower, tight rope walking, was a perfect success. Prof. La Martieu, the celebrated performer, astonished and delighted the company with his astounding feats, such as walking the tight rope blindfolded, with his hands and feet chained together, hanging to the rope by his feet with head down, beating the drum, and performing in other ways equally astonishing. Taking the festival as a whole, considering its entire management fell upon Mr. Trower alone, it was the most successful and satisfactory entertainment given in Williamsburg for years, and illustrates what can be accomplished by energetic management.

THE FESTIVAL AT SHILOH CHURCH and the goods for the "contraband" at Fortress Monroe.—The goods gathered by the friends of the slave at Shiloh church were boxed for shipment on the evening of the 12th inst. The duty of making the closing speech was assigned by the Rev. Mr. Gloucester to the Rev. John Raymond. It is hardly worth while to say that his part was well performed. Mr. Raymond being a native of Virginia, delivered such a speech as he said would be delivered by Aunt Fillicy or Uncle Cudjoe, when they should examine the goods at the Fort. His remarks being delivered in broken English, kept the house in a continual roar of laughter.

After this, a Mr. ———, of Brooklyn, sung an anti-slavery song, and as the last stanza is suitable to the present time, we give it below:

"O God of love, look from above,
In mercy on the slave;
Let blessed peace bring his release,
Let truth So strong to save.
When comes the day, as come it must,
That chains shall crumble into dust,
We'll all hurra, both near and far,
Hurra, hurra, hurra!"

After a little time was spent in social chit-chat, Mrs. Henry Ross, of Brooklyn, was introduced, and proceeded to make a neat little presentation speech, at the conclusion of which, she, in the name of the Committee, presented the Trustess of the church with sixty-one dollars, as the first installment of the amount realized from the Festival,

The managers of this affair deserve great credit for the manner in which it was gotten up.

The air of refinement pervading the assemblage, and the literary exercises; made it an entertainment of unalloyed pleasure.

There was one amusing feature about the affair, and that was the amount of labor put upon the Brooklynites.

The Chairman was from Brooklyn; the first speaker, Rev. Chas. Thompson, was from Brooklyn; the second speaker, Rev. C. H. Cain; the third speaker, Prof. Wilson; the fourth speaker, Rev. G. W. Levere; the singer, and the last speaker, were all from Brooklyn. Now, whether this was a plan of the Chairman to show that Brooklyn could do something, or could fail to do, we know not; but one thing we could not fail to notice, and that was the great anxiety of each Brooklyn speaker to give place to the eloquent gentleman that was to follow him. Whether they had the "sentiments" before they came to the house, they were obliged to speak, too, we know not; but if we were one of them, "if ever we caught" that Chairman, "on the hip, we'd feed fat the ancient grudge we bore him."

We were pleased to notice the presence of many of our most distinguished citizens, including many of the clergy, and their ladies. It was past midnight ere the company departed. WANDERER.

There is quite a demand, at Washington, for Generals who know how to write proclamations. There is an equal demand "down South" for people who will read said proclamations when printed. We would respectfully suggest to government that it would be wisest, in this emergency, to abolish the system of proclamations entirely, except such as can be sent ashore, or inland, from eight and ten-inch rifled cannon; these will be sure to reach, to be listened to and felt, precisely where they can do most good. And if any of our beleaguering commanders have an insatiable desire to be "sweet" in the rebels, let such be forwarded to the enemy in a "shell-bath."—We think that we have wasted entirely too much time in trying to prove that against the rebels, "the pen is mightier than the sword."

SLAVE-CATCHING BY THE SOLDIERS.—Senator Sumner read to Secretary Cameron, on the 12th inst., a warm and indignant letter from Gov. Andrew, remonstrating against the employment of Massachusetts men in the disgraceful business of slave-catching, as had been done on the Upper Potomac. Secretary Cameron promptly referred the letter to Gen. Stone, with the emphatic request that he would see to it that the men of color who entered the camps under his command were treated liberally, in the spirit of the orders concerning fugitives from slavery which the Secretary of War had already given to the commanding generals.

JUSTICE TO A COLORED MAN.—A few weeks ago, a young colored man by the name of Wm. Reilly sued the captain of the ship Gen. Simpson, with whom he had sailed, for assault and battery, made on shipboard, and obtained a verdict of $100; since then he has obtained similar verdicts against the first and second mates as participants.

DIED.

BRADY.—In Williamsburgh, Dec. 11th, Mrs. Margaret Ann Brady, aged 68 years.

Mrs Brady had been a member of Zion Church of New York and of Williamsburgh, for thirty-two years. The night before she died she exclaimed—"The Lord is with me in all things!" "As for me I will behold Thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with Thy likeness."—Psalms—17.15.

"My suffering time shall soon be o'er,
Then shall I sigh and weep no more!
My ransomed soul shall soar away,
To sing Thy praise in endless day.

M. M.

PAYNE.—In Brooklyn, Dec. 17th, of hasty consuption, Margaret Emeline Esther Payne, aged 15 years, 8 months and 13 days.

Special Notices.

A FAIR! A FAIR!!

The Ladies of the

THIRD BAPTIST CHURCH,

WILLIAMSBURGH,

will open a FAIR in the lower part of said church, commencing on TUESDAY, Dec. 24, and will

CONTINUE EIGHT DAYS,

closing with

A GRAND ENTERTAINMENT

On the 2d of JANUARY, 1862,

at which time the Committee pledge themselves to spare no pains to make the Entertainment agreeable to all who may favor them with their company.

Admission to the Fair, . . . 6 cents.
Admission to the Entertainment, : 25 cents.

COMMITTEE.

Mrs. M. A. GALE, 1st Directress;
" M. GILES, 2d "
" JANE L. FISHER, Sec.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS TO YOU!

A Grand Entertainment

Will be given at

GRENADA HALL, 112 Myrtle Avenue,

BROOKLYN,

On CHRISTMAS Evening, Dec. 25th, 1861.

The managers being determined that this shall be the most BLILLIANT AFFAIR of the season, will spare no pains to accomplish this end.

Prof. H. MOORE'S splendid BAND has been engaged for the occasion.

Cards for Admission and Supper, 50 Cents.

REFRESHMENTS EXTRA.

The Myrtle Avenue cars pass the Hall all night, starting from Fulton Ferry.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

J. C. BROUGHTON,
J. F. DEVILLERS, 246 Gold St.,

where tickets may be had.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Of the A. M. E. Bethel Church, Second street, between Avenues B and C, under the pastoral charge of the Rev. J. D. S. HALL, will celebrate their Ninth Anniversary, on Thursday evening, Dec 26th, 1861, on which occasion a great display of talent by juveniles, will be presented.

Singing under the direction of Prof. N. R. ASHBY. J. H. CRUGER, Sup't; I. J. M. HODGE, Sec'y.

Tickets of admission 12 cents; no half price. Doors open at 6 1-2 o'clock; exercises to commence at 7 1-2 o'clock.

N. B.—At the conclusion of the exercises a Collation will be served up in the basement of the church. Admission 6 cents; Refreshmets extra.

No postponement on account of the weather.

REV. J. N. GLOUCESTER

Will deliver a discourse, next Sabbath evening, at Shiloh Church. Subject—"Unity of the Human Race, or Perfect Oneness of the Human Family in Origin and Destiny, from the Irresistable Logic and Truth of the Bible."

LADIES' FAIR.

The Ladies of the Bethesda Congregational Church—Rev. Charles B. Ray, Pastor—will ho a FAIR in their Church, cor. Sixth Avenue and 41st street, for the benefit of the Church, commencing Dec. 24th (inst.), to continue through the week, until Friday evening, when it will close. Ice Cream and other Refreshments for sale. Admittance 10 cents.

INFORMATION WANTED

Of Mrs. DOROTHA SMITH, formerly Miss Mingo, of Pictou, Nova Scotia. Any information in regard to her sent to Mrs. THOMPSON, 4 Catharine Lane, will be thankfully received. 21 2t

---

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

FESTIVAL OF ST. JOHN, THE EVANGELIST.

Stone Square Lodge, No. 6, will celebrate the Festival of St. John, the Evangelist, by a Public Installation of their officers for the ensuing year, by the M. W. United Grand Lodge, of the State of New York, and a Musical Entertainment, at their Hall, 309 Grand St., near 11th St., Williamsburgh, on Friday evening, Dec. 27, 1861, upon which occasion all the Lodges working under the above named jurisdiction will be present in full Masonic clothing.

ADMISSION 25 CENTS.

Refreshments will be abundantly supplied, as well as a splendid Band of music.

COMMITTEE.

P. W. RAY, M. PINE,
L. T. WHARTON, GEO. POOLE,
WM. R. CONNOR, L. TREADWELL.

Tickets may be obtained at the door.

"UNITED WE STAND, DIVIDED WE FALL."

FIRST ANNUAL BALL AND SUPPER

OF THE

COLORED SEAMEN'S

BOARDING-HOUSE KEEPERS

AND OUT-FITTERS

Of the City of New York, will be given on Thursday Eve'g, Dec. 26th, 1861,

AT THE

METROPOLITAN ASSEMBLY ROOMS,

178 PRINCE ST.

The Proprietors of this Association will spare no pains to make this Entertainment one of the most entertaining nights of the season, and also assure the public that nothing on their part will be wanting to render them happy.

Music under direction of Mr. J. DOUGLASS.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

William E. Slater, Henry Beverley,
George F. Thompson, William Butler.

The Floor will be under the gentlemanly management of Mr. GEORGE H. WILLIAMS and Mr. JOHN WILSON.

Tickets, admitting Gent. and Lady, $2; Single Ticket, $1.

Tickets to be had of the following Committee:

George F. Thompson, 4 Catherine Lane.
William E. Slater, 3 Catherine Lane.
William Butler, 1 Benson St.
Manuel Gilbert, 42 Baxter St.
Susan Williams, 105 Park St.
Henry Beverley, 76 Roosevelt St.
Albro Lyons, 20 Vandewater St.
Samuel Porter, 21 Batavia St.
Charles M. Fortes, 199 South St.
William Spriggs, 1 Mechanics' Alley.
Thomas Lewis, 49 Marion St.

Tickets may also be had at the following places:—Eldorado, 154 Church St., Messrs. Suel & Spencer; Geo. H. Williams, 189 Church St.; Francis & Rogers, 56 Leonard St.; R. D. Kinney, 178 Prince St.; Robt. Tappen, 42 Ridge St.; J. A. Trower, 279 S. 4th St., Williamsburgh; Phineas Spriggs, 37 N. Bowery.

WM. E. SLATER, Pres.
HENRY BEVERLEY, Treas.
G. F. THOMPSON, Sec'y.
WM. BUTLER, Cashier. 18 4t

GEORGE OTON'S

QUADRILLE BAND.

BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC, at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,

PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St, and with G. Oton. 18tf

MASONIC

DIRECTORY,

FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W.G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwick, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, New York City.

LECTURES.

THE UNDERSIGNED is prepared to fill engagements to deliver single Lectures, on the following subjects:

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY WITH REFERENCE TO NATURAL THEOLOGY;

THE ADAPTATIONS OF THE EARTH, OR TERRESTRIAL ADAPTATIONS;

MENTAL PHILOSOPHY

THE ANCIENT HONORS OF THE BLACK AND COLORED RACES OF THE EARTH;

—Being a series of popular discourses recently delivered, founded on the following texts:

1. "Look not upon me because I am black." [Song of Sol.—1.6.
2. "Princes shall come out of Egypt." [Psalm 68—31.
3. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin." [Jer.—13.23.
4. "Cursed be Canaan.' —Gen.—9 25.
5. "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus." Philemon.

TERMS—The lecturer's passage both ways, and one-fourth of profits.

[From the Detroit Daily Advertiser, March 1, 1860.]

"Mr. BERRY'S lecture last night is stated to have displayed much thought, and to have been in every respect meritorious."

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delsart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 " . . . . P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:

10½ o'clock, ... A. M.
" . . . . P. M.
" . . . . P. M.

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:

10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.

12–1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—

3 o'clock, ... P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship: —

10½ . . . . A. M.
3 . . . . P. M.
7½ . . . . P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn. 13-1y.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.

10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.

Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.

Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Christmas Week Among the American Slaves.

READY, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 10TH,

Beadle's Christmas Story,

MAUM GUINEA

AND HER PLANTATION CHILDREN;

OR,

Christmas Week Among the American Slaves.

BY MRS. VICTOR,

Author of "Alice Wilde," etc.

Louisiana Plantation Life during the Holidays is seized upon by the author to weave around the barbecues, night-dancing, story-telling and love-making of the Slaves a romance embodying all the tragedy and pathos, the sorrow and enjoyment, the happiness and humor of Slave Life and its two-fold experiences. The negro and white characters introduced are all "representative"—each illustrative of some peculiar phase of a strange history.

220 Pages Complete, beautifully illustrated. Price Twenty Cents. For sale by all Booksellers, Newsdealers and Army Sutlers. Sent postpaid on receipt of price. BEADLE & CO., Publishers, New York. 20tf

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

BOSTON HOUSE,

MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,

105 Park Street, near Mott.

NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,

FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,

In all its branches—such as

BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH

GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,

Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.

18 26t

PETER S. PORTER,

GENERAL AGENT FOR

HOUSE LETTING,

170 WEST 29TH STREET,

NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate LADIES and GENTLEMEN with FIRST CLASS BOARD, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand. 16 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,

EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.

RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.

26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING

IN BROOKLYN,

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston-st., or of the Janitor 225 West 15th-st.

CLOTHING! CLOTHING!

Gentlemen if you want a Nice, Fashionable, well-fitted Garment at a much Lower Price than can be bought at any other establishment in this or in any other city, please call at the Merchant Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,

BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.

DON'T FORGET,

168 EWEN ST.,
Williamsburg.

9 1y.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,

EMPIRE STATE HOTEL

AND

UNION HOUSE,

541 BROOME STREET,

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS

IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS. The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.

10 1y.

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS!

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co., N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.

10 5t

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 18½ Suffolk, Street. Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St., N.

PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE

BY

MRS. W. S. WILKINS & Co

610 PINE, ABOVE SIXTH STREET,

PHILADELPHIA 7 13t.

LADIES' FURNISHING STORE.

CHILDREN'S CLOTHING

READY-MADE AND MADE TO ORDER, BY

MRS. S. WILKINS & CO.,

610 Pine, above Sixth Street, Philadelphia.
7-13t.

MRS. ANDERSON,

CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate. 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tt

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

HENRY G. LEASK,

HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS AND FURS,

COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.

Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) REspectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

MRS. E. LEONARD,

FASHIONABLE

DRESS MAKER,

25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.

Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies, . . $2,50
" " Gentleman, . . 3,00
Lodging per week, . . 75

yt

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,

CARD AND JOB PRINTER!

219 CENTRE STREET NEW YORK.

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts, 2 tf.

POCKET WATER-FILTER

AND

DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weighs one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing

DAY & CO.,
3-13t Box 464 P.O., Newark, N. J.

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and the public that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 60 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK. 4-1

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE LOWER POTOMAC, near Budd's Ferry, Md., Dec. 7, 1861.

DEAR ANGLO:—I perceive that the weather-cock Bennett has commenced again his heavy heading, and I expect will soon commence his grand and lofty tumbling. He is now trying the water, but I am afraid that he will find it a little too warm this time. He says any attempt to carry into operation the sentiments of Secretary Cameron, would be attended with disastrous consequences, and would lead to the resignation of McClellan and the disorganization of the army. A very good scare, but it wont do this time. The fact is plain that this McClellan has been at the head of our army now for some time, but nothing very heavy has yet been done. Were he to remain inactive during the whole winter, he will be cried down as heartily as he was applauded on his victory at Laurel Hill. McClellan, as a soldier, knows there are a great many slaves employed by the Confederates, and that their emancipation will of course weaken their points. Can we suppose for a moment that he would oppose it, when the policy is already laid down to arm the slaves in the seceded States? I say it knowingly, for I have it from the very best authority. If negro slavery is the cause of this rebellion, and we must believe it is, when we read such resolutions as were passed at the recent meeting of the Wheeling Convention, and published in your paper of to-day.

What more do we want? What more can any one ask of the people of Virginia? They confess that slavery is wrong, and and wish to be relieved of it wish to wash themselves of the sin: wish to serve God compactly. Yet we find croaking toady Bennett upholding the very cause of the trouble, aiding and abetting secession by trying to perpetuate that cause which even the rebels themselves wish to be freed from. In his issue of the 5th he says—"Precipitate action on the emancipation question." I do not think that any action can be too precipitate.

To-day I saw twenty-eight women and children—contrabands—on their way to Washington, to be set free. They were brought from Mathias Point by Col. Graham, of the New York 5th Regiment Sickles Brigade. The Colonel went over from Port Tobacco, where he was stationed, without any orders, and is now under arrest for so doing, but he has the consolation of knowing that he has made happy nearly one hundred souls. Indeed, I was moved to tears, but they were tears of gladness to see the joyous faces of those who but a short time since were bondmen, and now are breathing free air. God speed the day when all will be free!

There is no quiet now; every one is on the qui vive. The Southern army stands firm—the Federals quietly but steadily advancing; now the move of a Brigade or Division here and then there. Here on the Lower Potomac we are face to face—they on the Virginia, and we on the Maryland shore; it is like a game of chess between two great players, but, sir, the crash is coming.

I see the President in his message proposes to recognize the independence of Hayti and Liberia, probably with a view to colonizing the slave portion of the Southern population. It will be a grand scheme, but one that will, like all others, fail. The black man is here, and must remain here until the end of time.

Since writing the above, I have learned that all of the men that were brought from Virginia by Col. Graham, are retained at the Subsistence depot, at Liverpool Point, and paid by the government 8 dollars per month and found. When their services are no longer needed they will be at liberty to go where and when they please.

We were the recipients this week of a visit from Major Davis, Inspector General of McClellan's staff. He was accompanied by the Count de Paris, who is also a member of the staff, with the rank of Captain; also J. P. Stout, member of Congress from Oregon, who, and Major Davis, entered into a debate on the question so important now, viz.: What shall be done with the Slaves? They both were of the opinion its solution should not be permitted to occupy any of the now precious time of Congress, but should be "let alone" until the war is over, and then decided. The Major is a Massachusetts man, but I think more of a doughface than old Buck. He is one of the cringing kind, who are willing to do anything for the South. The Count is more republican than his companion, and thinks that slavery should be abolished immediately, and that it would be a death-blow to secession to emancipate all the slaves.

To-day the monotony of camp life was broken by the arrival at our headquarters of four colored men, who left the home of their childhood four weeks ago, and by travelling at night in the woods, they reached the Potomac on last Sunday, and within a mile of one of the rebel camps. They built themselves a scow, and crossed the river yesterday morning. They were brought before General Hooker. He expressed himself as glad to see them, and told them they could go to work for the government at Liverpool Point, or go where they pleased. As they had no means to carry them North, I advised them to go to work for the Quartermaster. They will be well treated, well fed, well clothed, and paid for their labor. They appeared very happy when told they were free. They formerly belonged to one Lewis Fielding, on the Rappahanock River, Virginia.

I think that our people at home should prepare an asylum for the females that get away now from the South. There are a great many of them that have babes, and of course cannot shift for themselves at present.

DUKE.

P. S.—One 64-pound shot from the Virginia shore has just buried itself within 20 feet of where I am sitting. Gay compliments, these shot.

A VISIT TO CANADA.

MR. EDITOR:—After an indifferent season at Niagara Falls, I left there, a few weeks ago, in company with my mother, for Canada, the land of the fugitive, of which class not less than one hundred crossed the Niagara River during last summer. Many are found at St. Catharines, and not a few at Toronto and the intermediate towns. Most of them are well cared for, but it cannot be denied that the people of Canada who have been receiving with kindness a constant stream of them for years, are now beginning to show signs of indifference, growing out, in a great measure, of their apprehension of trouble from our domestic difficulties. The press generally of Canada have but little sympathy with the North. I noticed in every town military organizations are being made, and in which the blacks are taking a prominent part. I will here say that the Haytian movement meets with much opposition, although its friends perhaps may hold their own.

I noticed in passing along that the farms were in a fine condition, and the wheat crop will probably be heavy. Passing Oshawa, Bowmansville, Port Hope, Coburg, Belleville, Prescott, the meanest looking place in Canada, we reached Ottowa, and were driven to the Union Hotel, one of the finest in the city, and of which Mr. Peter Armstrong is proprietor. It contains ninety finely furnished rooms. Mr. Armstrong kindly conducted us through his entire establishment, and took pains to make us as comfortable as possible while under his roof. We arrived just after a snow storm of forty hours' duration, and consequently had an opportunity of riding around the city in a cutter.

Ottawa is the future capital of Canada, and contains a population of 15,000, of which number there are, I learn, only six colored men and no colored females. Of the former one is a cook, one a hotel keeper, and two are barbers. Mr. Geo. W. Daly, formerly of Troy, keeps the Royal Shaving Saloon at the Hotel de Champaigne. I drove to the Parliament buildings, where I found the architects, Messrs. Fuller and James, who showed me through what will be, I think, the finest edifices on the American continent, for both durability and architectural design. They are in a forward state, the two wings being under roof. But for the weather the main building would have been completed to its last story. The buildings are all fire-proof, the beams being of iron, from England. One of the contractors told me there were over one thousand hands at work on them. Potsdam stone and granite are used in their construction, brought from New York State and Ohio. The buildings have a front of 480 feet, and are 360 feet in depth. There is a tower 260 feet high. The library is in a rear circular building 90 feet in circumference.—These buildings are on a beautiful, elevated site on the banks of the Ottowa river, and cover four acres of ground. From their top a fine view of the surrounding country is had. The Chandiere Falls are in sight, presenting in miniature the great Niagara Falls; the only difference between them is, the latter are grand and awful, and the former wild and romantic. The "Devil's Hole" is a gulf nearly round, with water running into it from holes and crevices, without any visible outlet. Mr. Clarke, a gentleman who lives near by this place, told me he had used a chain 360 feet long in search of a bottom without a satisfactory result. It is said that more water finds its way over these falls than at Niagara, and more mills are driven by them.

Ottowa is a great lumber depot, and is well stocked at the present time, there being no demand from the United States. At this place there are three papers published—a weekly, semi-weekly, and tri-weekly. After leaving Ottowa we soon pass into the Lake of Two Mountains, on the North shore of which is an Indian village called Kanastoka. Here they have a Catholic chapel. The village looks clean and tidy, and in its rear are seven small chapels or stations, all visible from the boat, the principal one being on the top of a mountain four miles off. I was told that the Indians make a pilgrimage once a year to this place, and their road is planted with flowers and shrubbery. The lake is a pretty sheet of water, from three to twelve miles in width, and about ten miles in length. It abounds in white and other fish, of which large quantities are found in the small lakes on the summit of the mountain.

In my next I will speak of Montreal and her objects of interest.

JOHN W. WILLIAMS.

PRAYING FOR THE SLAVES.—A recent number of the "Washington Republican" states:

The Chaplain of the House yesterday prayed specially and distinctly "for the slave," which sounded rather strangely in such a place and in a slaveholding community.

LETTER FROM TORONTO.

TORONTO, Dec. 11th, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:—Since my last communication I have been waiting with the hope that something of importance would turn up, whereby I might be enabled to lay before your numerous readers something that might repay them for their time and trouble.

It is necessary now-a-days to be careful of what one writes, to ensure a perusal of their thoughts and selections, as various are the subjects, and important are many of them, and too with such ability are they brought out, that one frequently feels abased at his own productions.

In brief, I must confess that after all my waiting, and searching, I have been unable to fall upon anything worthy of more than a passing notice.

I promised you in my last to inform you of the result of Mr. Watkins' lectures in the Haytian interest, when last here. Only six left this city for Hayti on the 25th ult., and I have not been able as yet to find a person that was acquainted with any one of the number that left here as aforesaid; therefore I fancy they were not inhabitants of Toronto, and providing they were, I am not certain of the fact that they were influenced by Mr. Watkins' lectures, as before he came here some twenty or more were spoken of as being ready to leave, at the aforesaid time. I know of one very BIG man, with a very big family, who has been leaving respectively with every batch that have left here, and singularly enough to state he is still in Toronto, and the supposition is, that the aforesaid BIG man has a slight and quiet notion of braving the many difficulties he and his big family have to encounter in Canada, the remainder of his life, so it is whispered around, and so it is I fancy with a large portion of that twenty or more spoken of.

The opening lecture, under the auspices of the "Association for the Education and Elevation of the Colored People of Canada," was delivered on the 4th inst., in the B. M. E. chapel (Rev. Mr. Turpin), by the Rev. Wellington Jeffers, editor of the "Christian Guardian" (organ of the Wesleyans of Canada); subject—"Conversation: its Object, Subject and Quality." It was dealt with in a truly eloquent and masterly style, showing its use in the obtaining of knowledge by comparative ideas, &c., &c., dwelling much upon the right subjects of conversation, he concluded by urging upon the audience as a right quality of conversation the maintainance of truth and sincerity. The lecture was listened to with marked attention. Mr. Hiram Montier, the acting chairman of the Board, presided on the occasion.

At an informal meeting held in the Queen street Baptist chapel last evening, a committee was appointed to arrange for a public meeting to take steps to assist the ex-slaves at Fortress Monroe, Va., and also to discourage emigration from the American continent, or from this portion of it.

G. W. C.

LETTER FROM NEWARK.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 16, 1861.

MR. EDITOR: The startling foreign news in this morning's New York papers may develope events in our country, bearing on our condition and relations, far beyond the most visionary anticipations of any of our keenest scented "leaders."

The roar of the British Lion may finally compel our government to not only strike the shackles from the "contrabands" of rebels, but to proclaim liberty and freedom to all in the land.

Our beloved ANGLO must now respond to the electrifying sentiment of our people, by having on hand weekly its biggest kind of "say!"

On last Wednesday evening—11th inst.—the Crystal Union Fountain Lodge of G. S. and D. of S., in this city, celebrated the first anniversary with much eclat. Addresses were delivered by Bro. Holshart, the original founder of this order, by Sister E. Bates, and J. W. B. Smith. The members, while in full regalia, were introduced to the audience. Ample refreshments were furnished by the ladies, good music, vocal, by the choir, under our Falstaffian friend, Prof. A. T. Cook, and instrumental, by Hinchcliff.

On Thursday the annual examination of the Plane street public Grammar school—Principal, W. G. Strong; Assistant, Miss Louise C. Waters—took place, but being unable to be present, and grieviously disappointed in not receiving a promised report, I cannot SAY more.

SKIMMER.

LETTER FROM REV. JAMES LYNCH.

MR. EDITOR:—Your faithful but not infallible correspondent from Washington, Mr. "Box," in a letter published in your issue of the 7th inst., has done a little injustice, which we believe was unintentional. I have no objection to "Box" acting as my Censor, if he gives me fair play. He remarks that the white churches observed the day "as a day of prayer and other religious exercises; but our colored congregations, with a very few exceptions, made it a day and night of frolic." This is a mistake no colored congregation in the District assembled that day for any purpose save religious worship. Now, for the night, he does not say how the white people observed the night; but he says "Mr. Lynch's congregation observed the night by giving a public supper." The intimation is that I paid no regard to the day. Well, the fact is, that the undersigned duly appointed religious service for the day, and thought that he violated no propriety in striving to raise money to pay a church debt—not being conscious of invading the administration—invested sacredness of the day.

JAMES LYNCH,
Georgetown, D. C.

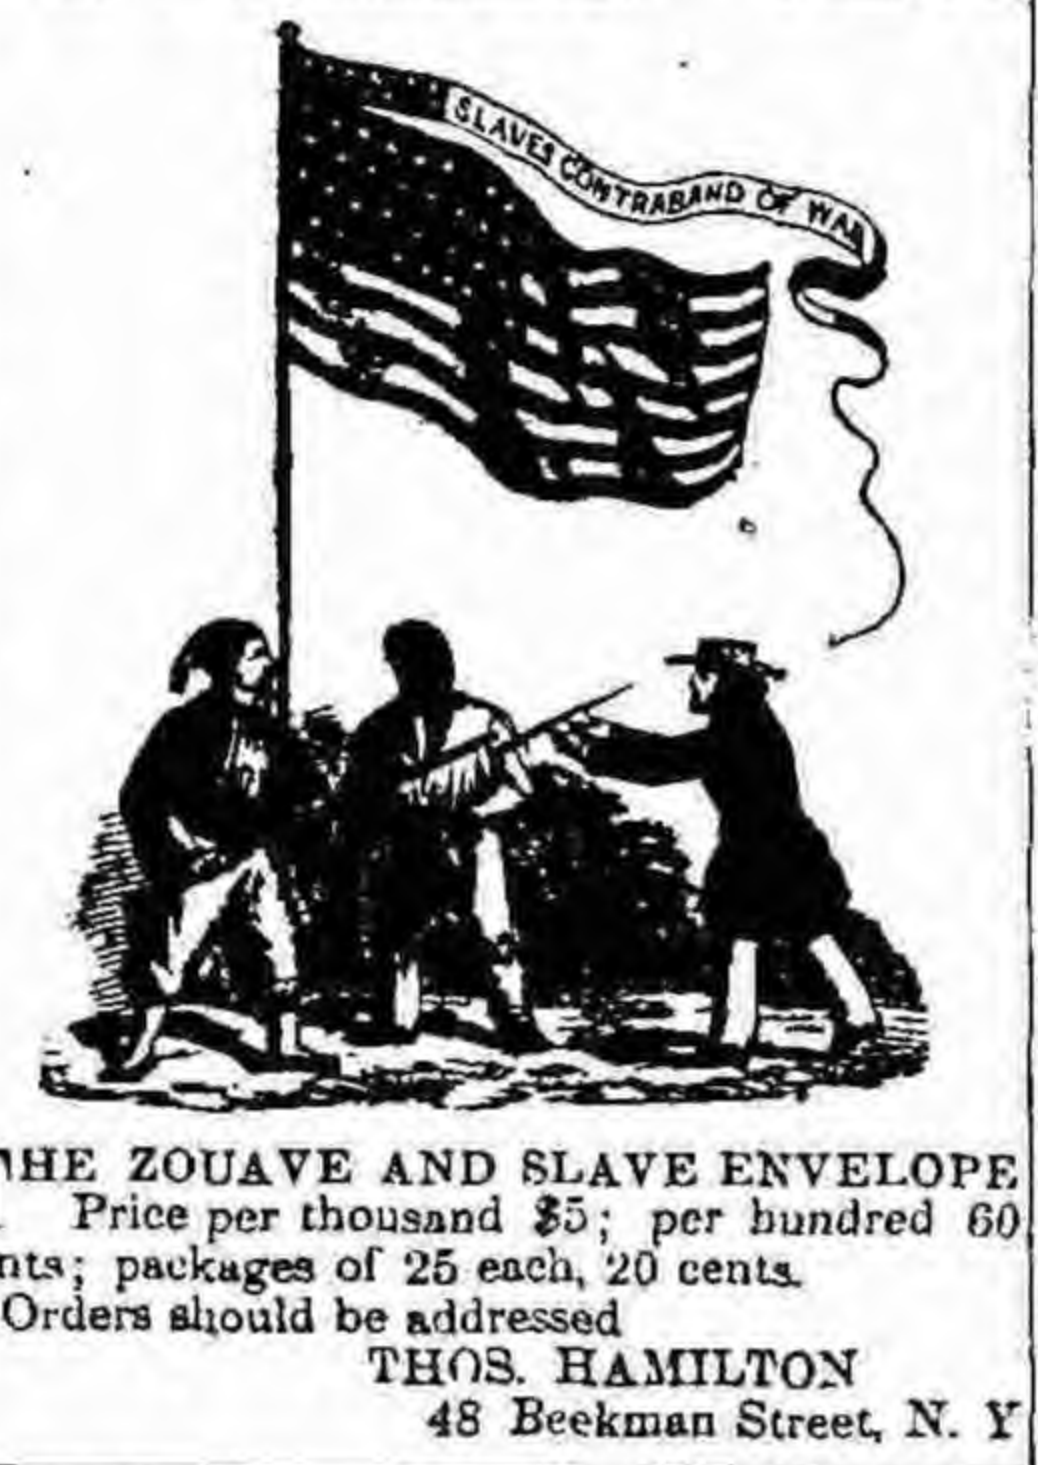
TAKING AN INVENTORY.—The Charleston Mercury of the 15th ult., says that one of General Drayton's negroes, from Hilton Head, reports that Commander Drayton, of the Federal Fleet, who is a brother to the General, visited the plantation of the latter some days ago and took a complete inventory of the negroes, crops, &c., now on the place.

The Richmond papers suggest possibly he considers it his share of the spoils of the expedition, and had a desire to know how much he was worth.

SAMPLES.—A good story is told of the late W. E. Burton, which we have never seen in print. While traveling on a steamboat down the Hudson, he seated himself at the table and called for some beefsteak. The waiter furnished him with a small strip of the article, such as travellers are usually put off with. Taking it upon his fork, and turning it over and examining it with one of his peculiar serious looks, the comedian coolly remarked, "Yes, that's it; bring me some."—Hartford Press.

MR. CHASE'S OPINION OF REBELS.—At a dinner given at the Union Club to the Hon. S. P. Chase, on the occasion of his last visit to New York city, he said in a speech made in reply to a toast: "The blackest negro in South Carolina, black as midnight, is, in my sight, whiter than the whitest rebel." Among the gentlemen present who vehemently cheered this sentiment was Wm. B. Astor.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent liniament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers, Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc for washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

P. A. WHITE,

Corner of Frankfort & Gold Sts.,
GENERAL
COMMISSION MERCHANT,
KEEPS CONSTANTLY ON HAND
A FRESH AND PURE ASSORTMENT
OF
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS
GENUINE
LUBIN'S EXTRACTS
AND OTHER PERFUMERY,
FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES, FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA SEGARS, &C., &C.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS
carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S
VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR
FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH, AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Gray.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea-voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hair-brush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off, always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S
STRENGTHENING PLASTER.
AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR
LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT, SPRAINS, BRUISES, &c., &c

Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly servicable

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent relief from its use, as it keeps a continued heat, acting as a gentle counter irritant, removing the inflamation of the stomach without breaking the skin. Persons engaged in sedentary pursuits should use these Plasters constantly, as they give strength to parts weakened by constant sitting and stooping.

For STRAINS and SPRAINS they are infallible affording relief immediately and without fail.

For RHEUMATISM there is no external application equal to them, promoting the general circulation, and

PREVENTING A RETURN
of the excrutiating pain.

These plasters are prepared with great care, and of the best material, and to prevent fraud the name of the originator is placed on the back of each one. In purchasing ask for BADEAU'S PLASTER. See that the name BADEAU is written on the back, or you will be deceived.

P. A. WHITE, Sole Proprietor.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Billious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS;

EMBELLISHMENT.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
Music.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship.—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Rober Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture —by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with

Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.

BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker
between Broadway & Crosby St. 4t4t

Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G. B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Merce Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Horland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—b Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sell Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass. One vol., 12 mo. 461 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Ife of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Lonisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation. 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Associatian 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory; also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing. &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added.

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
00 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly on ehundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 22. NEW YORK, DECEMBER 28, 1861. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African.
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY,
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
NO. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths,, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART I.

By myself, the Lord of Ages,
I have sworn to right the wrong;
I have pledged my word unbroken,
For the weak against the strong.
[H. BEECHER STOWE

CHAPTER XXIV.

A FLYING CLOUD.

Safely in Mobile Henry landed without a question, having on the way purchased of a passenger who was deficient of means to bear expenses, a horse by which he made a daring entry into the place. Mounting the animal which was fully caparisoned, he boldly rode to the principal livery establishment, ordering for it the greatest care until his master's arrival.

Hastening into the country he readily found a friend and seclusion in the hut of Uncle Cesar, on the plantation of Gen. Audly. Making no delay, early next morning he returned to the city to effect a special object. Passing by the stable where the horse had been left, a voice loudly cried out;

'There's that negoo boy, now! Hallo, there, boy! didn't you leave a horse here!'

Heeding not the interrogation, but speedily turning the first corner, Henry hastened away and was soon lost among the inhabitants.

'How yeh do, me frien'?' saluted a black man whom he met in a by-street; 'ar' yeh strangeh!'

'Why!' inquired Henry.

'O, nothin'! on'y I hearn some wite men talkin' j's now, an' da say some strange nigga lef' a hoss dar, an'da blev 'e stole 'im, an' da gwine ketch an' put 'im in de jail.'

'If that's all, I live here. Good morning!' rejoined he who soon was making rapid strides in the direction of Georgia.

Every evening found him among the quarters of some plantations, safely secreted in the hut of some faithful, trustworthy slave, with attentive, anxious listeners, ready for an issue. So, on he went with flying haste, from plantation to plantation, till Alabama was left behind him.

In Georgia, though the laws were strict, the negroes were equally hopeful. Like the old stock of Maryland and Virginia blacks from whom they were descended, they manifested a high degree of intelligence for slaves. Receiving their messenger with open arms, the aim of his advent among them spread like fire in a stubble. Everywhere seclusions were held and organizations completed, till Georgia stands like a city at the base of a burning mountain, threatened with destruction by an overflow of the first outburst of lava from above. Clearing the State without an obstruction, he entered that which of all he most dreaded, the haughty South Carolina.

Here the most relentless hatred appears to exist against the negro, who seems to be regarded but as an animated thing of convenience or a domesticated anmial, reared for the service of his master. The studied policy of the whites evidently is to keep the blacks in subjection and their spirits below a sentiment of self-respect. To impress the negro with a sense of his own inferiority is a leading precept of their social system; to be white is the only evidence necessary to establish a claim to superiority. To be a 'master' in South Carolina is to hold a position of rank and title, and he who approaches this the nearest is hightend at least in his own estimation.

These feelings engendered by the whites have been extensively incorporated with the elements of society among the colored people, giving rise to the 'Brown Society' an organized association of mulattos, created by the influence of the whites, for the purpose of preventing pure blooded negroes from entering the social circle, or holding intercourse with them.

Here intelligence and virtue are discarded and ignored, when not in conformity with these regulations. A man with the prowess of Memnon, or a woman with the purity of the 'black doves' of Ethiopia and charms of the 'black virgin' of Solomon, avails them nothing, if the blood of the oppressor, engendered by wrong, predominates not in their veins.

Oppression is the author of all this, and upon the heads of the white masters let the terrible responsibility of this miserable stupidity and ignorance of their mulatto children rest; since to them was left the plan of their social salvation, let upon their consciences rest the penalties of their social damnation.

The transit of the runaway through this State was exceedingly difficult, as no fabrication of which he was capable could save him from the penalties of arrest. To assume freedom would be at once to consign himself to endless bondage, and to acknowledge himself a slave was at once to advertise for a master. His only course of safety was to sleep through the day and travel by night, always keeping the woods.

At a time just at the peep of day when making rapid strides the baying of hounds and soundings of horns were heard at a distance.

Understanding it to be the sport of the chase, Henry made a hasty retreat to the nearest hiding place which presented, in the hollow of a log. On attempting to creep in a snarl startled him, when out leaped the fox, having counterrun his track several times, and sheltered in a fallen sycamore. Using his remedy for distracting dogs, he succeeded the fox in the sycamore, resting in safety during the day without molestation, though the dogs bayed within thirty yards of him, taking a contrary course by the distraction of their scent.

For every night of sojourn in the State he had a gathering, not one of which was within a hut, so closely were the slaves watched by patrol, and sometimes by mulatto and black overseers. These gatherings were always held in the forest. Many of the confidants of the seclusions were the much dreaded runaways of the woods, a class of outlawed slaves, who continually seek the lives of their masters.

One day having again sought retreat in a hollow log where he lay sound asleep, the day being chilly, he was awakened by a cold application to his face and neck, which proved to have been made by a rattlesnake of the largest size, having sought the warmth of his bosom. Henry made a hasty retreat, ever after decling the hollow of a tree. With rapid movements and hasty action, he like a wind cloud, flew through the State of South Carolina, who like 'a thief in the night' came when least expected.

Henry now entered Charleston, the metropolis, and head of the 'Brown Society,' the bane and dread of the blacks in the State, an organization formed through the instrumentality of the whites to keep the blacks and mulattos at variance. To such an extent is the error carried, that the members of the association, rather than their freedom would prefer to see the blacks remain in bondage. But many most excellent mulattos and quadroons condemn with execration this auxiliary of oppression. The eye of the intelligent world is on this 'Brown Society;' and its members when and whenever seen are scanned with suspicion and distrust. May they not be forgiven for their ignorance when proving by repentance their conviction of wrong?

Lying by till late next morning, he entered the city in daylight, having determined boldly to pass through the street, as he might not be known from any common negro. Coming to an extensive wood-yard, he learned by an old black man who sat at the gate that the proprietors were two colored men, one of whom he pointed out, saying:

'Dat is my mausta.'

Approaching a respectable looking mulatto gentleman standing in conversation with a white, his foot resting on a log:

'Do you wish to hire help, sir?' inquired Henry respectfully touching his cap.

'Take off your hat, boy!' ordered the mulatto gentleman. Obeying the order, he repeated the question:

'Who do you belong to?' inquired the gentleman.

'I am free, sir! replied he.

'You a free boy! Are you not a strager here?'

'Yes, sir.'

'Then you lie, sir!' replied the mulatto gentleman, 'as you know that no free negro is permitted to enter this State. You are a runaway, and I'll have you taken up!' at the same time walking through his office looking out at the front door as if for an officer.

Making a hasty retreat, in less than an hour he had left the city, having but a few minutes tarried in the hut of an old black family on the suburb, one of the remaining confidentials and adherents of the memorable South Carolina insurrection, when and to whom he imparted his fearful scheme.

'Ah!' said the old man, throwing his head in the lap of his old wife, with his hands around her neck, both of whom sat near the chimney with the tears coursing down their furrowed cheeks; 'dis many a day I been prayin' dat de Laud sen' a nudder Denmark 'mong us! De Laud now anseh my prar in dis young man! Go on, my son—go on—an' may God A'mighty bress yeh!'

North Carolina was traversed mainly in the night. When approaching the region of the Dismal Swamp, a number of the old confederates of the noted Nat Turner were met with, who hailed the daring young runaway as the harbinger of better days. Many of these are still long suffering, hard laboring slaves on the plantations; and some bold, courageous, and fearless adventurers, denizens of the mystical, antiquated, and almost fabulous Dismal Swamp, where for many years they have defied the approach of their pursuers.

Here Henry found himself surrounded by a different atmosphere, an entirely new element. Finding ample scope for undisturbed action, through the entire region of the Swamp, he continued to go scattering to the winds and sowing the seeds of a future crop, only to take root in the thick black waters which cover it, to be grown in devastation and reaped in a whirl-wind of ruin.

'I been lookin' fah yeh dis many years,' said old Gamby Gholar, a noted high conjurer and compeer of Nat Turner, who for more than thirty years has been secluded in the Swamp; 'an' been tellin' on 'em dat yeh 'ood come long, but da 'ooden' heah dat I tole 'em! Now da see! Dis many years I been seein' on yeh! Yes, 'ndeed, chile, dat I has!' and he took from a gourd of antiquated appearance which hung against the wall in his hut, many articles of a mysterious character, some resembling bits of woollen yarn, onionskins, oystershells, finger and toe nails, eggshells, and scales which he declared to be from very dangerous serpents, but which closely resembled, and were believed to be, those of innocent and harmless fish, with broken iron nails.

These he turned over and over again in his hands, closely inspecting them through a fragment of green bottle glass, which he claimed to be a mysterious and precious 'blue stone' got at a peculiar and unknown spot in the Swamp, whither by a special faith he was led—and ever after unable to find the same spot—putting them again into the gourd, the end of the neck being cut off so as to form a bottle, he rattled the 'goombah,' as he termed it, as if endeavoring to frighten his guest. This process ended, he whispered, then sighted into the neck, first with one eye, then with the other, then shook, and so alternately whispering, sighting and shaking, until apparently getting tired, again pouring them out, fumbling among them until finding a forked breast bone of a small bird, which, muttering to himself, he called the 'charm bone of a treefrog:'

'Ah,' exclaimed Gamby as he selected out the mystic symbol handing it to Henry: 'got yeh at las'. Take dis, meh son, an' so long as yeh keep it, da can' haum yeh, dat da cant. Dis woth money, meh son; da aint many sich like dat in de Swamp! Yeh never want for nothin' so long as yeh keep dat!'

In this fearful abode for years of some of Virginia and North Carolina's boldest black rebels, the names of Nat Turner, Denmark Veezie, and General Gabriel were held by them in sacred reverence; that of Gabriel as a talisman. With delight they recounted the many exploits of whom they conceived to be the greatest men who ever lived, the pretended deeds of whom were fabulous, some of the narrators claiming to have been patriots in the American Revolution.

'Yeh offen hearn on Maudy Ghamus,' said an old man stooped with age, having the appearance of a centenarian; 'dat am me—me heah!' continued he, touching himself on the breast; 'I's de frien' on Gamby Gholar; an' I an' Gennel Gabel fit in de Malution wah, an' da want no sich fightin' dare as dat in Gabel wah!'

'You were then a soldier in the Revolutionary war for American Independence, father?' inquired Henry.

'Gau bress yeh hunny. Yes 'ndeed, chile, long 'for yeh baun; dat I did many long day go! Yes, chile, yes!'

And General Gabriel, too, a soldier of the American Revolution?' replied Henry.

'Ah, chile, dat 'e did fit in de Molution wah, Gabel so, an' 'e fit like mad dog! Wen 'e sturt, chile, da cant stop 'im; da may as well let 'im go long, da cant do nuffin' wid 'im.'

Henry subscribed to his eminent qualifications as a warrior, assuring him that those were the kind of fighting men they then needed among the blacks. Maudy Ghamus to this assented, stating that the Swamp contained them in sufficient number to take the whole United States; the only difficulty in the way being that the slaves in the different States could not be convinced of their strength. He had himself for years been an emissary; also, Gamby Gholar, who had gone out among them with sufficient charms to accomplish all they desired, but could not induce the slaves to a general rising.

'Take plenty goomba an' fongosa 'long wid us, an' plant masasa all along, an' da got nuffin' fah do but come, an' da 'ooden come!' despairingly declared Maudy Ghamus.

Gamby Gholar, Maudy Ghamus, and others were High Conjurors, who are ambassadors from the Swamp, were regularly sent out to create new conjurers, lay charms, take off 'spells' that could not be reached by Low Conjurors, and renew the art of all conjurors of seven years existence, at the expiration of which period the virtue was supposed to run out; holding their official position by fourteen years appointments. Through this means the revenue is obtained for keeping up an organized existence in this much dreaded morass—the Dismal Swamp.

Before Henry left they insisted upon, and anointed him a priest of the order of High Conjurers, and amusing enough it was to him who consented to satisfy the aged devotees of a time honored superstition among them. Their supreme executive body called the 'Head' consists in number of seven aged men, noted for their superior experience and wisdom. Their place of official meeting must be entirely secluded, either in the forest, a gully, secluded hut, an underground room, or a cave.

The seven old men who, with heightened spirits, hailed his advent among them, led Henry to the door of an ample cave—their hollow—at the door of which they were met by a large sluggish, lazy moving serpent, but so entirely tame and petted that it wagged its tail with fondness toward Maudy as he led the party. The old men suddenly stopping at the approach of the reptile, stepping back a pace, looked at each other mysteriously shaking their heads;

'Go back!' exclaimed Maudy waving his hand; 'go back, my chile! 'e in terrible rage! 'e got seben long toof, any on 'em kill yeh like flash!' tapping it slightly on the head with a twig of a grape vine which he carried in his hand.

Looking at the ugly beast, Henry had determined did it approach to harm, to slay it; but instead, it quietly coiled up and lay at the door as if asleep, which reminded him of queer and unmeaning sounds as they approached, uttered by Gholar, which explained that the animal had been trained to approach when called as any other pet. The 'Head' once in session, they created him conjurer of the highest degree known to their art.* With this qualification he was licensed with unlimited power—a power never before given any one—to go forth and do wonders. The Head seemed, by the unlimited power given him, to place greater reliance in the efforts of Henry for their deliverance, than in their own seven heads together.

'Go, my son,' said they, 'an' may God A'mighty hole up yo' han's an' grant us speedy 'liverence!'

Being now well refreshed—having rested without the fear of detection—and in the estimation of Gholar, Ghamus and the rest of the 'Heads,' well qualified to prosecute his project; amidst the prayers, blessings, wishes, hopes, fears, pow-wows and promises of a never failing conjuration, and tears of the cloudy inhabitants of this great seclusion, among whom were the frosty headed, bowed down old men of the Cave, Henry left that region by his usual stealthy process, reaching Richmond, Virginia, in safety.

CHAPTER XXV.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

With his usual adroitness, early in the morning, Henry entered Richmond boldly walking through the streets. This place in its municipal regulations, the customs and usages of society, the tastes and assumptious pride of the inhabitants, much resemble Charleston, S. C., the latter being a modified model of the former.

The restrictions here concerning negroes and mulattos are less rigid, as they may be permitted to continue in social or religious gatherings after nine o'clock at night provided a white person be present to inspect their conduct; and may ride in a carriage, smoke a cigar in daylight, or walk with a staff at night.

According to an old existing custom said to have originated by law, a mulatto or quadroon who proved a white mother was themselves regarded as white: and many availing themselves of the fact, took advantage of it by leaving their connections with the blacks and turning entirely over to the whites. Their children take farther advantage of this by intermarrying with the whites, by which their identity becomes extinct, and they enter every position in society both social and political. Some of the proudest American statesmen in either House of the Capital, receive their poetic vigor of imagination from the current of negro blood flowing in their veins.

Like those of Charleston, some of the light mixed bloods of Richmond hold against the blacks and pure blooded negroes, the strongest prejudice and hatred, all engendered by the teachings of their negro-fearing master fathers. All of the terms and epithets of disparagement commonly used by the whites toward the blacks are as readily applied to them by this class of the mixed bloodr. Shy of the blacks and fearful of the whites, they go sneaking about with the countenance of a criminal of one conscious of having done wrong to his fellows. Spurned by the one and despised by the other, they are the least happy of all the classes. Of this class was Ms. Pierce whose daughter stood in the hall door, quite early enjoying the cool air this morning.

'Miss,' inquired Henry of the young quadroon lady, 'can you inform me where I'll find the house of Mr. Norton, a colored family in this city?' politely raising his cap as he approached her.

With a screech she retreated into the house, exclaiming, 'that a black negro at the door had given her impudence.' Startled at this alarm so unexpected to him—though somewhat prepared for such from his recent experience in Charleston—Henry made good a most hasty retreat before the father, with longered 'hide' in his hand, could reach the door. The man grimaced, declaring, could he have his way, every black in the country would be sold away to labor.

Finding the house of his friend, he was safely secluded until evening, when developing his scheme, the old material extinguished and left to mould and rot after the demonstration at Southampton, was immediately rekindled never again to be suppressed until the slaves stood up the equal of the masters. Southampton—the name of Southampton to them was like an electric shock.

'Ah, Laud!' replied uncle Medly, an old man of ninety-four years, when asked whether or not he would help his brethren in a critical time of need; 'dat I would. Ef I do noffin' else, I pick up dirt an' tro' in der eye!' meaning in that of their masters.

'Glory to God!' exclaimed his wife, an old woman of ninety years.

'Hallelujah!' responded her daughter, the wife of Norton the man of the house.

'Blessed be God's eternal name!' concluded the man himself. 'I've long been praying and looking, but God has answered ne at last.'

'None could answer it, but a payer hearing God!' replied the wife.

'None would answer it, but a prayer hearing God!' responded the husband.

'None did answer it, but a prayer hearing God!' exclaimed the woman; 'glory to God!' glory to God! 'tis none but He can deliver!'

They fell on their knees to pray, when fervent was their devotion; after which Henry left, but on account of a strict existing patrol regulation, was obliged for three days to lie in the wood, so closely watched was he. The fourth evening he effected most adroitly an escape from his biding place, passing through a strong guard of patrol all around him, entering the District of Columbia at early dawn, soon entering the City of Washington.

The slave prison of Williams and Brien conspicuously stood among the edifices; high in the breeze from the flagstaff floated defiantly the National Colors, Stars as the pride of the white man, and Stripes, as the emblem of power over the blacks. At this the fugitive gave a passing glance, but with hurried steps continued his course, not knowing whither he would tarry. He could only breathe in soliloquy:

'How long, O Lord of the oppressed, how long shall this thing continue!'

Passing quietly along, gazing in at every door, he came to a stop on the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Sixth street. On entering, looking into the establishment, his eye unexpectedly caught that of a person who proved to be a mulatto gentleman, slowly advancing toward the door.

His first impulse was to make a retreat, but fearing the effort would be fatal, bracing his nerves, he stood looking the person full in the face.

'Do you want any tihng, young man!' inquired the mulatto gentleman, who proved to be the proprietor.

'I am hungry, sir!' Henry quickly replied.

'You're a stranger, then, in the city!'

'I am, sir.'

'Never here before!'

'Never before, sir.'

'Have you no acqaintance in the place?'

'None at all, sir.'

'Then, sir, if you'll come in, I'll see if I can find as much as you can eat,'replied the good hearted man.

Setting him down to a comfortable breakfast, the wife and niece of the proprietor kindly attended upon him, filling his pouch afterwardswith sufficient for the day's travel.

Giving him a parting hand, Henry left with, 'God Almighty bless the family!' clearing the city in a short time.

'I understand it all!' replied the gentle man in response; 'and may the same God guide and protect you by the way!' justly regarding him as a fugitive.

The kindness received at the hands of this family* brought tears of gratitude to the eyes of the recipient, especially when remembering his treatment from the same class in Charleston and Richmond. About the same time that Henry left the city, the slave of a distinguished Southern statesman also left Washington and the comforts of home and kindness of his master forever.

From Washington taking a retrogade course purposely to avoid Maryland, where he learned they were already well advised and holding gatherings, the margin of Virginia was cut in this hasty passage, so as to reach more important points for communication. Stealing through the neighborhood and swimming the river, a place was reached called Mud Fort, some four miles distant from Harper's Ferry, situated on the Potomac.

Seeing a white man in a field near by, he passed on as if unconscious of his presence, when the person hailing him in broken English questioned his right to pass.

'I am going to Charleston, sir,' replied Henry

'Vat fahr?' inquired the Dutchman.

'On business,' replied he.

'You nagher, you! dat ish not anzer mine question! I does ax you vat fahr you go to Charleston, and you anzer me dat!'

'I told you, sir, that I am going on business.'

'You ish von zaucy nagher, andt I bleve you one runaway! Py ching, I vill take you pack!' said the man instantly climbing the fence to get into the road where the runaway stood.

'That will do,' exclaimed Henry; 'you are near enough—I can bring you down there!' at the same time presenting a wel charged six barrel weapon of death; when the affrighted Dutchman fell on the opposite side of the fence unharmed, and Henry put down his weapon without a fire.

Having lurked till evening in a thicket near by, Charlestown was entered near the depot, just at the time when the last train was leaving for Washington. Though small, this place was one of the most difficult in which to promote his object, as the slaves were but comparatively few, difficult to be seen, and those about the depot and house servants, trained to be suspicions and mistrustful of strange blacks, and true and faithful to their masters. Still he was not remiss in finding a friend, and a place for the seclusion.

This place was most admirably adapted for the gathering, being held up a run or little stream, in a bramble thicket on a marshy meadow of the old Brackenridge estate, but a few minutes walk from the town. This evening was that of a strict patrol watch, their head quarters for the night being in Worthington's old mills, from which ran the race, passing near which was the most convenient way to reach the place of gathering for the evening.

While stealthily moving along in the dark, hearing a cracking in the weeds and soft tramping of feet, Henry secreted himself in a thick high growth of Jamestown weeds along the fence, when he slightly discerned a small body of men as if reconnoitering the neighbornood. Sensible of the precariousness of his condition, the fugitive lie as still as death, lest by dint he might be discovered, as much fear and apprehension then pervaded the community.

Charlestown, at best, was a hard place for a negro, and under the circumstances, had he been discovered, no plea would have saved him. Breathlessly crouched beneath the foliage and thorns of the fetid weed, he was startled by a voice suddenly exclaiming—

'Hallo there! who's that?' which proved to be that of one of the patrol, the posse having just come down the bank of the race from the mill.

'Sahvant, mausta!' was the humble reply.

'Who are you?' farther inquired the voice.

'Zack Parker, sir.'

'Is that you, old Zack?'

'Yes, mausta—honner bright.'

'Come, Zack, you must go with us! Don't you know that negroes are not allowed to be out at night alone, these times? Come along!' said Davy Hunter.

'Honner bright! maus Davy—honner bright!' continued the old black slave of Colonel Davenport, quietly walking beside them along the mill race, the water of which being both swift and deep.' Maus Davy, I got some mighty good rum here in dis flas'—you gentmen hab some? mighty good! mine I tells you, maus Davy—mighty good!'

'Well, Zack, we don't care to take a little,' replied Bob Flagg; 'have you had your black mouth to this flask?'

'Honner bright, maus Bobby—honner bright!' replied the old man.

Hunter raised the flask to his mouth, the others gathering around, each to take a draught in turn, when instantly a plunge in the water was heard, and the next moment old Zack Parker was swinging his hat in triumph on the opposite bank of the channel, exclaiming—

'Honner bright, gentmen! honner bright! Happy Jack an' no trouble!'—the last part of the sentence being a cant phrase commonly in use in that part of the country, to indicate a feeling free from all cares.

In a rage the flask was thrown in the dark, and alighted near his feet upright in the tufts of grass, when he old man in turn seizing the vessel, exclaiming aloud—

'Yo' heath, gentmen! yo' good heath!' then turning it up to his mouth, the sound heard across the stream gave evidence of his enjoyment of the remainder of the contents. 'Thank 'e, gentmen—good night!' when away went Zack to the disappointment and even amusement of the party.

Taking advantage of this incident, Henry, under a guide, found a place of seclusion, and a small number of good willing spirits ready for the counsel.

'Mine, my chile!' admonished old Aunt Lucy; 'mine hunny, how yeh go long, case da all'as lookin' arter black folks.'

Taking the nearest course through Worthington's woods, he reached in good time that night the slave quarters of Captain Jack Briscoe and Major Brack Rutherford. The blacks here were united by the confidential leaders of Moore's people, and altogether they were rather a superior gathering of slaves to any yet met with in Virginia. His mission here soon being accomplished, he moved rapidly on to Slaughters, Crane's and Washington's old plantations, where he caused a glimmer of light, which until then had never been thought of, much less seen. by them.

The night rounds of the patrol of the immediate neighborhood, caused a hurried retreat from Washington's—the last place at which he stopped—and daybreak the next morning found him in near proximity to Winchester, when he sought and obtained abiding place in the woods of General Bell.

The people here he found ripe and ready for anything that favored their redemption. Taylor's, Logan's, Whiting's and Tidball's plantations all had crops ready for the harvest.

'An' is dis de young man,' asked uncle Talton, stooped with the age of eighty-nine years; 'dat we hearn so much ob, dat's gwine all tru de country 'mong de black folks? Tang God a'mighty for wat I lib to see!' and the old man straightened himself up to his greatest heighth, resting on his staff, and swinging himself around as if whirling on the heel as children sometimes do, exclaimed in the gladness of his heart and the bouyancy of his spirits at the prospect of freedom before him: 'I dont disagard none on 'em,'' referring to the whites.

'We have only 'regarded' them too long, father,' replied Henry with a sigh of sorrow, when he looked upon the poor old time and care-worn slave, whose only hope for freedom rested in his efforts.

'I neber 'spected to see dis! God bless yeh, my son! May God 'long yeh life!' continued the old man, the tears streaming down his cheeks.

'Amen!' sanctioned Uncle Ek.

'God grant it!' replied Uncle Duk.

'May God go wid yeh, my son, wheresomeber yeh go!' exclaimed the old slaves present; when Henry, rising from the block of wood upon which he sat, being moved to tears, reaching out his hand, said:

'Well brethren, mothers and fathers! my time with you is up, and I must leave you—farewell!' when this faithful messenger of his oppressed brethren, was soon in the woods, making rapid strides towards Western Virginia.

Wheeling, in the extreme Western part of Virginia, was reached by the fugitive, where the slaves, already restless and but few in number in consequence of their close proximity to a free State—Ohio being on the opposite side of the river, on the bank of which the town is situated—could never thereafter become contented.

The 'Buckeye State' steamer here passed along on a downward trip, when boarding her as a black passenger, Cincinnati in due season was reached, when the passengers were transferred to the 'Telegraph No. 2," destined for Louisville, Kentucky. Here crowding in with the passengers, he went directly to Shippenport, a small place but two miles below—the rapids or falls preventing the large class of steamers from going thence except at the time of high water—the 'Chrystal Palace,' a beautiful packet, was boarded, which swiftly took him to Smithland, at the confluence of the Cumberland and Ohio rivers.

From this point access up the Cumberland was a comparatively easy task, and his advent into Nashville, Tennessee, was as unexpected at this time to the slaves, as it was portentious and ominous to the masters.

There was no difficulty here in finding a seclusion, and the introduction of his subject was like the application of fire to a drouth seasoned stubble field. The harvest was ripe and ready for the scythe, long before the reaper and time for gathering came. In both town and country the disappointment was sad, when told by Henry that the time to strike had not yet come; that they for the present must 'Stand still and see the salvation!'

'How long, me son, how long we got wait dis way?' asked Daddy Luu, a good 'old man and member of a Christian church for upwards of forty years.

'I can't tell exactly, father, but I suppose in this, as in all all other good works, the Lord's own annointed time!' replied he.

'An' how long dat gwine be, honey? case I's mighty ti'ed waitin' dis way!' earnestly responded the old man.

'I can't tell you how long, father; God knows best.

'An' how we gwine know w'en 'E is ready?'

'When WE are ready, HE is ready, and not till then is His time.'

'God sen we was ready, now den!' concluded the old man, blinded with tears, and who, from the reverence they had for his age and former good counsel among them, this night was placed at the head of the Gathering.

Carrying with him the prayers and blessings of his people here, Henry made rapid strides throughout this State, sowing in every direction seeds of the crop of a future harvest.

From Tennessee Henry boldly strode into Kentucky, and though there seemed to be a universal desire for freedom, there were few who were willing to strike. To run away, with them, seemed to be the highest conceived idea of their right to liberty.—This they were doing, and would continue to do on every favorable opportunity, but their right to freedom by self-resistance, to them was forbidden by the Word of God. Their hopes were based on the long talked of promised emancipation in the State.

'What was your dependence?' inquired he of an old man verging on the icy surface of ninety winters' slippery pathways; 'before you had this promise of emancipation!'

'Wy, dar war Guvneh Metcalf, I sho 'e good to black folks,'' replied Uncle Winson.

'Well uncle, tell me, supposing he had not been so, what would you have then done?'

'Wy, chile, I sho 'e raise up dat time 'sides dem maus Henry and maus John.'

'But what good have they ever done you? I don't see that you are any better off than had they never lived.'

'Ah chile! da good to we black folks,' continued the old man, with a fixed belief that they were emancipationists, and the day of freedom to the slaves drew near.

Satisfied that self-reliance was the farthest from their thoughts, but impressing them with new ideas concerning their rights, the great hearted runaway bid them 'Good bye, and may God open your eyes to see your own condition!' when in a few minutes Lexington was relieved of an enemy, more potent than the hostile bands of Red Men who once defied the military powers of Kentucky.

In a few days this astonishing slave was again on the smooth waters of the beautiful Ohio, making speed as fast as the steamer 'Queen of the West' could carry him down stream towards Grand Gulf on the great river of the South-west.

---

* The highest degree known to the art of conjuration in the Dismal Swamp, is Seven-finger High-glister.

* This gentleman died on the 15th of June, 1857, in a distant erritory, whither he had removed, where his excellent widow, niece and chilaren all reside, well provided for.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HEADQUARTERS OF HOOKER'S DIVISION,
Near Budd's Ferry, Md., Dec. 6, 1861.

MR. EDITOR:—Thanksgiving day was observed strictly amongst the New England men, which may be attributed to their descent, more directly than the rest, from a Puritan ancestry. One of the noblest peculiarities of their forefathers is love for the worship of Almighty God. I thought to myself as I strolled amongst them, of the days of which history speaks, when the praying Roundhead and the jeering cavalier met in deadly array; when Cromwell and the commonwealth fought against King Charles the First and the kingdom, one for equal rights and the habeas corpus—that great charter of civil and religious liberty; the other for the prerogative, for titles, and for dignities. Here are Massachusett's liberty-loving sons ready to meet death amid the din and clash of arms, to preserve intact the institutions of their fathers. (I must admit that they battle for Liberty.) Beyond the Potomac stands the proud, haughty Southerner, fighting for [illegible]ing of real titles, dignities, and the annihilation of the vestiges of Liberty around him. Christianity and progressive civilization ar-the emblems that adorn the former; barbarism, ignorance, and moral imbecility disgrace the latter; in both instances, and the coincidences with one exception, is complete, we have no Cromwell!

The boys searched the country for miles around for turkeys, roasting pigs, geese, ducks, and everything else necessary to make up a holiday dinner, and as you pass their marquees, the olfactories are greeted by savory odors. What with the good dinners, the sermons, exemption from all duty, and the canteens of whisky smuggled into camps, they enjoyed themselves hugely. The review or inspection of the Division was concluded to-day. This important business was intrusted to the Count de Paris and Major ———, of Gen. McClellan's staff. These notables arrived on the 2d instant and of course were the guests of Gen. Hooker. The inspection was very rigid, and may be the precursor of an early movement of the Division. We may be said to be in Winter quarters, for log huts, wooden chimneys, and camp stoves, have made our canvass walls comfortable, and although you may say living out of doors, we are able to forget the fact, and talk of Christmas, for it comes apace, and before we can gather our senses, will be here.—Nowhere in the United States did the Christmas holidays pass so gaily as in the Old Dominion; master as well as man revelled in feasting and the whisky jug.—Among the slaves it was a season of happy re unions, and of rest from a year's incessant toil. Wives and husbands, parents and children, hired long distances apart, could then unite in the cordial greeting of Merry Christmas. But how like a dream: a few days and hours, and the same old heart-burnings and separations, the same old stripes and scars; perhaps by the next Christmas many familiar faces are missing. Where is he or she who was with us last Christmas? Sighing in some rice-field, or sorrowing upon some cotton or sugar plantation in the far South—and so the years rolled on—there seemed no help for the captive; but this Christmas finds Virginia a broad bloody battle field, and has become the arena in which the fate of the nation is to be decided. Will her slaves and slave-masters assemble in the feast, the song, and dance, this coming Christmas? or will the latter, amid the fresh graves scattered around them, forget the convivialities of the season? I know the former are watching the events of the hour, and while the walls of their prison-house are crumbling to pieces around them, hope lights up their hearts, bright and all-absorbing visions of liberty and freedom crowd upon their mind. But how are matters at home! Thousands and hundreds of thousands of homes are cheerless, the sparkling bumper will not be passed around so cheerily; the vacant seat will carry the mind away to the battle-field and to the exposed camp—the whispering winds tell of the bitter cold and probable suffering of father, husband, brother, friend. But, disfranchised American, you, who of right, feel but little more solicitude for the Northern soldier than for the illy-clothed Southerner, how is it with you? Will you drink and make merry while your brethren are hunted like beasts, and are the helpless victims of cruelty, outrage, and assassination? Rather make the coming Christmas a season of mourning and prayer, consultation and organization, and of determined action. The path which leads to liberty is bloody; prepare to tread its gory depths! Study the practice and manual of arms—drill, drill, drill, night and day. Black men are valorous, just give them the art of war, and they will make better troops than will be furnished of any other people in the Western Hemisphere, from the pale-faced Caucasian up to the nut-brown Montezuman.

"Roll on thou cheerful day,
When tyranny's proud sway,
Stern as the grave,
Shall to the ground be hurled.
And freedom's flag unfurled,
Shall wave throughout the world,
O'er every slave."

The news communicated in my last that we should probably be joined to some one of the Southern expeditions now fitting out, turns out to be as I feared, an idle rumor. We are most certainly joined to a Southern expedition, but landward, not seaward. All sorts of rumors are being whispered around. Some think the rebels about to cave in, others that they are meditating some terrible on-slaught upon the Unionists. It is generally supposed that they are equal, if not superior to us in numbers. The rumors, coupled with the conscious weakness and timidity of the Northerners, and which the present inaction indisputably displays, make the troops here impatient and dissatisfied. Complaint is universal — doubts, fears, and a general demoralization, are stealing with a fatal certainty o'er them.—An advance of the army of the Potomac must be made, even at the risk of adding to the list another disastrous defeat. Perhaps before this reaches the eyes of your readers, the Federal army will have marched upon the strongholds of Manassas victorious, and the first step made towards the establishment of the Union with slavery; or perhaps instead, the Federal army will be driven back terror-stricken and dismayed; the Confederates panting with hell-born rage in the hot pursuit. Then will come the cry for Liberty and Union: then will emancipation be proclaimed, if not from the National Capitol, from Fortress McHenry; if not from Fortress McHenry, from Independence Hall! It may be said that this is treason, but Christianity, humanity and civilization teaches that this is true patriotism. Perhaps another signal chastisement at the hands of the rebels, may prove by its effects a salvation of the country, and the regeneration of its slaves. Let the American people but say we are their brethren, and the millions of our race will flock to the national defence, and seal with blood their love for liberty, and devotion to the national cause—but call us men and brethren, and all the tears shed and wrongs suffered, all the scoffs, jeers and persecutions meted out to us ever since Crispus Attucks fell the first martyr to the revolution, shall be buried in the very deep of forgetfulness. But I fear, rather than call us brethren, the invidious wretches who control the nation would let the rebel chief cover the North even to the St. Lawrence with his unopposed legions; such is the rancor and persistency of their hatred for our race. Millions of treasure, rivers of blood would be saved if the North would fortify themselves on all sides with justice and reconstruct their government upon the foundations of equity and truth. Perhaps Providence is now reserving us for great and important works.—'Thy wisdom, O Lord, is wonderful, it is high, I cannot attain unto it.'

It becomes my painful duty to record the death of Mr. I. Newton, to whom I have before referred in one of my communications. The greater part of his life was spent in bondage. Not until he was 58 did he receive his freedom. And before his manumission by the will of his deceased master four of his children were sold into Virginia. Poor man! he stood before me one week before his death and told me with tears in his eyes of his dear children. Obdurate facts willed that he should never gather those dear children around him. You remember there were some sixty or seventy slaves who escaped from the Virginia shore on board the U. S. steamer Live Yankee; among this number were his three sons, Harry, Joseph and Thomas; the other child, a girl, Divinia, is at Richmond, Va. The tidings of their escape did not reach the family until several hours after his death. O that that news had reached them sooner, so that this fond father might have been soothed in the hour of his death with the consciousness that his children had escaped from their earthly hell!

A few days ago we had a visitor from the rebel camp on the opposite side of the river. It is said that his family is known to Gen. Hooker. He hails from New York. He tells the incredible story that he personally knows of two hundred persons who are ready to desert the rebel flag. He was well dressed, and has received no pay since spring.

The Indiana Regiment arrested two more, at the mouth of the Patuxet. One of them is a son of Dr. Stewart. In fact scores of these rebels are stealing home since an armed occupation of their state has become a fixed fact. Guards are posted at Mattawomah Creek and other inlets, to intercept these traitor rebels. It was discovered that the rebels had erected a battery opposite Deep Point, by which they could command the mouth of Mattawoman Creek, the point where the government land provisions. Five steamers and gun boats, among which were the Harriet Lane and Live Yankee, ran down on the 8th instant and shelled them out beautifully. It was most exhilarating to see the chivalry,

"Winged with fear, Fleet as the wind'," flying over their sacred hills. The federal gunners proved themselves far superior to theirs. Nearly every shell fell with fatal precision among their teams, while hot shot fired their storehouses and barns. So far as I can learn there were no casualties among the fleet. A little boy was arrested as a fugitive when the division first arrived here, and carried back to Bladenburg, our former camping ground; forty-eight miles is the reckoned distance. He could not get north and has retraced his steps, and is again with us. Does he not deserve his liberty?

G. E. S.

Rev. P. Hawkins in Washington.—A correspondent writing from Washington, under date of Dec. 12th, says: "I had the pleasure of listening to a discourse delivered by the Rev. P. Hawkins, of Troy, N. Y., in Asbury Church in this city, before a congregation of about five hundred white and colored persons, and the reverand gentleman, with the assistance of the Divine Spirit, handled his subject like a master workman. He held his hearers spellbound from the beginning to end."

Anoter Penitent.—Redpath, the plunderer, of the Great Northern Railway Company, who is at present undergoing a punishment at the convict settlement in Western Australia, has published a volume of poems, which in a letter to the chaplain, he says, "he trusts it will be found to express the sentiments of a penitent heart." He is said to be "most constant in his attendance at church, and in his general conduct and demeanor appears to be truly penitent."

The people of Liberia are making preparations for the due representation of the republic at the World's Fair of 1862 in London. The President has applied for space equal to five hundred square feet—proportioned twenty-five by twenty feet—for the display of articles calculated to illustrate the resources and wealth of the country.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, DECEMBER 28, 1861.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

What Can We Do For Our Country?

In time of war, there are other duties for the patriotic citizen, besides the bearing of arms. Colored men have, in every free State, offered to bear arms in aiding the Government to put down the rebellion. But, excepting by Gen. Jim Lane, of Kansas, they have not yet been accepted as soldiers. If the Government and the several State Governors have refused our aid as soldiers, it does not follow that we can not, nor that we ought not, aid the Government as best we may and as best we ought, if we see other modes in which we can render needed assistance.

We may cultivate in our walks, in our conversation, in our hopes and prayers, an enlarged spirit of patriotism, urging by all the influences at our command—and the lowliest among us is not without influence—the success of those great principles of justice on which alone our side of the quarrel can be successful.

We can, also, in our conversation, express warm sympathy in the success of our arms: rejoice in each success, and mourn with each defeat; just as we ought to rejoice in the success of our neighbors and and friends. And in doing this, we must try and lift ourselves above the special private griefs, grievances and oppressions about which we could afford to be loud-mouthed in complaint in the piping times of peace. Let us raise ourselves above our personalities into the higher sphere of believing and knowing that we have a country worth the loving and worth the defending; that we are part and parcel of the living and momentous tide of humanity which compose the progressive portion of these United States; let us merge our race into the larger tide of our nationality Even those among us who can not look beyond self, should remember that this war is waged by the North to prevent ex-Senator Toombs from calling the roll of his slaves beneath the shadow of Bunker Hill monument.

There is another way in which we can give more practical aid to our country. In these December nights, when we seek the warm shelter of our comfortable dwellings, and warm stoves, and soft beds, and ample bed clothing, let us remember the poor soldier in his canvass tent, hard board bed, and scanty covering. Whatever they may think of us, they are our brethren in suffering and want, and doubly deserving our aid. An hour or two with knitting needles, or plain sewing, the parting with a blanket or coverlet we may easily spare, will give aid and comfort greatly needed by our friends and neighbors who have gone down to fight against our boastful haters and oppressors.

It was a beautiful and fitting tribute of gratitude for benefits conferred, of heartfelt sympathy and ardent young patriotism, when the young ladies of colored school No. 1, through their honored teacher, presented their mite in aid of soldiers' comforts; and it would be a most excellent thing, if our other schools, or sewing circles would go and do likewise. A dozen colored persons per week, calling with their humble gifts at the depot of the Soldiers' Aid Society, would be twice blessed, like mercy, in the giving and in the receiving.

Beside garments, there are certain other creature comforts in the making of which we are not unknown to fame, and which would be quite a serviceable, if not more so, to the soldiers who may be suffering from sickness or wounds. We believe that a hundred jars of currant or other jellies, labelled, 'from the colored women of New York and Brooklyn,' would do a mighty work in various ways in whatever regiment they might happen to reach. 'I was sick, and ye visited me,' would be uttered by many a parched lip and flash though many a fevered brain.

By thus mingling with the activities which carry on this war, by thus becoming part and parcel of the patriotism of the hour, we will not only do an act worthy and noble in itself, but one whose reflex influence will aid the influences which 'must happily solve the great problem which now puzzles the national mind.

The Government, Congress and the people have no difficulty as to what disposal to make of the loyal poor whites of the soon to be subjugated slave States. But they are in doubt as to what they will do with the poor loyal blacks of the South. And the main cause of this difficulty is that there has been too little living sympathy between the whites and blacks of the free States. It is idle to disguise the fact that, while Massachusetts and New England soldiers generally, having lived where there is at least political equality between whites and blacks, could readily accede to this in the new relations of black and white men at the South: the same may be true of troops going from Northern Ohio and Illinois, and from the interior of our own State. But there are the hosts from New Jersey and Pennsylvania, Southern Ohio and Illinois, from all Indiana and Michigan, who have been accustomed to both political and social inequality—they can not yet be prepared for justice and equality for the black man. To all such men, whether in the Army as soldiers, or or at home as soldiers, an exhibition of active sympathy on our part, of a disposition to do all we can to aid and comfort them, would go far, very far, towards breaking down caste hate, and towards causing them to believe that they and we, are, after all, bound up in one bundle of sympathetic humanity.

In times like the present, when the gloom, the uncertain event, and the dire calamities of war press upon it, the public heart, never so brave, is yet keenly sensitive to loving sympathies; it regards less the intrinsic character of what it is doing, than what the world thinks of its acts: hence we find a very gleaning of the European journals for crumbs or waifs of comfort and cheer: it is now "our opportunity" to smite that heart in its green state with with chords of sympathy and love which in the coming time will harden into fibree of sympathy and love and eternal brother hood—for, however badly, however haughtily, however meanly they may have treated us in the agonized past, they are men and brethren still.

Letter from Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15th, 1861.

MR. EDITOR—Our city has been for the past week unusually quiet as far as our people are concerned; but has been noted among our white neighbors for murders, rapes and broils. On Monday of this week two murders occurred, and also one on Tuesday evening. But the most diabolical affair took place on Monday evening, on the corner of 12th and C streets, in a small house which was occupied some months ago as a wood and coal office, by Galt & Brothers, but was at the time of the murder occupied as a residence and shoe shop, by an Irishman by the name of Donavan, who has been noted for the ill-manner in which he treated his wife. On Sunday last they had a quarrel and a slight fight; he being the most powerful she was compelled to beat a hasty retreat, but returned on Monday evening, when a fresh quarrel began, during which Donavan was heard to say that he would kill her, because he could marry another Irish woman, who possessed not only good looks, but four hundred dollars. As night came on the altercation ceased, and nothing more was heard of this unhappy couple until 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, about which time the neighbors began to suspicion that all was not right in the cabin, from not seeing any smoke coming through the stovepipe, nor his boot sign hanging out, when an investigation was proposed and made, which resulted in the finding of the dead body of Mrs. Donavan lying across the cot, bearing evidence of having been murdered. She had been choked until her neck and face were black and much swollen, apparently with a cord drawn with both hands around her neck. Her countenance indicated the agony she had been in. A coroner's inquest was held, and the verdict rendered that the unfortunate woman came to her death by strangulation by the hands of her husband. A search was made for Donavan, who was soon arrested and put in prison to be tried for murder in the first degree. The other two murders were in houses of ill-repute. One of the victims was a soldier, the other a teamster. Both were shot, and the guilty parties arrested and put in the county jail.

Our churches had been very quiet for some months past, until the beginning of the past week. A considerable revival of religion is progressing nightly at the Zion Wesley Church (Island), and many sinners present themselves to be prayed for. Our city never, to my recollection, presented so large a list of sick as now. The prevailing diseases are small-pox, typhoid and intermittent fevers and sore throats. The weather here has been truly beautiful. Heavy frost at night, with bright moonlight; clear and pleasant, with bright sunlight by day—the thermometer ranging in open air from 55 to 65 deg. Surely God has blessed us, for the unfeeling wood and coal dealers had advanced the price of fuel to an exorbitant price, they charging for oak $10 and for pine $7 50 per cord. Coal has been as high as $10 per ton of 2000 lbs.

BOX.

A Correction.

A FACT, AND A BATCH OF WONDERS.

The design of this letter is threefold; namely, to make a correction, to state a fact and to ask a few questions.

In a late number of the Anglo-African, reference is made to the Report of the Refugee's Home Society, as given by the Rev. C. C. Foote, their general agent.

Among items particularized are contributions by the Society towards the Mission School in this town, conducted by Mrs. A. F. Shadd and self, and called by you, and in Mr. Foote's Report Mrs. Cary's school. First, then, I wish to say that the Refugees Home Society had not, up to the publishing of that Report, ever contributed anything as a society; on the contrary, I had made formal application to the society for an appropriation, but received a reply from Mr. Foote, as their agent, in the negative. Three handsome individual donations—one from Mr. West, one from Rev. Mr. Grew, and a third from Mr. Foote, for himself, were given through Mr. Foote, not, however, as coming through the society, we understood. I can easily understand how the fact of his agency might have embarrassed Mr. Foote when making his Report; but we are quite clear as to the manner of the donations, as also to an emphatic refusal from the society, given by their agent. As General Agent for our Trustees, I made application to the R. H. Society, and also at a later period when at Montreal, but without effect at the time.

So much for the correction, and now for the fact.

On the sixth of the present month (December) I went to Detroit to call the attention of the gentlemen of the Refugees Home Society, including Mr. Foote to the injury to our enterprise resulting, at home, and likely to do so elsewhere from the pro-slavery scurrility of the "Pine and Palm" newspaper, growing out of that portion of their Report which so plainly conflicts with our experience, and with the facts of our case. I at the same time made a direct appeal to them, in their society capacity, for pecuniary aid towards supporting teachers—mark! not towards erecting buildings for the Primary and High School building we hope to get—in prosecuting the work the coming year, whereupon the foregoing statement was cordially concurred in by the members present, including Mr. Foote, and one hundred dollars for the coming year voted towards support of teachers in the Mission School at Chatham, to be paid in quarterly instalments, commencing 1st Jan., 1862, provided that the funds of the society would enable them so to do. It is now quite clear, you perceive, that up to the time of your notice, and of the vulgar personalities of the "Pine and Palm" thereafter, that we had not been aided by the R. H. Society; it is equally evident also that we hope to be for the coming year to the extent of one hundred dollars. That I am not an agent of Mr. C. C Foote, but a Grand General Agent, like the nabob of "Heigh-tie,"—the possible future minister of Geffrard at Washington—who had better look to his laurels; you now discover, and as Dr. Martin R. Delany, one of our Trustees now in your midst, will bear me witness. Thirdly, the wonders. The wonder here just now is, as to the kind of disease now raging in the Haytian Bureau, by reason of which, the General Agent seems to have changed in the twinkling of an eye"? Wonder No. 2 is, has the ghost of some dead emigrant to Hayti been haunting the drawers? Wonder No. 3 among Haytians here is, whether a man, whose views upon Insurrection and Republicanism are so easily repudiated, and whose mental idiosyncrasy seem *to work so peculiarly, so in*harmoniously, as that he must utterly repudiate a doctrine, be it what it may, without the hope of ever being able to progress, a man who assumed heretofore to teach doctrines which he now frankly admits he knew nothing about, is to be accepted, when he says—upon the Haytian scheme: "Has the Black accomplished his destiny in America? I think that in North America he has, &c. His future is—annihilation. * * * * To preserve the African race in America, emigration from it is the first condition, &c. &c., and that Hayti is the place for en masse emigration of these "Blacks."

The last wonder is, whether he will slip out quietly from this scheme, or, notwithstanding the "higher insight," will continue to send forth to the public canards about the number of departures; that all are well, when so many are sick or dead; and also work on in this Haytian business so long as Geffrard can pay?

MARY A. SHADD CARY.

Chatham, Dec. 18th, 1861.

Can the Colored Man Bise to Eminence in America.

A lecture was delivered by Mr. Edgar Ambleman, on Wednesday evening, 18th inst., at the Union church in 28th street, of which the following is a brief synopsis. The speaker said:

"You will undoubtedly consider this a strange question, and were it put to you singly, you would reply without hesitation—No, and you would point me to our present condition, and recall to my mind the fact that the avenues of learning are closed against us; that every incentive to ambition is taken away; that we are, as it were, outcasts; spit upon, degraded, and treated with contempt, everywhere. And you will inquire where is the use of our trying? what if we desire to practice medicine? though we were possessed of the skill of a Galen, yet of what avail—"he is nothing but a nigger."

Let us enter the army, though foremost in the charge and last in the retreat; though combining the skill of a Scott and a Wellington, though superior to all else in military tactics, what chance for advancement—"he is nothing but a nigger." Let us desire to practice law, and let us have the learning of a Coke, the eloquence of Domosthenes, where are we? Are we found on the forum, or on the bench, are clothed with the ermine, and is our advice sought far and near—"oh, he is nothing but a nigger."

I admit all this, and yet, strange as it may appear, I still affirm the colored man MAY arise. I am aware of our down-trodden and degraded condition, yet is my conviction the same. Do you ask why, then, do we not rise? I answer, as a class we lack three essential qualifications—viz.: Union, Intelligence and Self-respect.

Our condition, then, is the result of our own negligence and inactivity.

But very few show any desire to rise. We could do so if we would.

Where there is a will there is always a way. The way is always open to those who will enter upon it.

Let us then but resolve, and the result is in our own hands. "To patient toil the prize is sure."

Instead of spending our time in policy shops and drinking saloons, let us try and improve our minds; let us see that every opportunity for improvement and instruction is given our children, and we are no longer despised and down-trodden. Let us show that we respect ourselves, and thus force others to respect us. Let us show our determination to make our mark, and the whites will be compelled to make way for us.

Yes, I believe the day is coming when the black man shall be found on the bench upholding the purity of the laws; in the sacred desk, guiding the wanderer into the paths of righteousness and peace; in the halls of legislation, with burning eloquence proposing measures for the public weal—and the world forced to acknowledge that we care not what we have been represented to be."

The speaker here made a stirring appeal to the young men to take these thoughts into consideration, and to shun the gambling hells and drinking shops, and to seize the prize that lay before them.

Mr. Ambleman was followed by Mr. Chas. Ramsey, one of Redpath's Haytian emigration victims recently returned to this country, who in a very feeling manner related the sufferings of those who had been the victims of this money-making scheme.

We understand that it is Mr. Ramsey's purpose to deliver a lecture on this subject, in a larger hall, at some future day. We hope he will have a full house, for we think that every one should know the facts of the case.

REV. J. W. LOGUEN IN PENNSYLVANIA.

MR. EDITOR: Can you tell what is the matter with J. W. L., that he does not write oftener to you? If you can, I wish you would let me know. I see him every day, and he thinks much of the "Anglo-African," and often speaks about it, and I verily believe he wishes the paper well. He has been holding meetings (Anti-Slavery) in Pennsylvania ever since the 10th of this month, every night but one, and every Sunday; and I tell you he has had great times with the penny mites. He goes into many places where they never heard a colored man talk before, and they fill the houses to overflowing. In some of the places they tried to mob the fellow, but they could not make it out. He preached twice in Montrose yesterday. We have some fine fugitive families in Montrose, and one good school taught by Miss E. G. Highgate, of Syracuse, N. Y. I think Loguen will write to you some time before the war closes. Oh bless the Lord! is not the North getting all they can stand well? Let them work—the Slave will come up right yet. I think Loguen told you long ago that this was the Lord's war, and he yet thinks so; so let them work.

L.

Montrose, Pa., Dec. 23, 1861.

A New Proposition.—The Washington correspondent of the "N. Y. Tribune," in his letter of the 25th inst., states that the "prominent members of Congress are considering a new proposition for the solution of the Contraband question, in order to avoid the expense of supporting crowds of slaves in idleness, and to furnish the American mills with cotton. They take the ground that the Indian territory west of Louisiana and Arkansas was ceded to the United States by treaty, and on certain conditions. Without provocation they have violated the treaties, and 'levied war' on the United States, thus rendering the treaties null and void. The country thus reverting to the Government embraces the valleys of the Red, Arkansas, and other rivers, and contains about 20,000,000 of acres of cotton land of unsurpassed fertility, capable of producing about 15,000,000 bales of cotton per annum.

"It is proposed to apply the principle of Benton's 'Florida Armed Occupation Act,' and send all contrabands to this territory, and apprentice them to the settlers upon these cotton lands, leaving the question of their final disposition to be settled by Congress at the close of the war. All contrabands, as fast as they come into camp, to be promptly forwarded thither.

"The country is approached from St. Louis, through Springfield, a distance of 300 miles. The remainder of the railroad from Rolla, through Springfield to Fort Smith, can be completed in twelve months. It is said that the plantations of the Choctaws and Chickasaws alone could fully supply the American mills even the first year of the experiment.

Slavery in the District.—As the subject of abolishing Slavery in the District of Columbia is now agitated, it may be of general interest to know that, according to the recent census, the number of slaves in Georgetown is 577; in Washington, 1,744, and in the remainder of the County 834, making a total of 3,155. Free blacks in the District 11,131, and the total population of Washington is 61,122.

WHAT THE ARMY THINKS.

Extract from the private letter of a Captain in the Sickles Brigade, dated

"CHARLES Co., Md., Dec. 15, 1861.

If you were here you would be astonished to see how rapidly the army is becoming what is commonly termed abolitionized.—The more our officers and soldiers see of the institution of slavery the more they detest it.

Five months ago, ninety out of every hundred of the Sickles Brigade would have been delighted to mob an abolitionist—now they want to abolish slavery, root and branch, which is so well known here that slaveholders are actually afraid to visit our camps for fear of personal injury and indignities at the hands of our men.

This war can never be prosecuted advantageously (on our side) until the march of our armies carries with it freedom to all our friends, of whatever color. Then the services the negroes to us would be invaluable. The information they could and then would give us, would increase our efficiency thirty per cent., to say nothing of the value of their labor, which would enable us to place in the ranks all of our soldiers, about ten per cent. of whom are now detailed to act as teamsters, cooks, hospital attendants, various sorts of police duty, such as cleaning the camp, and other matters.

The idea of a nation at war declining to receive the aid and services of four million friends, and that, too, in the enemy's country, is so absurd that we must be the laughing-stock of military men and statesmen in the salons of Paris, Vienna, St. Petersburg, and throughout the whole of Europe. But events hasten, and ideas move rapidly in revolutions. Congress will ultimately pass an act abolishing slavery entirely. The People are for it; the Army is for it; the civilized world demands it; and the sooner it is done the better, in the opinion of

Yours truly, B. P."

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

MR. EDITOR:—The "ANGLO" is undoubtedly such a paper as our people have felt the need of for some time past, and as it must cost a great deal to sustain such a paper, I would suggest that our people all unite in contributing something for it. Let a list be taken around in every city, town and village where the paper is taken, and let those that are willing to give anything sign their names on this paper, annexing the sum opposite that they feel able to give. Let it matter not how large or small the sum may be; all, no doubt, will be thankfully received. Let these contributions be made up between now and the first of January, and let them be known as "New Year's contributions."

"WIDE AWAKE."

New London, Ct., Dec. 14, 1861.

LETTER FROM NEWARK.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec, 23, 1861.

MR. EDITOR: The recent capture of rebels in Missouri and elsewhere have produced much joy among the loyal citizens of this place.

The Fall term of Madam Rogers' school closed on Friday, 20th inst, with an exhibition that gave great credit to teacher and scholars. The exercises consisted of recitations, dialogues and music, the latter under the able direction of Prof. John H. O'Fake. At the close of the exercises refreshments were served to the children.

Dr. M. R. Delany gave his fourth lecture in this city on Wednesday evening, 18th inst., at the Park street Church. The audience was small, owing to the failure to give publicity to the engagement.

I. T.

Benevolence in New Haven.—The ladies of the A. M. E. Zion church in New Haven, held a social gathering on the evening of Thursday, 5th inst., in which a number of friends participated. The evening was spent very agreeably throughout by all present; after which, they presented their pastor, Rev. J. G. Smith, with the liberal sum of $10 78, for which he in return was mindful to return them his sincere thanks.

J. S. B.

The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. "Daily Times," writes: The owners of slave property in the District of Columbia are now in a bad way. The law abolishing the slave-trade in the District prevents a disposal of them here Legislation in favor o their emancipation is imminent. The Southern market is cut off, and they can only be disposed of in Maryland, where such property has become very "uncertain." In the meantime they are offered at low rates, with no buyers.

The English and Lagos.—The December number of the London "Anti-Slavery Reporter" states, "the report is contradicted most positively of its having been the design of the King of Lagos to send Captain Redingfield and Mr. McCoskry into the interior as prisoners, detaining the British merchants, and taking the lives of all European officers and residents, besides burning the factories."

Insurrection in Mississippi. — Despatches from the South state that there has been a great slave insurrection in Mississippi and an immense quantity of property destroyed—$150,000 worth on the Quitman estate alone. Further particulars are not furnished.

Statement of a Returned Colored Prisoner

Among the passengers by the gunboat Connecticut, which arrived at this port last Tuesday from Fort Pickens, was Levi Mann, an intelligent colored man. He left this city on the 12th of last March, as a waiter on the steamship Star of the West, for Brazos Santiago, which vessel was sent to the relief of the United States troops in escaping from that State. The Star of the West subsequently proceeded to Indianola, where she was seized by the rebels and all her crew made prisoners. Here the legitimate officers of the ship were superseded by rebels, and, with the crew of the ship, she sailed for New Orleans. The vessel as a prize and the crew as prisoners were turned over to the rebel quartermaster in that city. The statements of several of the officers, who were subsequently liberated, have already appeared in the columns of the "Herald." Hence there is no necessity of referring to them at this conjuncture. The statement of Mann, who has recently been liberated, and whose imprisonment has extended over a period of seven months is only given here. He says after his arrival in New Orleans he was kept in that city only a few hours, when he was sent by steamboat, via Lake Pontchartrain, to Mobile. Remaining in Mobile but a short time, he was sent on board the steamboat Southern Republic, to Montgomery, where he arrived on the 23d of April. Shortly after the arrival of the steamer a mob of several persons armed with bowie knives and pistols, come on board the boat and conveyed Mann up into the city of Montgomery, all the time using the grossest language possible. They subsequently liberated him, and told him to return to the steamer, which command he obeyed. Shortly after his return to the steamer a ruby-faced fellow, named B. P. Clark, who assumed the title of Marshal of Montgomery, assisted by a deputy named Gus. Mc Gibney and others, demanded the name of the person who was in charge of the prisoners. At this demand, Mr. Dean, the second officer of the original crew of the Star of the West, stepped forward and said he was the person. The words had scarcely dropped from his mouth when Clark struck him a severe blow in the face. He then seized Mann by the collar and told him that he must go along with him. Mann at first refused, when Clark drew a revolver out of his pocket, telling Mann if he refused to accompany him that he would blow his brains out or any person who attempted to interfere. Captain Mears, of the steamboat, who was during this affair a silent spectator could contain his feelings no longer, and told Clark he was carrying the thing too far by exhibiting such brutality to men who had no means of defence. Clark replied that he was sorry for what he had done, and begged pardon, but if Captain Mears took it up he would shoot him. Clark and his banditti, with Mann as a prisoner, then left the steamer and proceeded to Montgomery jail. Here the prisoner was incarcerated, robbed of his money and papers of the value of $600, stripped of his clothing, and received one hundred and fifty lashes from a leather strap, about four feet long and one-half inch thick, in the hands of one of his persecutors. The stripes were laid on with much force, each blow lacerating the skin, followed by streams of blood. This brutality caused the prisoner to sink from exhaustion, and until he was thought to be in a dying condition. Mann, being of a strong, athletic constitution, rallied from the effect of this brutality. The same night (the 24th of April) Clark came to the cell of the prisoner, ordering him to get up and go with him. The prisoner, although delirious from the beating he had received, had no alternative but to follow his fiendish keeper, and forthwith proceeded to the street, where Clark had a horse and buggy in waiting. Mann asked him (Clark) what he intended to do with him; Clark replied that was none of his business; it was only a matter of dollars and cents anyhow. The prisoner then made a strenuous appeal for his release, at the same time offering his custodian $500 for it. To this proposition Clark made a negative reply. The prisoner was driven around the streets of Montgomery for several hours, and then placed in the custody of a man named Green Mullins, who took him to Tuskega, Macon county, forty-five miles distant, where they arrived in the fore-noon, and the prisoner was placed at the service of George E. Collins, a groceryman and farmer, who owned about forty acres of land. Here Mann was put to work in company with several slaves, and there labored for six months, without pay or emolument of any kind, until a providential plan presented itself for his delivery from this imposed and involuntary servitude. By the good offices of a friend who sympathised with the prisoner, the latter was advised to make his escape to Wetumpka, and there claim the protection of one of the State courts then in session. Mann acted on this advice, though filled with fears and doubts as to the result; but his anxiety for his family in this city—means of communication with whom was entirely denied him—made up his mind to attempt his escape at whatever sacrifice or risk. He strated for Wetumpka, reached there in safety, and immediately presented his case before Judge Alexander, of the Probate Court, then in session. The Judge was apparently touched with Mann's story, and ordered a hearing of the case at three o'clock P. M. (October 23). At that hour Mann was again in court, and was put on the stand and minutely examined. On the strength of his statement the Judge told him he should be sent to General Bragg at Pensacola, with a request for his liberation at an early day. This favorable decision fell like a clap of thunder on the mind of Mann, who could hardly suppress his feelings at the thought of once more joining his family in New York. On the 25th of October, Mann was placed in custody of Marshal Thomas Jones, who had the order of the court for the deliveay of the prisoner to General Bragg at Pensacola. Arriving at Pensacola the next day, it was then ascertained that General Bragg was not there, he being in Mobile looking after rebel military matters in that city. General Bragg returned to Pensacola (Warrington Navy Yard) on the Sunday following, when Marshal Jones delivered the order of the court and the prisoner to him. The General read the order very intently, and subsequently assured the prisoner that he would send him to Fort Pickens, under a flag of truce, as soon as an opportunity presented itself. Meanwhile, Mann was sent to the guard-house at Warrington Navy Yard, there to await his final disposition. Here he remained four weeks. Mann was in the guard-house on the day Fort Pickens opened on the rebel batteries. He says that when Fort Pickens opened on the rebels in the Navy Yard a regiment of Mississippi troops were on morning parade. The first shell from Fort Pickens struck the water a short distance from the Navy Yard. The second shot was of similar range as the first. The attack was wholly unexpected by the rebel soldiers, and when the firing commenced they broke ranks, and, despite all the entreaties of their more brave officers, made a furtive retreat in double quick time, throwing away their rifles, blankets and equipments. After the rebels opened their batteries on Fort Pickens they became more collected, being inspired by the cool and determined manner of Gen. Bragg and other high rank officers, who moved from point to point as the bombardment progressed. In addition to the works at Forts McRae and Barrancas, the rebels have two batteries between Fort Barancas and the Navy Yard, and another battery between Fort Barrancas and the lighthouse; also one near Fort McRea. These batteries are armed with superior English rifled cannon and mortars. During the bombardment the Union shot and shell dismounted three guns in Fort McRea, and breached it inseveral places, so that the rebels found it untenable, and consequently evacuated it.

The buildings in the Navy Yard were all perforated with shot, and the village of Warrington entirely destroyed. Mr. Mann is of opinion that had the bombardment been followed by the landing of the Union troops on the enemy's soil, their efforts could not but have been attended with success, so thoroughly were the rebels demoralized. He srys that there are many Union men at Pensacola, who are per force in the rebel army, and only wait in the hope of a speedy deliverance by the landing of Union troops. He represents the rebel soldiery as in a very imperfect state of discipline, poorly armed, worse paid—receiving nothing but shinplasters for their services—and very meagrely subsisted. In order to keep the rebel soldiery together, the officers find it necessary to grant furloughs to the men. This has the effect to demoralize the troops, as they were going backwards and forwards to their homes almost ad libitum. The soldiers are clad in a sort of homespun jean of various hues. The rations dealt out to the troops consist of fresh beef of a very poor quality, bacon, beans, rice, corn meal and wheat—the latter in limited quantities. They have no coffee nor sugar. In lieu of the former they use burnt corn, and substitute molasses for sugar. They experience much inconvenience for want of salt to season their food. That article sells for eleven dollars a sack, and is so scarce as to be very difficult to get at that price. The soldiers are therefore obliged to use the debris that comes out of the barrels in which their salt beef is packed. Mr. Mann says that while he was in prison at Pensacola he was subjected to some indignities by the rebel soldiery, but received sympathy from the educated officers. Some of the latter expressed considerable interest in his behalf. Among them were General Slaughter and Captain Trowbridge, both late of the United States Army. On Saturday, November 23, while the bombardment was progressing, Mr. Mann and other prisoners were removed from the Navy Yard and sent to Pensacola under guard. At Pensacola he was confined in the Custom House, where he remained until the Friday following. At eleven o'clock on that day General Bragg sent a mounted officer from the Navy Yard to the city for him. He was taken to General Slaughter's quarters, when that officer told him to get ready to go over to Fort Pickens. Mann said he was ready then, as he had nothing to carry away with him except the clothes on his back. General Slaughter then bade him to follow him, when they proceeded to the beach, got into a small boat rowed by two men, and from thence proceeded under a flag of truce across Pensacola Bay to Fort Pickens.

They were confronted on entering the latter place by the officer of the guard, who conducted the rebel General to Colonel Brown's quarters, where he made known his errand, subsequently returning to the Warrington Navy Yard. While the boat was en route from the Navy Yard, General Slaughter conversed freely with Mr. Mann, and told him when he reached Fort Pickens to present his compliments to a captain of the Fifth artillery, who was a former classmate of his. He also said that he entertained no personal disrespect for them; he had cast his lot with the South, and should share its destiny, whatever that might be.

Mr. Mann estimates the number of rebel troops at Pensacola and vicinity at about 20,000. Two of the Mississippi regiments have no arms. In doing picket or guard duty they borrow the arms of other regiments. Every soldier, however, has a bowie knife; some of them are from one to two feet in length, and appear to be very formidable weapons. Some of the rebels express great confidence in their ability to whip the Yankees; but our informant states that he believes that nine out of every twelve of the rank and file of the rebels are for the Union.

The health of the rebel troops at Pensacola is pretty good. They have had however, periods during the summer when the fatality was quite large, the prevailing diseases being smallpox, measles, typhoid fever and fever and ague.

Mr. Mann states that when he left the interior of Alabama it was estimated that there were upwards of 8,000 runaway negroes in that State who had escaped and are now hiding in the woods. These slaves have vague ideas of the war, many of them having a vague idea that it is made with a view of their liberation from bondage. The masters exhibit the utmost brutality to their slaves. No two of the latter are allowed to converse together, under pain in the event of being detected, of receiving a hundred lashes.

Our informant says that during his temporary bondage he received many kindnesses from the white people with whom he came in contact; and although they withheld their political sentiments from him, yet their acts showed them to be first class Union people. It is to these kind friends he owes his release.

Mr. Mann returned to his home, number 42 Thomas street, in a penniless condition. When he entered his house the joy of himself and his family can be better imagined than described. He then learned that his family had suffered much, both from anxiety of mind and for the necessaries of life. But these would have been much worse had it not been for the kindness of his neighbors and the forbearance of his landlord. N. Y. Herald.

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH LIBERIA AND HAYTI.

The Senate Committe on Foriegn Affairs has the question of establishing diplomatic relations with Liberia and Hayti under advisement, and will report favorably at an early day.

Stepping into the Shoes of Slaves.—A deserter from the rebel army makes the ominous statement that the slaves of Richmond in many instances are compelled to give up their shoes to the soldiers, and go barefoot.

ARRIVALS AT MRS. PLANT'S
BOARDING-HOUSE, BROOKLYN.

Joseph Thompson, of Suffolk, Va.
Geo. Duvent, of Fall River, Mass.
Mr. Coke, of Washington, D. C.
Mr. Hunter, do. do.
Garrison Mason, of Baltimore.
Robt. Morris, of Phila.
Mrs. Ann Fox, of Washington.
Thos. Williams, of Brooklyn.

Special Notices.

A FAIR

Will be held by the Ladies of ZION BAPTIST CHURCH, Sullivan St., New York, (Rev J. T. Raymond, Pastor,) for the benefit of said Church, commencing on Dec. 31, 1861.

The Ladies will offer for sale a variety of

ADULT'S and CHILDREN'S CLOTHING;
Also a lar e number of
FANCY GOODS, DOLLS, ETC.
The Fair will close with a
GRAND ENTERTAINMENT.

Tickets of Admission to the Fair, 6 cents; Entertainment, 25 cents.

COMMITTEE.

Mrs. Harley, Mrs. West,
" Dawley, " Leygins,
" Bailey, Miss Cary,
" Sanders, Mrs. Foster.
Miss S. Foster.

MASONIC.

At a Regular Communication of Boyer Lodge, No. 1, F. & A. M., held at the Lodge Room, cor. Broome and Forsyth streets, N. Y., on Monday evening, Dec. 16th, 1861, the following Officers were duly installed for the ensuing year:

J. Holland Townsend, W. M.
Pleasant Smith, S. W.
Wm. F. Randall, J. W.
Thomas J. Cunningham, Treasurer.
Wm. A. Marrs, Secretary.
John Peterson, Chaplain.
Geo. Riddles, S. D.
Wm. A. Elston, J. D.
Richard Redding, M. C.
Isaac Green, Tyler.

Take your children to Professor Green's Illustrated Lecture, on Friday evening next, at Zion Baptist Church.

See advertisement in another column.

Dedication.

The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, Liberty St., Flushing, will be DEDICATED on SUNDAY, Jan. 5th, 1862. Superintendent Wm. H. Bishop will be present and perform the services.

JOHN WASHINGTON,
22 2 Preacher

FESTIVAL OF ST. JOHN, THE EVANGELIST.

Stone Square Lodge, No. 6, will celebrate the Festival of St. John, the Evangelist, by a Public Installation of their officers for the ensuing year, by the M. W. United Grand Lodge, of the State of New York, and a Musical Entertainment, at their Hall, 309 Grand St, near 11th St., Williamsburgh, on Friday evening, Dec. 27, 1861, upon which occasion all the Lodges working under the above named jurisdiction will be present in full Masonic clothing.

Admission 25 Cents.

Refreshments will be abundantly supplied, as well as a splendid Band of music.

COMMITTEE.

P. W. RAY, M. PINE,
L. T. WHARTON, GEO. POOLE,
WM. B. CONNOR, L. TREADWELL.

Tickets may be obtained at the door.

SCIENCE, LITERATURE,
—AND—
AMUSEMENT.

Professor A. M. GREEN

Will give—without fail—ONE of his highly interesting Exhibitions of Descriptive Geography,

Astronomy,
Natural Science
and History,

—AT THE—

Zion Baptist Church, Sullivan Street,
ABOVE PRINCE,
ON FRIDAY EVE'G, JAN. 3, 1862.

commencing at 7½ o'clock precisely. The programme will consist of a variety of beautiful Diagrams, brilliantly illustrated by the aid of the

ORIGINAL DRUMMOND LIGHT,

and not least in contributing to beautify the Exhibition is the masterly ability with which Mr. GREEN lectures, in explanation of his truly interesting Paintings.

PART FIRST.
CHEMICAL DIORAMA.

Scene 1.—The old Ptolmaic theory of the Solar System exhibited, and the defects in this theory explained and accounted for.

Scene 2.—The Copernicum theory, first introduced by Pythagoras, beautifully illustrated:—The Planets—Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Asteroids, Jupiter, Saturn, Herschel and Leverier, all revolving at their respective distance from the Sun.

Scene 3.—Kepler's Laws of Motion beautifully presented—View of Mercury and Venus as seen from the earth in superior conjunction.

Scene 4.—The boundary of the Earth geographically described—Beautiful view of an approaching vessel seen in the distance on the smooth surface of the ocean.

Scene 5.—The eccentric revolution of a Comet around the Sun, showing the different appearance of its train at different points of its orbit.

Scene 6.—The great Comet of 24th of September, 1858, as seen through Professor O. M. Mitchell's great Refractor at the Cincinnati Observatory on the night of the 26th of September.

PART SECOND.

Scene 1.—Waterloo Bridge, London, with a distant view of the Dome of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Scene 2.—The Tower of London, built by William, the famous Norman Conqueror.

Scene 3.—Evening on the River Thames—Moonlight View of the famous Tower of London.

Scene 4.—Southwark Bridge, and full view of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Scene 5.—The Mosque of Omar—A Mahommedan Temple—The hour of morning prayer.

Scene 6.—Moonlight view of the celebrated Temple.

Scene 7.—The Mosque illuminated for the midnight service on Christmas Eve.

Scene 8.—View of Mefrose Abbey—Beautiful View of the Tombs of the Departed Saints.

PART THIRD.

Scene 1.—The Deluge—The Ark in the distance resting on the bosom of the waters. Those men of giant frame, who lived in that age of the world, are seen attempting to rescue their wives and children from the power of the devouring elements.

Scene 2.—Site of the ancient city of Jerusalem—the city now in ruins.

Scene 3.—The destruction of the Temple of Diana, at Baalbec, in Syria.

Scene 4.—Summer scene at the birth-place and residence of Robert Burns, the distinguished Scotch Poet.

Scene 5.—A winter morning at Burns' home—A tremendous snow storm.

Scene 6.—Splendid view of the Military Hospital at Paris, in France

DOORS OPEN AT 7 O'CLOCK.

Admission Reduced to 15 Cents.

Tickets, admitting a Lady and Gentleman, 25 Cents; Children under 12 years of age, 10 Cents; To be had at the door.

☞ No postponement on account of the weather.

A FAIR! A FAIR!!

The Ladies of the
THIRD BAPTIST CHURCH,
WILLIAMSBURGH,

will open a FAIR in the lower part of said church, commencing on TUESDAY, Dec. 24, and will

CONTINUE EIGHT DAYS,
closing with
A GRAND ENTERTAINMENT
On the 2d of JANUARY, 1862,

at which time the Committee pledge themselves to spare no pains to make the Entertainment agreeable to all who may favor them with their company.

Admission to the Fair, 6 cents.
Admission to the Entertainment, 25 cents.

COMMITTEE.

Mrs. M. A. GALE, 1st Directress;
" M. GILES, 2d "
" JANE L. FISHER, Sec.

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND

Balls, Parties, &c., furnished with music at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,
Professor of Music,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St, and with G. Oton. 18tf

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

Notice is hereby given, that J. W. B. Smith, P. G. Chief of the "I. O. of G. S. and D. of S. (Second Branch), is suspended from all connection with the Order whatever, for the term of fifteen years. Also Crystal Fount Lodge, No. 6, of Newark, N. J., is indefinitely suspended.

JOHN R. PORTER, G. Sec.

MASONIC
DIRECTORY,
FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W.G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y. not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwick, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, New York City.

LECTURES.

The undersigned is prepared to fill engagements to deliver single Lectures, on the following subjects:

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY WITH REFERENCE TO NATURAL THEOLOGY;
THE ADAPTATIONS OF THE EARTH, OR TERRESTRIAL ADAPTATIONS;
MENTAL PHILOSOPHY
THE ANCIENT HONORS OF THE BLACK AND COLORED RACES OF THE EARTH;

—Being a series of popular discourses recently delivered, founded on the following texts:

1. "Look not upon me because I am black." [Song of Sol.—1.6.
2. "Princes shall come out of Egypt." [Psalm 68—31.
3. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin." [Jer.—13.23.
4. "Cursed be Canaan." —Gen.—9 25.
5. "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus." Philemon.

Terms—The lecturer's passage both ways, and one-fourth of profits.

[From the Detroit Daily Advertiser, March 1, 1860.]

"Mr. Berry's lecture last night is stated to have displayed much thought, and to have been in every respect meritorious."

INFORMATION WANTED

Of Mrs. DOROTHA SMITH, formerly Miss Mingo, of Pictou, Nova Scotia. Any information in regard to her sent to Mrs. Thompson, 4 Catharine Lane, will be thankfully received. 21 2t

Washboards! Washboards!! Washboards!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delsart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,
(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. Wm. J. Alston, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

B. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1 2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 P. M.
7 " P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. Hall, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

Rev. Eli N. Hall, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, A. M.
" P. M.
" P. M.

19 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
7 1 " P. M.

12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, P. M.
7 1-2 " P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

Rev. Chas. H. Thompson, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship: —
10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn. 13-1y.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. John T. Raymond, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
3 " P. M.
7 1-2 " P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

Agent for Washington.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

Troy Agency.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

LODGINGS.

A FEW GENTLEMEN CAN BE ACCOMmodated with Lodgings, at No. 82 Wooster St., on moderate terms. 22 1

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

BOSTON HOUSE,

MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,

In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH
GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,
Residence—120th St, between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
18 26t

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate Ladies and Gentlemen with first class Board, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand. 16 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.

Residence—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING
IN BROOKLYN,

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston st., or of the Janitor 235 West 15th-st.

[illegible]

Gentlemen, if you want a [illegible] well-fitted Garment at a much Lower [illegible] can be bought at any other establishment [illegible] in any other city, please call at the [illegible] Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG

Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as

BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS

of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made

MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.
Don't Forget,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET,

Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.,

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. Ramsey.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.

The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS!

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk, Street. Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist,
79 Thompson St., N.

PRIVATE BOARDING HOUSE
BY
MRS. W. S. WILKINS & Co
610 PINE, ABOVE SIXTH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA 7 13t.

LADIES' FURNISHING STORE.
CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
Ready-Made and Made to Order, By
MRS. S. WILKINS & CO.,
610 Pine, above Sixth Street, Philadelphia.
7-13t.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMOdate a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. Fortes, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 South Street, N.Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,

COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.

Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf.

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly Richardson) REspectfily announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry [illegible] es it a very desirable and convenient place.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

MRS. E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,

25 Sullivan Street, New York.

Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING

By Mrs. Mary Johnson, 120 West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies, $2,50
" " Gentleman, 3,00
Lodging per week, 75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER
219 Centre Street New York.

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts., 3 tf.

POCKET WATER-FILTER
AND
DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weighs one ounce. Can be carried in the vest pocket. Send it to your friends. Agents wanted. Samples mailed on receipt of 40 cents, by addressing

DAY & CO.,
3-13t Box 464 P.O., Newark, N. J.

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and [illegible] that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful [illegible], at No. 66 SULLIVAN STREET, [illegible] 4-1

THE POETRY OF JOHN G. WHITTIER.

BY SARA G. STANLEY.

The literature of a Republic, in which political and religious liberty is the basis of the govermental structure, and in which, by right of fundamental law, every man possesses an individual and distinctive sovereignty, appointing his own rulers and enacting laws for his own government, should be at once peculiar and characteristic. The spirit of freedom embodied in a constitution, and inherent in the civil and ecclesiastical institutions of a country, should form an elementary and essential part of the national literature, imparting to it that moral beauty and grandeur of which the free and unrestrained action of man's intellectual powers is the truest inspiration.

America yet awaits the advent of a poet born of the soil, and who shall be a true exponent of her nationality. A poet, who to high intellectual endowment shall add the rarer quality of love for truth and humanity, whose thoughts and aspirations will not only tend to grasping beautiful idealisms, or to soaring aloft into the far empyrean, whose cry will not evermore be, "Beauty is truth and truth beauty." but one who with heroic earnestness, will seize the sublime truths of human brotherhood, and throw them, startling and obnoxious though they be, all glowing with a divine illumination, into the strongholds of falsehood and error. The great need of American poetry is not passion, nor pathos, nor imagery; not classical elegance and purity, nor a more profound philosophy; not intense adoration of infinite beauty, but a higher, nobler, holier need—the adoration of Infinite Truth.

In the poetry of John G. Whittier we find the nearest approximation to that distinctness of moral purpose, that earnest maintainance of universal freedom and the inviolable ties of fraternal love, which would seem the spontaneous utterance of minds fostered under the genial culture of free institutions. More than a quarter of a century has elapsed since his clear, resonant notes rang out from among the various voices of American song, with a stern truthfulness, a bold and manly enthusiasm, a fiery indignation in the denunciation of wrong, and withal a sweet and tender compassion which gave a subdued beauty and grave impressiveness to his lessons of humanity and love. Firm in principle, full of philanthropy and moral courage, deeply impressed with the fact that Christian truth in literature was not less important and essential to the developement of true republicanism than Christian polity in state and church: he struck his lyre to an unwonted strain, which yet reverberates amid its chords with the same richness of melody, the same stirring force and volume. Among the writings of Whittier we would give the precedency to his earliest productions, the "Voices of Freedom," and those later poems which may properly be classed with them. Many of our poets have uttered denunciations of wrong in the abstract, replete with solemnity and ethical wisdom, or affectation of piety and magniloquence, as the case might be; but Whittier cried out with the deep energy of his mighty soul against a specific wrong, that of American slavery. His cry resounded through all the land, for it was the peal of a trumpet calling to battle: he rang no uncertain charge, but one of unmistakably warlike import. Casting aside the gaudy and familiar trappings of popular poetry, he stood steadfast and erect, in the strength of his intellect and the purity of his heart, with the unchangeable conviction that truth was invincible and God omnipotent.

Seeking an approbation higher and more enduring than the breath of the multitude, or the reluctant praise of critics, he refused to follow the smoothly trimmed paths of the flower-decked Parnassus, paths always flooded with sunshine and glowing with enchanting radiance; but turned aside, communing with his own brave heart, to traverse the rugged vales, the rocky dells where no violets grew, the arid and sandy plains never gladdened by the fragrant roses and honeysuckles of June. With a grace and beauty of style and subtile power of conception, imparted by high æsthetic culture, the poets around him sang of objects already interesting and ennobled—of sunny lands slumbering beneath Oriental skies, of hoary castles around which clustered the recollections of centuries, of ruined cities and palaces, of seas, and mountains, and rivers, rich in classic associations, of the ocean surge, the rocky cliff, the starry sky—but his was a different utterance, a higher mission. The vile sin of oppression, "the damning shade of slavery's curse," the awful power of God's wrath prepared for the oppressor, the rice swamp and cane-field, the slave coffle, the trader's loathesome cell, the marts for human flesh, the toiling slave and the manacles binding his limbs, the despised, and persecuted, and suffering! wherever wearing the insignia of God—these were his themes, these the objects of his love, and for which he claimed, in strains of impassioned eloquence, the love of all mankind. Others worshipped beauty in its visible manifestations, or as symbolized in the world without us, but Whittier knelt directly to God, in whose attributes his pure soul recognized the principle of all beauty.

His genius is sanctified by religion, and conscience is the centre around which all his thoughts and emotions revolve.

"Shall tongues be mute when deeds are wrought,
Which well might shame extremest hell?"

is the question he asks himself, and his fearless and faithful portraiture of the nation's sins, and "the slave in his fetters pining," is the response; and, too, the fierce clarion call which burst wrathfully from his lips:

"Up NOW for Freedom,
And smite to earth Oppression's rod."

"Down let the shrine of Molock sink,
And leave no traces where it stood;
Nor longer let its idol drink
His daily cup of human blood;
But rear another altar there
To Truth and Love and Mercy given,
And Freedom's gift and Freedom's prayer,
Shall call an answer down from Heaven"

The "Voices of Freedom" abound in passages of earnest thought and profound significance, passages evincing deep religious feeling, and so clear a foresight of the workings of Divine justice, that they seem almost a spirit of prophecy:

"Is not thy hand stretched forth,
Visibly in the heavens, to awe and smite?
Shall not the living God of all the earth,
And heaven above, do right?

Woe, then, to all who grind
Their brethren of a common Father down!
To all who plunder from the immortal mind
Its bright and glorious crown!

Woe to the priesthood! woe
To those whose hire is the price of blood—
Perverting, darkening, changing as they go,
The searching truths of God!

Their glory and their might
Shall perish: and their very names shall be
Vile before all the people, in the light
Of a world's liberty."

His simple yet inflexible creed admits not a doubt of the goodness, and majesty, and omniscience of God, and a firm and unfaltering belief in the ultimate triumph of Right echoes along his vigorous lines like the full, sonorous notes of a cymbal. He hears the downward beat of angel's wings, and beholds afar, like a traveler upon the mountain summit, the dawning of that day when all shackles shall fall, and the glad evangel of peace and love shall rise, like incense from the altar to God, when

"Wrong shall cease, and Liberty, and Love,
And Truth, and Right throughout the earth be known,
As in their home above."

Among so much that elicits admiration in the volume before us, it would be vain to designate any pieces as more worthy of attention than others, yet those exquisitely sad and beautiful lines, the farewell of a Virginia slave mother to her daughters, thrill us with their strange melody and touching pathos:

"Gone, gone—sold and gone,
To the rice swamp dank and lone.
Where the slave whip ceaseless swings,
Where the noisome insect stings,
Where the fever demon strews
Poison with the falling dews,
Where the sickly sunbeams glare
Through the hot and misty air,—

Gone, gone—sold and gone,
To the rice swamp dank and lone,
From Virginia's hills and waters;
Woe is me, my stolen daughters.

Gone, gone—sold and gone,
To the rice swamp dank and lone.
There no mother's eye is near them,
There no mother's ear can hear them:
Never, when the torturing lash
Seams their back with many a gash,
Shall a mother's kindness bless them,
Or a mother's arms caress them."

With what a mournful cadence does the refrain fall upon the ear, "Gone, gone—sold and gone." It is like the doleful miserere chanted by cowled monks in dim cloisters, by a flickering taper's light, or the chiming of midnight bells for a departed soul.

Of Whittier's other poems we need say but little: all that he has written equally reflects the spirit that is within him, every line bears the stamp of his own subjectivity, and a pure and tender love for humanity everywhere gives tone to the pleadings of this sympathetic genius, whose orisons are oftenest for those who have no voice to plead for themselves.

His verses are neither elaborate nor ornate, but are characterized by chaste simplicity; they are entirely free from offensive mannerism, and though fervid and solemn for the most part, are yet sweet and plaintive, and at times full of airy grace and quiet mirthfulness, as "The Barefoot Boy," and "The Demon of the Study." The easy flowing rymth, grave beauty and naturalness of "Maud Muller," we think unrivaled by any ballad in our literature, and "The last walk in Autumn," with its beautiful symbolisms and religious earnestness, impresses itself upon the imagination like the glowing pictures of Titian or Raphael.

Whittier has never been accorded so high a position in the ranks of American poets as his scholastic attainments and artistic skill entitle him to; nor has there been that universal recognition of his genius which has rewarded the efforts of contemporaneous writers. To his early identification with the opponents of slavery, and his ardent and persistent advocacy of human rights, we may safely attribute his having failed to receive a more just and comprehensive appreciation. Yet his works shall live long after those more honored and renowned have been forgotten, because they are intrinsically greater, possessing a broader catholicity, a truer humanity, because founded upon upon an imperishable principle—"the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man."

THE FREEDMEN AT FORTRESS MONROE.

Rev. Mr. Lockwood, the missionary of the American Missionary Association, under date Dec. 2, writes:

'Called on Gen. Wool; was kindly received. Spoke to him about wood and a hospital for the colored people, as suggested by Dr. Brown. He said he would like to have Capt. Burleigh make out in writing and submit a plan for wood, and Dr. Brown for a hospital. He said, if the people who work for themselves should cut wood for the families of those who work for the Government, they ought to be paid for it.

'Our yesterday's services were interesting, as usual. I attended Sabbath school at the Tyler House. A Captain and a Lieutenant of an Indian regiment addressed the school. Brothers Herbert and Davis spoke also.

The latter said:

'I hope that all of you, old and young, will learn to read as I did. When I was converted, I was anxious to learn to read, God's Book. I kneeled down by my book [he here kneeled by the table], and prayed that God would teach me to read it—if only a little I would be thankful. And I learned, and you can, if you will, for you have no one to hinder you as I had. We should all show we are worthy of freedom. Only educate us, and we will show ourselves capable of knowledge. Some say we have not the same faculties and feelings with white folks. . . . . All we want is cultivation. What would the best soil produce without cultivation? We want to get wisdom; that is all we need. Let us get that, and we are made for time and eternity.'

Mr. McGraw, of Camp E. Union Coast Guard, spoke on praying in faith. He said;

'I was once wrecked on the coast of Africa. I was in a small boat, with six others, including a little girl and the wife of the captain. This woman, the only praying person on board, scarcely closed her eyes for six days and nights, but was constantly praying. When they were about to cast lots to see who should die for the rest, she entreated them to wait till she had prayed once more. Before the prayer was ended a sail hove in sight, and they were saved, such in the power of faith.'

'A colored brother from Hatteras spoke, and said we must be like a chain of love, so that if one link is jarred, the whole chain will feel it. Let us be like sailors, who, when the storm comes on, lower sail and when the storm is over, hoist sail again, and make for port. Let us march shoulder to shoulder, like soldiers, and if we die, die with our armor on. Let us love and pray for souls. And with many other seasonable words did he exhort the people.

'Brother Fisk, of the Massachusetts Sixteenth, who kept a shoe store in Savannah, Ga., and who was tarred and feathered about the time of John Brown's martyrdom, told his experience amid tears of sympathy from this people. The meeting was one long to be remembered. May the Lord direct in reference to Beaufort. Pray for me and this dear people.'

In another letter to Mr. Jocelyn, Mr. Lockwood says:

'I am improved in health. Brother Sheldon rendered good service last Sabbath: the talents of the people, too, were well brought out. The colored people are building a redoubt on the sand-bar north of the fort. Your visit has done much good, and will be long and pleasantly remembered. I have visited the sick at Red Cottage. Brother and sister Prink's little one is dead and buried. The funeral yesterday was very affecting. The parents feel the stroke, but kiss the rod. The schools of Mrs. Peak and Mr. Herbert are going on with new impulse. I hope soon to have one re-established at the fort. Mrs. Bailey is now well enough to resume her school. Mrs. Peake's day and evening schools are increasing. She exhibits a great deal of shrewdness in discipline. Many of the boys hope to be preachers, and the girls to be teachers.'

In one of Mr. Lockwood's letters, he reports a portion of one of the colored brother Carey's prayers, though he says it is impossible for him to give its force and beauty, as follows:

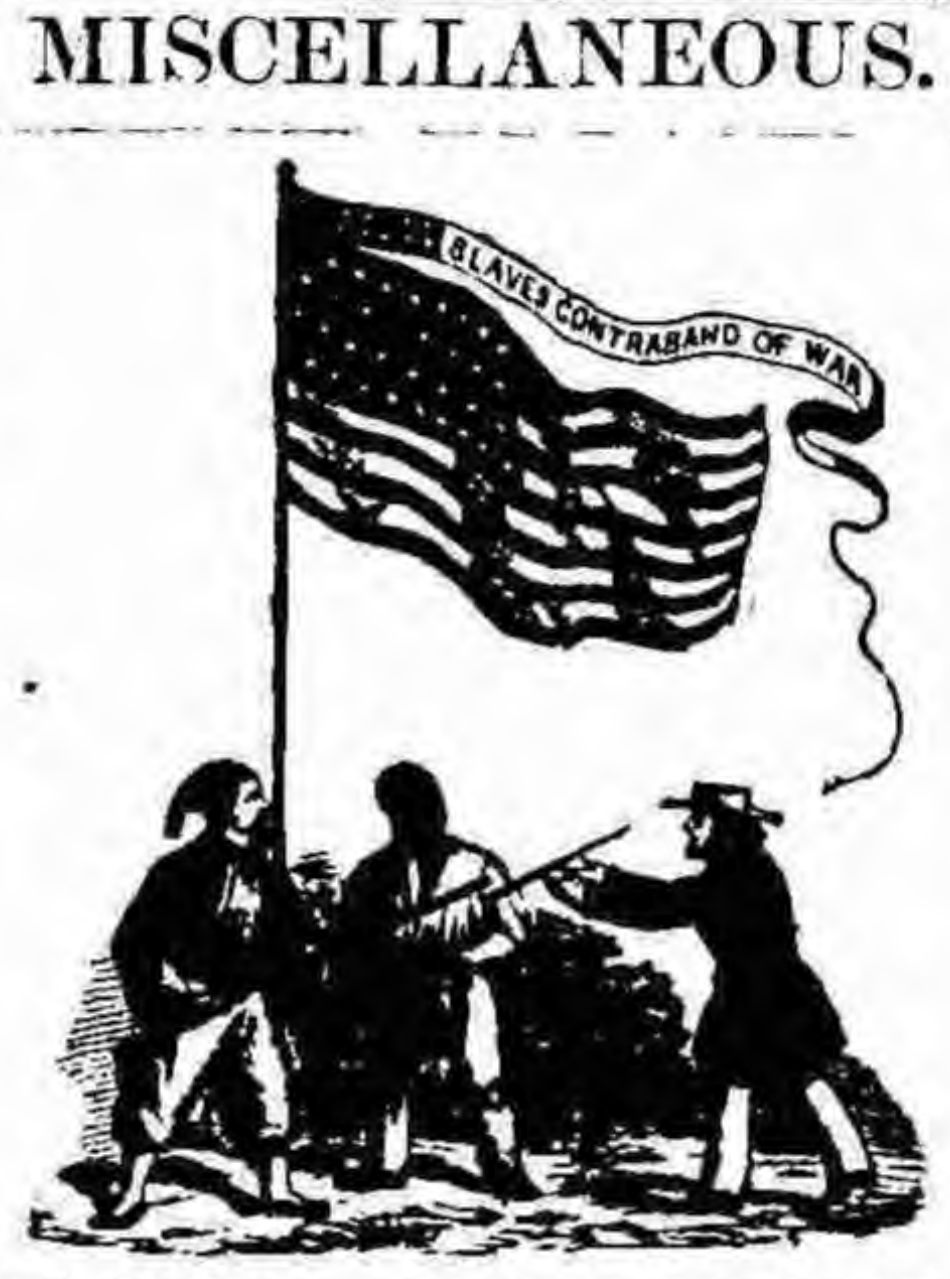
"O Lord, if you please, look down upon us this evening. I pray, and give us a closing blessing. We thank and praise thee for all that we have heard from the lips of our Northern brethren, who have come over the briny waters to preach to us the pure Gospel. O Lord, though I cannot read thy word, I thank thee that thou hast written it on the table of my heart, and given me an understanding mind, and kept it blazing before my eyes like the sun. Yet, O Lord, I confess that we have never been thankful enough for all thy blessings. We confess that we are like the children of Israel, ever ready to murmur and complain. But for murmurings, O Lord, you have given us blessings, and this makes us come for more. O Lord, we believe that you have come to deliver your people. O trample the secessionists under foot, bless the Union cause, and right every wrong. Bless the President, the Congress Hall and the Senate. Help them to make laws that shall be for the good of the Union, and the freedom of thy oppressed people, O Lord, I pray. Bless the army and the officers.—Make them wise as a serpent, and bold and persevering as a lion, till thy people are delivered. Look this evening upon our dear brethren and sisters and children far away in the home of bondage, especially those who have been carried away by the secessionists. Comfort their minds and interpose for their deliverance, and if they are not in Christ, bring them in, O Lord, I pray. Remember our dear brother (Jocelyn) who has been with us and is about to leave; preserve him on the mighty waters, and reward him for his labors of love. And remember our brother (Lockwood) who has come back to us. Strengthen him in the inner and outer man, and give him grace and strength for suffering time, that he may go in and out before us and do good. And when you have remembered all, remember me, and after you have done and suffered your holy will with me, please to receive me to yourself, O Lord, I pray through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

Under date of Dec. 3d, Mr. Lockwood says:

"This morning the ground is covered with snow, and the wind blows fiercely. It makes the poor, thinly clad 'contrabands' shiver, and the tented soldiers cower.—We have scarcely begun to supply the people with clothing and bedding.—They are especially in want of shoes and boots. One of the women is now sick in the Stephen Allen house at the Fort, on account of having gone barefoot so long.—Though she was a hard-worked field hand, she says she never went barefoot so late in the season before. This is but a specimen of a very large destitution. What shall we do to hasten the supply? Why not make an Appeal to the Sewing Circles for WARM clothing for children and women?—May God put it into the hearts of the charitable to turn their benefactions in this direction. There is a demand for more multiplication cards. Several hundred, even a thousand, could be very usefully distributed. More primers are wanted, but perhaps it may be best to wait for that about to be published by the Boston Tract Society."

The Committee have sent a quantity of alphabet cards and books to Port Royal, S. C., by a chaplain of the army, who is to report the state of things preparatory to the sending of a missionary. President Lincoln has authorized General Wool to employ a surgeon to attend specially upon the "vagants," as General Wool calls the ex-slaves. He thus designates them, because he does not like the term "contrabands." The term "vagrant," in the sense it is employed by General Wool, is thus defined by Webster: "Wandering, unsettled, moving without any certain direction. How long shall it be so with this unoffending, loyal, industrious, and much wronged people? Some uninformed or ill-disposed persons endeavor to persuade Northern persons that clothing, &c., from the benevolent is not wanted, but we assure the public that the appeals made by our missionary can be relied upon. Will they respond to the urgent call?

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coshocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah, says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.

2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.

3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.

4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.

5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.

6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps) but will cleanse and soften the skin.

7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

P. A. WHITE,
Corner of Frankfort & Gold Sts.,
GENERAL
COMMISSION MERCHANT,
KEEPS CONSTANTLY ON HAND
A FRESH AND PURE ASSORTMENT
OF
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS
GENUINE
LUBIN'S EXTRACTS
AND OTHER PERFUMERY,
FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH
BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES,
FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA
SEGARS, &C., &C.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS
carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S
VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR
FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH, AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Gray.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hair brush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off, always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S
STRENGTHENING PLASTER.
AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR
LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT,
SPRAINS, BRUISES, &C., &C

Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly servicable

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent relief from its use, as it keeps a continued heat, acting as a gentle counter irritant, removing the inflamation of the stomach without breaking the skin. Persons engaged in sedentary pursuits should use these Plasters constantly, as they give strength to parts weakened by constant sitting and stooping.

For STRAINS and SPRAINS they are infallible, affording relief immediately and without fail.

For RHEUMATISM there is no external application equal to them, promoting the general circulation, and

PREVENTING A RETURN
of the excruciating pain.

These plasters are prepared with great care, and of the best material, and to prevent fraud the name of the originator is placed on the back of each one. In purchasing ask for BADEAU'S PLASTER. See that the name BADEAU is written on the back, or you will be deceived.

P. A. WHITE, Sole Proprietor.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt: at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes of people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed, and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.
Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.
All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.
PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin $1.00
CONTENTS;
EMBELLISHMENT.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizensihp,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson
Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry,—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S. Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G. B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Merce Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sell Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.
Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with
Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.
BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker
between Broadway & Crosby sts.

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo., 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S. H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776, 4. The Articles of Associatian 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia, and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added.

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
60 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly on ehundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 23 NEW YORK, JANUARY 4, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African,
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY,
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
NO. 48 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.
Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; ifmore than that, Five Cents for each additional line.
All communications for the paper must be addressed ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART I.

By myself, the Lord of Ages,
I have sworn to right the wrong;
I have pledged my word unbroken,
For the weak against the strong.
[H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XXVI.

RETURN TO MISSISSIPPI.

The evening, for the season, was very fine; the sky beautiful; the stars shining unusually bright; while Henry alone on the hurricane deck of the 'Queen of the West,' stood in silence abaft the wheel-house, gazing intently at the golden orbs of Heaven. Now shoots a meteor, then seemingly shot a comet, again glistened a brilliant planet which almost startled the gazer; and while he yet stood motionless in wonder, looking into the heavens, a blazing star whose scintillations dazzled the sight, and for the moment bewildered the mind, was seen apparently to vibrate in a manner never before observed by him.

At these things Henry was filled with amazement, and disposed to attach more than ordinary importance to them, as having an especial bearing in his case; but the mystery finds interpretation in the fact that the emotions were located in his own brain, and not exhibited by the orbs of Heaven.

Through the water plowed the steamer, the passengers lively and mirthful—sometimes amusingly noisy, whilst the adventurous and heart-stricken fugitive, without a companion or friend with whom to share his grief and sorrows, and aid in untangling his then deranged mind, threw himself in tribulation upon the humble pallet assigned him, there to pour out his spirit in communion with the Comforter of souls on high.

The early rising of the passengers aroused him from apparently an abridged night of intermitting sleep, when creeping away into a by place, he spent the remainder of the day. Thus by sleeping through the day, and watching in the night—induced by the proximity to his old home—did the runaway spend the time during the first two days of his homeward journey.

Falling into a deep sleep early on the evening of the third day, he was suddenly aroused about eleven o'clock by the harsh singing of the black fireman on the steamer:

'Natchez under the Hill!
Natchez under the Hill!'

sung to an air with which they ever on the approach of a steamer, greet the place, as seemingly a sorrowful reminiscence of their ill-fated brethren continually sold there; when springing to his feet and hurrying upon deck, he found the vessel full upon the wharf boat stationed at the Natchez landing.

Taking advantage of the moment—passing from the wheel-house down the ladder to the lower deck—thought by many to have gone forever from the place—Henry effected, without detection, an easy transit to the wharf, and from thence up the Hill, where again he found himself amid the scenes of his saddest experience, and the origination and organization of the measures upon which were based his brightest hopes and expectations for the redemption of his race in the South.

CHAPTER XXVII.

A NIGHT OF ANXIETY.

On Saturday evening, about half past seven, was it that Henry dared again to approach the residence of Colonel Franks. The family had not yet retired, as the lights still burnt briliantly in the great house, when, secreted in the shrubbery contiguous to the hut of Mammy Judy and Daddy Joe, he lie patiently awaiting the withdrawal in the mansion.

'There's no use in talkin,' Andy, he's gittin' suspicious of us all,' said Charles; 'as he threatens us all with the traders; an' if Henry don't come soon, I'll have to leave anyhow! But the old people, Andy, I can't think of leavin' them!'

'Do you think da would go if da had a chance, Chaules?'

'Go? yes 'ndeed, Andy, they'd go this night if they could git off. Since the sellin' of Maggie, and Henry's talkin to 'em, and his goin' an' takin' little Joe, an' Ailsey, an' Cloe, an' Polly an' all clearin' out, they altered their notion about stayin' with ole Franks.'

'Wish we could know when Henry's comin' back! Wonder whar 'e is,' said Andy.

'Here!' was the reply in a voice so cautiously suppressed, and so familiarly distinct that they at at once recognized it to be that of their long absent and most anxiously looked for friend. Rushing upon him, they mutually embraced, with tears of joy and anxiety.

'How have you been, anyhow, Henry?' exclaimed Charles in a suppressed tone. 'I's so glad to see yeh, dat I aint agwine to speak to yeh, so I aint!' added Andy.

'Come, brethren, to the woods!' said Henry; when the three went directly to the forest, two and a half miles from the city.

'Well now, Henry, tell us all about yourself. What you been doin'?' inquired Charles.

'I know of nothing about myself worth telling,' replied he.

'Oh, pshaw! wot saut a way is dat, Henry; yeh wont tell abody nothin'. Pshaw, dats no way,' grumbled Andy.

'Yes, Andy, I've much to tell you; but not of myself; 'tis about our poor oppressed people everywhere I've been; but we have not now time for that.'

'Why, cant you tell us nothin'?'

'Well, Andy, since you must have something, I'll tell you this much: I've been in the Dismal Swamp among the high conjurors, and saw the heads, old Maudy Ghamus and Gamby Gholar.'

'Hoop! now 'e's a talkin'! ef 'e wasn't I wouldn't tell yeh so! An' wat da sa to yeh, Henry?'

'They welcomed me as the messenger of their deliverance; and as a test of their gratitude, made me a high conjuror after their own order'

'O pshaw, Henry! Da done what? Wy, ole feller, yeh is high sho 'nough!'

'What good does it do, Henry, to be a conjuror? inquired Charles.

'It makes the more ignorant slaves have greater confidence in, and more respect for their headmen and leaders.'

'Oh yes, I see now! Because I couldn't see why you would submit to become a conjuror if it done no good.'

'That's it, Charles! as you know, I'll do anything not morally wrong, to gain our freedom; and to effect this, we must take the slaves, not as we wish them to be, but as we really find them to be.'

'You say it gives power, Henry; is there any reality in the art of conjuration?'

'It only makes the slaves afraid of you if you are called a 'conjuror,' that's all!'

'Oh, I understand it well enough now!' concluded Charles.

'I undehstood well 'nough fuss, but I want to kmow all I could, dat's all! added Andy. 'Ole Maudy's a high feller, aint 'e, Henry?'

'Oh yes! he's the Head,' replied Charles

'No,' explained Henry; 'he's not now 'Head,' but Gamby Gholar, who has for several years held that important position among them. Their Council consists of Seven, called the 'Heads,' and their Chief is called 'the Head.' Everything among them, in religion, medicine, laws, or politics, of a public character, is carried before the 'Head' in Council to be settled and disposed of.'

'Now we understan',' said Andy; 'but tell us, Henry, how yeh get 'long 'mong de folks whar yeh bin all dis time?'

'Very well everywhere, except Kentucky, and there you cant move them toward a strike!'

'Kentucky!' rejoined Andy; 'I all'as thought dat de slaves in dat State was de bes' treated uv any, an' dat da bin all 'long spectin' to be free.'

'That's the very mischief of it, Andy! 'Tis this confounded 'good treatment' and expectation of getting freed by their oppressors, that has been the curse of the slave. All shrewd masters, to keep their slaves in check, promise them their freedom at their, the master's death, as though they were certain to die first. This contents the slave, and makes him obedient and willing to serve and toil on, looking forward to the promised redemption. This is just the case precisely now in Kentucky. It was my case. While Franks treated me well, and made promises of freedom to my wife'—and he gave a deep sigh—'I was satisfied, though a freeman, to remain with him and toil on hoping for the time of fulfilment of the promise. I would doubtless have been with him yet; but his bad treatment—his inhuman treatment of my wife—my poor, poor wife!—poor Mageie! was that which gave me courage, and made me determined to throw off the yoke, let it cost me what it would. Talk to me of a good master! A 'good master' is the very worst of masters. Were they all cruel and inhuman, or could the slaves be made to see their treatment aright, they would not endure their oppression for a single hour!'

'I sees it, I sees it!' replied Andy.

'An' so do I,' added Charles; 'who couldn't see that?'

'I tells yeh, Henry, it was mighty hand for me to make up my mine to leave ole Potteh; but ever sence you an' Chaules an' me made de vow togedder, I got mo' an' mo' to hate 'im. I could chop 'is head off sometime, I get so mad. I bleve I could chop off Miss Mary' head; an' I likes hur; she mighty good to we black folks.'

'Pshaw! yes 'ndeed; ole Frank's head would be nothin' for me to chop off; I could chop off mistess head, an' you know she's a good woman; but I mus' be mighty mad fus'! said Charles.

'That's it, you see. There is no danger that a 'good' master or mistress will ever be harmed by the slaves. There's neither of you, Andy, could muster up courage enough to injure a 'good master' or mistress. And even I now could not have the heart to injure Mrs. Franks,' said Henry.

'Nor me,' replied Charles.

'Yes, 'ndeed, dats a fac', case I knows I couldn' hurt Miss Mary Potteh. I bleve I'd almos' chop off anybody's head if I see 'em 'tempt to hurt 'e!' added Andy; when they heartily laughed at each other.

'Just so!' said Henry; 'a slave has no just conception of his own wrongs. Had I dealt with Franks as he deserved, for doing that for which he would have taken the life of any man had it been his case—tearing my wife from my bosom!—the most I could take courage directly to do, was to leave him, and take as many from him as I could induce to go. But maturer reflection drove me to the expedient of avenging the general wrongs of our people, by inducing the slave, in his might, to scatter red ruin throughout the region of the South. But still, I cannot find it in my heart to injure an individual, except in personal conflict.'

'An has yeh done it, Henry?' earnestly inquired Andy.

'Yes, Andy; yes, I have done it! and I thank God for it! I have taught the slave that mighty lesson: to strike for Liberty. 'Rather to die as freemen, than live as slaves!''

'Thang God!' exclaimed Charles.

'Amen!' responded Andy.

'Now, boys, to the most important event of your lives!' said Henry.

'Wat's dat?' asked Andy.

'Why, get ready immediately to leave your oppressors to-night!' replied he.

'Glory to God!' cried Andy.

'Hallelujah!' responded Charles.

'Quietly! softly! easy, boys, easy!' admonished Henry, when the party in breathless silence, on tip-toe moved off from the thicket in which they were then seated, toward the city.

It was now one o'clock in the night, and Natchez shrouded in darkness and quiet, when the daring and fearless runaway with his companions, entered the enclosure of the great house grounds, and approached the door of the hut of Daddy Joe and Mammy Judy.

'Who dat! who dat, I say? Ole man, don' yeh hear some un knockin' at de doh?' with fright said Mammy Judy in a smothered tone, hustling and nudging the old man, who was in a deep sleep, when Henry rapped softly at the door.

'Wat a mautta, ole 'umin?' after a while inquired the old man, rubbing his eyes.

'Some un at de doh!' she replied.

'Who dar?' inquired daddy Joe.

'A friend!' replied Henry with suppressed voice.

'Ole man, open de doh quick! I bleve in me soul dat Henry! Open de doh!' said mammy.

On the door being opened, the surprise and joy of the old woman, was only equalled by the emotion of her utterance.

'Dar! dar now, ole man! I tole 'em so, but da 'uden bleve me! I tole 'em 'e comin', but da 'uden lis'en to me! Did yeh git 'er, me son? Little Joe cum too? O Laud! whar's my po' chile! Whar's Margot?'

To evade further inquiry, Henry replied that they were all safe, and hoping to see her and the old man.

'How yeh bin my chile? I'se glad to see yeh, but mighty sorry yeh cum back; case de wite folks say, da once git der hands on yeh da neber let yeh go 'g'in! Potteh, Craig, Denny, and all on 'em, da tryin' to fine whar yeh is, hunny!'

'I am well mammy, and come now to see what is to be done with you old people," said Henry.

'We 'ont be hear long, chile; da gwine sell us all to de traders!' replied mammy with a deep sigh.

'Yes chile,' added Daddy Joe; 'we all gwine to de soul-driveh!'

'You'll go to no soul-drivers!' replied Henry, the flash of whose eyes startled mammy Judy.

'How yeh gwine help it, chile?' kindly asked daddy Joe.

'I'll show you. Come, come Mammy! You and daddy get ready, as I've come to take you away, and must be at the river before two o'clock,' said Henry, who with a single jerk of a board in the floor of the hut, had reached the hidden treasure of the old people.

'Who gwine wid us, chile?' inquired mammy Judy.

'Charles, Andy and his female friend, besides some we shall pick up by the way!' replied Henry.

'Now he's a talkin'!' jocosely said Charles, looking at Andy with a smile, at the mention of his female friend.

''E ain' doin' nothin' else!' replied Andy.

'Wat become o' po' little Tony! 'E sleep here to-night case he not berry well. Po' chile!' sighed the old woman.

'We'll take him too, of course; and I would that I could take every slave in Natchez!' replied Henry. 'It is now half-past one,' said he, looking at his watch; 'and against two we must be at the river. Go Andy, and get your friend, and meet us at the old burnt sycamore stump above the ferry. Come mammy and daddy, not a word for your lives!' admonished Henry; when taking their package on his back, and little Tony by the hand, they left forever the great house premises of Col. Stephen Franks in Natchez.

On approaching the river a group was seen, which proved to consist of Andy, Clara (to whom his integrity was plighted), and the faithful old stump, their guide-post for the evening. Greeting each other with tears of joy and fearful hearts, they passed down to the water's edge, but a few hundred feet below.

The ferry boat in this instance was a light built yawl, commanded by a white man; the ferry one of many such selected along the shore, expressly for such occasions.

'Have you a pass?' demanded the boatman as a ruse, lest he might be watched by a concealed party: 'let me see it!'

'Here sir,' said Henry, presenting to him by the light of a match which he held in his hand for the purpose, the face of a half eagle.

'Here is seven of you, an' I cant do it for that!' in an humble undertone supplicating manner, said the man; 'I axes that fer one!'

The weight of seven half eagles dropped into his hand, caused him eagerly to seize the oars, making the quickest possible time to the opposite side of the river.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

STUDYING HEAD WORK.

'Now Henry,' said Andy; after finding themselves in a safe place some distance from the landing; 'you promise' w'en we stauted to show us de Noth star—which is it?' On looking up the sky was too much obscured with clouds.

'I cant show it to you now, but when we stop to refresh, I'll then explain it to you,' replied he.

'It high time now, chil'en, we had a mou'-full to eat ef we got travel dis way!' suggested mammy Judy, breaking silence for the first time since they left the great house.

'Yes,' replied Andy; 'Clara and little Tony mus' wan' to eat, an' I knows wat dis chile wants!' touching himself on the breast.

The runaways stopped in the midst of an almost impenetrable thicket, kindled a fire to give them light, where to take their fare on cold meat, bread and butter, and cheese, of which the cellar and pantry of Franks, to which mammy Judy and Charles had access, afforded an ample supply.

Whilst the others were engaged in refreshing, Henry aside of a stump, was busily engaged with pencil and paper.

'Whar's Henry, dat 'e aint hear eatin?' inquired mammy Judy, looking about among the group.

'I sho ole 'umin, 'e's oveh dar by de stump,' replied daddy Joe.

'Wat dat boy doin' dar? Henry wat yeh doin'? Mus' be studyin' head-wuck, I reckon! Sho boy! betteh come 'long an' git a mou'full to eat. Yeh ain' hungry I reckon,' said the old woman.

'Henry, we dun eatin' now. You mos' ready to tell us 'bout de Noth star?' said Andy.

[PUBLISHER'S NOTE.—A beautiful diagram of Ursa Major, or the Great Bear, drawn by the author—called "Henry's Plan of the North Star, drawn on a stump in a forest of Louisiana"—should accompany this graphic sketch, to render it sufficiently effective. It will be presented if the story is published in book form.]

'Yes, I will show you,' said Henry, walking forward and seating himself in the centre of the group. 'You see these seven stars which I've drawn on this piece of paper—numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7! From the peculiarity of the shape of their relative position to each other, the group is called the 'Dipper,' because to look at them they look like a 'dipper' or a vessel with a long handle.

'I see it; dont you see dat, Chaules?' said Andy.

'Certainly, anybody could see that,' replied Charles.

'Ole umin,' said daddy Joe, 'don' yeh see it?'

'Sho' ole man! aint I lookin!' replied the old woman.

'You all see it then, do you?' inquired Henry.

Yes, yes!' was the response.

'Now then,' continued Henry; 'for an explanation by which you can tell the North star, when or from whatever place you may see it. The two stars of the Dipper, numbered 6 and 7, are called the pointers, because they point directly to the North Star, a very small, bright star, far off from the pointers, generally seeming by itself, especially when the other stars are not very bright.

The star numbered 8, above the pointer, a little to the left, is a dim, small star, which at first sight would seem to be in a direct line with it; but by drawing a line through 7 to 8, leaves a space as you see between the star 6 and lower part of the line; or forms an angle (as the 'book men' call it, Andy) of ten degrees. The star number 9 in the distance, and a little to the right, would also seem to be directly opposite the pointers; but by drawing a line through 7 to 9, there is still a space left between the lower end of the line and 6. Now trace the dotted line from 6 through the center of 7, and it leads directly to 10. This is the North star, the slave's great Guide to Freedom! Do you all now understand it?'

'See it!' replied Andy; 'anybody can't see dat, ain' got sense 'nuff to run away, an' no call to be free, dat's all! I knows all about it. I reckon I almos' know it betteh dan you, Henry!'

'Dar, dar, I tole yeh so! I tole yeh dat boy studyin' head wuck, an' yeh 'uden bleve me! 'E run about yendeh so much, an' kick up 'e heel dat 'e talk so much gramma an' wot not, dat body haudly undehstan'! I knows dat 'e bin 'splainin do. Ole man, yeh understan'im?' said Mammy Judy.

'Ah, ole 'umin, dat I does! an' I' been gone forty years 'go, I' know'd dis much 'bout it!' replied daddy Joe.

'Above number 2 the second star of the handle of the Dipper, close to it, you will see by steadily looking, a very small star, which I call the knob or thumb-holt of the handle. You may always tell the Dipper by the knob of the handle; and the North star by the Dipper. The Dipper, during the night you will remember, continues to change its position in relation to the earth, so that it sometimes seems quite upside down.'

'See here, Henry, does you know all'—

'Stop, Andy, I've not done yet!' interrupted he.

'Uh, heh!' said Andy.

'When the North star cannot be seen,' continued Henry; 'you must depend alone upon nature for your guide. Feel, in the dark, around the trunks or bodies of trees, especially oak, and whenever you feel moss on the bark, that side on which the moss grows is always to the north. One more explanation and then we'll go. Do you see this little round metalic box? This is called a'—

'Wat dat you call 'talic, Henry? Sho, boy! yeh head so full ob gramma an' sich like dat yeh don' know how to talk!' interrupted mammy Judy.

'That only means iron or brass, or some hard thing like that, mammy,' explained he. 'The little box of which I was speaking, has in it what is called a compass. It has a face almost like a clock or watch, with one straight hand which reaches entirely across the face, and turns or shakes whenever you move the box. This hand or finger is a piece of metal called, 'loadstone' or 'magnet,' and termed the Needle of the compass; and this end with the little cross on it, always points in one direction, and that is to the north. See: it makes no difference which way it is moved, this point of the needle turns back and points that way.'

'An mus' ye al'as go de way it pints, Henry?' inquired Andy.

'No; not except you are running away from the South to Canada, or the Free States; because both of these places are in the north. But when you know which way the north is, you can easily find any other direction you wish. Notice this, all of you. When your face is to the north, your back is to the south; your right hand to the east, and your left to the west. Can you remember this?'

'O yes, easy!' replied Andy.

'Then you will always know which way to go, by the compass showing you which is north,' explained Henry.

'What does dese letters roun' hear mean, Henry?' farther inquired Andy.

'Only what I have already explained; meaning North, East, West, and South, with their intermediate——

'Dar!' interrupted Mammy Judy,' 'e gone into big talk g'in! sho!'

'Intermediate, means between, mammy,' explained Henry.

'Den ef dat's it, I lis'en at yeh; case I want gwine bautheh my head wid yo' jography an' big talk like dat!' replied the old woman.

'What does a compass cost?' inquired Charles, who had been listening with intense interest and breathless silence at the information given by their much loved fellow bondman.

'One-half a dollar, or four bits, as we call it, so that every slave who will, may get one. Now, I've told you all that's necessary to guide you from a land of slavery and long suffering, to a land of liberty and future happiness. Are you now all satisfied with what you have learned?'

'Chauls, aint 'e high! See here, Henry, does yeh know all dat yeh tell us? Wy, ole feller, you is way up in de boobanahs! Wy you is conjure sho 'nuff. Ef I on'y know'd dis befo', ole Potteh neveh keep me a day. O, pshaw! I bin gone long 'go!'

'He'll do!' replied Charles.

'Well, well, well!' apostrophised Mammy Judy; 'dat beats all! Sence I was baun, I nebber hear de like! All along I been tellen on yeh, dat 'e got 'is head chuck cleanfull ob cumbustable, an' all dat, but yeh 'ud'n bleve me! Now yeh see!'

'Ole umin I 'fess dat's all head wuck! Dat beats Punton! dat boy's nigh up to Maudy Ghamus! Dat boy's gwine to be mighty!' with a deep sigh replied Daddy Joe.

'Come, now, let's go!' said Henry.

On rising from where they had all been sitting with fixed attention upon their leader and his instruction, the sky was observed through the only break in the thicket above their heads, when suddenly they simultaneously exclaimed:

'There's the Dipper! there's the North star!' all pointing directly to the God-like beacon of liberty to the American slave.

Leaving Mammy Judy and Daddy Joe, Clara and little Tony, who had quite recovered from his indisposition the early part of the night, in charge of a friend who designedly met them on the Louisiana side of the river, with heightened spirits and a new impulse, Henry, Charles and Andy, started on their journey in the direction of their newly described guide, the North star.

'Star of the North thou art not bigger,
Than the diamond in my ring;
Yet every black star-gazing nigger,
Looks up to thee as some great thing!'

was the apostrophe of an American writer to the sacred orb of Heaven, which in this case was fully verified.

During the remainder of the night and next day, being Sabbath, they continued their travel, only resting when overcome with fatigue. Continuing in Louisiana by night, and resting by day, Wednesday morning, before daybreak, brought them to the Arkansas river. At first they intended to ford, but like the rivers generally of the South, its depth and other contingencies made it necessary to seek some other means. After consultation in a canebreak, day beginning to dawn, walking boldly up to a man just loosening a skiff from its fastenings, they demanded a passage across the river. This the skiffman refused peremtorily on any pretext, rejecting the sight of a written pass.

'I want none of yer nigger passes!' angrily said he; 'they aint none uv 'em good 'or nothin', nohow! It's no use to show it to me, ye's cant git over!'

First looking meaningly and determinedly at Charles and Andy—biting his lips—then addressing himself to the man, Henry said:

'Then I have one that will pass us!' presenting the unmistaking evidence of a shining gold eagle, at the sight of which emblem of his country's liberty, the skiffman's patriotism was at once awakened, and their right to pass as American freemen indisputable.

A few energetic muscular exertions with the oars, and the sturdy boatman promptly landed his passengers on the other side of the river.

'Now gentlm'n, I done the clean thing, didn't I, by jingo! Show me but half a chance an' I'll ack the man clean out. I dont go in for this slaveholding o' people in these Newnited States uv the South, nohow, so I dont. Dog gone it, let every feller have a fair shake!'

Dropping into his hand the ten dollar gold piece, the man bowed earnestly, uttering—

'I hope ye's good luck, gent'men! Ye'll al'as fine me ready when ye's come 'long this way!'

[From the N. Y. Tribune.]

THE COAST CONTRABANDS.

Correspondence of the N. Y. Tribune.

PORT ROYAL, S. C., Dec. 12, 1861.

The condition of the people of color on the Atlantic coast, as brought within the sphere of our blockading squadron, fortresses, and military posts, is becoming more and more interesting every day. Beginning at the eastern shore of Virginia, from Fortress Monroe to Fort Pickens, we find at least fifty thousand persons whose peculiar relations to the Government and country demand the most serious inquiry. All along the sea-board are thousands of able-bodied men, who have been accustomed to enjoy many personal privileges, and whose employments render them valuable to the public service. The most of the maritime labor of the coast, in certain directions, is performed by colored hands. The coasters of the Virginia inlets, of the Delaware and Chesapeake Bays, of the more southern shore all the way down to the lowest key of Alabama and Florida are manned, and in many instances navigated, entirely by men of color. The vessels they manage are comparatively small, and the trade they carry on is comparatively humble. But, be that as it may, their position and commerce are those of much practical usefulness to all concerned.

When the smuggling process was at its hight on both the Eastern and Western shores of the Virginia and Maryland peninsula, the coutrabands and free colored laborers were compelled to carry it on. Goods, arms, powder, shot, uniforms, and other articles of great service to the Rebels were landed by coasters on one side, carried across the country to the nearest tide-water on the other, and then smuggled by little pungys into the Rebel army at Richmond and other places, all the way from Cape Charles to Tangiers Island and Baltimore. Secret dens of smugglers have been in active operation, at times, for tha past six months, and even before the breaking out of the Rebellion, from Cherrystone Lighthouse to Pokomoke River, and up to the line that separates Maryland from Delaware. In all this marauding on the lawful commerce of the coast—a marauding that has been playing constantly and powerfully into the hands of the deadly enemies of the Republic—the despised contrabands have been compelled to play a direct and constant part. The same is equally true along every inch of the Southern Rebel coast at this moment. It is here we shall find one of the secret sources of Rebel strength, the development of which has frequently surprised the lookers-on in Verona.

The managers of the rebellion have understood this whole matter perfectly. They have completely hood-winked those they were bound to circumvent. "Lie low and keep dark," has been the policy. All was comparatively fair on the surface, while within was constantly working the mystery of iniquity. Their motto was:

"We curse the sins we're not inclined to,
And cleave to those we have a mind to."

Hence, while professing the policy of quiet, the rebel leaders have employed their seeming masterly inactivity in the most cunningly devised plans of patient, secret, persevering action.

Not only the commerce of the Southern coast, but the defenses also, speak of the presence and controlling power of the contraband element. The fortifications at Yorktown, the masked batteries on the Eastern shore of Virginia, those on the York and James Rivers, scattered along from Hampton Roads up to Richmond, the immense works at Craney Island, the smaller but still powerful ones at Sewall's and Pig's Points, all attest how much can and has been done by the "power behind the throne greater than the throne itself."

All along the coast from Roanoke Inlet, Forts Hatteras and Clark, Ocracoke, Beaufort, N. C., Georgetown, S. C., Charleston, Port Royal, down to the lowest embankment of the enemy at Pensacola, near Key West and New Orleans, up to the works on the bayous and rivers, to Manassas and the shores of the Potomac, the servile labor of the South has been most actively and profitably employed. In the captnred Fort Hatteras were found attested accounts of moneys paid—Southern capital—in return for Southern slave labor. There is not a fortification, nor a storehouse of munitions of war, not a ship employed or being rebuilt and refitted, in all the Southern rebel country, but is directly indebted for progress and completion chiefly to the outlawed contrabands.

In view of these undisputed facts, there can be but one question before the united people of America. The immediate and universal confiscation of all such rebel instruments of power must be imperatively demanded and rigidly enforced. It is a perfectly clear case that if the rebels can employ contraband property to destroy the Union, the Government and people of the Union have a right to employ that property to preserve it.

The accumulation of negroes at Fortress Monroe, Fort Hatteras, Port Royal, and other strategic points, is by no means the evil to be dreaded which many seem to suppose. The aggregation of people, if rightly managed, may be made an element of great internal strength to the nation. The importance of teaching it, of inspiring it with hope, of elevating its moral purposes, of rewarding its industry, must be perceived at a glance by every patriot. When the whole question is well understood it can be conducted to a successful issue as safely as any other in the Republic.

The number of colored people at Fortress Monroe previous to the arrival of the Union troops and fleet, was quite small. A few old residents took care, chiefly, of the younger persons who came as servants to the officers of the army and navy and the casual visitors at Old Point Comfort. But the advent of the Union force has gradually swelled the number, until now Quartermaster Talmage, U S. A., serves out to them from seventeen hundred to two thousand rations daily. Capt. Taylor, also of the army (a nephew of the late President), in his official position, does what he can consistently do with regard to their comfort. The building the most of them occupy for quarters is a good one. It is situated near the large machine-shop of the Government, and presents an appearance in front similar to that of the Barracks in the Park at New York. In the centre and attic are large bunks for sleeping; at the sides are long tables; in the rear is a suitable cooking apartment. The occupants fare as well as any of our soldiers in barracks.

In one of the adjacent buildings, several families are provided for as well as the rooms will allow. Here the washing and cooking for certain outsiders are carried on. The women and children are mostly on these premises. They have plenty of food, fire, and water. The clothing department is rather straightened.

The principal work done by the contrabands, thus far, has been loading and unloading Government vessels, building new roads, including that really important public improvement, the railroad from the lighthouse on the point near the beach all the way around the interior of Fortress Monroe. The completion of this work alone by contraband labor will be a saving of hundreds of thousands of dollars to the United States.

It should be borne in mind that no permanent arrangement has been contemplated for paying regular wages to the contrabands. Accounts have been kept on this account, but their earnings, as a general thing, have not been held to belong to them. Hence, while labor has been constantly required of them, they have none of the incentives to labor which are found in fair wages for a fair day's work. They have not been furnished with clothes, except by special provision. They have been told, in many instances, that all they earned would be paid over to their former owners. Under these circumstances, it may well be imagined that men would hardly have many inducements to prosecute their labors. Yet it is on record that, notwithstanding these discouragements, the contrabands are doing nearly all the hardest manual labor that is being done at Fortress Monroe; and this, too, at a time of war, when the garrison and its outpost, with the fleet, embrace the wants of at least 30,000 souls.

At Beaufort, South Carolina, a few nights ago, four contrabands came on board the transport Gemsbock, in a whaleboat. They proved to be a valuable accession to our blockading force. One of them is a first-rate carpenter, another is one of the best pilots on the coast, the other two are stevedores. It was pleasant to notice how cordially they were received. A naval officer proposed that the carpenter should be put on the list of applicants for a carpentership in the navy, thus showing how little prejudice there is against employing men of color in the naval working force. In fact, there is no such prejudice among seamen as a class. They mess with their colored shipmates, toil, suffer, rejoice, sing, and divide prizes together, without showing the least difference. In this respect, Commerce is king over Cotton.

Off Wilmington, N. C., another company escaped to the Amanda. Here, too, they met a favorable reception—giving not only valuable services, but trustworthy information as to the construction and location of certain rebel war steamers. If it could be known on shore how well such fugitives are received, others would follow, to the great advantage of the service. It is believed, on good authority, that if a judicious attack were made on Fort Macon, not only many of the contrabands would join the Union flag, but that there are thousands of white inhabitants in the vicinity who would discourage the firing of a gun from the Fort.

There are numerous important and interesting facts with regard to the whole question occurring at Port Royal, which I shall communicate to you in my next.

LETTER FROM BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 26, 1861.

DEAR ANGLO:—Doubtless you have long since classed our promise to write, among many others, which like the crust of our Christmas mince pie, was made to be broken; but want of time, and dearth of news, must plead our excuse. I will now, however, drop you a few hasty lines concerning the doings here of this week, so far as have come under my observation.

On Monday night we visited a concert given at the Sharp street M. E. church, for the benefit of the same. The concert was under the direction of Mr. Simpson, the leader of the Sharp street choir, and was highly creditable to all parties concerned in it. The concert was of vocal and instrumental music, and without wishing to give to any one more praise than to another, as they all deserved the applause given them, those who more particularly attracted our attention were, of the performers, Mr. H. H. Webb, pianist, and Mr. Fenton Mallory, flutist; and of the sweet voiced songstresses who ravished our ears, Miss Susie Braddicks, the bird of song, and Miss Kelly particularly delighted us. Much praise is due to the leader, Mr. Simpson, for the manner in which the concert was conducted, and a solo piece called "Gethsemane" which he sang, was encored unanimously.

We have our usual number of fairs, despite the "war times." On Christmas day they were opened at the Presbyterian church, Bethel, Sharp street, Orchard street, Waters Chapel, St. Thomas, Zion and others; so you may judge that we are well supplied with them. I have not as yet had time to visit any of them, except at the Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Harvey is President; at Bethel church, Mrs. Kennard, President; and at Waters Chapel, Mrs. Keys, President. These ladies, assisted by a number of charitably disposed young ladies who always respond promptly and willingly to the call of duty and charity, have stocked their tables with numerous useful and ornamental articles, making an exceedingly attractive appearance. They seem, however, not so well patronized as they were last Christmas.

This afternoon the Sisters of Providence, a colored Catholic sisterhood keeping a day and boarding-school for females, gave an exhibition in the hall under St. Francis' church, which at an early hour was densely packed, and many were compelled to go away unable to gain admittance. Being of a persevering nature, and not of large stature, by squeezing into cracks and making good use of our elbows, having also a total disregard of corns and anathemas, after some fifteen minutes' hard struggling we succeeded in getting a foothold upon the back of a chair, said chair being already occupied by two others, from which elevated and airy position we first bestowed our most benignant smile upon the assembled audience, and then taking a firm hold with our toes, and an affectionate grip on the coat collar of another "specimen," just to steady ourself, we prepared to listen; and it certainly was well worthy of its patronage.—The children, small as well as large, recited admirably, and the young ladies performed and sang in a manner which elicited the greatest applause. Miss Lake, of Annapolis, one of the pupils, was particularly admired and applaused for her performance on the piano, and whilst all sang well, we were particularly charmed by the sweet voice of Miss Mary Jakes, who is quite young as yet, but bids fair to be one of the sweetest voiced of our songstresses.

So delighted were we with the performance, that in an evil moment we forgot the precarious nature of our foothold, and furnished a practical illustration, done to the life, that "he that exalteth himself shall be abased."

Yesterday was duly honored and observed in the churches and houses of our people, and fun was rampant: but save the opening of the various fairs, nothing of public interest came under our observation.

We must now bring our letter to a close, and as the New Year is fast approaching, I will take a step forward to meet it, and wish you and your subscribers, a Happy New Year. MAJOR.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, JANUARY 4, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of he news-dealers everywhere.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

We are said to be of a joyous race, gleaning joy and content, or at least mirthful laughter when other peoples could find reason for frowns or groans or strife. Yet no one accuses us of a want of heart. Our joy gushes forth from a full and loving heart. It recognizes and expresses the great truth underlying the mercy of God, that He has allotted more of happiness than misery to his human as well as to his brutish creatures. And this allotment is made independently of all that man can do to prevent, beleaguer, or destroy it.

In looking forward, even amidst the din, the gloom and probable trials of the present war, some things are visible in which we can exchange happy greetings for the coming twelve-month.

1. We are not likely, during the present year, to have a Northern Senator feloniously assaulted in the Capitol for uttering bold truths about Slavery.

2. We are not likely to have, in the present Congress, a majority of the Senate falling down to worship the Dagon of Slavery.

3. We are not likely to have our Northern cities converted into hunting grounds for fugitive slaves.

4. We are not likely to have our petitions to Congress for the Emancipation of all slaves, laid on the table in the technical question of reception.

5. Gangs of slaves, chained together, bound for a Southern market are not likely to pass through Washington this year.

6. We do hear glorious news, of the slaves of 1861 being taught to read by Northern soldiers at Fortress Monroe and Port Royal—and yet these soldiers are not arrested nor imprisoned for interference with the "domestic institution!"

7. We do hear, through the growlings of the "Sunday Times," that colored citizens are permitted, like other citizens, to hear the debates in Congress. This news must be very harrowing to Secesh North and South, yet we cannot but say Happy New Year, for it.

8. We see and hear that a great delusion is being swept away from the nation—the delusion that slavery was its corner stone and its natural born ruler. Even if the coming year be filled with strife and bloodshed, even if poverty and suffering shall lay their hard hand upon the land, these calamities will be cheaply cancelled by the awakening of a great nation, and its uprising from the deadliest and most horrible of delusions.

9. May we not say to our brethren a Happy New Year, since that we see in the coming need of men to fight the battles of the North, a growing necessity for calling out colored men as citizen soldiers? We have longed for the opportunity—may it soon arrive.

10. We have no doubt, that "away down South in Dixie," while we write, there are people, in millions, who in secret whisperings, silent shouts, rude grasping of hands, in hearts uplifted in prayer as earnest as ever smote at the footstool on high, in every form of possible utterance, breathe forth "HAPPY NEW YEAR! Shall our hearts stand still, or shall they shout the responsive HAPPY NEW YEAR!

[From the Sunday Times.]

The Negroes in Canada.

There is one point upon which the abolitionists have found themselves fatally mistaken in their calculations of the effects of the war, and that is, the effect it would have upon the conduct of the negroes. General insurrection all over the southern country was among the least of the results prophesied; but so far is this from having been the case that we did not hear of one, while the instances are by no means unfrequent of their taking up arms in defense of their masters. The most curious and flagrant specimen of ingratitude, however, is on the part of the negroes in Canada, who are holding meetings, forming companies, and warring against the very power here which has enabled them to obtain their freedom, and has steadily maintained and vindicated their rights. This sudden and violent attachment to the old enemy of this government, as soon as it begins to show its teeth, will not be likely to increase the number of negro sympathisers here, and will silence those who had looked upon them as sure and faithful allies.

Our amiable cotemporary is in a bad way. His negrophobia will be the death of him: it breaks out—now that he is a national—which no longer means Southern rights—man, worse than ever. Heretofore there has been some glimmering of reason or semi-quasi-logic in his anti-negro isms, but this time the poor man is clean mad: nay worse than demented, for madmen have some method between premises and conclusion. Now dear Sunday Times, if you have such a thing about you, try and get it through your wool, what is strictly true, that the negroes in Canada are fugitives from the United States; and so far from the United States being the power which helped them to obtain freedom, they have obtained freedom in spite of and against the power of the same United States. Who passed the Fugitive Slave Law? the United States. Who made the entire territory of the northern states a hunting ground for fugitive slaves? The United States. Whose generals in Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky and Missouri are to-day returning fugitive slaves to their self-styled loyal owners? The generals of the United States. Who hesitates to put an end to the rebellion lest they may enrage the slave owners in arms against the government? The Executive of the United States.

The fugitives in Canada had the same relation to the United States, that T. Francis Meagher and John Mitchell had to Great Britain. Would the Sunday Times have the brazen hardihood to say, if in case of threatened war with England, these men should take up arms against her, that they would show ingratitude to Great Britain?

THE WAR—ITS PROSECUTION.

We do not recollect of ever having read in history of any nation whose position can, in any manner be compared to that of this nation at the present time.

When the great party which now holds the reins of government sought power, it appealed to the pro-slavery portion of the community to sustain it, because it was the "white man's party" It did not seek to disturb the relations of Master, but it sought to prevent the extension of Slavery on the ground that it wanted only white men to inhabit certain portions of God's earth, claiming that they only had a right to it—while to the lovers of liberty it appealed for support, as the only party that would do the slave any good. But we are happy to say, for the credit of the country, that it was not by this means that it triumphed: its success was wholly owing to the honesty of the South.

The determination of the slaveholders to rule the country, and not to trust its affairs in the hands of their white slaves in the North, was the cause of the accidental possession of power by the Republican party, and its leaders understanding this, have been endeavoring to secure a lease of power by catering to the prejudice which it knows a great majority of this nation to be steeped in. Every thing that they do, indicates a disposition to save the country at the expense of the rights of man. The proofs are too innumerable in favor of this assertion to be mentioned in this article; nor is it necessary, so easily can they be recalled to mind by the intelligent reader; but lest anybody should say that we are harsh in judgment; that all these pro-slavery acts which emanated from Government, are but so many devices to preserve society, we ask by what moral right does the government act when it seeks to preserve society at the expense of all that makes society worth preserving—at the expense of all the blessings comprised in the one word civilization? No, gentle reader, we cannot agree with you. Evidence, grief-bringing evidence compels us to the belief that the leading spirits of the administration are trying to preserve the Union at the expense of Liberty, without which the Union ought never to exist.

The day after the late Presidential election we had a conversation with a German gentleman in relation thereto. He had just cast his first republican vote, and of course was somewhat elated; but said he, "Yes my friend, we get him (the party) in, but we soon get him out. De republican party is not de party wot fe want. De difference between dat party and de one wot fe want, is like de difference between William H. Seward and Charles Sumner: de one is for to day, and de oder FOR ALL TIME." Is the day of the Republican party already past? has its night time of treachery and disgrace so soon appeared?

The President of the United States congratulated himself in his last message that he had been able to guide the storm now raging in the country; but what will he do when our poor brethren who have so long listened for the blast of that trumpet which they supposed would have ere this "proclaimed liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof," shall rise in their might, and plow their way to liberty through blood and carnage. Does the President think that it is better that they should secure it in this way, rather than receiving it peacefully within the lines of the United States forces? Oh! that our government may receive wisdom and power from on high to do that which is right in the estimation of all good men, of angels and of God.

Letter from Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28th, 1861.

MR. EDITOR: Before this letter goes to press the old year will have passed away, and the new year will have begun; therefore, I wish you and all your readers and correspondents, together with the typographical fraternity, a happy New Year! "May all live to see and enjoy many more."

We have much news this week. Christmas passed off here very quietly indeed, with no entertainments of note among our people.

On Thursday evening last a great fire occurred at the large Government stables, when 260 horses out of 1500 were burned. Thousands of citizens and strangers visited the awful scene on Friday. The loss cannot fall short of 150,000 dollars. The stables, five in number, were new and were of frame. The fire was thought to have caught from a light in the hands of a careless driver.

We will have the Black Swan (Miss Greenfield) with us on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. On the evenings of these days she will give three concerts at the Union Bethel Church, on M street, near 15th, Rev. Mr. Moore's. We expect that she will be well patronised, as she is a great favorite with our concert going public. The engagement for her concerts was effected by our well known townsman, Mr. Edward M. Thomas.

We notice among the strangers in town Right Rev. Bishop D. A. Payne, of A. M. E. Church. This gentleman, it will be recollected, was a few weeks ago lying very dangerously ill in the city of Baltimore of typhoid fever; but we are happy to announce that on the occasion of our interview with the Bishop, we found him in excellent health, and indeed looks much better than we have seen him look for some years. We wish him good health, a long life, and may he make many more visits to the District of Columbia, where he will always find a host of warm friends of all denominations.

The E street chapel, Rev. Wm. H. Gillard, is getting up a course of lectures on literary and scientific subjects. Several prominent colored gentlemen have been engaged, and the folks in that section of the Island may expect a rich treat during the winter evenings.

Also, we noticed among the distinguished visitors Mr. Joseph Johnson, of Baltimore, a prominent and active member of the Galbreath Lyceum, and Mr. Wm. H. Johnson, of Conn. We learn, with great pleasure, that Mr. J. Johnson will spend several weeks among us.

Mr. Editor, it was my intention to have replied to Mr. Lynch's article; but I declined doing so, when I was told that if I would be a good boy on the occasion of the next supper, I should have some of the good things. BOX.

P. S.—I have just been informed that the Rev. Henry H. Butler is dying. This gentleman is a Baptist preacher, and has charge of 3d street church.

MESSRS. P. RICE & Co., whose advertisement may be found in another column, have a variety of useful articles for sale, which are wanted in every family. Those who are out of employment will do well to call on them, as their articles are selling very rapidly, and they offer rare inducements to agents.

Among these are the Coffee Strainer, the Indelible Pencil, the Egyptian Cement, the Magnetic Jack Hammer and others.

Give them a trial.

CHRISTMAS.

Merry, welcome Christmas—musical with youthful mirth, joyous with infant glee. Merry, laughing Christmas, with her clear, golden sunshine, and her skipping frosty winds, has come again, and gone. Yes! and too—

Through rolling years to come, with some, perhaps, now round the camp-fire, shall be kept her memory ever green.

The merry making of children with the little toys of their choice brings vividly to our mind, at this period, how truly, in miniature, the mind of the child represents that of the man. That which is most pleasing to him in its occupation is his toy—like divinity and "negro nationality" to Gaarrnitt, like pills and epulets to Smygth, or like rattans and rhetoric to Willsunn. They assimilate, too, in versatility. They soon tire of their toys when they cost too much (trouble) to keep—like our friend Glosse, with that neat, pretty little sheet published in Brooklyn, which, like Baalam's ass, spoke once, crying "Ho! for the Smith Lands," (as did likewise the author at the 'Pioneer,') and we, like the unfortunate Dutch grocer who trusts a man a shilling, saw this dear little customer, nicht mier.

Merry Christmas lingers upon every countenance. Men forget old feuds, under the influence of this sacred anniversary of the birth of "Peace and good will towards man." With our mind's eye, we see the pugnacious "civilizer" bowing his graceful compliments across the Atlantic, proclaiming the precious words quoted above, while "extra" (not Billy) Smygth pauses from the platform to acknowledge the greeting over the graceful bumper of nutricious egg-nog. Major Douningh, too, has suspended his destructive fire of hot shot into Africa, and turned his attention to shelling in another direction. But with all its merriment, the peculiar import of the day, together with the important events upon which it dawned, were not forgotten in the sacred desk.

St. Philip's Church was extensively and tastefully decorated with evergreens and appropriate scriptural quotations, whilst immediately under the pulpit was a cross richly decked with flowers of different colors, emblematic of the spotless purity of our blessed Lord and Saviour. The Christmas sermon was preached by the Rector, Rev. Wm. J. Alston, after which the congregation moved to the Lecture Room, where exercises of a highly interesting character were performed in connection with the distribution of presents to the Sabbath School children. Mr. Edward C. Lawrence delivered a fine address to the school, followed by Mr. Bodee, whose well selected anecdotes and pictures kept both young and old in roars of laughter, and, we hope, carried to the youthful mind the most salutary impressions. Mr. John Peterson next addressed the children in a fatherly manner, when the distribution of presents was made by Mr. Aaron Potter. Appropriate verses were sung during the ceremony, in which the audience, which was numerous to overflowing, heartily joined. The children were in ecstacies over their tree, which was well laden with useful and interesting stores.

Christmas has come and gone. Her advent, though marked with that uncertainty to some, which, like hope deferred, maketh the heart sick, will soon be succeeded by a New Year. Whatever Providence shall decree, let us not be unmindful of the hour. Thus, acting upon the faith that God helps the self-helping, we may pass from a merry Christmas to (what we wish you all), a happy New Year. TYPES.

OUR "SAY."

MR. EDITOR: If 'coming events cast their shadows before,' then the present generation will mark a new era in the history of that anciently honorable, but now despised and oppressed race, the African nation. This thought forced itself upon my mind while perusing that interesting article which appeared in the 'Anglo' of Dec. 14th, headed 'hints and queries.' The author is, evidently, a thinking man, and comprehends the true interests of the human brotherhood.

As no race, class or condition of men ever attain to eminence and distinction, until they take the work of improvement and self-elevation into their own hands; so also they must be united in a clear and well defined principle of action, that their intelligence, wisdom and discernment may be apparent to all. Then will their 'say' be heard and their rights respected—first, because they respect themselves, and in that they also respect others; second, because they give the most convincing proof that they are worthy of such respect. For there is an intuitive perception in most men which leads them to acknowledge and respect the rights of those who give proof of their ability to vindicate and maintain them.

My mind was forcibly impressed with the writer's sound logic, and the importance of his closing sentences, the last of which allow me to quote:

'The British Government also recognized this 'say' of ours, when it sealed up Abbeokuta by seizing upon Lagos. Some among us think it is about time that we should initiate this 'say,' by a combined expression of opinion emanating from our Northern States, in the form of a 'say' which shall find an echo in the West Indies and on the African coast. Dr. Delany is of this opinion, and it is worth thinking about—'say?''

Yes, it is worth 'thinking about.' Let the 'combined expression of opinion' come forth, accompanied with, and sustained by the convincing proof of sincerity and ability, viz, ACTION.

When I see such men as Dr. Delany, whom I consider has really done more for Africa than any other live man, as his 'report' and lectures show, with Dr. James McCune Smith, the Rev. H. H. Garnet, Rev. W. J. Alston, Rev. R. H. Cain, and a host of other intelligent and far-seeing men, working, 'shoulder to shoulder,' for the establishment of a great and fundamental principle of action, I entertain the strongest hope that their 'say' will be received with becoming defference. Nay, more, it will inscribe on the page of history a monument that will endure when the temples and monuments of art have fallen in dust. Unborn millions will celebrate the event in songs of joy, and bless the day of freedom's birth.

The finest continent possessed by man, rich in all the varied productions of earth, peopled by an ancient and noble race of two hundred millions and her exiled children, are to be redeemed, and neither the paw of the British Lion nor clutches of the American Eagle shall hold them as prey any more. This is the work of the people. Let them put their "hands to the plough," and not "look back" till it is accomplished.

JUSTICE.

Imposters.

The public is hereby cautioned against all persons pretending to collect money for the African movement—especially in my name—as no person has ever been authorised to do so, and all such pretensions are impositions, whether the parties are white or black: the Rev. Alfred A. Constantin (white), Cor. Secretary of the African Civilization Society, New York, being the only authorised agent known to the movement; and he acts solely in the name of and for the African Civilization Society. The persons who I learn have recently been holding meetings and obtaining money in Canada in my name, are imposters so far as any connection with me and my movement is concerned, and the public is hereby cautioned against them.

M. R. DELANY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26, 1861.

P. S. I learn by letter recently from Canada, that a white man calling himself a Reverend, with a black colleague, have been collecting money in Toronto, St. Catherines, Montreal and different parts of Canada—all pretendingly for the African movement under my sanction, all of which I pronounce to be base impositions on the public.

M. R. D.

Salvage Awarded to Wm. Tillman.

In the U. S. District Court, before Judge Shipman, suits were brought by Wm. Tillman, Wm. Stedding and Donald McLeod, seamen, and Boyce Mackinnon, passenger, for salvage. After giving a brief statement of the facts of the case, his honor said:

"I have been thus particular in detailing the main facts of this transaction because the conduct of Tillman and Stedding has been very sharply criticised by counsel, and the merit of the rescue denied on the ground of its sanguinary character, and also on the ground that it placed the vessel under the sole control of uneducated and unskilful navigators. It is insisted that these two men, especially Tillman, in the violence he inflicted on the prize masters and his mates, exhibited ferocity instead of valor, and that this circumstance ought to incline the Court to altogether deny or greatly diminish the salvage compensation, if any would be otherwise due. It is conceded of course that no Court ought to sanction, or indirectly encourage, unnecessary and wanton violence, even to those who avow themselves the enemies of the nation. This is true. But in determining the character of the force used on such an occasion as this, all the circumstances must be taken into consideration. This schooner had sailed on a peaceable and careful voyage. She was overtaken on the high seas by an armed vessel, her officers and two of her crew were taken from her and made prisoners on board the capturing vessel, leaving but three of her crew and a passenger. McLeod refused to aid in the rescue. Mackinnon's views were unknown. Tillman and Stedding must alone encounter the three prize officers and the prize seamen—five in all. Their only arms were a small pocket pistol and knife, and a hatchet. The peril of the undertaking was imminent and desperate. Instant death to both Tillman and Stedding would probably have followed their failure. They had a right to recapture the vessel if they could. They took the hazard, and after having despatched the three men they had most to fear, they spared the other two, an equal number with themselves. It is suggested that they had ought to have spared the officers, or some of them, after they had wounded them. It is difficult to say what the precise condition of the officers was after the first blows; but I am inclined to think they were mortally wounded, and it is not easy to see how Tillman and Stedding could have extended toward them any humane attentions. Their peril was by no means at an end. They were near a hostile coast, four or five days' sail from a place of safety, without theoretical knowledge of navigation, and by no means free from the danger of recapture by another armed crusier. I think they are not to blame for devoting their energies at once to their escape from peril by navigating their vessel to a place of safety, instead of bestowing their attention upon their dying enemies. I agree with the first remark of the opening counsel for the claimants, that the mere sanguinary character of the rescue should not enhance the salvage compensation.

The true foundation of salvage reward is the danger, toil and skill of the salvors, and the peril from which they rescue the property, and not the mere tragic incidents of the rescue. The counsel who closed this case for the claimant insisted that the rescue did not relieve the vessel from, but rather increased her peril. The ground of this singular objection is that the sailors were ignorant of the theory of navigation, and therefore not fit persons to have charge of the vessel. I do not know as I fully comprehend the force of this objection, but I know of no principle of law that prescribes the degree of knowledge a man must possess as a condition precedent to his performing salvage service when no other human aid is within reach. Fidelity and success are of more account in the eye of the law than accomplishments. Dr. Lushington, in the case of the bark Dygden, cited in Marvin, on wreck and salvage (p. 113,) note says: 'Where persons offer their services to vessels in distress, and there are no other individuals on the spot capable of rendering more efficient assistance, this Court must look with considerable indulgence at their efforts, because, being the only aid that can be procured, and offered in a state of great exigency, every allowance must be made if they are not possessed of adequate knowledge to perform the duty they had under taken.' And in the Cape Packet (3 W. Rob. 122), the same high authority laid down the rule as to qualifications to be that 'when persons undertake to perform salvage service they are bound to exercise ordinary skill and prudence in the execution of the duty they take upon themselves to perform. I do not mean to say they must be finished navigators, but they must possess and exert such a degree of skill and prudence as persons in their condition ordinarily do possess and may be fairly expected to display.' These remarks of Dr. Lushington, it must be remembered, referred to cases where persons not connected with the imperilled vessels had undertaken to rescue them from some ordinary peril of the seas, and where the undertaking had partially or wholly miscarried. But it would be a most extraordinary doctrine to hold, that where a vessel is found on the high seas deprived of her officers and a part of her crew in the most certain and imminent peril of becoming lost to her owners, and she is by the faithful remnant of her crew rescued and brought safely into port, that her salvors, the only person who could possibly have performed the service, are to be deprived of their reward because they were ignorant of the theory of navigation. It is sufficient in this case that, by the familiarity of Tillman, the colored steward, with the coast from the place of rescue to New York; his accurate recollection and ready recognition of localities; his sleepless vigilance, and a courage and good sense that does him great credit, he was able, with the aid of his comrades, to bring the vessel with so much speed and safety into port.

Whether he was able to keep the log-book, or work out the dead reckoning cannot effect the value of the services rendered to the claimants. As the right to any salvage in this case has been contested and elaborately argued, I have re-examined the doctrine laid down by me in the case of the brig Cuba, recently decided in this court; and upon a careful review of the authorities in the light shed upon them in this discussion, I am clearly of the opinion that the services rendered by the salvors in that and the present case were equivalent to a rescue from belligerent captors. It has been suggested that this case does not come within that of the Cuba, inasmuch as the allegation in the libel is that the Warring was captured by pirates. But a case of this kind cannot turn upon a mere descriptive epithet. The facts in both cases, so far as the original captures are concerned, are substantially as follows:—The captors took the vessels in both cases avowedly as prizes; that without rescue or re-capture they were irrevocably lost to their owners (vessels and cargoes) there cannot be a shadow of doubt. In the case now before us, the vessel had been about ten days in the hands of her captors, and was within a day's sail of the hostile port. Her peril was greater, as her chance of recapture by another vessel was less, than that of the Cuba. But it is stated that, in the eye of the law, the Warring was not in a state of peril al all, because the United States is bound to restore the property of loyal citizens which has been taken by the insurgents, and the court ought to presume that this will be done. I think this a purely speculative suggestion, which I am not called upon to consider. It is not for me, in disposing of present rights, to rest my conclusions upon what the government will feel called upon to do when the present furious strife shall have terminated. Courts of Admiralty, in administering public law, act upon facts and rules of law, and not upon speculations as to the course nations may pursue. It is a well-settled rule that when a neutral vessel is captured by a belligerent, on recapture she is entitled to be discharged without payment of salvage, on the ground that the vessel was relieved from no peril, as the neutral would of course be discharged by the courts of the captors.

But it is always an exception to the rule that the courts of the captors are known to disregard the laws which protect neutrals. It would hardly be an answer to this exception on a libel for salvage in the courts of the neutral nation adjudicating the claim, to say that such nation was bound to indemnify its citizens for outrages committed upon their commerce by a nation with whom they were at peace. (The War Onskan I. C. Rob., 299; 3 Kent's Com., 333, 6th Ed.) It is urged that the fact that Tilman was animated by a desire to escape the doom of slavery, to which he feared, not without reason, that his captors intended to consign him, destroys or reduces the merit of his claim. But it is settled law that the motives of the salvor are not to be inquired into. (Talbot and Leaman, 1 Cranch. 1; The Harmony, 1 Pet. Ad. Dec., 82; The Le Tigree, 3 Wash. C. C. R., 567.[I therefore am of opinion that these rescuors are entitled to salvage. The rate in such cases is fixed by no arbitrary rule, but must rest in sound discretion, reference to all the circumstances being had. There are several features of the case which call for a liberal rate.—

1. The great peril of the undertaking.
2. The length of time the vessel had been in the hands of her captors—about ten days.
3. The extreme peril from which the vessel and cargo were delivered. The spes recuperandi if not entirely gone, was extremely nebulous and faint.
4. The perfect success of the salvage service.

As I have been requested by both parties to fix a specific instead of a proportionate sum, I have settled upon seventeen thousand dollars—the value of vessel and cargo having been estimated at about forty-five thousand dollars. I have carefully examined the various cases having some imilarity to this, and I am satisfied that his sum is not far out of the way. In this sum I think the libellants are all entitled to participate, though in very unequal proportions. Mackinnon, though a passenger, is clearly entitled to some amount. I regard his case as much more meritorious than McLeod, although his merit is much inferior to that of Tillman or Stedding. But the respective amounts will be fixed hereafter. The amouut of salvage must be borne by the vessel and cargo in proportion to their respective values, and unless these values are agreed upon by the parties, a reference must be made to a Commissioner to ascertain them. The taxable cost to be borne by vessel and cargo, exclusive of the salvage, and without dimunition of the latter.

LONGEVITY.

We think that our readers will be interested with a sketch of a note we made while on our Eastern tour. In visiting Bridgeport, Connecticut, we were invited out with Brother Shreeves among his members to breakfast and dine, and to tea. While sitting at the tea-table of one of the Trustees of the Church, by the name of John Feeley, he informed us that he was born in Albany, New York State, and is about 85 years of age, and his wife 64 years. They are both very healthy and hearty, do their own work, and Brother Feely is a butcher.

We don't know when we enjoyed ourselves so well as we did with those two old folks. He is said to be the oldest settler in Bridgeport, and, though he cannot read, he is both the history and record of Bridgeport.

It is said that when the citizens wish to know anything in relation to any event of Bridgeport, that Father Feeley is called upon, and especially in relation to the bodies deposited in the cemetaries, and that there is no funeral takes place but what he is present, and no man seems to stand higher in the estimation of the citizens than Father Feeley.

But now for the oldest person living in Bridgeport, and among the oldest living in this country, is a lady at whose house we dined. Her name is Ada Bell. Her age is one hundred and five years. She was born on the eastern shore of Virginia. She lives in the house with her daughter, Mrs. Scott, in Bridgeport, and when we were inuited to sit up to the table, she arose and walked as nimbly, apparently, as any one of us. We were of course anxious to know her age, and we took the liberty to ask. The answer was, as we have before stated, 'One hundred and five years!' 'Not one hundred and five years?' said we. 'Yes,' replied the old lady. And then, what is more curious than all, she uses no spectacles, but can see equally as well without as with them—in fact, as she informed us, her vision remains unimpaired, and as perfect as when but eighteen years of age.

The old lady can crack as many laughable jokes as many a person would at twenty. She also showed us the stockings that she was engaged in knitting for some of her white friends, and no better work did ever we see put together with knitting needles. It would reflect credit on exhibition at any of our County or State Fairs. There is nothing further of any general interest regarding this short visit that we could desire to mention. What we have said on this topic we earnestly hope will be well noted by our readers and all those who profess to love and encourage literature.—Christian Recorder.

The Montreal Gazette says:—"We are glad to see that the colored people are moving, and that it is likely that in a few days they will complete a strong military organization. The colored company in Halifax is very efficient, and one of the best there."

AMUSEMENTS.

FESTIVAL OF ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST. Whoever was present at the public installation of Stone Square Lodge, No. 6, Friday evening, Dec. 27th, must have been forcibly impressed with the idea that had the patron saint himself been present, he would have been highly gratified, and proud of his "Sons." At an early hour the Brethren with their wives, daughters, sweethearts and friends, began to assemble, and it was evident from the expression of joy beaming upon each countenance, that a real "good time was coming." At about ten o'clock the officers and members of Stone Square Lodge made their appearance, and taking their positions received their sister Lodges, followed by the M. W. United Grand Lodge, of the State of New York, represented by Bro. Patrick H. Reason, M. W. G. Master, Bro. Jonas H. Townsend, M. W. D. G. M., Bro. Peter. W. Ray, S. G. W., Bro. John H. Thomas, J. G. W., Bro. John R. Porter, G. Sec., and others.

The M. W. G. M. after stating the object of the gathering, proceeded with the installation by reading the time honored Masonic ode,

> "When earth's foundation first was laid
> By the Almighty artist's hand," which was sung by the brethren in a spirit truly animating and fraternal, after which a prayer was offered to the throne of grace by the Grand Chaplain; then the following officers were installed for the ensuing year, according to the Masonic rite;

Bro. Abram R. Jarvis, W. Master, Bro. Wm. R. Connor, S. W., Bro. Moses Pine, J. W., Bro. John H. Davis, Sec., Bro. Samuel Manning, Treasurer, Bro Laban T. Wharton, S. D., Bro. Lewis H. Nelson, J. D., Bro. Stephen Philip Lee, M. of C., B. N. C. Worrick, Chaplain, John Matthews, Tyler.

The Worshipful Master Elect, Bro. Abram R. Jarvis, then received the usual masonic salutation, and upon taking the chair kindly thanked the Brethren of Stone Square Lodge for the honor conferred, and hoped they would be as willing to lend him their support in so conducting the affairs of the Lodge and the customs of the fraternity as to reflect honor upon the Lodge and the craft at large; he also complimented the officers and members of the Grand Lodge, thanking them for their services and hoping ever to find the same fraternal feelings existing between it and its subordinate, which he did not despair of so long as "Reason" sat upon the throne, and we were guided by a "Ray." The exercises then closed by a prayer from the Grand Chaplain, after which the lovers of Terpsichore repaired to the floor of the lower hall, to witness the Masonic Quadrille danced by the Brethren, "and a dear one," also to participate in the festivities under the sweet music of the harp and violin, as performed by Professors Oton and Douglass. The ladies were in full bloom and notwithstanding the coldness of the evening there were representatiees from New York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, Flushing, L. I., and New London, Ct. It was impossible to designate the "belle," but I should think from the attitudes of three young masonic Brethren, that the Grand Master's daughter, the lady from New London, and the lady from South 7th street shared their respective opinions. OMEGA.

More About the Freedmen of Port Royal.

The commencement of the school for the contrabands has been unavoidably delayed. An order for the blackboards at Beaufort was given by the Chief Quartermaster, and Mr. Lee went up to get them. Gen. Stevens promised they should be sent down, but they have not come, and without them it is not easy to make a beginning. It is intended to go on as soon as they are received, if the weather is not too severe. The school must be held for the present in the evening, as most of the scholars are at work during the day. The only school-room is the open air, and as that is sometimes extremely cold, and often too keen for such work, there can be no regular sessions until a room is furnished. Quarters for the contrabands are just commenced. Hitherto they have slept in a few poor tents on the bluff near the fort, an exposed situation, with little protection from the thin canvass of which the tents are made. Four buildings, each 250 feet long by thirty wide, will be finished in two or three weeks, and a part of one, perhaps 50 feet by 30, will be reserved as a school-room. Before that is ready some arrangement will have been made for the permanent establishment of the school, and at least one teacher is expected from the North, who will give his whole time to instruction. Before my next letter is sent, I hope to be able to write that the school has at least been opened. The contrabands have heard that they are to be taught to read and are eager to begin. No compulsion or persuasion will be necessary; not even the mild plan of the Rev. William T. Potter, a clergyman owning a large plantation on the mainland, and charged with the religious welfare of sixty spiritual neophytes, "forty prime hand, and twenty half hand," as they were classified by one of the forty who told the story. Mr. Potter preached every Sunday on his own plantation, and so keen was his sense of his responsibility for their regular attendance upon his ministrations, that whoever was absent from service, was flogged on Monday by the same hand which was raised on Sunday in the mockery of prayer. Thirty-nine lashes were regularly given.

There will be no want of pupils; the want will be at first of teachers and means of instruction. The army will furnish some teachers, whose services have already been offered. If the school increases with the number of contrabands certain to arrive during the next two months, it is not likely to be over supplied in any respect. Letter-cards and spelling-books have been accidentally received in sufficient number to begin with. Whether the negroes come into camp or not—and how generally they come depends on many things still uncertain—very large numbers will occupy the islands deserted by the rebels, and not included in our lines. They are rapidly leaving the mainland, though much retarded by the difficulty of bringing with them their wives and children. The Provost-Marshal, who has the best opportunities for information, since all the negroes are first sent to him, thinks there are from five to seven thousand more on the islands than when we first landed. They often came long distances, leaving families and homes, enduring fatigues and braving danger—for what? Four came yesterday from Florida in an open boat. To reach the coast they had travelled through many miles of swamp. Their polar instinct told them the North Star had swung round and poised itself over Port Royal. They came to be free. If they are not free yet, education shall make future slavery to them impossible.

COR. OF N. Y. TRIBUNE.

The Negroes—Cotton Gathering.

A letter from Hilton Head says:

The negroes everywhere, in two districts, are at work collecting baling and rolling cotton. Thousands of them have been seen at their task, for which they are paid at the rate of 1$ for every 100 pounds they deliver. They labor with alacrity under this unwonted stimulus; various assistants and clerks have been appointed to oversee their performances, and though they need to be constantly directed and skillfully managed, yet a good degree of work is really gotten out of them. This is proved by the fact that in less than three days over $50,000 was put aboard the steamboat which accompanied Col. Noble; all this cotton has been baled by the negroes themselves, and the bags made by them; it was then conveyed to the various landings, at no one of which there is a wharf. The supply of bags having been incomplete, some thousand bags were supplied them, and these had to be first placed in flat-boats, then rowed out to the steamer, and again removed to the decks, before the labors of the blacks were completed. The old drivers were generally retained, to find out the hands and bring them to the places where their labor was required. As it was Christmas time, and the negroes had always been used to a holiday at this season, their willingness to work needed to be increased by the payment of an installment of their dues. They laughed and sang as they rolled the bales or carried the sand bags on their skulls and broad shoulders, and jumped and danced and bowed and grinned, when Massa Nobles gave them a dime or a quarter of a dollar apiece.

The amount of cotton taken from each plantation is carefully ascertained; each bag is carefully markeb with the former owner's initials, and an account kept both with the estate and with the negroes, so that at any time Government will be able to compensate any of the owners who shall prove to have been loyal. The cotton found on these islands is, as is well known of a superior quality; it is worth 50 cents a pound on the island, and 75 cents at New York.

It is in ordinary times sent almost exclusively to France, where it is mixed with silk in the manufacture of silk and cotton goods; its texture is of the finest quality, and its culture requires the greatest and most constant care. There are immense quantitie of it stored in the cotton houses on these islands; more even has been discovered than was anticipated; at least $2,000,000 worth are believed to have been already secured. Since the negroes have discovered that they will be paid for their exertions, they have brought in some that was buried in the interior and manifested great care to preserve and obtain as much as possible. I have heard of some instances of their giving warning in advance, when their masters of the rebel soldiers contemplated any new burnings.

As for the ginning, most of it is to be done in New York; it is the opinion of those who have knowledge of the work, that it can be learned with ease in one day by any woman of ordinary capacity. Here, it will require engineers and engines, as well as gins, and necessitate a whole corps of assistant overseers, for the negroes are utterly incompetent to do anything without incessant supervision. They acknowledge this themselves, and hope the Yankees are "come to take care of we." The difficulty of establishing so large and important a plan of of manufacturing operations in the midst of a military campaign is apparent, while the scheme of preparing the cotton at the North is eminently feasible.

"LOVE, PURITY AND TRUTH" is the subject of a lecture by John Peterson Esq., before the Fountain Union Lodge, as will be seen by reference to our advertising columns. The simple announcement that the talented and much esteemed principal of school No. 1 will lecture, is of itself sufficient to draw out a large audience.

RELIGION IN LIBERIA.—The "London Missionary Advocate" gives the following item of religious intelligence:—Of this field we have said there are tokens of advancemnnt, which are glad to tell to the Church. The first we notice is their increasing desire for religious knowledge. This is apparent in the increasing number of religious periodicals which they are ordering from this country; and then they are in haste for such knowledge, and can no longer submit to the delay of the swift ships—they remit the price of papers and postage in advance, and so obviate all delay. The next item we notice is their apparent purpose to help themselves to a more universal knowledge of what with us is considered fundamental in the education of our children, and to this end they are multiplying their common schools and Sunday schools, and furnishing them with the best text-books, and this too at their own expense. Thirdly, as evidence confirmatory of the above, there is more character in the ministry, more in the membership, more stability; so that whatever progress is now made is more real, and gives promise of a more rapid and successful enlargement of our work in this interesting field at a very early day.

WHAT NEGROES CAN DO.—Mrs. Margaret Stanley, widow of the late Bias Stanley, died this week, leaving her property for benevolent purposes. Her husband died a few years ago, leaving two houses in College street and one in Dwight street, the income of the same, after the death of his widow, to be applied for the support of the Gospel, and for educational purposes among the colored people of New Haven. Henry White, John G. North, and Atwater Treat are the Trustees to manage and appropriate the same. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley were slaves until they were forty years of age, and upon obtaining their freedom began a life of industry and economy, which in the progress of their lives enabled them to obtain a good living and to amass a little fortune, exceeding $6,000. They both were members of the Temple street Congregational church, and died in the full hope of a blessed inheritance above.—New Haven Journal.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"Jonathan:
Send over Slidell and Mason—or fight.
Yours, BULL."

"Bull:
Take Slidell and Mason—we are fighting—and owe you one.
JONATHAN.

"P. S.—What on airth do yer want with the old cusses?"

A colored servant of Colonel Jackson, who commanded one of the regiments at Drainesville, while in charge of the Colonel's horse, scouted on the outskirts of the field, captured two rebels and brought them into camp. His carbine though loaded had no cap on it; and the rebels' guns being dischared, they surrendered on seeing the negro's piece leveled at them.

MARRIED.

WILSON—MOORE.—In Williamsburgh, Thursday evening, Dec 26th, by Rev. M. Manning, at the residence of the bride's father, Edward James Wilson, of Baltimore, to Miss Ann Eliza W. Moore, of the former place.

DIED.

VALENTINE.—In Williamsburgh, Dec. 23d, after an illness of several months, Charles Underhill Valentine, aged 37 years and 2 months.—"Write, blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Brother Valentine suffered long but patiently. A few days previous to his death he received the rite of baptism, and when I laid him down his mother placed her arms around him and wept over him, when he said—"Mother, don't weep for me, for death has no terror over me." On the Sabbath previous to his death he partook of the Lord's Supper, for the first and last time. He now sleeps in Christ—

> "Where all our toils are o'er;
> Our sufferings and our pain—
> Who meet on that eternal shore,
> Shall never part again."

To his bereaved widow I would suggest the following language: "I bow before thy sovereign arrangements, oh Lord. My Father, thou hast taken from me the associate of my days, my nearest and dearest earthly friend with whom I held sweet counsel. But I

> 'Beyond the bounds of time and space,
> Look forward to that heavenly place.'"

M. MANNING.

Special Notices.

MASONIC.

At a regular meeting of Mt. Calvary Lodge, No. 12, of Troy, N. Y., held at their Hall, Nov. 24th, the following officers were duly elected and installed:

Allen M. Bland, W. M.
Andrew Parker, S. W.
Dennis Conner, J. W.
Wm. E. Bishop, Sec.
James Hornbeck, Treasurer.
Richard Schoonmaker, J. D.
Wm. H. Pettiford, S. D.
John H. Bishop, M. of C.
John Stokely, Marshal.
M. Loyd, Chaplain.
Henry Sevoy, } Stewards.
Peter Connor, }
Wm. Connor, Tyler.

LOVE, PURITY AND TRUTH.

Good Samaritan Lectures.

The Fifth of the Course will be delivered by JOHN PETERSON, Esq., on Thursday evening next, the 9th inst., under the patronage of Fountain Union Lodge, No. 1, at their rooms, Masonic Hall, corner of Broome and Forsyth Sts. Subject—"Love, Purity and Truth." The public are cordially invited to attend.

N. B.—Admission free.

WILLIAM A. MARS, W. C.
JOHN D. BAGWELL, R. S.

UNION EXHIBITION!

Sabbath School No. 37
attached to the
ABYSSINIAN BAPTIST CHURCH,
(under the Pastoral charge of the Rev. Wm. Spelman,)
No. 166 West Waverly Place, near 6th Avenue,
WILL GIVE A Grand Exhibition, consisting of
VOCAL AND INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC,
RECITATIONS, DIALOGUES & ADDRESSES,
— ON —
Monday Evening, January 6th, 1862,
FOR THE
BENEFIT OF THE SCHOOL.

Vocal Music under the direction of PROF. R. HAMILTON.
Pianist, . . . MR. WM. HAZARD.

OFFICERS OF THE SCHOOL:
Geo. S. Roberts, Superintendant;
Mrs. Eliza Porter, Ass't do
" P. J. Johnston, Ass't do
Alexander Sayers, Sec.;
Mrs. E. A. Porter, Treas.

THE A. M. E. ZION TRINITY CHURCH,

Located in Barrow street, between Newark and Railroad avenues, Jersey City, will be opened on the 12th of January for Divine Worship, on which occasion the Rev. WILLIAM H. BISHOP will be present. There will be a special collection taken up for the church.

A TEA

Will be given, on the evening of the 23d of January, by Ladies and Gentlemen of Jersey City, to assist the trustees of the A. M. E. Zion Church, Barrow street, in paying for the church.

A FAIR

Will be held by the Ladies of ZION BAPTIST CHURCH, Sullivan St., New York, (Rev J. T. RAYMOND, Pastor,) for the benefit of said Church, commencing on Dec. 31, 1861.

The Ladies will offer for sale a variety of
ADULT'S and CHILDREN'S CLOTHING;
Also a large number of
FANCY GOODS, DOLLS, ETC.
The Fair will close with a
GRAND ENTERTAINMENT.
Tickets of Admission to the Fair, 6 cents;
Entertainment, 25 cents.

COMMITTEE.

Mrs. Harley,	Mrs. West,
" Dawley,	" Leygins,
" Bailey,	Miss Cary,
" Sanders,	Mrs. Foster.

Miss S. Foster.

Dedication.

The AFRICAN METHODIST EPISCOPAL ZION CHURCH, Liberty St., Flushing, will be DEDICATED on SUNDAY, Jan. 5th, 1862. Superintendent WM. H. BISHOP will be present and perform the services.

JOHN WASHINGTON,
22 2 Preacher

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND

BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,
PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton.
1stf

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

MASONIC
DIRECTORY,
FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W.G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwich, Ct., meets every Monday afternoon.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14. Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL Grand Secretary, No. 64 East Houston Street, New York City.

LECTURES.

THE UNDERSIGNED is prepared to fill engagements to deliver single Lectures, on the following subjects:

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY WITH REFERENCE TO NATURAL THEOLOGY;
THE ADAPTATIONS OF THE EARTH, OR TERRESTRIAL ADAPTATIONS;
MENTAL PHILOSOPHY
THE ANCIENT HONORS OF THE BLACK AND COLORED RACES OF THE EARTH;

—Being a series of popular discourses recently delivered, founded on the following texts:

1. "Look not upon me because I am black." [Song of Sol.—1.6.
2. "Princes shall come out of Egypt." [Psalm 68—31.
3. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin." [Jer.—13.23.
4. "Cursed be Canaan.' —Gen.—9 25.
5. "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus." Philemon.

TERMS—The lecturer's passage both ways, and one-fourth of profits.

[From the Detroit Daily Advertiser, March 1, 1860.]

"Mr. BERRY'S lecture last night is stated to have displayed much thought, and to have been in every respect meritorious."

INFORMATION WANTED

Of Mrs. DOROTHA SMITH, formerly Miss Mingo, of Pictou, Nova Scotia. Any information in regard to her sent to Mrs. THOMPSON, 4 Catharine Lane, will be thankfully received. 21 2t

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1 2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.

Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—
10½ . . . . A. M.
3 . . . . P. M.
7½ . . . . P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn
13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb. corner of Hudson Avenue.

REV ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, ... A. M.
" . . . . P. M.
" . . . . P. M.
10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 1 " . . . . P. M.
12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 " . . . . P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC.

The undersigned announce in preparation a
MILITARY ALMANAC,
SUITED TO THE
REQUIREMENTS OF THE TIMES.

It will contain about Fifty Pages of valuable statistical and reading matter, among which will be found a statement of the causes and antecedents of the war, with a succinct narrative of its progress and incidents, including the principal battles and skirmishes, by land and sea, to the present time; a list of the leading officers of the Government, political and military, with biographical notices, and the leading officers of the so-called Southern Confederacy; a sketch of the organization of the army, the insignia of officers; an abstract of the articles of war; tables of pay and and rations; national hymns, anecdotes, &c., &c., making a complete

Book of Reference for the Use of the People.

Price 12 cents for single copy—$4 per hundred, with a further reduction on larger quantities.

A limited space will be devoted to advertisements, at the following rates:

One Page,	$30	Quarter Page,	[illegible]
Three-fourth Page,	24	Eighth of Page,	5
Half Page,	16	Two Pages,	[illegible]

Payable on presentation of proof sheet of advertisement for correction, otherwise with an addition of fifty per cent.

It will also embrace a Mercantile Directory containing names of dealers, at a charge of fifty cents to each, payable at the time of subscribing.

To bring this Department more prominently before the general public, copies of the work will be gratuitously suspended for reference in the principal hotels of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other large cities. In addition, each advertiser of half a page or more may specify, at the time of subscribing, twelve hotels in any of the above cities, or such others as may be of convenient access to the publishers, where copies shall be gratuitously suspended.—A copy will also be hung up for public reference in the business place of each advertiser whose bill is promptly paid. Advertisements are to appear in all copies issued previous to December 1st, which the publishers guarantee shall not be less than 3,000 copies, if only for gratuitous distribution. No person authorized to collect without written authorization.

DEXTER & CO.,
Publishers and Printers,
17 Spruce street, New York.
86 Milk street, opposite Pearl St., Boston.
146 South Fourth street, Philadelphia.
23 tf

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess of dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1865.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN HALSEY,
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want a good and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 155 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

BOSTON HOUSE,

MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH
GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,
Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
18 26t

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston st., or of the Janitor, 2?? West 15th st.

THE BEST DRESSING [illegible] during warm weather, is White's Vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 60 Grand Sts, 2 tt.

CLOTHING! [illegible]

Gentlemen if you want a [illegible] well-fitted Garment [illegible] can be bought at any other [illegible] in any other city, please call at the [illegible] Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURG.
Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as
BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS
of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made
MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.
DON'T FORGET,
168 EWEN ST.,
Williamsburg.
9 1y.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET.
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.

On an improved plan, by widow T.L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.
First Premium for Misses and Children's
HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.
The Clergy supplied at a discount.
KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED!

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE,
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING
IN BROOKLYN,
At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS!
For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.
Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk, Street. Terms very moderate. a19 1y.

MRS. ANDERSON.
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS
Has Removed from 105 Washington St. to 71 Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn.
10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate. 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 6—4t

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) REspectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

MRS. E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.
3tf.

BOARDING AND LODGING
BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 1?? West 20th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in very healthy and convenient part of the city.
Boarding for Ladies, $2,50
" " Gentleman, 3,00
Lodging per week, 75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER.
219 CENTRE STREET NEW YORK.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate Ladies and Gentlemen with FIRST-CLASS BOARD, on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. 13 [illegible] Street, a few doors north of Grand. 16-13t

POCKET WATER-FILTER
AND
DRINKING TUBE.
Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. Weight one ounce. [illegible] Agents wanted. [illegible]
DAY & CO.
Box 464 P.O. [illegible], N. J.
3-13t

Poetry.

WHAT OF THE DAY?

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

A sound of tumult troubles all the air,
Like the low thunders of a sultry sky
Far-rolling ere the downright lightenings glare:
The hills blaze red with warnings: foes draw nigh,
Treading the dark with challenge and reply.
Behold the burden of the prophet's vision—
The gathering hosts—the Valley of Decision,
Dusk with the wings of eagles wheeling o'er.
Day of the Lord, of darkness and not light!
It breaks in thunder and the whirlwinds roar!
Even so, Father! Let thy will be done—
Turn and o'erturn, end what thou hast begun
In judgment or in mercy: as for me,
If but the least and frailest, let me be
Evermore numbered with the truly free
Who find thy service perfect liberty!
I fain would thank Thee that my mortal life
Has reached the hour, (albeit through care and pain)
When Good and Evil, as for final strife,
Close dim and vast on Armageddon's plain;
And Michael and his angels once again
Drive howling back the Spirits of the Night.
Oh! for the faith to read the signs aright,
And, from the angels of thy perfect sight
See Truth's white banner floating on before;
And, the Good Cause, despite of venal friends,
And base expedients, move to noble ends:
See Peace with Freedom make to Time amends,
And, through its cloud of dust, the threshing-floor,
Flailed by thy thunder, heaped with chaffless grain!

LETTER FROM REV. W. P. NEWMAN.

MY DEAR ANGLO-AFRICAN:—We are sad, because we have not seen thy face since we left New York. Can't you get a "passport" to a foreign country? Will the steamers not take you as a passenger—or have you stayed in your quarters at 48 Beekman street?

Some friends of our Island home wanted to see you, and I am sorry I had not the pleasure o introducing you to them. It is due to us that you pay us a visit, by the next steamer. We are having quite an interesting time of it just now. The rainy season seems over, and we have it pleasant above, beneath, and all around us. Oh! we wish you could see our sublime mountains and rich valleys. You would bless the gods, if you had some of our luscious fruits, and could see our fine crops, but the Africans of the North know nothing of our nice luxuries.

Rev. Thomas Run-rise, the Indian, is here, and is the Spurgeon of Jamaica just now. His congregation numbers thousands—no place can be got hardly to hold his audience. I felt the other day like a sheep among the lions, when I was taking dinner with him at the American Consul's, in Kingston—notwithstanding the chief seat was granted us. There is some difference in Jamaica and the American States.

There is much interest being felt here on the subject of emigration to this Island of our people, from the North. His Excellency the Governor, sent for me to converse on the subject. I had a long and pleasant interview with him the other day in regard to it. I was accompanied to the "King's House," by the Hon. Richard Hill—colored—Member of the Privy Council—the most learned man in the Island, Rev. Mr. Phillipps, the oldest white Baptist minister in Jamaica, and the Rev. Mr. Thompson, of the American Congregational Mission. His Excellency is a most courteous gentlemen, and after the usual formalities of cards, sentinels and aid-de-camps, etc., we were most kindly received by His Excellency, being introduced by the Hon. Mr. Hill.

His Excellency spoke in high terms of the Northern colored people, and he is very anxious that they should emigrate to Jamaica. He will do anything he can to have them come. He offered to give gratuitously some of the estates to good persons for three years, and exempt them from taxes on lands. He favors the voluntary system of emigration. A Joint Stock Emigration Company will be formed, by virtue of a bill before the Legislature, now in session, and will pass. It will raise a large fund, and invest it in thrown up estates, and divide them to suit emigrants, etc.—They will also lend money to them to build houses, get tools, etc. The emigrants will have ten years to pay up, and will be especially protected by law. They may become citizens as soon as they arrive, and take the oath, etc. They will also be exempted from certain obligations. I predicted in my last to you that we would have a warm time of it when the Legislature met, and that Sir Edward Jordon would triumph—and so it has been. He has been elected Speaker of the House finally, without opposition, after a tie vote for several days.

His Excellency in his address to the Legislature shows the exports for the last year are greater than for ten years past.—The imports are greater, too, than in the days of slavery. What say the enemies to that? With all our disadvantages, our money income will meet the expenditure for the ensuing year.

Jamaica is coming! His Excellency speaks in high terms of the colored people of this country. He told me of persons who had been slaves, who now planted hundreds of acres of coffee and cane, etc.

The stock of our new railroad is being taken up quite fast. It will run from Kingston to the interior.

I have been invited to address the members of the Legislature on the emigration of our people. I declined. Whoever is disposed to emigrate here, I think, may better his condition. I hope you will have no more fighting in the Union. Why fight for nothing?

W. P. NEWMAN.

Annotto Bay, Nov. 30, 1861.

LETER FROM BETHLEHEM.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Dec. 18th, 1861.

MR. EDITOR: Perhaps you would wish to hear something about the Lehigh Valley; what lovely and attractive pictures it presents to the eye. Turn your eyes to the north, you have a view of the Blue Mountain, with the gaps plainly visible; at the south you have the Lehigh Mountain, dotted with cosey little cottages all along the hill, and the beautiful and romantic River Lehigh vending its way to the east.

Turn to the east and the west, the scenes are still more beautiful to behold. The valley is one of the richest in this or any other State in minerals, and the land in the highest state of cultivation, with fields well filled with flocks and herds.

It is a delicious and enchanting country, with a balmy atmosphere, and salubrious climate, inducing travelers on their way to the coal regions to tarry for a night, and see our beautiful and romantic little town of Bethlehem, where can be heard the tinkling of the old iron bell, which has been ringing more than a century, and whose sound can be heard for miles around.

The mulberry tree, with its lofty branches and broad spreading leaves, everywhere abounds. Here are found the palm, the olive, the cedar, the oak, the fir, sycamore, chestnut, willow, and a great variety of other trees, which not only gracefully ornament the landscape, but offer the most refreshing shelter from the direct and injurious rays of the sun, and contribute essentially to the comfort and even sustenance of the inhabitants, by their abundant fruit, while their juices furnish cooling and medicinal draughts. Many of the trees flower twice in a season, and bear fruit all the year round in hot houses. Flowers also grow in the valley in great profusion, and of many varieties. The meadows are adorned by the blossoms of the different species of anemone, ranunculus, crocus, tulip, narcissus, hyacinth, lilly and violet; these, together with the iris, the almond-tree, the cassia, the wild grape, the myrtle, the spikenard, and the innumerable daffodils, crowfoot and jessamines, form a beautiful carpet, and perfume the air with the most delightful odors. Replete with everything that can gratify the eye, or charm the immagination, is this valley, and travelers cannot help being struck with the beautiful valley, and the splendid scenery that surrounds the good old town of Bethlehem.

S. EMORY.

PRAYER MEETINGS OF THE FREEDMEN AT PORT ROYAL.

[From the Correspondence N. Y. Tribune.]

Prayer-meetings are held by the contrabands in camp almost every night. The building in which they gather is often surrounded by a crowd of soldiers, listening to the quaint fervor of the devotions with silent and interested attention. From these soldiers you will hear no word of ridicule—nothing like mockery or contempt for the unlettered simplicity which fears not to ask ignorantly while it asks trustfully and truly. The men whose daily lives leave no hour unstained with oaths, and with the coarse brutality of speech which is worse than profanity, pass with clean lips and silently-wondering if not reverted thoughts from the religious assemblies of the negro, whom they have been taught to regard as cursed of God, despised of men, and destitute of social and political rights. Accepting the Pro-Slavery dogmas of commercial pulpits, and adopting the atheistic politics of an unprincipled party, what room was left them for religious faith or belief in humanity? Yet they cannot resist the feeling which this prayerful earnestness inspires, nor repel the conviction it brings that they have been taught a lie.

Does any friend of Southside theology reply that only by means of Slavery nave these negroes been instructed in religious truth? Let him listen to that old man who is thanking God out of the depths of his soul that at last they can meet together for worship without fear or restraint—thanking God and us that he is permitted now to pray aloud! I beg the most hasty or unreflecting reader to consider for one moment all that an expression of gratitude implies. That a slave was forbidden to read the Bible or anything else—at least to be taught to read—I had heard; but I confess it was with a wholly new emotion that I learned that the Southern answer to an audible prayer was the overseer's lash. Mr. Lee, whose humane benevolence makes him the best possible man for his difficult place, will tell you how often at first he has been timidly approached by some newly arrived negro, with the hesitating petition, "Please, Massa, may I pray?" With their childlike piety, also, mingles the broadest charity. Prayers for wives and children left behind, and for the soldiers who have come to fight for their freedom, are followed by prayers for the rebel masters from whom they have fled. In conversation nothing like an affectionate remembrance of their masters can be discovered—nor, on the other hand, is their spirit often vindictive. Only the religious element of character inspires such a petition, and the negro possesses both religious and affectional elements very largely developed.

THE FREEDMEN IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

The number of contrabands is rapidly increasing. Including those at Beaufort and Otter Island, there cannot be less than a thousand good and true Union men who have responded to Gen. Sherman's proclamation and claimed the protection of the flag. Was there anything in the terms of that proclamation which excluded from its appeal any complexion or color of fidelity? I have no copy and cannot say, but if there were, then so much the more credit to the negroes who came without being asked, and are faithfully serving the Government which never particularly served them. But the proclamation was addressed to citizens of a rebellious State. Who ever questioned the loyalty of the negroes, or their readiness to fight and work under the Stars and Stripes? Yet are not the negroes a majority of the citizens of this rebellious State, and why is a State permitted to be rebellious when four hundred thousand of its citizens are loyal and only three hundred thousand at most are traitors? Or, to put the question a little closer: Why are a minority of traitors still aided and encouraged by the Federal Government to control, imprison and shoot the only men loyal to their Government, which professes to be striving to reduce traitors to submission, and protect loyal citizens? Perhaps some reflection might not be wasted in the honest endeavor to answer that question, instead of giving hard names to those who honestly ask it.

A thousand men whose fate seems to depend in a measure on the will of one, are, for the present, emancipated from the immediate operation of the laws of South Carolina. As these laws, however, are deemed to exist for some purpose even on conquered soil, possessing perhaps a suspended vitality, it must be considered in violation of their sovereignty that an effort is made to do what can be done meanwhile for the negroes in camp. A school is to be immediately established, and a part of the three hundred who are in charge of the Superintendent at this point will begin their education as soon as any materials for the work can be procured. There are no books, and not even the simplest means of instruction for teaching the alphabet—a process with which few of the blacks of any age can dispense at the outset. The number who can read a little is very small—a fact not to be wondered at when the severe penalties of Carolina laws against teaching negroes to read are remembered. In default of other resources it has been recollected that in the schoolhouse at Beaufort—there known as a college—two or three blackboards are still remaining.

On these the alphabet can be chalked out, and with the help of reading and talking a rude beginning made. There is no room yet to be had for the school. When the new hospital is finished perhaps the barracks now used for that purpose can be had, or some other accommodation may be sooner furnished. Gen. Sherman has given his consent to the plan. Capt. Saxon, whose position as Chief Quartermaster, makes his co-operation especially important, gives his sincere interest and best efforts in its behalf, and Mr. Lee, the Superintendent, is actively engaged in the work. There will be no obstruction here, therefore, in the way of success. Beginning in the open air, without books and without regular teachers, with no other immediate object than the elementary instruction in letters and morals of the few negroes who can be reached at first, I yet cannot help thinking that this attempt may be the basis of wider efforts, and I hope of some general plan of education for the slaves whom this war MUST free—some, if not all. Something has been tried, I have heard, at Fortress Monroe, but I know nothing of the results, or the present condition of the school, if there be one. Whatever it be, the position can hardly be as important as this. Monroe has never passed from under Union control. Carolina, about a year ago, asserted her independence, and it is less than two months since her territory was reoccupied by Union power. She is the peculiar representative and champion of slavery, and the fountain of rebellion.

The district of Beaufort contained 32,000 slaves and 5,000 whites, a larger proportion of the former than any other county in the State. It is to Carolina what the State is to the South. This citadel of Slavery is the spot selected, with singular felicity, for the first landing of what is called the invading force. An army large enough to hold, and soon to be large enough to extend its conquests, is established on this central point of the Slavery-cursed soil. As it was the heart of the system, no blow can be struck here that is not felt at the extremities. The questions of emancipation, relation of the Government to the institution, military necessities as affecting the slave, are here most forcibly presented, and require immediate answer of some sort. Furthermore, they are questions which will not wait the leisure of vacillating Generals and ambitious politicians, but will presently, in default of other response, answer themselves in sufficiently decided terms. Meanwhile, if the influence of educational efforts upon the negroes in the camp-lines is great, their influence on those who are not yet freed, and also upon the general future policy involved by the progress of the war, will not be less. Let us accept our responsibilities, not evade them; and when the slave rallies under our flag, let us say to the world that we dare not only free, but educate him—that, into this heathen State, Christian civilization shall accompany our arms with equal steps.

Teachers and books are wanted. No means exist to pay or support the one or supply the other. The means for the present may perhaps be expected from private liberality. The only teachers at first will be volunteers who have other regular duty. With the school fairly started, the help of those who come here for the purpose will be wanted, since the number of pupils and the corresponding increase of labor will require all the time of many persons. I have already heard of men anxious to come out. My hope is, however, that the obligation of the Government to the slave will be recognized and discharged; that if no funds exist that can be drawn from, they may be immediately supplied; enough at first for temporary purposes. When the limits of the effort enlarge, let the means be increased by a general appropriation for this specific purpose; and that will be the best evidence of the desire of Government to manage and sustain the schools.—Cor. of N. Y. Tribune.

The members of a society in Maine, by dint of long exertion, had erected a small church. One of the number was dispatched to a large town, to request a noted divine to take part in its dedication. Not getting his errand exactly, he simply applied to the minister to come and "dedicate our new church."

"What part do you wish me to take?" said the clergyman.

"Why, we want you to dedicate the church," was the reply.

"But do you wish me to deliver the sermon, or make the opening prayer, or only make some remarks?

"Why!" exclaimed the brother, piqued at the obtuseness of the parson, "we simply want you to dedicate the church, the whole on't; it's only seventy-five feet by fifty; want you to dedicate it.

A cynical individual on reading a pathetic story in one of the papers, noted in his memorandum book as follows:

Somebody whistled. Teacher calls up big boy on suspicion.

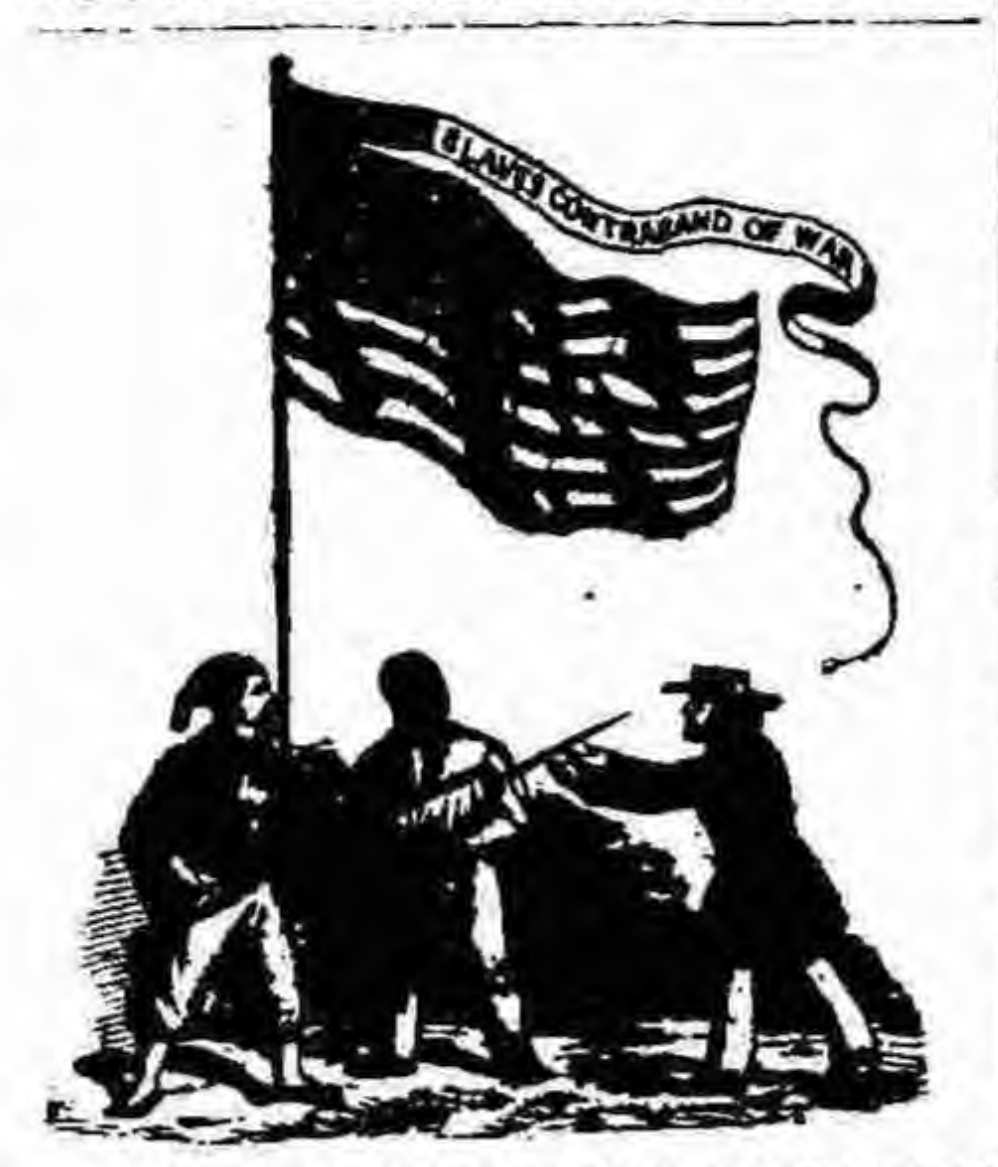
Big boy comes up and holds out his hands, sullen and savage.

Noble little boy comes manfully forward and says: 'I am the boy that whistled, sir,' at the same time extendieg his hand.

Teacher simmers down, and lets 'em both off.

(Mem.—Noble little boy thought teacher would not lick him if he told the truth, but knew big boy would lick him if he didn't.)

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.

2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.

3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.

4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.

5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.

6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps) but will cleanse and soften the skin.

7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by
G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St., N.

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and the public, that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 66 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK. 4-1

P. A. WHITE,
Corner of Frankfort & Gold Sts.,
GENERAL
COMMISSION MERCHANT,
KEEPS CONSTANTLY ON HAND
A FRESH AND PURE ASSORTMENT
OF
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS,
GENUINE
LUBIN'S EXTRACTS
AND OTHER PERFUMERY,
FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES, FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA SEGARS, &C., &C.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS
carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S
VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR
FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH, AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Gray.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness; etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hairbrush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off, always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S
STRENGTHENING PLASTER.
AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR
LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT, SPRAINS, BRUISES, &C., &C
Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly servicable

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent relief from its use, as it keeps a continued heat, acting as a gentle counter irritant, removing the inflamation of the stomach without breaking the skin. Persons engaged in sedentary pursuits should use these Plasters constantly, as they give strength to parts weakened by constant sitting and stooping.

For STRAINS and SPRAINS they are infallible, affording relief immediately and without fail.

For RHEUMATISM there is no external application equal to them, promoting the general circulation, and

PREVENTING A RETURN
of the excruciating pain.

These plasters are prepared with great care, and of the best material, and to prevent fraud the name of the originator is placed on the back of each one. In purchasing ask for BADEAU'S PLASTER. See that the name BADEAU is written on the back, or you will be deceived.

P. A. WHITE, Sole Proprietor.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all; impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Warranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat of sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occasionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.
Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba,
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of
TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.
All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.
PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00
CONTENTS;
EMBELLISHMENT.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihudas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture—by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson
Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anony mous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Merce Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—b Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.
Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with
Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.
BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker
between Broadway & Crosby

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordon Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. ell, Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated, Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

ife of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

Th Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Association 1775. With notes showing their bearing on slavery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x28, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
60 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed lines. Illustrated by nearly an a hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 24 NEW YORK, JANUARY 11, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

The Weekly Anglo-African.
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY,
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
NO. 48½ BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed
ROBT HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

PART I.

> By myself, the Lord of Ages,
> I have sworn to right the wrong;
> I have pledged my word unbroken,
> For the weak against the strong.
> [H. BEECHER STOWE

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE FUGITIVES.

With much apprehension, Henry and comrades passed hastily through the State of Arkansas, he having previously traversed it partly, and learned sufficient to put him on his guard.

Travelling in the night to avoid the day, the progress was not equal to the emergency. Though he carried a pocket compass, they kept in sight of the Mississippi river, to take their chance of the first steamer passing by.

The third night out being Monday, at day-break in the morning, their rest for the day was made at a convenient point within the verge of a forest. Suddenly Charles gave vent to hearty laughter, at a time when all were supposep to be serious, having the evening past been beset by a train of three negro-dogs, which, having first been charmed, they slew at the instant; the dogs probably not having been sent on trail of them, but, after the custom of the state, baying on a general round to intimidate the slaves from clandestinely venturing out, and to attack such runaways as might by chance be found in their track.

'Wat's de matteh, Chauls?' inquired Andy.

'I was just thinking,' replied he; 'of the sight of three high conjurers, who if Ghamus and Gholar be true, can do anything they please, having to escape by night, and travel in the wild woods, to evade the pursuit of white men who do not pretend to know anything about such things.'

'Dat,s a fack,' added Andy; 'an' little, scronny, triflin', weak wite men at dat—any uv us hear ought to wip two or three uv 'em at once. Dare's Hughs, a little bit a feller, I could take 'im in one han' an' throw 'im oveh my head, an' ole Potteh' for his paut, he so ole an' good for nothin,' I could wip wid one han' half a dozen like 'im.'

'Now you see, boys,' said Henry; 'how much conjuration and such foolishness and nonsense is worth to the slaves in the South. All that it does is to put money into the pockets of the pretended conjurer, give him power over others by making them afraid of him; and even old Gamby Gholar and Maudy Ghamus and the rest of the 'Seven Heads,' with all the high conjurers in the Dismal Swamp, are depending more upon me to deliver them from their confinement as prisoners in the Swamp and runaway slaves, than all their combined efforts together. I made it a special part of my mission wherever I went, to enlighten them on this subject.'

'I wondeh you didn' 'fend 'em,' replied Andy.

'No danger of that, since having so long, to no purpose, depended upon such persons and nonsense, they are sick at heart of them, and waiting willingly and ready for anything which may present for their aid, even to the destruction of their long cherished, silly nonsense of conjuration.'

'Thang God for dat!, concluded Andy.

Charles having fallen asleep, Andy became the sentinel of the party, as it was the arrangement for each one alternately, every two hours during rest, to watch while the other two slept. Henry having next fallen into a doze, Andy heard a cracking among the bushes, when on looking around, two men approached them. Being fatigued, drowsy and giddy, he became much alarmed, arousing his companions, all springing to their feet. The men advanced, who, to their gratification proved to be Eli and Ambrose, two Arkansas slaves, who having promised to meet Henry on his return, had effected their escape immediately after first meeting him, lurking in the forest in the direction he had laid out to take.

Eli was so fair as to be taken, when first seen to be a white man. Throwing their arms about Henry, they bestowed upon him their blessings and thanks, for his advent into the State, as the means of their escape.

While thus exchanging gratulations, the approach up stream of a steamer was heard, and at once Henry devised the expedient, and determined boldly to hail her and demand a passage. Putting Eli forward as the master, Ambrose carrying the porte manteau which belonged to the two, and the others with bundles in their hands, all rushed to the bank of the river on the verge of the thicket; Eli holding up a handkerchief as a signal. The bell tolled, and the yawl immediately lowered, made for the shore. It was agreed that Eli should be known as 'Major Ely' of Arkansas.

Seeing that blacks were of the company, when the yawl approached, the mate stood upon her forecastle.

'What's the faction here?' cried out the sturdy mate.

'Where are you bound?' inquired Eli.

'For St. Louis.'

'Can I get a passage for myself and four negroes?'

'What's the name, sir?'

'Major Ely of Arkansas,' was the reply.

'Aye, aye, sir, come aboard,' said the mate; when, pulling away, the steamer was soon reached, the slaves going on deck, and the master to the cabin.

On application for a state room, the clerk on learning the name, desired to know his destination.

'The State of Missouri, sir,' said Eli; 'between the points of the mouth of the Ohio and St. Genevieve.'

'Ely,' repeated the clerk; 'I've heard that name before—its a Missouri name—any relation to Dr. Ely, Major?'

'Yes, a brother's son,' was the prompt reply.

'Yes, yes, I thought I knew the name,' replied the clerk; "but the old fellow wasn't quite of your way of thinking, concerning negroes, I believe?'

'No, he is one man, and I'm another, and he may go his way, and I'll go mine,' replied Eli.

'That's the right feeling, Major,' replied the clerk; 'and we would have a much healthier state of politics in the country, if men generally would only agree to act on that principle.'

'It has ever been my course,' said Eli.

'Peopling a new farm I reckon, Major?'

'Yes sir.,

The master, keeping a close watch upon the slaves, was frequently upon deck among them, and requested that they be supplied with more than common fare for slaves, he sparing no expense to make them comfortable. The slaves, on their part, appeared to be particularly attached to him, always smiling when he approached, apparently regretting when he left for the cabin.

Meanwhile the steamer gracefully plowing up the current, making great headway, reached the point desired, when the master and slaves were safely transferred from the steamer to the shore of Missouri.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THE PURSUIT.

The absence of mammy Judy, daddy Joe, Charles and little Tony, on the return early Monday morning of Colonel Franks and lady from the country, unmistakably proved the escape of their slaves, and the farther proof of the exit of of 'squire Potter's Andy and Beckwith's Clara, with the remembrance of the stampede a few months previously, required no farther confirmation of the fact, when the neighborhood again was excited to a ferment. The advisory committee was called into immediate council, and ways and means devised for the arrest of the recreant slaves recently left, and to prevent among them the recurrence of such things; a pursuit at once commenced, which for the three succeeding days was carried in the wrong direction—towards Jackson—whither, it was supposed in the neighborhood, Henry had been lurking previous to the last sally upon their premises, as he had certainly been seen on Saturday evening, coming from the landing.

No traces being found in that direction, the course was changed, the swiftest steamer boarded in pursuit for the Ohio river.—This point being reached but a few hours subsequent to that of the fugitives, when learning of their course, the pursuers proceeded toward the place of their destination, on the Mississippi river.

This point being the southern part of Missouri but a short distance above the confluence of the Ohio and Mississippi, the last named river had of necessity, to be passed, being to the fugitives only practicable by means of a ferry. The ferryman in this instance commanded a horse-boat, he residing on the opposite side of the river. Stepping up to him—a tall, raw-boned, athletic, rough looking, beardy fellow—Eli saluted:

'We want to cross the river, sir!'

'Am yera free?' inquired the ferryman.

'Am I free? are you free?' rejoined Eli.

'Yes, I be's a white man!' replied the boatman.

'And so am I!' retorted Eli; 'and you dare not tell me I'm not.'

'I'll swong, stranger, yer mus' 'scuse me, as I didn' take no notice on yez! but I like to know if them air black folks ye got wey yer am free, case if they arn't, I be 'sponsible for 'em 'cording to the new law, called I 'bleve the Nebrasky Complimize Fugintive Slave Act, made down at Californy, last year,' apologized and explained the somewhat confused ferryman.

'Yes,' replied Henry; 'we are free, and if we were not, I don't think it any part of your business to know. I thought you were here to carry people across the river.'

'But frien',' rejoined the man; 'yer don't understan' it. This are a law made by the Newnited States of Amerike, an' I be 'bliged to fulfill it by ketchin' every fugintive that goes to cross this way, or I mus' pay a thousand dollars, and go to jail till the black folks is got, if that be's never. Yer see yez can't blame me, as I mus' 'bey the laws o' Congress. I'll swong, it's hardly a fair shake nuther, but I be 'bleged to 'bey the laws, yer know.'

'Well sir,' replied Henry; 'we want to cross the river.'

'Let me see yer papers frien'!' asked the ferryman.

'My friend,' said Henry; 'are you willing to make yourself a watch-dog for slaveholders, and do for them that which they would not do for themselves, catch runaway slaves? Don't you know that this is just the work which they boast on having the poor white men of the North do for them? Have you not yet learned to attend to your own interests instead of theirs?—Here are our free papers,' holding out his open hand, in which lay five half-eagle pieces.

'Jump aboard!' cried the ferryman. 'Quick, quick!' shouted he, as the swift feet of four horses were heard dashing up the road.

Scarcely had the boat moved from her fastenings, till they had arrived; the riders dismounted, who presenting revolvers, declared upon the boatman's life, instantly, if he did not change the direction of his boat and come back to the Missouri shore. Seizing a well-charged rifle belonging to the boatman, his comrades each with a well aimed six-barreled weapon:

'Shoot if you dare!' exclaimed Henry, the slaveholders declining their arms,—when, turning to the awe stricken ferryman, handing him the twenty-five dollars, said: 'your cause is a just one, and your reward is sure; take this money, proceed and you are safe—refuse, and you instantly die!'

'Then I be's to do right,' declared the boatman; 'if I die by it,' when applying the whip to the horses, in a few moments landed them on the Illinois shore.

This being the only ferry in the neighborhood, and fearing a bribe or coercion by the people on the Illinois side, or the temptation of a higher reward from the slave catchers, Henry determined on eluding, if possible, every means of farther pursuit.

'What are your horses worth?' inquired he.

'They can't be no use to you frien', case they be's both on 'em bline, an' couldn' travel twenty mile a day, on a stretch!'

'Have you any other horses?'

'They be all the hosses I got; I ginerly feed a spell this side; I lives over here—this are my feedin' trip,' drawled the boatman.

'What will you take for them?'

'Well frien', they arn't wuth much to buy, nohow, but wuth a good lock to me for drawin' the boat over, yer see.'

'What did they cost you in buying them?'

'Well, I o'ny gin six-seven dollars apiece, or sich a matter, for 'em, when I got 'em, an' they cos' me some two-three dollars, or sich a matter, more to git 'em in pullin' order, yer see.'

'Will you sell them to me?'

'I hadn't ort to part with 'em frien', as I do good lock o' biniss hereabouts wey them air nags, bline as they be.'

'Here are thirty dollars for your horses!' said Henry, putting into his hand the money in gold pieces, when, unhitching them from their station, leading them out to the side of the boat, he shot them, pushing them over into the river.

'Farewell my friend!' saluted Henry, he and comrades leaving the astonished ferryman gazing after them, whilst the slaveholders on the other shore stood gnashing their teeth, grimacing their faces, shaking their fists, with various gesticulations of threat, none of which were either heard, heeded or cared for by the fleeing party, or determined ferryman.

Taking a northeasterly course for Indiana, Andy being an accustomed singer, commenced in lively glee and cheerful strains, singing to the expressive words:

> 'We are like a band of pilgrims,
> In a strange and foreign land,
> With our knapsacks on our shoulders,
> And our cudgels in our hands,
> And have many miles before us,
> But it lessens not our joys,
> We will sing a merry chorus,
> For we are the tramping boys.'

Then joined in chorus the whole party—

> 'We are all jogging,
> Jog, jog, jogging,
> And we're all jogging,
> We are going to the North!'

The Wabash river becoming the next point of obstruction, a ferry, as in the last case, had also to be crossed, the boatman residing on the Indiana side.

'Are you free?' inquired the boatman, as the party of blacks approached.

'We are,' was the reply of Henry.

'Where are you from?' continued he.

'We are from home, sir,' replied Charles; 'and the sooner you take us across the river, just so much sooner we will reach it.'

Still doubting their right to pass, he asked for their papers, but having by this time become so conversant with the patriotism and fidelity of these men to their country, Charles handed the Indianian a five dollar piece, who on seeing the out-stretched wings of the eagle, desired no farther evidence of their right to pass, conveying them into the State, contrary to the statutes of the Commonwealth.

On went the happy travelers without hinderance or molestation, until the middle of the week next ensuing.

CHAPTER XXX.

THE ATTACK, RESISTANCE, ARREST.

The travel for the last ten days had been pleasant, save the necessity in the more southern part of the State, of lying by through the day, and traveling at night—the fugitives cheerful and full of hope, nothing transpiring to mar their happiness, until approaching a village in the centre of northern Indiana.

Supposing their proximity to the British Provinces made them safe, with an imprudence not before committed by the discreet runaways, when nearing a blacksmith's shop a mile and a half from the village, Andy in his usual manner, with stentorian voice, commenced the following song:

> 'I'm on my way to Canada,
> That cold and dreary land;
> The dire effects of slavery,
> I can no longer stand.
> My soul is vexed within me so,
> To think that I'm a slave,
> I've now resolved to strike the blow,
> For Freedom or the grave.'

All uniting in the chorus,

> 'O, righteous Father
> Wilt Thou not pity me,
> And aid me on to Canada,
> Where fugitives are free?
>
> I heard old England plainly say,
> If we would all forsake
> Our native land of Slavery,
> And come across the lakes!'

'There, Ad'line! I golly, dont you hear that!' said Dave Starkweather, the blacksmith, to his wife, both of whom on hearing the unusual noise of singing thrust their heads out of the door of a little log hut, and stood patiently listening to the song, every word of which they distinctly caught; 'them's fugertive slaves, an' I'll have 'em tuck up; they might a' passed but for their singin' praise, to that darn' Queen! I cant stan' that no how!'

'No,' replied Adaline; 'I'm sure I don't see what they sing to her for; she's no 'Merican. We ain't under her now, am we, Dave?'

'No, we ain't, Ad'line, not sence the battle o' Waterloo, an' I golly, we wouldn't be ef we was. The 'Mericans could whip her a darn' sight easier now than what they done when they fit her at Waterloo.'

'Lah me, Dave, you could wip 'er yourself! she ai'nt bigger nor tother wimin am she?' said Mrs. Starkweather.

'No she arn't, not a darn' bit!' replied he.

'Dave, ask 'em in the shop to rest,' suggested the wife in a hurried whisper, elbowing her husband as the party advanced, having ceased singing so soon as they saw the faces of white persons.

'Travlin', I reckon?' interrogated the blacksmith; 'little kind 'o tired, I spose?'

'Yes, sir, a little so,' replied Henry.

'Didn't come fur, I 'spect?' continued he.

'Not very,' carelessly replied Henry.

'Take seat there, an' rest ye little,' pointing to a smootly-worn log, used by the visitors of the shop.

'Thank you,' said Henry; 'we will,' all seating themselves in a row.

'Take little somethin'?' asked he; stepping back to a corner, taking out of a caddy in the wall, a rather corpulent green bottle, turning it up to his mouth, drenching himself almost to strangulation.

'We don't drink, sir,' replied the fugitives.

'Temperance, I reckon?' enquired the smith.

'Rather so,' replied Henry.

'Kind o' think we'll have a spell o' weather?'

'Yes,' said Andy;' dat's certain; we 'll have a spell a weatheh!'

On entering the shop, the person at the bellows, a tall, able-bodied young man, was observed to pass out at the back door, a number of persons of both sexes to come frequently; look in, and depart, succeeded by others; no import being attached to this, supposing themselves to be an attraction, partly from their singing, and mainly from their color being a novelty in the neighborhood.

During conversation with the blacksmith, he after eying very closely the five strangers, was observed to walk behind the door, stand for some minutes looking as if reading, then resume his place at the anvil, after which he went out at the back door. Curiosity now with some anxiety, induced Henry to look for the cause of it, when with no little alarm, he discovered a handbill fully descriptive of himself and comrades, having been issued in the town of St. Genevieve, offering a heavy reward, particularising the scene at the Mississippi ferry and the killing of the horses as an aggravated offence, because depriving a poor man of his only means of livelihood, being designed to strengthen inducements to apprehend them, the bill being signed 'John Harris.'

Evening now ensuing, Henry and comrades, the more easily to pass through the village without attraction, had remained until this hour, resting in the blacksmith shop. Enquiring for some black family in the neighborhood, they were cited to one consisting of an old man and woman, Devan by name, residing on the other side a short distance from the village.

'Ye'll fine ole Bill of the right stripe,' said the blacksmith knowingly; 'ye needn' be feared o' him. Ye'll fine him and ole Sally jist what they say they is; I'll go bail for that. The first log hut ye come to after ye leave the village is them; jist knock at the door, an' ye'll fine ole Bill an' Sally all right, blamed if ye don't. Jis name me; tell 'em Dave Starkweather sent ye there, an' blamed if ye dont fine things at high water mark: I'm tellin' ye so, blamed if I ain't!' was the recommendation of the blacksmith.

'Thank you for your kindness,' replied Henry, politely bowing as they rose from the log; 'good bye, sir!'

'Devlish decent lookin' black fellers,' said the man of the anvil, complimenting, designedly for them to hear; 'blamed ef they ain't as free as we is—I golly they is!'

Without, as they thought, attracting attention, passing through the village half a mile or more, they came to a log hut on the right side of the way.

'How yeh do, frien! How yeh come on?' saluted a short, rather corpulent wheezing old black man; 'come in. Hi! da's good many on yeh; ole 'omin come, hear' some friens!' calling his wife Sally, an old woman, shorter in stature, but not less corpulent than he, sitting by a comfortable dry-stump fire.

'How is yeh, friens? How yeh do? come to de fieh, mighty cole!' said the old woman.

'Quite cool,' replied Andy, rubbing his hands, spreading them out, protecting his face from the heat.

'Yeh is travelin, I reckon, dare's good many go 'long hear; we no call t' ask 'em whar da gwine, we knows who da is, case we come fom dar. I an' ole man once slave in Faginny; mighty good country fer black folks.'

Sally set immediately about preparing something to give her guests a good meal. Henry admonished them against extra trouble, but they insisted on giving them a good supper.

Deeming it more prudent, the hut being on the highway, Henry requested to retire until summoned to supper, being shown to the loft attained by a ladder and simple hatchway, the door of which was shut down, and fastened on the lower side.

The floor consisting of rough, unjointed boards, containing great cracks through which the light and heat from below passed up, all could be both seen and heard, which transpired down stairs.

Seeing the old man so frequently open and look out at the door, and being suspicious from the movements of the blacksmith and others, Henry affecting to be sleepy, requested Billy and his wife when ready to awaken them, when after a few minutes, all were snoring as if fast asleep, Henry lying in such a position as through a knot-hole in the floor, to see every movement in all parts of the room. Directly above him in the rafter within his reach, hung a mowing sythe.

'Now yeh time, ole man; da all fas' asleep! da snorin' good!' said old Sally, urging Billy to hasten, who immediately left the hut.

The hearts of the fugitives were at once 'in their mouths,' and with difficuly it was by silently reaching over and heavily pressing upon each of them, that Henry succeeded in admonishing each to entire quietness and submission.

Presently entered a white man, who whispering with Sally left the room. Immediately in came old Bill, at which instant Henry found his right hand above him, involuntarily grasped firmly on the snath of the scythe.

'Whar's da?' inquired old Bill, on entering the hut.

'Sho da whar yeh lef 'em!' replied the old woman.

,Spose I kin bring em in now?' continued old Bill.

'Bring who in?'

'Da wite folks; who else I gwine fetch in yeh spose?'

'Betteh let 'em 'tay whar da is, and let de po' men lone, git sumpen t' eat, an' go long whar da gwine!' replied Sally.

'How cum yeh talk dat way? Sho yeh tole me go!' replied Billy.

'Didn' reckon yeh gwine bring 'em on da po' cretehs dis way, fo' da git moufful t' eat an' git way so.'

'How I gwine let 'em go now de wite folks all out dar, say Sally? Dis jis wat make I tell yeh so!'

'Betteh let wite folks 'lone, Willum! dat jis wat I been tellin on yeh! Keep foolin' long wid wite folks, byme by da show yeh! I no trus' wite man, no how. Sho! da no fren' o' black folks. But spose body 'blige keep de right side on em' long so.'

'Ole 'omin,' said Bill, 'yeh knows we make our livin' by de wite folks, an' mus' do wat da tell us, so whar's de use talkin' long so. Spose da come in now?'

'Sho, I tole yeh de man sleep! gwine bring wite folks on 'em so? give po' cretehs no chance? Go long, do wat yeh gwine do; yeh fine out one dese days.' concluded Sally.

Having stealthily risen to their feet, standing in a favorable position, Henry in whispers declared to his comrades that with that sythe he intended mowing his way into Canada.

Impatient for their entrance, throwing wide open the door of the hut, which being the signal, in rushed eleven white men, headed by Jud Shirly, constable, Dave Starkweather the blacksmith, and Tom Overton as deputies; George Grove, a respectable, well dressed villager, stood giving general orders.

With light and pistol in hand, Shirly mounting the stairway commanded a surrender. Eli, standing behind the hatchway, struck the candle from his hand, when with a swing of the sythe, there was a screech, fall, and groan heard, then with a shout and leap—Henry in the lead—they cleared the stairs to the lower floor, the white men flying in consternation before them, making their way to the village, alarming the inhabitants.

The fugitives fled in great haste, continuing their flight for several miles, when becoming worn down with fatigue, retired under cover of a thicket a mile from a stage tavern kept by old Isaac Slusher of German descent.

The villagers following in quick pursuit—every horse which could be readily obtained being put on the chase—the slaves were overtaken, fired upon—a ball lodging in Charles' thigh—overpowered, and arrested. Deeming it, from the number of idlers about the place and the condition of the stables, much the safest imprisonment, the captives were taken to the tavern of Slusher, to quarter for the night.

On arriving at this place, a shout of triumph rent the air, and a general cry 'take them into the bar room for inspection! hang them! burn them!' and much more.

Here the captives were derided, scoffed at and ridiculed, turned around, limbs examined, shoved about from side to side, then ordered to sit down on the floor, a non-compliance with which; having arranged themselves for the purpose at a given signal, a single trip by an equal number of whites, brought the four poor prisoners suddenly to the floor on the broad of their backs, their heads striking with great force. At this abuse of helpless men, the shouts of laughter became deafening. It caused them to shun the risk of standing, and keep seated on the floor.

Charles having been wounded, affected inability to stand, but the injury being a flesh wound, was not serious.

'We'll show ye yer places, ye black devils ye!' said Ned Bradley, a rowdy, drawing back his foot to kick Henry in the face, as he sat upon the floor against the wall, giving him a slight kick in the side as he passed by him.

'Don't do that again, sir!' sternly said Henry, with an expression full of meaning, looking him in the face.

Several feet in an instant were drawn back to kick, when Slusher interfering, said:

'Shendlemans! tem plack mans ish prishners! you tuz pring tem into mine houish, andt you shandt puse tem dare!' when the rowdies ceased abusing them.

'Well, gentlemen,' said Tom Overton, a burly, bullying bar room person, 'we'd best git these blacks out of the way, if they's any fun up to night.'

'I cot plendy peds, shendlemans, I ondtly vants to know who ish to pay me,' replied Slusher.

'I golly,' retorted Starkweather, 'you needn't give yourself no uneasiness about that, Slusher. I think me and Shirly and Grove is good for a night's lodging for five niggers, any how!'

'I'm in that snap, too!' hallooed out Overton.

'Golly! yes, Tom, there's you we like to forgot, blamed if we didn't!' responded Starkweather.

'Dat ish all righdt nough zo far as te plack man's ish gonzern, put ten dare ish te housh vull o' peoples, vot vare musht I gheep tem?'

'We four,' replied Grove, 'will see you paid, who else? Slusher, we want it understood, that we four stand responsible for all expenses incurred this night, in the taking of these negroes;' evidently expecting to receive as they claimed, the reward offered in the advertisement.

'Dat vill too ten,' replied Slusher. 'Vell, I ish ready to lit tese plack mans to ped.'

'No, Slusher,' interrupted Grove, 'that's not the understanding; we don't pay for beds for niggers to sleep in!'

'No, by Molly!' replied Overton; 'dogged if that aint goin' a leetle too far! Slusher, you can't choke that down, no how you can fix in. If you do as you please with your own house, these niggers is in our custody, and we'll do as we please with them. We want you to know that we are white men, as well as you are, and cant pay for niggers to sleep in the same house with ourselves.'

'Gents, said Ned Bradley, 'do you hear that?'

'What?' enquired several voices.

'Why, old Slusher wants to give the niggers a room up stairs with us!'

'With who?' shouted they.

'With us white men.'

'No, blamed if he does!' replied Starkweather.

'We won't stand that!' exclaimed several voices.

'Where's Slusher?' enquired Ben West, a discharged stage driver, who hung about the premises, and now figured prominently.

'Here ish me, shendlemans!' answered Slusher, coming from the back part of the house; 'andt you may do as you blese midt tem plack mans, pud iv you dempt puse me, I vill pudt you all out mine housh!'

'The stable, the stable!' they all cried out; 'put the niggers in the stable, and we'll be satisfied!'

'Dare ish mine staple—you may pud tem vare you blese,' replied the old man; 'budt you shandt puse me!'

Securely binding them with cords, they were placed in a strongly built log stable closely weather-boarded, having but a door and window below, the latter being closely secured, and the door locked on the outside with a staple and padlock. The upper windows being well secured, the blacks thus locked in, were left to their fate, whilst their captors comfortably housed, were rioting in triumph through the night, over their misfortune, and blasted prospects for liberty.

PETITION

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES, IN CONGRESS ASSEMBLED.

We the undersigned, confidently trusting in the wisdom, justice, and magnanimity of your honorable bodies, beg leave to ask respectfully that you grant all that portion of country, designated by the name and title of the State of Florida, originally purchased from Spain by the United States of America, and annexed to the United States by an act of Congress as one of the sovereign states of the Union.

Your Petitioners request that said act by which she became a state, be repealed, and that said state be restored to its original condition of a territory, and that said territory be granted for the use, benefit, and occupation of the free colored population of the United States, their descendants and all others who may hereafter become free by confiscation, emancipation, or otherwise.

Your petitioners further pray that grants of land be given to each family and adult respectively, of the aforesaid class, as an inducement and encouragement to emigration, and that said territory be under the protection of the government of the United States until such time as the people of said territory shall show themselves capable of making their own laws and administering their own government.

Your petitioners further pray that nothing herein contained may be so construed as to require any compulsory emigration on the part of the said people of color of the United States to the aforesaid territory.

Your petitioners ask this for the following reasons, and others which may address themselves to your minds;

1. Florida has by a deliberate act of her own, seceded from the United States, by which act she has forfeited all claim, right and title to all lands within said state.

2. The free colored population of the United States, their ancestors and brethren who are in bonds, have helped to make the government what it is in wealth and power. This surely will not be denied.

3. The free colored population of the United States own a vast amount of property, which property is taxed annually, and a vast amount of revenue obtained to help support and defray the expense of government.

4. In every state in the Union the free colored people are proscribed to a greater or less extent; their presence is obnoxious to the masses of the whites; they, the whites, will not submit to living with them on terms of equality under the same government. Surely, then, this little spot of six thousand square miles, (her resources yet undeveloped,) is the place for them, (and this is all that is appropriated o one sixth of the whole population of the Union—including slaves.)

5. In the colored people of the United States the love of home is inherent, they know no other—no other they want—this place would be congenial to their feelings, sentiments and pursuits, hence they would migrate there, and soon show their capacity for self-government, and become respectable and respected.

6. There are many slaves, and the probability is, there will be many more slaves who will be confiscated and set free by the acts of Congress; (this territory, then, will be an asylum for that class which would be unacceptable to the free states.

7. The general government has never yet granted to this class a homestead, or permitted them to settle on the public lands; nor have they been allowed the same privileges in common with others which tend to their elevation in the scale of being. Besides this portion of the country, with its climate and other advantages, would alike meet the wishes of both black and white, and in the judgment of your petitioners be a wise and just measure.

These, with many other reasons which might be assigned, your petitioners conceive would justify and secure the passage of such an act, for which your petitioners will ever pray.

Dated Trenton, N. J., Dec. 1861.

The above petition, prepared by Rev. Wm. E. Walker, was received by us two or three weeks ago, but having been mislaid, its publication was consequently deferred until the present time.

A COLONY OF EX-SLAVES IN SOUTH CAROLINA. On Betany Bay Island is the negro settlement, located by us for the benefit of contrabands; and Lieutenant Budd, of the Penguin, who guards it, has now the care of between seven and nine hundred of men, women and children, who seem to be happy enough in their colony.

No commissioners from the so called Southern Confederacy are admitted or recognised by this youthful community, and they don't propose, as yet, to hold diplomatic intercourse with any nation save the United States. The Seneca brought down to-day three prisoners from the Penguin, who were captured by the negroes on Edisto Island a week or two since. The fellows, whites, came from the mainland to get furniture, and about fifty negroes surrounded them and made them prisoners. The negroes are loyal, they say, and of course delivered their prisoners to Commander Budd, who took care of them and sent them here. The South Carolina negroes are so true, you know, and would fight for their masters so quickly, as we have all heard; and to prove it, I adduce the above instance. Certainly they are rapidly learning; and if the war lasts until next June the rebels will be apt to realise the fact in a terrible manner. If the insurrectionary torch is not kindled by that time the negroes must [illegible] knowledge; and how is it to be prevented?—Cor. N. Y. Herald.

You will not be agreeable to company if you strive to bring in or keep up a subject unsuitable to their capacities or humor.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, JANUARY 4, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of he news-dealers everywhere.

AN "OCCUPATION GONE."

Society inflicts punishments other than those laid down in Statute law, or in the remorseless edicts of public opinion. Even those movements which are attended with the greatest good to the greatest number, have sharp and painful angles towards the minorities caught between the nether mill-stone of conservatism. The invention of the power-loom left hand weavers a grievance which has become hereditary. The sewing machine pinches with a keener poverty the class sanctified to want through the "Song of the Shirt." The hardy whalemen are driven from their occupation by the oil gurgling from the bowels of the earth in Pennsylvania, and their ships famed in many a story, settle down to keep guard forever on the entrance to rebel ports on the Southern coast.

There is a curious case of this penalty of progress growing out of our present rebellion, which so far has escaped the attention of "the reporters." A branch of industry has been cut off, sealed up, dried up, demolished. The operatives have been turned out in the cold to freeze, to starve, to beg (in vain) and bemoan their hard fate, without even a scribe or priest or levite to cast a single glance of compassion towards them. This is perhaps the severest, because the unkindest blow, under which they have succumbed; for, a few short months ago, and this branch of industry was approved of in all the churches; underlaid the decisions of the courts of law, and blazoned on the platform and in the Legislative Halls: its workers were dressed in fine linen, had a good time generally, named their price, whether in gold, in office under government, at home or abroad—and they were paid at once. Our own sense of fairness is so shocked at this unceremonious "crushing out" of a class of our fellow mortals, that we proposed to become their "good Samaritan," to point them out to their abolition friends, bind up their wounds and give them a lift to the best of our rough ability.

The branch of industry to which we allude, is "Negrophobia:" the operatives were Judge Taney, the Cabinet of James Buchanan, one half and more of the American Senate, a majority of the House of Representatives, the entire pulpit South, two thirds of the pulpit North, four-fifths of the merchants North and South, a vast majority of the lawyers and legislators of the entire land, most of these operatives worked, partly by job, and partly for pure love of the occupation; it was not their sole dependence, but they thought it soon would be and therefore bowed down and worshipped it, said their prayers to it: it gave edge to points of law, gave odor to legislative enactments, and lent grace and fervor to pulpit utterances: but there was another class of operatives with whom this calling was their sole dependence; the VanEvries, the Notts, the Hortons, the Hallocks, the New York Herald's negro, the Shepherds, the Cartwrights, the DeBows, and the last in point of time, perhaps first in point of subtlety and wit—the Reverend Doctor Samuel Seabury, the divine author of "The baby contract as a foundation for perpetual slavery." This class meets with our profound commiseration. Their "occupation's gone," and they are fit for no other.

And this is one of the exigencies of our civil war. War of this kind is a sort of politician's death-bed—it detects the heart; it uncovers the national heart and shows that negro-hate had not any real existence in the great heart of the American people; it was only a polit cal sham, brushed away with the first stern realities. There is no longer negro hate at the South, the black man is loved there as he was neve[illegible]ed before, respected there, relied on there, enlisted in the army there—in short he is the very reliance and back-bone of the rebellion. Of course the "occupation" of those who lived by maligning, abusing and writing down the negro, "is gone"—gone we hope, forever: the plumed troop and the big wars have buried them and their hell-born lies in the lowest deep of utter forgetfulness. At the North also, there is a state of things which crush out negro-hating-operatives. The North relies more upon the blacks of the South than she is willing to confess; more is hoped from negro-rebellion than from the arms of our troops, or from the skill of McClellan. Wellington, at Waterloo, did not pray more earnestly for Blucher, than the free North looks past the Potomac for some Denmark Vesey or Nat Turner. Hence in the heart of the North, the negro is looked up to for heroism, daring, and a bold dash for those rights of which the master has helped deprive him for nearly a century; and with people in such a state of mind, the occupation of a negro-hating-operative, be he priest, politician or editor—is gone!"

And so, eight months of civil war has raised the negro up to be regarded and talked about as a man: eight months more of like war, and she will be regarded as a brother; and when the fiery furnace through which the union in passing shall have done its service; when the pure gold of patriotism and nationality and union shall well out from the alembic, then away down among the dross and slug and scoriae, covered in the ash heap, hardly fit for fertilising any known field, will be found the remains of negro hate and negro haters.

A CURIOUS RUMOR—IS IT TRUE?

It is said that some months ago, when the rebels were in force on Munson's Hill, McClellan laid a plan to surround and capture them. This plan was only known to McClellan, General Scott, and Col Scott, (a relation of the General's by marriage.) As the troops started out at night for their assault, a signal rocket went up from Washington. On their arrival at Munson's Hill, the bird had flown. McClellan being informed of this, immediately called on Gen. Scott, finding there Col. Scott. He immediately said to the General 'the enemy have been warned of our movement by a rocket. They must have been so warned by one of us. Which is the traitor?'' No answer was given. McClellan then called on the President, stated the above facts; stated his conviction that Col Scott was the delinquent, and insisted on his immediate imprisonment, or his banishment, or his own resignation. Then followed General Scott's resignation; then his journey to Paris, and the self-banishment of Col. Scott.

IMPORTANT MOVEMENT.

To Dr. James McCune Smith—My Dear Sir and Friend: I lay aside the form of conventional etiquet and 'statesman' courtesy, and prefer addressing you in a plain, familiar, and friendly manner in such times as these, on a subject of such grave importance.

The present state of the political affairs of the world more than at any period since the establishment of international policies among Christian governments—which policies comprehend and imply all nations and peoples, whether civilised or heathen—call for and imperatively demand our attention as descendants of Africa in whole or part.

I fully concur with and endorse the idea suggested in the 'Anglo-African' of the 14th of December and 4th instant, that there should be held at the earliest possible period, in America, a great Council of the leading men among us; and let me not be misunderstood when I say, that such men must be composed of the highest intelligence, otherwise such an effort must be nugatory, and consequently prove an entire failure. As such a Council can only originate and be held by mutual consent, it is not only the right but duty of those who originate it, to say of whom it may be composed. The point to be considered is not whether we are emigrationists or anti-emigrationists; in favor of or opposed to emigration: but whether we cannot agree upon and endorse a general policy which shall favor both; a policy which whilst it admits my right to go when and where I may think best; admits yours to stay wherever you may think best; and at the same time, secures and defends a reciprocal interest in each others welfare. Such a policy as this, sir, firmly established and fixed by us, will give a status such as never has been known to our race since the days of Africa's primitive national prowess. One of the most prominent features in the present conflicts, struggles, and political movements among the nations of the world seems to be: which can reduce us to a condition the best adapted to promote their luxury, wealth, and aggrandizement, to which we as a race, for centuries have contributed more than any other race. Our race throughout the world (the major part of which is in Africa and the western continent) numbers nearly three hundred millions (300,000,000), some thirty millions (30,000,000), more or less, of which is mixed blood. In God's name, must we ever be subordinate to those of another race, both in as well as out of Africa? Is subordination our normal condition? Must we either be abject slaves, the property personal of the Caucasian, or the submissive drudges of their social industrial element, ever ministering as domestics to their pride and arrogance? Is it true that we are not to be permitted anywhere to govern ourselves, but must have white rulers? Have we no other destiny—no other social and political relations in prospect as an inheritance for our children? It is for us to determine whether or not this shall be so; therefore, I suggest to you, sir, to join with me in calling upon our educated men, to assemble at some convenient time and in Council, and determine on a settled policy as a rule of action, by which we shall be guided.

With the light of the age in which we live—with our advantages of educational attainments—with the Divine Promise that 'Princes' (Power) 'shall come out of Egypt' (from among the African race), 'and Ethiopia stretch forth' (from all parts of the world) 'her hands unto God'—did we now remain passive, the world should justly condemn us, and posterity curse our names.

Sir, this is no time for quibbling by the men of qualification and mature intelligence among us; and as duty and obligations call me to Africa, I cannot hope to be long on this continent; but can I but be so happy as to meet such a Council before I depart I shall be willing to entrust the cause in the hands of those men among us of sterling worth, who have ever been found able, true, sincere and faithful to the cause of their brethren, race, and humanity, through years of difficult trial. A policy established on principle as a general basis of action, must be our object and aim.

I am, dear sir, for God and humanity, the Redemption of our race, and Regeneration of Africa,

Your friend and Brother,

M. R. Delany.

97 High street, Brooklyn, L. I.

Arrival of the Rev. H. H. Garnet.—Our many readers will be pleased to learn that Mr. Garnet arrived home from his trip to England on the 31st ult., greatly benefited in health by the journey. He preached in Shiloh church last Sabbath evening, to a very large audience. We are gratified to know that the ministrations of the Rev. Mr. Gloucester, during Mr. Garnet's absence, have been highly acceptable to the church, and his short stay among them has been very agreeable to himself.

SOUTHERN ITEMS.

The following is from a recent number of the Richmond Despatch:

A few days ago Dick, a venerable darkey in uniform, was arrested for carrying a huge bowie-knife. He was on his return home to Danville from a campaign against the Yankees, and the Mayor discharged him after confiscating the knife.

"The person referred to has occupied the position of chief drummer for the 18th Virginia Regiment for the last eight months, and is highly esteemed by the regiment, not only as a musician, but as a brave and gallant old man. He is a hero of two wars, and in several instances has rendered good service to the country. When the war with Mexico broke out, he inlisted as musician for a South Carolina regiment and followed it through the war, and was present when the glorious Gen. Butler fell. The war being successfully terminated, he returned home to his usual avocations Upon the breaking out of our present war, though old and gray, he was among the first to respond to Virginia's call for volunteers, and was regularly mustered into service with the 18th Regiment. Since that time he has not only carried his drum, but also the bowie-knife referred to above, and a musket.

In the memorable battle of the 21st of July, he deserted his drum, and, with musket in hand, followed the regiment throughout the battle. Several days after the battle, while strolling through the woods, he discovered the hiding-place of what he thought a Yankee, and, on reporting it, went down with several of the regiment and captured three of the creatures—one of them Col. Wood of the 14th Brooklyn. In every scene of danger or difficulty, old Dick has accompanied the regiment with bowie-knife by his side, and musket in hand. When on picket duty at Mason's Hill, in sight of the enemy, he would go beyond the picket lines to get a fair crack at the Yankee pickets. In fine, old Dick, we believe, is a gentleman, and true patriot, and we feel sorry that his knife, around which clung so many proud associations to him, should have been taken from him. He valued it above all things except his musket. It is true the law may have required its confiscation, as setting a bad example to darkeys in civil life; but, under the circumstances, it does seem hard to have subjected the old man not only to the loss of his bowie-knife, but the mortification attendant, or a suspicion of evil designs. We hope old Dick may live to prove his character still further by bagging his Yankee."

A notice to Free Negroes of the city of Richmond.—By a law passed by the Convention and sanctioned by a Court of Justices, I John Hagan, having the power, through the Chief Engineer and the Court of Magistrates, do hereby give notice that on the 2d of January, 1862, that you shall all be prepared and appear at the City Hall, in the City of Richmond, to execute your part in the service of the Southern Confederacy. In failure whereof, you shall be dealt with as the law directs.

John Hagan.

The Norfolk correspondent of the Richmond Despatch writes, Dec., 27th:

The 'colored firemen' of the city had a parade, yesterday, and attracted considerable attention. The engines, which they drew along with them, were in fine order, and being dressed in neat uniforms, presented an orderly appearance. The sable firemen seemed to enjoy their holiday parade vastly. They had music, too, and marched along in evident consciousness of the importance and usefulness of their position.

Slaves very frequently escape from the Rebels at Pensacola in boats. Appearances indicate that in a short time the number of contrabands who fly in this way from their masters will be very great. During a single day, while the Baltic lay off Fort Pickens, no less than seventeen negroes came to the Fort, and some of them boarded the steamer. One bright fellow said that the rebels had not always provisions enough for their own use, and that very often the negroes were on half rations. The desire to escape was very common among hem, and those who could get away would do so.

HOW JOHN BROWN SAVED THE CAPITAL.

The Washington correspondent of The Boston Journal tells the following singular story of the way in which John Brown's lawless raid upon Virginia became the remote cause of the salvation of the Federal capital: when the marines dashed up to the door of the engine-house where Virginia Chivalry quailed, they seized not only John Brown, but a quantity of powder within the building which he had brought from Pennsylvania. After Brown and his party were secured, the powder was placed in one of the brick buildings, where it remained until April last. When the United States troops found that the Virginia forces were preparing to make a descent upon the ferry, for the purpose of capturing the arms, they looked about for ammunition. They did not dare to visit the magazine, for there were sharp eyes which watched every movement, and an attempt to take powder from there would precipitate an attack. Then it was that John Brown's powder was valuable.

It was in small packages, and where it could be taken and distributed unknown to any outsiders. It was placed in the different buildings, the trains were laid, and just as the Virginians thought the prize was theirs, they found that the flames were ahead of them. It was designed that the several thousand stand of arms there stored, should be distributed in Baltimore, where the outbreak immediately occurred, and that thence a descent should be made upon Washington. So John Brown's powder saved the capital. All of this will appear, I am informed, with satisfactory evidence, in the report of the committee appointed to investigate the Harper's Ferry affair.

'John Brown's body lies mouldering in the grave,
But his soul is marching on.'

An Incident of the battle at Dranesville.—A correspondent of the Religious Telescope furnishes the following:

One of the best incidents of the battle was the capture of two rebels by a colored man. He was on horseback, armed with a carbine, which was unloaded at the time but seeing two men trying to escape he gave chase, passed them, went through with the semblance of loading then wheeled about and called out, 'Stop dar, or I shute you right froo." They begged him for God's sake not to shoot, so he marched them back. The next day he was given a pass to Washington, with the statement in it that it was for meritorious conduct in battle. I wish that he might drop into one of the Cabinet counsels. Perhaps the Administration might profit by the incident.

A Meeting Among Ex-Slaves.

Rev. C. W. Denison, writing from Hilton Head, S. C., under date Dec. 25th, to the 'American Baptist,' furnishes the following interesting account of a meeting of the freedmen of that place, of whom Mr. D. says:—

'There are some hundreds of them at Hilton Head, and as many more at Beaufort. If it had not been for the wrong impressions made on their minds by the retreating South Carolinians, the number would be much larger among us than it is. But they were universally told that the moment 'the Yankees' landed, they would be caught up by armed bands of robbers, whipped, chained, scourged, starved, and sold off into perpetual slavery in Cuba. This delusion is now gradually wearing away but hundreds and thousands of fugitives in the swamps and woods of Beaufort district will forever bear witness to the sufferings they have endured on this account.

'The arrangements made for those who are here are rude, but the best that can be carried out at present. They are placed in spare tents, on a bluff near the beach, at Fort Cameron, having their cooking and washing done out of doors. Not much sickness has appeared among them. The army rations are furnished them, in a certain degree. The army regulations are applied to them, as to others; so they are kept within the lines, and, as much as possible, to their own quarters. The men work in gangs, under such officers as may be designated for the purpose. This designation is a delicate one, and requires considerable care, especially as the number shall materially increase. The women and children remain behind in the tents and adjacent grounds, attending to the cooking, for the present. At night the army discipline prevails, securing the quiet and order of an established camp.

'Toward evening, just as the sun was setting behind the palmetto groves, and his parting rays fell on the waters of the ocean before us, we gathered for a meeting with the contrabands. It was a most singular and picturesque scene. The ships of war and commerce lay along the shore, where the surf rolled in its foam, with the perpetual murmur of the ever sounding sea. On the low bluff were ranged the lowly tents of Jacob. Before them, landward, ranged the small fires, where the evening meal was being prepared on the ground. Beside one of these, a few boards rested on boxes and tubs. On a small chest, by a stake, I took my stand, and a pine table served for the pulpit. Mr. Lee, the attentive and faithful superintendent, passed quickly around, and in a few moments all the escaped children of bondage were clustered before me. What a group! All sat, with uncovered heads, in rapt attention. The old men on the right, their white locks contrasting strangely with their sable brows; the younger men in the centre, clad in a great variety of plantation garbs; the children immediately in front, clustered at the feet of the preacher; the women on the left, the old and young mingled together, the mothers with their little babies sleeping or resting in their arms; in the rear, a file of United States soldiers, the sentries, with their guns and bayonets on their shoulders, pacing to and fro; while a few outsiders mostly from the shipping, clustered quietly around. All listened in silence while the prayer was offered, and a few introductory remarks prepared the way for the worship of Jehovah. At the preacher's request, the contrabands sang as the choir of the service. An old man stood up at the end of the smouldering fire, and lined the following words, that were sung to a long metre tune, consisting of a singular yet melodious mingling of Windham and Arlington:

"Show pity, Lord! O Lord! forgive,
Let de repentin' rebel live.
Ar' not dy mercy large an' free?
May not de sinner trust in dee?

"My lips wid' shame my sin confess,
A-past dy law, a-past dy grace;
Lord, shoul' dy judgmen' grow severe,
I am condem,' but dou art clear."

'The preacher followed with a short address. He urged them to show by their good conduct that they were worthy of the blessings which the Gospel had come to confer upon them; that they must remember that they were now in the lines of an army, and must strictly conform to the rules. He encouraged them with the hope that their rights would be respected; that in due time arrangements would be made for their comfort and compensation; that they must consider themselves at liberty to continue all their religious meetings in the retirement of their little tents, as they had opportunity; that their children would all be educated as fast as possible, and that such of the older persons among them as desired it might learn their letters, and enjoy the blessed privilege of reading God's holy word.

The Gospel of Christ was shown to be their chief consolation in life, and their only support in death. They were encouraged to cling to its precious promises, and to pray for divine grace to walk by its precepts, and all would be well.

'At the close of the discourse, the old singing leader gently added:

'De Lor' bress you, massa minister! You tell us de truf. Dat's it, massa, every word, just what we need; do right, keep quiet, lub de Lord, all through.

The doxology was sung in long metre, Old Hundred; the blessing pronounced; and all quickly and happily retired.

It was delightful to witness the anxiety of all present to get books. The prospect of learning to read seemed to carry the children completely away with enthusiasm. They looked up in the preacher's face, their bright eyes sparkling with happiness, and their little hands clasped joyously together.

'Is not the hand of God in all this?'"

ANCESTRY OF THE LATE REV. E. P. ROGERS.

The following letter from Rev. Dr. Todd, of Pittsfield, Mass., in reply to one from Mrs. Rogers, soliciting information in regard to the ancestry of her much lamented husband, will, no doubt, be read with deep interest by our readers:

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 4, 1861.

Mrs. Rogers:

I found your note requesting information respecting the ancestors of your husband on my table at my return from a journey; and I should have answered it sooner, but I really know so little, that I fear it will be of no use.

My great uncle, the Rev. Jonathan Todd, was the pastor of the only church in East Guilford, now Madison, Conn., for nearly sixty years, and one of the leading clergymen of the State. At one time the plague raged in his flock, nearly desolating the town. In the troubles and sorrows incident, he mingled with his people, and shared all their griefs. I believe it was in the midst of these afflictions that a vessel containing slaves fresh from Africa, was shipwrecked near him, and most of the crew and cargo were drowned. The few who survived were scattered, and my uncle, from motives of pure humanity, bought all that he could pay for. Though in the eye of law they were, perhaps, his slaves, yet never for a moment did he look upon them in that light. Having no children, they were his pets. He tried to teach them to read, but the first generation were rather intractable, and never went farther than to count. One, to whom he gave the name of 'Lush,' was a cunning fellow, and a great favorite with all the boys in the place Most of them died before they were sold. Only one, 'Old Tamar,' lived till my boyhood. I remember her well. She lived to a great age. To her and her descendants my uncle gave most of his property, [illegible] was by a quasi entailment, but [illegible] only to carry [illegible] well through life. Her son Cæsar—and he first took the name of Rogers—was my beau-ideal of a [illegible], in my boyhood. He was large, fleshy, supremely good-natured, and everywhere a great favorite with the young. I never saw him in a passion but once. He was a farmer, and worked in our family nearly to the end of his life. He was the grandfather of your husband. The next generation was Abel, your husband's father. He was an honest, faithful, hard-working man of great physical strength and endurance. We boys, were brought up with Cæsar and Abel, sharing with them heir meals, their beds, their schools, their labors, and their sports. Among them all your husband was the only one who evinced any desire for books. He was unusually bright for his infancy, and his mother, Chlœ, was bright before him. In looks, and features, and natural traits of character, he resembled his father. Let me do my uncle the justice to say, that he treated them all as children, and gave his property to them rather than to his own relations. What they were, or from what tribe they came in their own country, I never knew. You will see that they came here children of nature, adult in years, not understanding our language, or the customs and ways o civilized life. The first generation were very superstitious as to ghosts, &c., and the traditions concerning them are more than amusing—they are droll.

I think it a great fact that the fourth generation could exhibit a specimen of manhood, of Christian and ministerial character, as respectable and as useful as your late husband.

The family were always distinguished for honesty, integrity and fidelity. They were very much attached to our family, and I am sure we were to them. I well recalled how it felt cold to my heart when, just after I had entered the ministry, my hand and feet leaped at seeing Abel, and all my boyish feelings returned, and I rushed to him, to find him treating me—not as the John who used to work and play with him—but as Mr. Todd, with whom he could no longer be familiar.

These are small gleanings of the memory, you will think; but if I should make them more, I should have to draw from fancy. The ancients used to say 'Call no man happy till he is dead,' implying, I suppose, that we don't know what a man may be left to do, or to suffer, till he has finished his life. Let me congratulate you, that your good husband, as far as I know, has finished his course without a blemish on his character or a spot on his name. Like Simon of Cyrene, he meekly bore the cross after Jesus, and sought no higher honor.

In sympathy with your loss, yours very truly,

John Todd.

A Visit to St. Louis.

Mr. Editor.— I presume that a word from Dixie's land would not be uninteresting to you and the numerous readers of the Anglo African.

I have been in this city about three weeks, making a pastoral visit to our church. I have spent the time much more pleasantly during my sojourn than I anticipated anterior to my arrival.

St. Louis is a large and very handsome city, and quite a businesss place. It reminds one of Philadelphia and New York, and other commercial cities north. The city is at present under martial law, which brings the whte and colored folks on an equality, for both parties have to get a pass from the Provost Marshall when leaving the city.

LYNCH'S SLAVE PEN.

This dismal looking building is situated on the corner of Myrtle and Fifth streets. and is the property of —— Lynch, a notorious trader, who has made himself rich trafficking in human flesh. Since the war commenced this pen has been taken by the government and is now used as a military prison. It is laughable to stand in front of this cage for rebels and see peeping through the iron bars, white faces instead of black ones. Yea, within those gloomy walls where colored men, women and children have been sold to the highest bidder, and where loved ones have been separated far from each other, never more to look upon each other's faces again in the land of the living, there can now be seen white men 'rebels and traitors,' who have conspired against, and, as a loyalist would say, are trying to break up the best government the sun ever shone upon. By the way, J. C. Brownley, ex-chief of police, who distinguished himself in acts of cruelty to the free colored people, by setting his subordinates upon them like so many blood-hounds, hunting them by day and night, taking them out of their beds and putting them in the calaboose; making them pay enormous fines for being in the city without license, has been found to be a 'Secesh,' and was consequently deposed from his chiefship, and had the satisfaction, or dissatisfaction of being made an occupant of this same calaboose, which was too much for his poor heart to bear, for after being confined a few days, he died broken-hearted. How true is the word of God, 'For with whatsoever measure ye mete shall be measured to you again.

ARRIVAL OF TWELVE HUNDRED REBEL PRISONERS.

I went to the Pacific Railroad depot, on the [illegible] of the 24th, and witnessed the arrival of these prisoners. There were some thirty-four cars, drawn by five locomotives. Quite a large crowd of men, boys, and some women, had assembled, all anxious to see the distinguished visitors. The prisoners were a motly crew of varied colors, ages and sizes. I tell you they were a hard-looking set. Among them were a number of "contrabands." While Secesh was frowning with disappointment, and looking daggers at the Yankees, contraband was grinning with delight.

THE COLORED PEOPLE.

The condition of the colored people is much better than it was prior to the war. They appear to be enjoying themselves very much. They have their church and school privileges, and social gatherings, &c

OCCUPATIONS.

There are several mechanics, such as carpenters, blacksmiths, brick layers, &c. Quite a number are doing business in the wood and coal trade. Mr. Wm. Brooks is doing business in this line on an extensive scale. He has a steam-sawing and splitting machine, which saws and splits at the same time. It is quite a curiosity. There are a number of barbers, whose saloons are handsomely fitted up. Mr. Robert Smith keeps a first class restaurant, and is doing a splendid business. There are several day laborers. Several run on the river as steward's waiters, cooks, stewardesses and porters.

AMOUNT OF WEALTH.

I cannot give you the aggragate amount of wealth among the colored people, having failed to obtain it. However, I will give you the names of some of the wealthiest families, with the amount they are said to be worth; Mrs. S. Brown, $60,000; Mr. Lapader, $12,000; Mr. L. Jones, $10,000; Madam Ruges, $60,000; J. R. Taylor, $15,000; Rev. J. R. Anderson, $6,000; Mr. E. Johnson, $4,000; Mrs. H. Taylor, $15$10,000; Mr. Travier, ,000; Mrs A. Mechuem $12,000; Mr. Maglocklin, $10,000; Mr. E. Furguson, 6,000; Mr. E. Jefferson, $5,000; Mr. R. Cole, $3,000; Mrs. H. Day, $30,000; Mr. Alfred White $12,000; Mr. P. Gibbs, $20,000; H. Thompson, 7,000; Mr. B Jackson, $4,000; Mr. Louis Harris, $3,000; Mr. G. Brawder, 6.000; Mr. John Turner, 15,000; Willis Brent, 6,000; Mr. J. Sicks, $6,000; Mr. Isaac Paine, $2,000; J. Isam, $2,000; Mr. T. Cole, $1500.

PLACES OF WORSHIP.

There are five colored churches here—three Methodists, and two Baptist. The A. M. E. Zion is the largest colored church in the city. It is situated on 7th street, between Offalon street and Cass avenue. Membership, 150. Rev. D. B. Mathews, Pastor; Rev. James Farran a local Elder. In this church was organised the first colored society in this city, out of which all the rest of the colored churches originated. The Wesley M. E. Church is a small brick building, situated on 7th street, between Washington and Morgan street. Membership, 78. Rev. M. Wallace, Pastor. The St. Paul's A. M. E. Church is a medium sized brick building, on 10th street. Membership, 150. Rev. John E. Turner, Pastor. The First African Baptist Church is a good sized building, on Almond street. Membership, 815. Without a Pastor. Second Baptist Church is quite a large brick building, on the corner of Green and Eighth street. Membership, 500. Rev. J. R. Anderson, Pastor.

SCHOOLS.

There are no free colored schools in this city, which seems rather strange, in view of the amount of school taxes paid by the colored people. There are, however, four pay schools. One is taught at Zion Church, by Rev. D. B. Mathews. Number of scholars, 40. Mr. Moses Dickson is the teacher of quite a large and flourishing school at St. Paul's A. M. E. Church. Number of scholars, 64. This school gave an exhibition on the 23d and 24th inst. The exercises were of truly interesting character. The school at the First Baptist Church is at present without a teacher. Number of scholars, 60. Miss G. L. Buckner teaches the school at the Second Baptist Church. Number of scholars, 40. At each of these schools the elementary branches of an English education are

SECRET ASSOCIATIONS.

There are two Secret Societies here, viz: the Order of Brothers and Sisters of Love and Charity, and Prince Hall Lodge of A. Y. Masons. The latter celebrated the Anniversary of St. John the Evangelist, at the Washington Hall, on the 27th inst.

CANE PRESENTATION.

There was a beautifully carved silver headed cane presented to the Superintendent of the Third District of Zion Connexion, at the A. M. E. Zion Church, on the 29th inst., by Mrs. James Harris. It was received by the Superintendent with many thanks, &c.

J. J. Clinton.

St. Louis, Jan. 1st, 1862.

P. S.—I will leave here on the 2d of January for Cincinnati, Ohio. J. J. C.

A meeting of the African Civilization Society, at which Messrs Garnett, Crumwell and Delany will speak, will be held at Shiloh Church, Wednesday evening, Jan. 15.

The Love of Freedom.

In connection with the accounts of the universal eagerness with which the "happy and contented slaves" in the vicinity of Port Royal clutch at the opportunity to become free, read the following:

Judge St. George Tucker, of Virginia, professor of law in the University of William and Mary, published a letter to a member of the Virginia Legislature in 1801. In the course of it he says:

"The love of freedom, sir, is an inborn sentiment. At the first favorable moment it springs forth, and defies all check. Whenever we are involved in war, if our enemies hold but the lure of freedom, they will have in every negro a decided friend."

In a debate in the Virginia Legislature, in the Winter of 1831–2, Mr. Moore said:

"I lay it down as a maxim not to be disputed, that our slaves are now, and ever will be, actuated by a desire for liberty. They will always be disposed to avail themselves of a favorable opportunity for asserting their rights. It may safely be assumed that wherever the slaves are as numerous as the whites, it will require one-half of the effective force of the whites to keep them quiet."

On the same occasion, Mr. McDowell, (since Governor,) of Virginia, said:

"Sir, you may place the slave where you please, you may oppress him as you please, you may dry up to the uttermost the fountains of his feeling and the springs of his thought; but the idea that he was born free will survive it all. It is allied to his hope of immortality; it is the ethereal part of his nature, which oppression cannot reach."

In the same debate, Mr. Preston said:

"My old friend (Mr. Bruce) has told us that the Virginia slave was happy and contented. Mr. Speaker, that is impossible. Happiness is incompatible with slavery. The love of liberty is the ruling passion in man, and he cannot be happy if deprived of it."

In the same debate, Mr. Gholson, of Virginia, said:

"The love of freedom, and the prospect of obtaining it would inflame their hearts and inspire revolution."

Mr. 'McCall, in his history of Georgia, alluding to the slaves, says:

"This class of people, who cannot be supposed to be contented in slavery, would grasp with avidity at the most desperate attempts that promised freedom."

The Rev. J. D. Paxton, of Virginia, who was reared in the midst of slavery, and had himself been a slaveholder, published a volume of Letters on Slavery, in which he thus states the result of his observation:

"The slaves—man, woman and child—are longing for freedom."

William T. Allen, son of a Presbyterian clergyman in Huntsville, Alabama, published a statement in 1839, in which he says:

"It is slavery itself, and not cruelties merely, that makes slaves unhappy. Even those that are the most kindly treated are generally far from happy. The slaves in my father's family are almost as kindly treated as slaves can be, but they pant for liberty." Washington Republican.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH IN BEAUFORT, S. C.

The Beaufort Baptist Church is the largest church in America, and the largest Baptist church in the world. During the year 1860 it reported a total membership of 3710 persons, of whom more than three thousand perhaps as many as thirty five hundred, are the unfortunate "descendants of Ham." The slaves on the cotton plantations, so numerous and so extensive about Beaufort comprise the bulk of the church. They are a somewhat volatile, noisy body, but one often can discover evidences of much rich spiritual experience in the grotesque and sometimes tumultuous prayers and exhortations of the negro professors.—There is indeed, about the African character a singular susceptibility to spiritual influences. You will be surprised, frequently, at the clear conceptions of the truth of the Bible, to him a sealed book, except as read to him by another, which some gray-haired bended slave will evince.

The Beaufort church is over half a century old, having been established in 1804. Rev. Richard Fuller, D. D., now of Baltimore, was for many years its pastor.

There is another, though smaller, Baptist society in Beaufort. It is called the St. Helena church. It has a membership very respectable in numbers—831. Negroes comprise nearly the whole of the church. Indeed in all churches of the extensive Savannah River Association, of which the churches of Beaufort District form a part, more than two-thirds of the members are colored.

HOW NOT TO DO IT.

Dupont's victory of November 7 opened to the great army of General Sherman the entire coast between Charleston and Savannah, and it is now established, beyond controversy, that four-fifths of the inhabitants are our warm friends. Wherever our forces go, the people join them. What General Sherman has been about, under these circumstances, is to contrive how not to conquer the enemy, and it has really been a difficult task. He has, however, done his best. Publishing a silly proclamation to the whites, who are against him to a man, he repels the blacks, who would all be with him if he would only allow it. He says the time has not arrived. The time never does arrive with some people. But nobody can doubt that a competent general, with one-third of the actual number of Gen. Sherman's army, would long ago have been master of both Charleston and Savannah.

The difficulty is, that Gen. Shermen has been less solicitous to re-establish the national authority in South Carolina, than to avoid disturbing the institution of slavery. That is where the shoe pinches. And so our generals go on spending fabulous millions of money, but taking care all the while "not to do it." How much longer will the people of this country permit themselves to be trifled with in this way?

Thirty thousand men, led by generals who prefer the Union to slavery, would capture every city on the Southern coast from Wilmington to Galveston. Every body knows this can be done, and every body knows why it is not done.—Washington Republican.

AMUSEMENTS.

The 'Victoria Club,' composed of the following thirteen ladies: Mesdames M. E. W——s, of Minetta Lane, President; G——tt, of King street; E. D——n, C. J——s, E. C——ll, S. W——n, R. C——s, of York street; Mrs. D——d, and Miss M. P——n, of 17th street; Mrs. C——ll and Miss B——n, of Jersey City; and Mrs. N——m, of Williamsburgh, gave a grand holiday entertainment to their numerous friends on the evening of Friday, Jan. 3d., 1862, at the Hall, 178 Prince street. Having received a billet doux, we repaired thither at the hour of ten, and was received at the door by our sturdy friend J. L. H——n, to whom we presented our passport, duly signed by the pretty and esteemed lady President, and after putting aside our overcoat and chapeaux, with one of the fair sex upon our arm, we entered the reception hall, which was beautifu'ly decorated with bunting and the emblems of the season. We found two hundred guests already assembled, and they continued to arrive up to the hour of twelve, at which time they numbered about two hundred and fifty. A fine band of music, under the leadership of Professor Hardy, occupied the orchestra. The sexes were about equal in numbers, and made a splendid appearance; the gentlemen being uniformly dressed in fashionable suits of black, and the ladies, God bless them! were the most beautiful collection of forms and faces that eyes ever beheld. They were dressed without pretension to gaudiness, but wisely in neat, pretty, comfortable dresses, suited to the season. We had some difficulty in discovering the belle of the evening, so numerous were the brilliant stars that floated around us, for wherever we turned our optics a living image of Venus floated by, but we finally awarded the palm to Mrs. Wm. S——y. She was dressed in a dove-colored silk, semi-low-necked, short sleeves, bertha of white Parisian lace, with a boquet of white roses resting upon her bosom and a coronet of the same upon her head, and her form a—(take care, sir!)

The ladies of the Club were neatly and uniformly dressed in black silk skirts and white spenceer, high-necked, which added to their pretty faces, and they were certainly belles No. 2. At 10 o'clock and 15 minutes dancing was going on merrily, with Prof. T. B. V——s as floor manager, attended by his ever smiling consort, and we actually found our sober self 'tripping away on the light fantastic toe,' with one of the most beautiful creatures present. At 1 o'clock, conducted by the ladies of the Club, while the band performed a grand march, we entered the banquet room where we found a most magnificent supper prepared under the supervision of Mr. M. D——n. The table was beautifully decorated. In the centre was one of Prof. H. Maillard's superb pyramids, composed of various fruits and nugua in imitation of an Oriental Jet de Eau, surmounted by a sea nymph surrounded by a shower of silver spray. The ladies certainly spared neither pains or expense in providing for their guests, for the table fairly groaned under the weight of the good things thereon. During the repast our ears were continually assailed by the discharge of green seal artillery and Sherry and Madeira musketry.

By the particular attention paid us by the president and the pretty little Miss P——n, we found our vest getting quite small, and ourself feeling as though we were monarch of all we surveyed.

At the close of the banquet, Mr. A. Powers made a neat and brief address, thanking the ladies, in behalf of the guests, for their generous entertainment, and hoping that the 'Victoria Club' might live forever. Amen! said we. After which the guests repaired to the reception hall, where dancing went merrily until, as we learn, the clock told the hour of 5 a.m., when all departed in peace and harmony, pleased with themselves and all the world. Your humble servant withdrew an hour earlier, with the pleasure of conveying one of the fair sex to her home. May the 'Victoria Club' live forever, and may their hospitality never be forgotten.

CARLOS HERMONOS.

BETHEL SABBATH SCHOOL EXHIBITION.—We are pleased to hear that this affair, which came off on the 26th, was a very fine affair. The church was densly packed by a highly intelligent audience, who manifested their approval by peals of applause. We have the promise of a full account for our next paper.

Madame Gilbert's Concerts at New Brunswick on the evenings of the 1st and 2d inst. were very successful, the church being crowded on both nights by a highly delighted auditory. These concerts were given for the benefit of the church, which the people there are making commendable efforts to finish.

A very good house, considering the storm, greeted the children of Abyssinian Church Sabbath School on Monday evening last at the church. The children showed considerable capability in their exercises, but great want of sufficient rehearsal; notwithstanding, the audience manifested every disposition to be pleased. The solo singers executed the pieces exceedingly well, Misses A. Spelman L. Smith and P. Green being honored with an encore; such was also the case with some of the speakers. Mr. Jas. Spelman delivered a short address on the advantages of emigration to Hayti, which was well received. He also sang a song called "Where Liberty Dwells there is my Country." We are pleased to announce that the Superintendent, in order that the children may have another opportunity to show their capacity, has determined to give a concert for the benefit of the church.

The Washington Republican says:

The poor blacks of South Carolina, instead of trying to cheat the Government by high prices for army supplies, come forward with free gifts. 'They come,' says a South Carolina correspondent of the New York Express, 'to the ships sides, with offers of fowls, eggs, and potatoes. They were at first unwilling to receive payment, but the officers insisted on receiving 'payment.' Some white people might learn a lesson from these simple-minded Africans.

It is stated at Louisville that there are 1,500 or 2,000 contrabands employed as servants and laborers in the Union army in Kentucky. This corresponds with another statement, that the number so employed averages about fifteen to a regiment. General Buell, it is said, delivers them up, when claimed by owners, even if rebels, but he does not drive them out of his lines.

A Massachusetts firm, engaged in the manufacture of shoes, is now filling an order for three thousand pairs of brogans, to be forwarded to Fortress Monroe for the use of the contrabands at that station.

"ALL IS QUIET ON THE POTOMAC."—That is to say, the great Quaker meeting around Washington is quite a success.

The Chatham (C. W.) 'Weekly Planet,' of Dec. 19, 1861, says:

George Williams, a colored man, is to be executed on the 3d of January, for the murder of his wife, last August, in Colchester Township, County of Essex.

THE COLORED PEOPLE OF CANADA ARMING.—The Chatham (C. W.) Planet of the 2nd inst says:

We are glad to see that the colored people at Montreal are moving, and that it is likely that in a few days they will complete a strong military organization. The colored company in Halifax is very efficient, and one of the best there. We understand that Mr. Macdonald of Toronto is considering the question of forming a colored company there.

A SAD CASUALTY.—The body of Mr. Samuel Woodlin, who resided in Thirty-ninth street, and was employed as waiter on the steamer Isaac Newton, was found in the ice near Castleton on the 26th ult. It is supposed that he was walking on the railroad, and the night being dark and stormy, he fell through an opening on said road, and thus met his terrible fate. He was a native of Philadelphia, where, we understand, he has relatives living. A wife and two small children are left to mourn his loss.

☞ Christian Recorder please copy.

MARRIED.

CARAWAY—HUTCHINS.—At No. 26 Chapel st. Brooklyn, L. I. Jan. 7th, by the Rev. Wm. J. Alston, Mr. John Caraway, to Mrs. Elizabeth Hutchins, both of the above named city.

PARNELL—SHERMAN.—In St. Philip's Church, on New Year's day, by the Rev. Wm. Johnston Alston—Mr. John R. Parnell of Williamsburgh, L. I. and Miss Abbie J. Sherman of N. Y. City.

SICKLES—HODGE.—In this city, Dec. 31st, by the Rev. J. D. S. Hall, Mr. George Sickles of Singsing, to Miss Martha D. Hodge, of Maryland.

DIED.

GALE.—In Weeksville Long Island, Dec. 16th, after an illness of three days, William Gale, aged 45 years.

RIVERS.—In Washington city, on the 1st instant, Mrs. Anna Rivers in the 86th year of her age, after a lingering illness, which she bore with christian fortitude.

Special Notices.

AN EXHIBITION

Of the AFRICAN UNION CHURCH SABBATH SCHOOL will be held on THURSDAY EVENING, Jan. 15th, at the CONTINENTAL HALL corner of 34th street and 8th Avenue.

P. S. Porter, Superintendant.

LECTURE IN UNION CHURCH.

Mr. L. M. Kellogg, will lecture in the African Union Church, 28th st., between 7th and 8th Avenues, on Thursday evening, Jan. 16th, subject:

THE FUTURE DESTINY OF THE COLORED RACE.

Lecture to commence at 8 o'clock. Admission free. A collection will be taken up for the benefit of the church.

JOHN FRISBY, Pastor.

A. ROBERTS, 120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication. 24tf

THE A. M. E. ZION TRINITY CHURCH,

Located in Barrow street, between Newark and Railroad avenues, Jersey City, will be opened on the 12th of January for Divine Worship, on which occasion the Rev. WILLIAM H. BISHOP will be present. There will be a special collection taken up for the church.

A TEA

Will be given, on the evening of the 23d of January, by Ladies and Gentlemen of Jersey City, to assist the trustees of the A. M. E. Zion Church, Barrow street, in paying for the church.

GEORGE OTON'S

QUADRILLE BAND

BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.

MR. GEORGE OTON,

PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St., and with G. Oton. 18tf

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

MASONIC DIRECTORY, FOR THE YEAR 1861.

Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W.G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No. 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwick, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, New York City.

LECTURES.

THE UNDERSIGNED is prepared to fill engagements to deliver single Lectures, on the following subjects:

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY WITH REFERENCE TO NATURAL THEOLOGY;
THE ADAPTATIONS OF THE EARTH, OR TERRESTRIAL ADAPTATIONS;
MENTAL PHILOSOPHY.
THE ANCIENT HONORS OF THE BLACK AND COLORED RACES OF THE EARTH;

—Being a series of popular discourses recently delivered, founded on the following texts:

1. "Look not upon me because I am black." [Song of Sol.—1.6.
2. "Princes shall come out of Egypt." [Psalm 68—31.
3. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin." [Jer.—13.23.
4. "Cursed be Canaan.' —Gen.—9.25.
5. "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus." Philemon.

TERMS—The lecturer's passage both ways, and one-fourth of profits.

[From the Detroit Daily Advertiser, March 1, 1860.]

"Mr. BERRY's lecture last night is stated to have displayed much thought, and to have been in every respect meritorious."

INFORMATION WANTED

Of Mrs. DOROTHA SMITH, formerly Miss Mingo, of Pictou, Nova Scotia. Any information in regard to her sent to Mrs. THOMPSON, 4 Catharine Lane, will be thankfully received. 21 2t

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Delart, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,

New York—corner of Prince and Marion street near Broadway.

Hours of Worship:—
Prayer-meeting, 10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.

Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,

(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.)

Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.

Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.

R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1 2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . . P. M.

Lect ure every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.

Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.

Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:—
10½ . . . . . . A. M.
3 . . . . . . P. M.
7½ . . . . . . P. M.

Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.

Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn. 13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.

REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.

Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, ... A. M.
" . . . . . . P. M.
" . . . . . . P. M.

10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,

28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.

HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 1. " . . . . P. M.

12–1y

SILOAM CHURCH,

Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue

Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, ... P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.

Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.

Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,

Second Street, between Avenues B and C

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 " . . . . P. M.

Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sullivan St., near Houston.

Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.

HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.

Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Barke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

NEW MUSIC.—"The Lord doth now to this Nation Speak," "O, Let my People Go," Parody on "Song of the Contrabands," words by Moses, music by Baker. Price 35 cts. including "Contrabands' Song," or 4 pieces for $1, mailed free. Just published by

HORACE WATERS, 481 Broadway.

24 6t.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS,
MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,
and
T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from sundry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, AGENT.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC.

The undersigned announce in preparation a

MILITARY ALMANAC,
SUITED TO THE
REQUIREMENTS OF THE TIMES.

It will contain about Fifty Pages of valuable statistical and reading matter, among which will be found a statement of the causes and antecedents of the war, with a succinct narrative of its progress and incidents, including the principal battles and skirmishes, by land and sea, to the present time; a list of the leading officers of the Government, political and military, with biographical notices, and the leading officers of the so-called Southern Confederacy; a sketch of the organization of the army, the insignia of officers; an abstract of the articles of war; tables of pay and and rations; national hymns, anecdotes, &c., &c., making a complete

Book of Reference for the Use of the People.

Price 12 cents for single copy—$8 per hundred, with a further reduction on larger quantities.

A limited space will be devoted to advertisements, at the following rates:

One Page,	$30	Quarter Page,	[illegible]
Three-fourth Page,	24	Eighth of Page,	[illegible]
Half Page,	16	Two Pages,	[illegible]

Payable on presentation of proof sheet of advertisement for correction, otherwise with an addition of fifty per cent.

It will also embrace a Mercantile Directory containing names of dealers, at a charge of fifty cents to each, payable at the time of subscribing.

To bring this Department more prominently before the general public, copies of the work will be gratuitously suspended for reference in the principal hotels of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other large cities. In addition, each advertiser of half a page or more may specify, at the time of subscribing, twelve hotels in any of the above cities, or such others as may be of convenient access to the publishers, where copies shall be gratuitously suspended.—A copy will also be hung up for public reference in the business place of each advertiser whose bill is promptly paid. Advertisements are to appear in all copies issued previous to December 1st, which the publishers guarantee shall not be less than 3,000 copies, if only for gratuitous distribution. No person authorized to collect without written authorization.

DEXTER & CO.,
Publishers and Printers,
17 Spruce street, New York.
86 Milk street, opposite Pearl St., Boston.
146 South Fourth street, Philadelphia.
23 tf

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess of dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individuals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. R——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN HALSEY.
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want a good and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 155 Fulton St; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

BOSTON HOUSE,
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott,
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH
GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,
Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
18 26t

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston-st., or of the Janitor, 225 West 15th-st.

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts. 2 tt.

[illegible]

Gentlemen if you want a [illegible] well-fitted Garment at a [illegible] can be bought at [illegible] in any other city, please call at the [illegible] Tailor Establishment,

168 EWEN STREET,
[illegible] STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURGH,
Where you will find a splendid assortment of seasonable goods, as
BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES
AND VESTINGS
of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made
MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.
DON'T FORGET
168 EWEN ST.,
Williamsburg.
9 1y.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET.
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.

On an improved plan, by widow T. L. JINNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.

First Premium for Misses and Children's HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS. The Clergy supplied at a discount.

KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING
IN BROOKLYN,

At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 68 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS!

For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N.Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.

Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk, Street. Terms very moderate. a10 1y.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS

Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 8 tt

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTEN, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS. CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS.
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) REspectfully announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

MRS. E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS MAKER,
25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 West 30th Street, New York. This house is very pleasantly situated in very healthy and convenient part of the city.

Boarding for Ladies, $2.50
" Gentleman, 3.00
Lodging per week, 75

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER
219 CENTRE STREET NEW YORK.

BOARDING AND LODGING.

MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate LADIES and GENTLEMEN with FIRST CLASS BOARD on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. [illegible] Sheriff Street, a few doors north of Grand. [illegible]

POCKET WATER FILTER
AND
DRINKING TUBE.

Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, and Sportsmen. [illegible] vest pocket. [illegible] wanted. [illegible] by addressing

A. DAY & CO.
3-13t Box 464 P.O., Newark, N. J.

Poetry.

[From the N. Y Tribune.]

"MAKE WAY FOR LIBERTY."

BY A. J. H. DUGANNE.

Under the oaks of Sempach
  The Switzers knelt in prayer,
And swore upon their sword-hilts,
  The oath their fathers sware.
Under the oaks of Sempach,
  Their fathers swords they bared,
And dared the powers of Slavery
  Their valliant fathers dared.

Duke Leopold's knights in armor,
  Duke Leopold's spearmen tall,
With shields o'erlapped and lace-points,
  Stood up, like a castle wall;
And when the Swissmen smote them,
  Their angry armor rang,
Like anvils under hammers,
  With hoarse and sullen clang!

And when the Switzers charged them,
  So well they bore the shock,
The mountain-men fell backward,
  Like billows from a rock—
Fell back with dead and dying,
  Fell back with doubts and fears,
That none might pass the shield-wall,
  Or break the hedge of spears!

Behold! the fateful moment—
  The hour of Freedom's stress,
Then stood forth Arnold Winkelried
  From all the dubious press,
He looked upon the Switzers,
  And saw their fear and doubt—
"I'll make a path for LIBERTY!"
  Bold Winkelried cried out.

He turned upon the Austrians,
  And flung his arms apart:
He clasped a score of lance-points,
  And joined them at his heart.
As bride embraces bridegroom,
  He hugged the lovely death:
"I make a path for LIBERTY!"
  He said, with dying breath.

And after him the Switzers
  No more knew doubts or fears;
They passed the broken shield-wall,
  They passed the hedge of spears;
And where he fell they mounted,
  O'er shattered helm and shield,
And drove the Austrian spoilers,
  From Sempach's gory field!

Five hundred years have mouldered
  O'er Winkelried the Swiss;
No slave hath breathed in Switzerland
  From that brave day to this.
And as the LORD yet liveth,
  I cannot help but pray
Some Winkelried may lift his voice
  In mine own land to-day!

Some stern and loyal leader,
  To shame our doubts and fears,
And cleave for us the shield-wall,
  And break the hedge of spears!
Some hero-man, o'ermastering
  A slavish time like this—
To make a path for LIBERTY—
  Like Winkelried the Swiss!

New York, Jan. 1, 1862.

REDPATH REPUDIATES REASON —HE ANNOUNCES A NEW REVELATION: "THE HIGHER INSIGHT"—WHAT IS IT?

MR. EDITOR: Another leaf, I see by your paper, has been added to the "record." No longer content with cracking the lash over the heads of free colored men, Mr. Redpath, in his "Preparatory Word," consistently enough, denies the slave the self-evident, God given right to resist the tyrant, or labor practically for his redemption from bondage.

"War doctrines," he tells us, are "dangerous," not to the slave, not to liberty, but to James Redpath's "higher insight." If honest, he might have added, dangerous to slavery, dangerous to the traffickers in human flesh and blood, dangerous to tyrants the world over.

In common language we frequently meet the phrase "deep insight," etc.; but a "higher insight" is something new, in the name at least. It is natural. therefore, to inquire. What is it?

Certain it is that Moses, when he brained a slaveholder, and buried him in the sand, had not a "higher insight."

Dumacos and Sparticus, when they sought to break the fetters of slavery in Greece and Rome, had not a "higher insight."

L'Ouverture and Dessaline, the deliverer of Hayti, and the avengers of their people's wrongs, had not a "higher insight."

Patrick Henry, when in the Virginia House of Delegates exclaimed "Give me me Liberty, or give me death," had not a "higher insight."

Nor had John Brown, and the noble, heroic men who were butchered with him on the accursed, dark, treacherous and bloody soil of Virginia—a "higher insight."

But James Redpath possesses it. Every slave driver at the South possesses it; every doughface at the North possesses it, and every tyrant; every real, practical friend of slavery, the world over, possesses it.

More anon. A. P. SMITH.

Saddle River, N. J.

LETTER FROM PATERSON.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 30th, 1861.

MR. EDITOR: How we spent part of the holidays, it is hoped will be as interesting to your readers as to ourselves. Christmas Eve there was a ball, which per se is not a bad thing. Several skirmishes occurred during the evening. In the first a coat was torn, but a retreat effected in pretty good order. In the second, one of the privates was wounded in the forehead, whilst several others were sadly worsted in a gallant assault upon a battery, charged with heavy "Jersey lightning," which had been planted in a corner. All the fighting was done under the stars and stripes. If the like occurs again, look out for the names. It is a poor excuse for us to say that other classes do the same on similar occasions.—We should set them a better example.

The same eveuing a Sunday School entertainment was given in the church, by Mr. Scudder and some of the teachers, etc. It was a very fine and praiseworthy affair, and stands out in striking contrast to the ball mentioned.

On Christmas day and night, Mr. W. W. Brown, under the auspices of the W. T. B. Society, lectured in Continental Hall, with splendid success.

In my last I informed you of the formation of a Haytian Emigration club: now I have the pleasure of recording its utter disbandment.

The common sense of the people here arrays them against the scheme heartily and universally, and if Mr. Redpath or his mercenaries want to speculate on colored people, they will have to go elsewhere.

OCCASIONAL.

THE CLINTON LYCEUM OF BALTIMORE.

MR. EDITOR: The above named society which bids fair to become one of the brightest stars in our literary galaxy, made a grand demonstration on Wednesday evening, Dec. 18th, at the South Howard St. Chapel, which was well filled by the lovers of literature. The celebrated choir of the church furnished on this occasion some of their choicest music, under the direction of their venerable leader, Mr. James T. Butler. After the house was called to order by the master of ceremonies, he introduced to the audience Mrs. William H. Butler, President of the Lyceum, who was received with much applause.

Mrs. Butler then addressed the assembly as follows:

"Fellow members of the Clinton Lyceum and friends of Literature: Permit me to thank you for the honor conferred in being invited to address you this evening. Although suffering from a very severe cold, I cannot resist the promptings of duty, and will say a few words to you, knowing that the harvest is great aad the laborers few. The time has come when we, the descendants of Africa, should arouse to a sense of duty; for we are fast approaching the period when the dark cloud of ignorance will be dispelled, and our people will be enabled to reach a high point of elevation. Let us continue being obedient to the laws, diligent in the diecharge of all our duties, persevering in our studies, and a brighter day will dawn on us. Let us, like the brave solders now filling the Monumental City for the purpose of sustaining our country's flag, rally around the standard raised by the friends of literature, and not suffer it to be lowered and trodden under foot. In conclusion let me ask you, fellow members, to be united in heart and hand, and live in lovely union together until the sun shall set to rise no more. H.

Baltimore, Jan. 1, 1862.

DIDN'T HURT THE BOOTS.—Rather racy is the following incident of life on the cars, as related by a clever letter writer:

Near at hand was a gentleman of a nervous temperament and excitable disposition, who was guilty of the egregious folly of endeavoring to transport safely a new aud glossy silk tile, more commonly denominated a "plug" hat, and which, through fear its shining surface might be ruffled, he had carried in his hand a considerable number of miles. The hat was carefully wrapped in paper and deposited in what was deemed a safe place, where none would be apt to steal or molest it. The gentleman retired. Morning came, and his hat was nowhere discernible. After searching long and anxiously, it was at last discovered in tne rear of the car, with a brakeman standing upon it, gazing intently out of the window at the beauties of the scenery as the glorious rays of the morning sun darted up from the Eastern horizon.

The gentleman was angry—not to say mad. With a frantic rush at the offending employee, which nearly upset that individual's equilibrium, he seized the once shining but now dilapidated hat, and holding it aloft exclaimed: "How dare you, how dare you, sir, I say, stand with your boots on my hat?" The employee glanced first at the gentleman whose property he had injured, next at the hat, which looked like a tin kettle after having passed through a charavari, and lastly at the boots which had done the deed, then slowly drawled out: "give yourself no uneasiness, sir; the boots are old ones and I don't think it has hurt 'em any!" "Crushed again," groaned the injured one, as he settled down in his seat with a look of agony which would have made the fortune of any play actor who could successfully have imitated it.

In some parts of Scotland the nearest relatives of the dead lower the coffin into the grave. The cords used are sacred to this solemn service, and are called "mourning cords." The coffin having been let down, they who hold the cords remove their hats, and immediately the whole company uncover. There is no prayer made, no service read, no hymn sung; but there they stand, with bared heads, and all silently looking down into the ready grave for about ten minutes. This solemn pause must be inconceivably impressive. This awful silence, we fancy, is more affecting than the utterance of the most appropriate words in the most becoming manner.

A DOCTOR BADLY SOLD.

A celebrated physician in Albany relates the following as an item of his experience: One stormy night he was awakened from a first nap after a laborious day's work, by the ringing of his office bell. He put his head out of the window and made the usual inquiry—

"What's wanted?"

"Och, Docthor dear! Docthor dear! be quick! Me ould woman, Biddy, is faring bad," answered a voice below with an mistakable brogue.

"Who are you?" said the Doctor.

"Sure I'm Dinney Sullivan, your honor, and I live in the Bowery: an' ye must be quick, Docthor!"

The place indicated being at a distance from the Doctor's residence, and it being stormy, the Doctor demurred. Dinney urged, and finally, as an inducement, said:

"Docthor dear, if you come, I'll give ye tin dollars, kill or cure."

Being tempted somewhat by the fee offered, the Doctor assented, and after a long and disagreeable walk found Biddy beyond human aid. After prescribing for her as well as he could under the circumstances, he left, and the next morning, as he had expected, he heard of her death. After a reasonable interval the Doctor sent his bill to Dinney, who repudiated it. Dinney being perfectly responsible, was sued immediately for the ten dollars, in a Justice's Court.—The Doctor had assigned his account, and was a witness himself. He stated the contract, and claimed the ten dollars. Dinney, who managed tne case himself, repudiating the offers of assistance from the attendant lawyers, very quietly asked the witness if he had 'cured the old woman?' He answered in the negative. Then, in a loud, boisterous tone, he asked, 'Now, Docthor, upon the vartue of your oath, did you kill her?' The Doctor was thunderstruck. He stammered, and finally, upon the question being repeated, answered again in the negative. 'Thin, your honor,' said Dinney, 'the Docthor didn't kape his contract—he nather killed nor cured Biddy and he can't have the tin dollars.' The Court non-suited the plaintiff amidst the laughter of the audience, and the Doctor acknowledged himself badly sold.

CREMONA VIOLINS.—Dr. Lee, who was lecturer in St. Thomas Hospital, London, and an accomplished amateur performer on the violin, entertained a great passion for the instruments themselves, and made hundreds of experiments to find out the cause of the superiority of tone in the Cremona. He had a fine Cremona taken to pieces, and a number of new instruments made in every part exactly like it, yet none of them equaled it in tone. He thus found out that it was not a particular form which gave these instruments a superiority over all others. He then experimented with various kinds of wood, and also treated the same sort of wood in various ways, in order to discover if this was the cause. For example he steeped some in alcohol, others in oil, then dried them, and had them made of the genuine Cremona shape. All these efforts, however, were in vain; the old Cremona sung sweetly over them all. At last it struck him that there might be something in the varnish connected with the subject, and he discovered that amber varnish was the coating of the old Cremona. To work at varnishes he then went, (for he was a determined experimenter and a good chemist,) and at last he made a grand hit. By making amber varnish in the same manner that copal varnish is made, namely, by heating the amber, then pouring hot oil upon it, he obtained a varnish, which, when applied to his violins, improve their tones in a wonderful manner. The varnish takes a long time to dry. The violins to which it is applied have to be hung up in the open air for months before they close their sticky character, but when perfectly dry, it is the grand solvent of the Cremona's superiority. Severia, the famous violinist, and pupil of Paganini, was presented with one of Dr. Lee's violins, and he declared it was equal to a Cremona; of twenty violins in his possession, it was excelled by only one, while it was superior to all the others.

WHAT HE WOULD LIKE.—As Deacon Adams, on an extremely cold morning in the old times, was riding by the house of neighbor Potter, the latter was chopping wood. The usual salutations were exchanged, the severity of the weather briefly discussed, and the horseman made demonstrations of passing on, when his neighbor detained him with—

"Don't be in a hurry, deacon. Wouldn't you like a glass of old Jamaica this morning?"

"Thank you kindly," said the old gentleman, at the same time beginning to dismount with all the deliberation becoming a deacon—"I don't care if I do."

"Ah, don't trouble yourself to get off, deacon," said the neighbor; "I merely asked for information. We haven't a drop in the house."

The deacon sighed, mounted his horse, and rode off.

A GOOD PRAYER.—A little African was one day heard to pray thus:

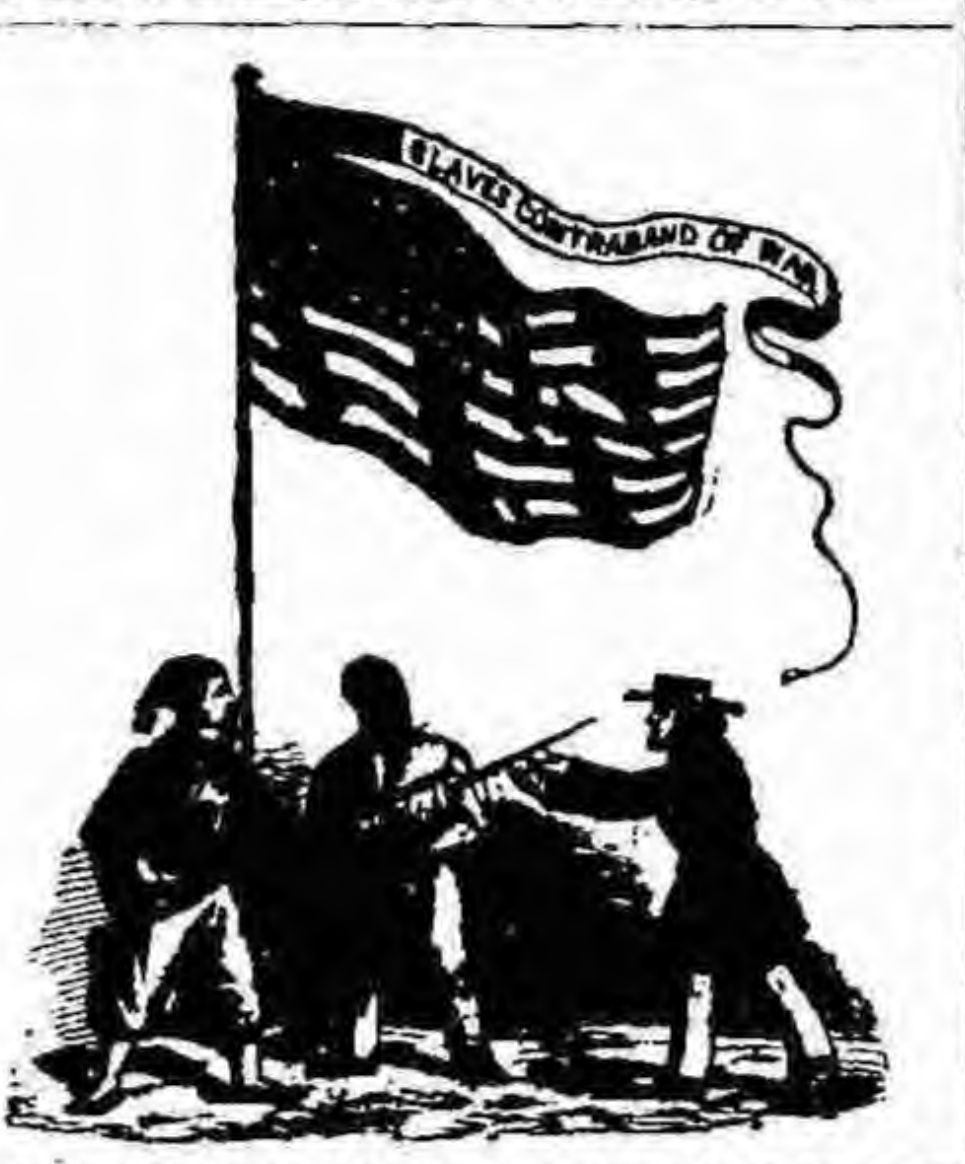
"Lord Jesus, my heart bad too much. Me want to love you, me want to serve you, but my bad heart will not let me. O Lord Jesus, me can't make me good. Take away this bad heart. O Lord Jesus, give me new heart? O Lord Jesus, me sin every day. Pardon my sin! O Lord Jesus, let me sin no more!"

The Montreal Commercial Advertiser says, a few days ago two men enlisted in the One-hundredth regiment at Toronto, and having made drawings of the fortifications there concluded to desert, and left for Rochester in a sail boat which they stole from the island. They were immediately followed by a negro who had been watching them with another man, in a row boat, and after an exciting chase of seven miles, owing to a change in the wind, they were overhauled. Refusing to surrender, the colored man fired on them with a gun loaded with duck shot, wounding them both after which they were captured, conveyed to Toronto, and delivered np.

The freest possible scope should be given to all the opinions, discussions, and investigations of the learned; if frail they will fail, if right they will remain; like steam they are only dangerous when pent up, restricted and confined.

These discordances in the moral world, like the apparent war of the elements in the natural, are the very means by which wisdom and truth are ultimately established in the one, and peace and harmony in the other.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE
Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.
Orders should be addressed
THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860: "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says: "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes: "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says: "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis: "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.
10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do tne same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps,) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by
THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St., N.

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and the public, that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 66 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK. 4-1

P. A. WHITE,
Corner of Frankfort & Gold Sts.,
GENERAL
COMMISSION MERCHANT,
KEEPS CONSTANTLY ON HAND
A FRESH AND PURE ASSORTMENT
OF
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS
GENUINE
LUBIN'S EXTRACTS
AND OTHER PERFUMERY,
FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES, FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA SEGARS, &C., &C.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS

carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S
VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR
FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH, AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Gray.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea-voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hair-brush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off, always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S
STRENGTHENING PLASTER.
AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR
LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT, SPRAINS, BRUISES, &C., &C

Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly servicable

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent relief from its use, as it keeps a continued heat, acting as a gentle counter irritant, removing the inflamation of the stomach without breaking the skin. Persons engaged in sedentary pursuits should use these Plasters constantly, as they give strength to parts weakened by constant sitting and stooping.

For STRAINS and SPRAINS they are infallible, affording relief immediately and without fail.

For RHEUMATISM there is no external application equal to them, promoting the general circulation, and

PREVENTING A RETURN

of the excruciating pain.

These plasters are prepared with great care, and of the best material, and to prevent fraud the name of the originator is placed on the back of each one. In purchasing ask for BADEAU'S PLASTER. See that the name BADEAU is written on the back, or you will be deceived.

P. A. WHITE, Sole Proprietor.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of
THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rheubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly-Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt; at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb hat grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Billous Bowels, Billious Colic, Billious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a billious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equral in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangemen of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existance. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat o sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordiary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is erfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-resowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY EXPLORING PARTY;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMSIONER TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project.
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions,

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS;

EMBELLISHMENT.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas,—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robert Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches,—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture —by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt. Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by M. R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James M'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J. Mercer Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sella Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed to
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with

Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.

BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker
between Broadway & Crosby 3t.

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS: Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gordon Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.,

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas. and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass. One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,08, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Associatian 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory: also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts.; four copies, 50 cts.; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice: Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing, &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz: 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be s to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual.
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history, chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin. Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
90 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and making all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 25 NEW YORK, JANUARY 18, 1862. PRICE FOUR CENTS

The Weekly Anglo-African.
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY
BY ROBT. HAMILTON,
NO. 48, BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
Two Dollars per year, or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.
Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed
ROBT. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street, New York.

[Copyright secured in United States and Canada.]

BLAKE: OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA.

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R. DELANY.

By myself, the Lord of Ages,
I have sworn to right the wrong;
I have pledged my word unbroken,
For the weak against the strong.
H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER XXXI.

THE ESCAPE.

This night the inmates of the tavern revelled with intoxication; all within the building, save the exemplary family of the stern old German, Slusher, who peremptorily refused from first to last, to take any part whatever with them, doubtless, being for the evening the victims of excessive indulgence in the beverage of ardent spirits. Now and again one and another of the numerous crowd gathered from the surrounding neighborhood, increasing as the intelligence spread, went alone to the stable to examine the door, reconnoiter the premises, and ascertain that the prisoners were secure. The company getting in such high glee that, fearing a neglect of duty, it became advisable to appoint for the evening a corps of sentinels whose special duty, according to their own arrangements, should be to watch and guard the captives. This special commission being one of pecuniary consideration, Jim Franey the township constable, the rowdy Ned Bradly, and Ben West the discharged stage-driver, who being about the premises, readily accepted the office, entering immediately on the line of duty.

The guard each alternately every fifteen minutes went out to examine the premises, when one and a-half of the clock again brought around the period of Ben West's duty. Familiar with the premises and the arrangements of the stables, taking a lantern, West designed closely to inspect their pinions, that no lack of duty on his part might forfeit his claim to the promised compensation.

When placing them in the stable, lights then being in requisition, Henry discovered in a crevice between the wall and the end of the feed-trough, a common butcher knife used for the purpose of repairing harness. So soon as the parties left the stable, the captives lying with their heads resting on their bundles; Henry arising, took the knife, cutting loose himself and companions, but leaving the pinions still about their limbs as though fastened, resumed his position upon the bundle of straw. The sythe had been carelessly hung on a section of the worm fence adjoining the barn, near the door of the prison department, their weapons having been taken from them.

'Well, boys,' enquired West, holding up the lantern; 'you're all here, I see: do you want anything? Take some whiskey!' holding in his hand a quart bottle.

'The rope's too tight around my ankle!' complained Charles; 'its took all the feeling out of my leg.'

Dropping upon his knees to loosen the cord, at this moment, Henry standing erect brandishing the keen glistening blade of the knife before him—his companions having sprung to their feet—'Don't you breathe!' exclaimed the intrepid unfettered slave; 'or I'll bury the blade deep in your bosom! One hour I'll give you for silence, a breach of which will cost your life.' Taking a tin cup which West brought into the stable, pouring it full to the brim; 'Drink this!' said Henry, compelling the man who was already partially intoxicated, to drink as much as possible, which soon rendered him entirely insensible.

'Come, boys!' exclaimed he, locking the stable, putting the key into his pocket, leaving the intoxicated sentinel prostrated upon the bed of straw intended for them, and leaving the tavern house of the old German Slusher forever behind them.

The next period of watch, West being missed, Ned Bradly, on going to the stable, finding the door locked, reported favorably, supposing it to be still secure. Overton in turn did the same. When drawing near daylight—West still being missed—Franey advised that a search be made for him. The bedrooms, and such places into which he might most probably have retired, were repeatedly searched in vain, as calling at the stable elicited no answer, either from him nor the captives.

The sun was now more than two hours high, and word was received from the village to hasten the criminals in for examination before the magistrate. Determining to break open the door, which being done, Ben West was found outstretched upon the bed of straw, who, with difficulty, was aroused from his stupor. The surprise of the searchers on discovering his condition, was heightened on finding the escape of the fugitives. Disappointment and chagrin now succeeded high hopes and merriment, when a general reaction ran throughout the neighborhood; for the sensation at the escape even became greater than on the instance of the deed of resistance and success of the capture.

Of, all the disappointments connected with this affair, there was none to be regretted save that of the old German tavern keeper, Isaac Slusher, who, being the only pecuniary sufferer, the entire crowd revelling at his expense.

'Gonvound dish bishnesh!' exclaimed Slusher with vexation; 'id alwayah oosht more dan de ding ish wordt. Mine Got! afder dish I'll mindt mine own bishnesh. Iv tem Soudt Amerigans vilbgheep niggersh de musht gedch dem demzelve. Mine ligger ish ghon, I losht mine reaht, te niggersh rhun avay, un' I nod magk von zent!'

Immediate pursuit was sent out in search of the runaways but without success; for, dashing on, sythe in hand, with daring though peaceable strides through the remainder of the state and that of Michigan, the fugitives reached Detroit without further molestation or question from any source on the right of transit, the inhabitants mistaking them for resident blacks out from their homes in search of employment.

CHAPTER XXXII.

HAPPY GREETING.

After their fortunate escape from the stables of Isaac Slusher in Indiana, Henry and comrads safely landed across the river in Windsor, Essex Co., Canada West, being accompanied by a mulatto gentleman, resident of Detroit, who from the abundance of his generous heart, with others there, ever stands ready and has proven himself an uncompromising, true and tried friend of his race, and every weary traveler on a fugitive slave pilgrimage, passing that way.

'Is dis Canada! is dis de good ole British soil we hear so much 'bout way down in Missierppi?' exclaimed Andy; 'Is dis free groun'? de lan' whar black folks is free! Thang God a mighty for dis privilege!' When he fell upon his hands and knees and kissed the earth.

Poor fellow! he little knew the unnatural feelings and course pursued toward his race by many Canadians, those too pretending to be Englishmen by birth, with some of whom the blacks had fought side by side in the memorable crusade made upon that fairest portion of Her Majesty's Colonial Possessions, by Americans in disguise, calling themselves 'Patriots.' He little knew that while according to fundamental British Law and constitutional rights, all persons are equal in the realm; yet by a systematic course of policy and artifice, his race with few exceptions in some parts, excepting the Eastern Province, is excluded from the enjoyment and practical exercise of every right, except mere suffrage-voting—even to those of sitting on a jury as its own peer, and the exercise of military duty. He little knew the facts, and as little expected to find such a state of things in the long talked of and much loved Canada by the slaves. He knew not that some of high intelligence and educational attainments of his race residing in many parts of the Provinces, were really excluded from and practically denied their rights, and that there was no authority known to the colony, to give redress and make restitution on the petition or application of those representative men of his race, which had frequently been done with the reply from the Canadian functionaries that they had no power to reach their case. It had never entered the mind of poor Andy, that in going to Canada in search of freedom, he was then in a country where privileges were denied him which are common to the slave in every Southern State—the right of going into the gallery of a public building—that a few of the most respectable colored ladies of a town in Kent County, desirous through reverence and respect, to see a British Lord Chief Justice on the Bench of Queen's Court, taking seats in the gallery of the court house assigned to females and other visitors, were ruthlessly taken hold of and shown down the stairway by a man and officer of the Court of Queen's Bench for that place. Sad would be to him the fact when he heard, that the construction given by authority to these grievances, when requested to remedy or remove them, was, that they were 'local contingencies to be reached alone by those who inflicted the injuries.' An emotion of unutterable indignation would swell the heart of the determined slave, and almost compel him to curse the country of his adoption. But Andy was free—being on British soil—from the bribes of slave-holding influences; where the unhallowed foot of the slave-catcher dare not tread; where no decrees of an American Congress sanctioned by a President, born and bred in a free state and himself once a poor apprentice boy in a village, could reach.

Thus far, Andy was happy; happy in the success of their escape, the enlarged hopes of future prospects in the industrial pursuits of life; and happy in the contemplation of meeting and seeing Clara.

There were other joys than those of Andy, and other hopes and anticipations to be realised. Charles, Ambrose, and Eli, who, though with hearts overflowing with gratitude, were silent in holy praise to heaven, claimed to have emotions equal to his, and conjugal expectations quite as sacred if not yet as binding.

'The first thing now to be done is to find our people!' said Henry with emotion, after the excess of Andy had ceased.

'Where are they?' inquired the mulatto gentleman; 'and what are their names?'

'Their names at home were Frank's Ailcey, Craig's Polly, and Little Joe, who left several months ago; and an old man and woman called Daddy Joe and Mammy Judy; a young woman called Clara Beckwith, and a little boy named Tony, who came on but a few days before us.'

'Come with me, and I'll lead you directly to him!' replied the mulatto gentlemen; when taking a vehicle, he drove them to the country a few miles from Windsor, where the parties under feelings such as never had been experienced by them before, fell into the embrace of each other.

'Dar now, dar! wat I tell you? Bless de laud, ef dar ain' Chaules an' Henry!' exclaimed Mammy Judy clapping her hands, giving vent to tears which stole in drops from the eyes of all. 'My po' chile! My po' Margot!' continued she in pitious tones as the bold and manly leader, pressed closely to his bosom his boy, who now was the image of his mother; 'My son did'n yeh hear nothing bout er? did'n yeh not bring my po' Margot?'

'No, mammy, no! I have not seen and did not bring her! No, mammy, no! But!' When Henry became choked with grief which found an audible response from the heart of every child of sorrow present.

Clara commenced, seconded by Andy and followed by all except him the pierce to whose manly heart had caused it, in tones the most affecting:

'Oh, when shall my sorrow subside!
And when shall my troubles be ended;
And when to the bosom of Christ be conveyed,
To the mansions of joy and bliss!
To the mansions of joy and bliss!

Falling upon their knees, Andy uttered a most fervent prayer, invoking Heaven's blessings and aid.

'Amen!' responded Charles.

'Hallelujah!' cried Clara clapping her hands.

'Glory, glory, glory!' shouted Ailcey.

'Oh laud! w'en shall I get home!' mourned mammy Judy.

''Tis good to be here chilen! 'tis good to be here!' said daddy Joe, rubbing his hands quite wet with tears—when all rising to their feet met each other in the mutual embraces of christian affection, with heaving hearts of sadness.

'We have reason sir,' said Henry addressing himself to the mulatto gentleman who stood a tearful eye witness to the scenes; 'We have reason to thank God from the recesses of our hearts for the providential escape we've made from slavery!' which expression was answered only by trickles down the gentleman's cheeks.

The first care of Henry was to invest a portion of the old people's money, by the purchase of fifty acres of land with improvements suitable, and provide for the schooling of the children until he should otherwise order. Charles by appointment in which Henry took part, was chosen leader of the runaway party, Andy being the second, Ambrose and Eli respectively the keepers of their money and accounts, Eli being a good penman.

'Now,' said Henry, after two days rest; 'the time has come and I must leave you! Polly, as you came as the mistress, you must now become the mother and nurse of my poor boy! Take good care of him—Mammy will attend to you. Charles, as you have all secured land close to, I want you to stand by the old people; Andy, you, Ambrose, and Eli, stand by Charles and the girls, and you must succeed, as nothing can separate you; your strength depending upon your remaining together.'

'Henry is yeh guine sho' nuff?' earnestly enquired Andy.

'Yes, I must go!'

'Wait little!' replied Andy, when after speaking aside with Eli and Ambrose, calling the girls they all whispered for sometime together; occasional evidence of seriousness, anxiety, and joy marking their expressions of countenance.

The Provincial regulations requiring a license, or three weeks report to a public congregation, and that many sabbaths from the altar of a place of worship to legalise a marriage, and there being now no time for either of these, the mulatto gentleman who was still with them, being a clergyman, declared, that in this case no such restrictions were binding; being originally intended for the whites and the free, and not for the panting runaway slave.

'Thank God, for that! That's good talk!' said Charles.

'Ef it aint dat, 'taint nothin! Dat's wat I calls good 'black talk!' replied Andy, causing the clergyman and all to look at each other with a smile.

The party gathered standing in a semicircle, the clergyman in the centre; a hymn being sung and prayer offered—rising to their feet, and an exhortation of comfort and encouragement being given, with the fatherly advice and instructions of their domestic guidance in after life by the aged man of God; the sacred and impressively novel words: 'I join you together in the bonds of matrimony!' gave Henry the pleasure before leaving of seeing upon the floor together, Charles and Polly, Andy and Clara, Eli and Ailcey, 'as man and wife forever.'

'Praise God!' exclaimed poor old mammy, whose heart was most tenderly touched by the scene before her, contrasting it by reflection, with the sad reminiscence of her own sorrowful and hopeless union with Daddy Joe, with whom she had lived fifty years as happy as was possible for slaves to do.

'Bless de laud!' responded the old man.

The young wives all gave vent to sobs of sympathy and joy, when the parson as a solace sung in touching sentiments:

'Daughters of Zion! awake from thy sadness!
Awake for thy foes shall oppress thee no more.
Bright o'er the hills shines the day star of gladness
Arise! for the night of thy sorrow is o'er;
Daughters of Zion, awake from thy sadness!
Awake for thy foes shall oppress thee no more!

'O glory!' exclaimed Mammy Judy, when the scene becoming most affecting; hugging his boy closely to his bosom, upon whose little cheeks and lips he impressed kisses long and affectionate, when laying him in the old woman's cap and kissing little Tony, turning to his friends with a voice the tone of which sent through them a thrill, he said:

'By the instincts of a husband, I'll have her if living! If dead, by the impulses of a Heaven inspired soul, I'll avenge her loss unto death! Farwell, farwell!' the tears streaming as he turned from his child and its grand parents; when but a few minutes found the runaway leader, seated in a car at the Windsor depot, from whence he reached the Suspension Bridge at Niagara en route for the Atlantic.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

A NOVEL ADVENTURE.

From the Suspension Bridge through the great New York Central Railway to Albany, and thence by the Hudson River, Henry reached the city on the steamer "Hendrick Hudson," in the middle of an afternoon. First securing a boarding house—a new thing to him—he proceeded by direction to an intelligence office, which he found kept by a mulatto gentleman. Here inquiring for a situation as page, or valet on a voyage to Cuba, he deposited the required sum, leaving his address as 'Gilbert Hopewell, 168 Church St."—changing the name to prevent all traces of himself out of Canada, whither he was known to have gone, to the Free States of America, and especially to Cuba whence he was going, the theatre of his future actions.

In the evening Henry took a stroll through the great thoroughfare, everything being to him so very novel, that eleven o' clock brought him directly in front of doubtless the handsomest saloon of the kind in the world, situated on the corner of Broadway and Franklin street. Gazing in at the luxurious and fashionable throng and gaieties displayed among the many in groups at the tables, there was one which more than all others attracted his attention, though unconscious at the time of it's doing so.

The party consisted of four; a handsome and attractive young lady, accompanied by three gentlemen, all fine looking, attractive persons, wearing the undress uniforms of United States Naval officers. The elder of these was a robust, commanding person in appearance, black hair, well mixed with white, seemingly some sixty years of age. One of the young gentlemen was tall, handsome, with raven black hair, moustache, and eyes; the other medium height, fair complexion, hair, moustache and whiskers, with blue eyes; while the young lady ranked of medium proportions in height and size, drab hair, fair complexion, plump cheeks and hazel eyes, and neatly dressed in a maroon silk habit, broadly faced in front and cuffed with orange satin, the collar being the same, neatly bound with crimson.

While thus musing over the throng continually passing in and out, unconsciously Henry had his attention so fixed on this group, who were passing out and up Broadway, involuntarily leaving the window through which he had been gazing, he found himself following them in the crowd which throng the street closely, foot to foot.

Detecting himself and about to turn aside, he overheard the elderly gentleman in reply to a question by the lady concerning the great metropolis, say, that in Cuba where in a few days they would be, recreation and pleasure were quite equal to that of New York. Now drawing more closely he learned that the company were destined for Havana, to sail in a few days. His heart beat with joy, when turning and making his way back, he found his boarding house without difficulty.

Henry once more spent a sleepless night, noted by restless anxiety; and the approach of morning seemed to be regulated by the extent of the city. If thoughts could have done it, the great Metropolis would have been reduced to a single "block' of houses, reducing in like manner the night to a few fleeting moments.

Early in the morning he had risen, and impatiently pacing the floor, imagined that the people of that city were behind the age in rising. Presently the summons came for breakfast, and ere he was seated a note was handed him reading thus:

Intelligence Office—Leonard St.,
New York, March 5th, 1853.

Gilbert Hopewell: There is now an opportunity offered to go to Cuba, to attend on a party of four—a lady and three gentlemen—who sail for Havana direct (see Tribune of this morning). Be at my office at half past ten o'clock, and you will learn particulars, which, by that time I will have obtained.

Respectfully,
B. A. P.

Though the delay was but an hour, Henry was restless, and when the time came was punctually in his place. The gentleman who called to meet him at the Intelligence office, Henry recognized as one of the party seen the previous evening at the great saloon in Broadway. Arrangements having been completed concerning his attendance and going with them; "Meet me in an hour at the St. Nicholas, and commence your duties immediately," said the gentleman, when politely bowing, Henry turned away with a heart of joy, and ful of hope.

Promptly to the time he was at the hotel, arranging for a start; when he found that his duties consisted in attendance particularly on the young lady and one of the young gentlemen, and the other two as occasion might require. The company was composed of Capt. Richard Paul, the elderly gentleman; Lieutenant Augustus Seeley, the black haired; passed Midshipman Lawrence Spencer, the light haired gentleman and Miss Cornelia Woodward.

Miss Woodward was modest and retiring, though affable, conversant and easy in manners. In her countenance were pictured an expression of definite anxiety and decisive purpose, which commanded for her the regard and esteem of all whom she approached. Proud without vanity, and graceful without affectation, she gained the esteem of every one; a lady making the remark that she was one of the most perfect of American young ladies.

After breakfast the next morning, they embarked on the steam packet "Isabella," to sail that day at eleven o'clock.

Of the gentlemen, Augustus Seeley gave to Miss Woodward the most attention, though nothing in her manner betrayed attachment, except an occasional sigh.

Henry, for the time, appeared to be her main dependence; as shortly after sailing she manifested a disposition to keep in retirement as much as possible. Though a girl of tender affections, delicate sentiments, and elevated Christian graces, Cornelia was evidently inexperienced and unprepared for the deceptions impositions practiced in society. Hence, with the highest hopes and expectations, innocently unaware of the contingencies in life's dangerous pathway; hazarding her destiny on the simple promise of an irresponsible young man, but little more than passed midshipman, she reached the quay at Moro Castle in less than six days from the Port of New York.

PART II.

Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
Shout it in the battle van!
Hope! for bleeding human nature!
Christ the God, is Christ the Man!
H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER I.

CORNELIA WOODWARD.

'What next?' inquired Seeley of Captain Paul, immediately after refreshing at the 'American Hotel,' whither they had gone from the vessel.

'I shall take you out directly to see Captain Garcia, one of the finest fellows in the world.'

'Is this Emanuel Garcia, the expert fellow so long engaged in the trade, and so hard to catch?'

'The same. He married a sister of Peter Albertis, of New Orleans, formerly a planter on the Louisiana coast.'

'Ah hah! all right then!' replied Seeley.

These expressions Cornelia heard, but without the remotest idea of their real import, regarding them merely as common place conversation.

A black driver being summoned with a diligence to the door, in less than five hours the party were enjoying the balmy odors amidst the beautiful shrubbery at the hacienda of Captain Emanuel and Madame Adelaide Garcia.

The greetings between Paul and Garcia were very familiar, having the appearance of old acquaintance and a mature understanding.

In the family on a visit, was a French lady, Madame Celia Bonselle, who for a time had resided in Louisiana, a relative of the Albertises.

The conduct of Madame Garcia was painful to Cornelia, causing her much embarrassment, there being much close conversation between the gentlemen, in which Adelaide took an active part, for which she received the disapprobation of Madame Bonselle.

'To-morrow,' said Paul, after one of these private conferences; 'we repair to Matansas to examine the craft preparatory to sailing.'

'When do you sail, Captain Paul?' earnestly enquired Cornelia.

'I can't just say; it may be in a day or two, and it may be longer.'

'Then I'm sure I cannot understand my position, if you are to go off in a day or two!'

'She's not yet acquainted with our nautical customs, but will learn better by-and-by,' replied Seeley.

'I hope I may learn nothing worse than that which I already know, I'm afraid to my sorrow!'

'What nonsense, Madame, can't you trust your husband?' impatiently admonished the Spaniard.

'You're mistaken, sir: he's not my husband!' exclaimed Cornelia with resentment.

'If not, then I'm wrongly informed; but I still believe that I'm right!' replied Garcia.

'And so do I,' sanctioned Adelaide; 'for Lieutenant Seeley is incapable of falsehood.'

'Do you solemnly tell me that you are not the wife of Lieutenant Seeley?' enquired Garcia.

'Indeed, sir, upon my oath I am not!' replied Cornelia, whose eyes were suffused to blindness with tears.

'Upon my oath, you are then!' maliciously retorted Paul, to the great discomfiture of the almost distracted girl.

'I believe it! I believe it!' sanctioned Adelaide; 'and nothing can remove my impression!'

'In Heaven's name where am I, and what is to become of me!' exclaimed the poor girl in anguish. 'You wrong me! you do me a murderous wrong! I'm incapable of the implied charge upon my reputation; my only sin has been a misplaced affection! Let me tell you my story. I pray you, I beg you, to permit a poor wretch that's soon to become an outcast, to tell her tale of wretchedness and sorrow! Oh, I beg of you to hear me, ladies of position and happiness! My home is Pennsylvania in America; I had just finished my education in Delaware; went to New York expecting to meet my mother, to take me home; met the young man, who under solemn promise of marriage, decoyed me away; I, eluding my dear mother, escaped with him on the vessel. Oh! this is the truth!—this is the truth! and will you, for God's sake believe me, if not for my own!'

'She's crazy!' angrily replied Seeley; 'and utterly irresponsible for what she says!' he and Spencer taking their hats and immediately leaving the room.

'C ssy!' indignantly retorted the intelligent girl; 'call me what you will—mock my destruction—sport with my misfortune—trample upon my feelings, and deride my anguish if you will—but by the purity of unsullied womanhood, you never shall carry out the base designs I'm now satisfied were intended toward me! Oh, Heaven, I know,' said the heart wrecked girl, falling upon her knees with hands clasped and face upturned in supplication to God: 'will protect me! and—'

'So will I!' interrupted Celia Bonselle, choked with feelings of sympathy, at the instant when Seeley and Spencer re-entered the room, leaving their hats in the piazza.

'Lieutenant Seeley—I desire a word with you, solicited Madam Bonselle, walking in the direction of the door of the drawing-room, the house being a cottage.

'Madam!' exclaimed Seeley, giving vent to an irritable temper now excited to a rage; 'are you the arbiter of my choice and conjugal destiny?'

'I assumed it not, sir! but since I am summoned to do so without my own desire or consent—if I am compelled to sit in judgment on virtue and vice—to decide between innocence and infamy according to justice—then are you, sir, by the righteous decrees of offended morality and insulted womanhood, condemned to obscurity and disgrace!' Then with a spurn and a haughty toss of the head, such as a French lady only can give, she turned away leaving Seeley as motionless as a statue, standing before the gaze of Spencer and now indignant frown of Madam Garcia.

Paul, who immediately after his attack upon Cornelia, had left the room with Garcia to pace the lawn, now entered, and though himself having induced the two young naval officers to desert their post and go with him into the slave trade, being perfectly conversant with the designs, it having been arranged to decoy the young Miss with them as a victim; such was the sympathy manifested by the ladies and Spencer for the soul-tormented girl, that they also became deeply interested in her behalf.

At the instant when the two gentlemen entered, Cornelia left the room, walking through the shrubbery where to sooth her sorrows amidst the eloquent though silent sympathy of the flowers.

Seeley being left without a rallying point, with a seriousness of countenance to him unusual, without a word of reply to what had been said after the current turned against him, slowly retreated from the room. Taking up his hat as he passed through the piazza, raising it to his head as he passed out the door, a billet fell at his feet. Snatching it up and hastening to a secluded spot in the grove, on opening it gave the following lines of touching and chaste appeal to his manhood:

'How sweet at close of silent eve
The harp's responsive sound;
How sweet the vows that ne'er deceive,
And deeds by virtue crowned!
How sweet to sit beneath a tree
In some delightful grove;
But oh! more soft, more sweet to me,
The voice of him I love!
'UNHAPPY CORNELIA.
Castilian Haciendes, Isle of Cuba,
March 14, 1853.'

This formidable charge discomfited him; it proved the blow which sent the spear to his heart, arousing the languid sensibility of his manhood to honor; when, regardless of paths, forcing his way in the direction from which, but a few moments before, the sound of sobs and bitter wailing had reached his ear, there finding her alone in the densest of the grove, he cast himself at her feet, with tears, upon his knees begging forgiveness for the past, with pledges of honor for the future. The scene was indescribably touching, their sympathy mutual, and the next day before the rays of the sun had ceased their genial influence over the hacienda, Cornelia Woodward and Augustus Seeley were pronounced with holy benediction, to be "man and wife forever!'

CHAPTER II.

HENRY AT THE HACIENDA.

On arriving at the hacienda, Henry was impressed at the first sight of the mistress, Madam Garcia. In her arms the maid held one child, by the hand another. Besides these there were two others, Ferdinand and Miguel, six and eight years of age—also a little black boy to wait upon and play with the young masters, with whom he then gamboled near by among the flowers.

'What is your name, young woman?' inquired Henry.

'Lotty,' was the reply; 'what is yours?'

'Gilbert they call me. These are handsome children.'

'Yes, sir,' she indifferently replied with a deep sigh.

'You seem to speak carelessly; don't you like children?'

'I like some children.'

'Do you not like these?'

'I might like them, but—'

'What?' interrupted he.

'I'm treated so bad, I don't care anything about them, so I don't.'

'Who treats you bad, your mistress?'

'Yes, sir, she beats me like any dog, so she does! and makes master beat me for spite!'

'Have they many slaves besides you?'

'Yes, sir, they have over three hundred on two places; this one here, and the other at Matanzas.'

'How are the slaves used here in Cuba? I understand they are well treated.'

'Taint so, sir—these people treat them like brutes!'

'What is the name of the little slave there, who plays with his young master?'

'Pomp. They beat and pull him about all the time; and if he don't let them do as they please with him, they go crying to their ma, who whips him severely.'

'What are the names of those children, Lotty?'

'The biggest one there is Miguel, the next Ferdinand, the girl Gracinda, and the baby in my arms is Justinia.'

'What are their ages?'

'One boy is eight, and the other six; one girl four, and the other not two.'

'What is the age of little Pomp, who waits on them, as he seems to be between the two?'

'He is seven years old.'

'Lotty, what is your age? you look like a young woman, but you're quite gray and careworn.'

'I used to know my age, but since I had so much trouble and came here, they beat me so much over the head, till I can't remember hardly anything. I can't tell how old I am!'

'Do the little girls love you as children generally do their nurses?'

'No, sir, they're cross, sassy little brats They'll pull my hair, scratch my face, and bite me; they go crying to her; then she falls on me and beats me to please them.'

Four o'clock, the dinner hour having arrived, the maid was summoned to duty, and anxious to witness the new order of things, Henry went to await the return of the nurse.

Madame Bonsell was an excellent lady, and loved by all the slaves on the hacienda Being French, she was an inherent votary of the late revolution and reform, and a believer in the principles espoused by the government of Lamartine, Ladru Rollin and Louis Blanc, and even wore a gold broache on which the motto was inscribed: Liberte, Equilite, Fraternite! the memorable rallying cry of the Liberaliists.

After dinner, being seated on the piazza, Lotty on passing with the child in her arms playfully whispered in Madame Bonsell's ear, which the mistress by chance observed.

'A fine girl!' said she smiling as the maid left her.

'She's a forward strap! Madame Bonsell, and I'll break her of it!' replied Madame Garcia.

'I'm sure, Adelaide, she means no harm at all, as you certainly must know!'

'She's entirely spoilt, Celia, since you've been here, with your crazy notions of French equality!'

'We are not accustomed to look upon these poor, unfortunate people with the charity we should, forgetting that naturally they're the same as ourselves.'

'Absurd! Celia Bonsell—it's all imagination, as I'm sure the negroes were made to serve the whites!'

'On this you and I cannot see alike, as I never will sanction such nonsense! God be merciful!' she sighed in conclusion, rising and walking down the lawn, the maid entering the piazza as she left.

'Lot, you strap! how dare you whisper in Madame Bonsell's ear, and that—

'I'm sure, mistress, I meant no harm! and I did'nt know that you saw me, else I would'nt have done it, indeed I would'nt! I won't do so any more, if you only spare me this time, and don't whip me before that strange man that came with the Americans! Oh, mistress!' she exclaimed, dropping to her knees, as Madame Garcia sunk the thumb nail deep into her ear, nearly cutting it through, saying:

'Now, take that, you impudent black jade! and begone out of my presence. The next time I'll cut you to pieces.'

The poor thing hastened away sorrowing, silently praying that God would remove her from her sufferings. Sitting some time after this with the children under the shade of orange trees, Henry approaching, observing the ear, side of the face and neck much swollen, inquired the cause, she evasively answering that a wasp had stung her.

'Twan no wasp sting dat! missus done it so she did!' explained little Pomp, which was heard by the young masters.

'How dare you say that about ma!' said the child Miguel, grasping the little black boy, who was sitting on the grass at the time, by the hair, jerked him upon his face to the ground saying, 'now you black [illegible]'

Hastening into the house, the child in a whisper, acquainted his mother with what had transpired between the man and maid servant, Pomp and himself. No notice whatever was taken of it at the time

Little Pomp was the son of the slave cook of the family, Abigail; the name of her mistress being a terror to her, as well as to all of the slaves. Night had now somewhat advanced, the guests [illegible] and the news of the [illegible] of the mistress toward Lotty and Pomp [illegible] through the place, many of the [illegible] come from their huts concealing [illegible] in the shrubbery around the [illegible] watch, well knowing that [illegible] would be the consequence. Lotty [illegible] in anguish that she dreaded the approach of night, which indeed Henry, [illegible] well understood her condition, [illegible] until the last, [illegible] that he could, [illegible]

He had come in search of his poor lost wife, and was anxiously desirous of having some idea of her true condition, before reaching her, which he was determined on doing, did she live at all on earth. All was now silent, the slaves awe-stricken in their hiding places, the nurse, her personal attendant maid servant, and Henry, sat in quiet waiting on the back piazza, there seeming at the time not a ripple of air, nor quiver of a leaf to interrupt the monotonous harmony. But the occupants of the piazza were suddenly startled by a voice accustomed on such occasions to command, and but too familiar:

'Diley, go bring me the cowhide!'* the girl soon returning with the dreadful thing of punishment. 'Now call Abigail, and tell her to bring that nigger of hers with her;' the servant executing as soon as possible the mistress' order, when the slave-mother and child stood trembling before her. 'You are here my lady, are you!' continued Madame Garcia, addressing herself to Lotty; 'stand aside there!' then turning to the mother of the child, she said, 'take off his clothes!'

'Oh, missus!' exclaimed the poor cook, as she laid on the stripes, regardless of the screams of agony uttered by the little one 'dohn beat my po' chile no mo! here's my back, gib it to me!' A severe cut with the hide across the face instantly silenced the petitions of Abigail, when handing her the whip, she compelled her to scourge her own child till he fell motionless and bleeding at her feet.

'Oh, laud'! exclaimed the more than tormented slave-mother; 'wot's to come o' we po' black people! I wish in God, I nebeh been baun.'

'Not a word of reflection there you black ape, or I'll have you given ten times as much! Take him out of this!' When as she lugged away her boy, insensible and bloody, the mother gave way to choking sobs of inexpressible grief. To her maid the mistress said:

'Poor old black thing! It was natural I suppose for her to feel for the little negro! He'll soon get over it! Now my lady, you may go!' she said, speaking to Lotty; 'and the next time I have occasion to use that,' (pointing to the bloody whip,) 'it shall be your time!' Lotty humbly curtesying left her presence.

To all this, Henry was a serious spectator, having twice detected himself in an involuntary determination to rush forward and snatch the infernal thing of torture, from the hand of the heart crushed mother. He retired that night with a mind nearer distraction than sanity.

Early next morning he asked, and kindly received, consent to leave for a fortnight, the services of Mrs. Seeley, for the purpose as he stated of visiting some relation in the colony; the Seeley's supposing, as he spoke Castilian well when employed by them, that he was a resident of Cuba.

*Cowhide—the name given to a raw-skin whip in America.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, JANUARY 18, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of he news-dealers everywhere.

WANTED—A PRESS.

One of the exigencies of the war, not generally recognised as such, is a free and out-spoken press. President Lincoln has not only abolished the habeas corpus act, he has also muzzled the press quite as effectually, although with less parade than his fellow autocrat who limps through the Bois de Boulogne, and rules the people of France if not of all Europe. Until the end of this war there can be no such thing as a free press in the country, and a press without freedom is worse than no press whatever.

There were some remains of a press when Fremont was dismissed for daring to think differently from the President—that is to say Kentucky—that is to say the slave power. There was some righteous indignation uttered in sound Saxon phrase. But now that Secretary Cameron is forced to walk the plank—for daring to think and speak differently from the President—that is to say Kentucky—that is to say the slave power—we find the press so effectually muzzled that there is no word of murmur, of complaint or dissent, much less any utterance of the stern and bitter indignation which this new bowing down to Dagon should have called forth.

'The Evening Post' and 'Tribune' who live and thrive on their odor of Anti-Slavery, persistently tell their readers that the removal of Cameron is a resignation: they actually, in a doleful sort of a way, grow jolly under the tyranical pressure which squeezes them with a lying silence. The 'Tribune' seems pressed the hardest, for, in the midst of the gloom which this high-handed act of the President has thrown over the land, Mr. Greeley 'sees a great light.' It can only be such a phosphoresence as the boys allude to when they talk of 'knocking the day-lights out of you!' For surely the 'Tribune' cannot be in earnest in seeing a speedy end to the war, when the President has just eliminated the Anti-Slavery element from its conduct. The 'Tribune' held, until recently, that Emancipation was the only means of bringing the war to a quick and just termination. How then can it see an early and desirable end to this conflict, at the very moment when the executive of the government 'has put his foot down upon' the only means to accomplish it?

As to the 'Evening Post,' its elaborate attempt to show that Secretary Cameron's removal is not in consequence of his Anti-Slavery sentiments, is so pitiful that we pity the man who wrote it. There is a parallelism in the removal of Freemont and Cameron which shows the reverberation of the same chord, the doing of the same hand for the same cause. Fremont wrote a proclamation, so did Cameron write a Report—the President required Anti-Slavery to be struck out from both: both reluctantly submitting, throwing the onus where it belonged. Lincoln quietly waited until each man was about to grasp the laurels which they had earned by their energy, genius and patient labor—and at that moment deposed both.

If the Senate and the country confirm these wicked and suicidal acts, then the fault will lie with the Press or nation, in the fact that in the hour of its direst peril the Republic WANTED—A PRESS.

It is quite as ridiculous to suppose that Mr. Cameron voluntarily resigned on the eve of battle, as it was to suppose that Fremont would have resigned with Price in his grasp. As to the story of wasteful expenditure of public money by contracts, &c &c., why the fact is that the first best recommendation of a man to fill or hold office with the present executive is: is he soundly pro-slavery? The second is, is he a remorseless thief?

The War and Our Rulers.

Perhaps the most interesting study to the future student of history will be the manner of conducting the war in reference to the colored people of the country. The action of our legislators in Congress is certainly incomprehensible to us.

The hesitancy on the part of government to take advantage of the sympathy of the only real Unionists in the South, might be explained on the ground that it has no desire to excite the spirit of revenge that must naturally be found in the breast of every southern slave; but why the government should desire to send these invaluable people—these faithful Unionists—these men who will yet make the South to blossom as the rose, out of the country, is past our conception. We are far from believing that the projected emigration of these people will do them no good; but on the contrary, we feel assured it would be every way beneficial to them. But why the rulers should think of sending so much wealth and so many of its best friends out of the country, perhaps they alone can tell. The friends of the measure say that after an apprenticeship of five years to responsible persons, they paying to government the amount each person may earn, the government will be prepared to settle these persons in their new homes very comfortably.

They propose that the government shall appoint commissioners to locate this settlement. If this plan is to be carried out in good faith, we trust that one of these commissioners at least, shall be a colored man. This will be absolutely necessary—that is if it is to be a voluntary system of emigration. We must confess, however, that we have very little faith in the carrying out of the scheme, and think we hazard but little in predicting its utter failure, from the simple fact that we believe that in five years the change in public sentiment will be so great, that the people of the country will positively refuse to let them go.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

HEADQUARTERS OF HOOKER'S DIVISION,
Near Budd's Ferry, Md., Jan. 4th, 1862.

MR. EDITOR:—The Christmas Holidays in camp have been the fruitful themes of both pen and pencil. Editors, letter-writers, and artists, have burdened the popular fancy with truthful portraitures of the many ways the soldier passed his time. The sentinel on his post, the grotesque group, the blazing camp fire, the merry song, the boisterous dance, and the inevitable game of bluff, are as well conceived by the popular mind as though every man in the country was a soldier, and every town a camp; nothing then should be given, unless it be extraordinary, would we have it interesting.

Typhoid seems to be on the increase; I cannot learn the extent of the mortality, this is kept secret. One thing is certain, there is some disease or other now ravaging our ranks. But by far the most important thing to be commented on, and the greatest evil to be abated is intemperance. Next to slavery in enormity of evil stands intemperance. They are two great sins of the nation which threaten its very existence, the upper and nether millstones which threaten to grind into atoms all its elements of goodness and greatness. One of the first acts of Gen. McClellan when he assumed the chief command of the army was, to suppress the sale of liquors in camp, but no sooner was the order issued than unprincipled men in and out of the army began their successful smuggling and sale of the intoxicating beverages. Hundreds of boxes of liquor find their way down here labelled, 'Hair Tonic,' 'Pickles,' 'Schniedam Snapps,' ect. I know of one instance where two casks of 'Red Eye' were buried in the ground, and the man who sold it had it so arranged that when he pumped the rum out, one would suppose that it came up from the bowels of the earth, and thus he dispensed in copious draughts, disease and death to hundreds and thousands. But do not think, my dear sir, that intemperance is confined to the poor private, this is not the case. Men high in authority are the victims of the rum bottle. Some of the camps here are at times more like that of bachanals, than enlisted soldery. Brawls, riots, and midnight orgies, proclaim he supremacy of the drunken god.

On New Years day an officer upon the division staff, was ordered back to his regiment for drunkness and riot. He is talented and educated, but has suffered rum to steal away his senses and bring disgrace. He must resign or be dishonored. On Christmas night a man by the name of Samuel Rodgers, of Co. D., 26th Reg., Pa. Vol., died from intemperance. Just think of it, a man to die from excessive drinking in the U. S. Army, under the eye of military authority! I really believe that with ten thousand sober men, I could subdue the whole army of the Potomac, just let me have as much whisky as I shall choose. It is a very common thing for men to get drunk on post and the officers to do the same on duty. A man, Cap. ——, in one of the regiments here, is always drunk: it is his natural state. Water would astonish his stomach, just as whisky would that of a bona fide teetotaler. The officers have what are called 'Dial Clubs.' The duty of the members is to keep all liquor out of sight by Dan May's process: i. e., throwing the skin of their bellies outside of it. They visit each other often, tatoo, and imbibe until one by one they are overcome by drunkness; and this practice is not a local one, it reflects the universal practice here.

A word about the "contrabands" which Col. Graham brought off with him from his expedition over in Virginia: A large number of the men are at work unloading the government boats at Liverpool Point; they are well fed and clothed, and paid by the government. Their huts are comfortable and warm, being dug down into the ground about three feet, logged up, thatched with brush, and then daubed with mud. The interiors are neat and clean, and are far more tastefully fitted up than those of the poor whites and slaves any where about here. They are generally quite pleased with their new situations, but have very little confidence in those around them. They all prefer to be farther removed from the vicinity of their recent sorrows and trials.

Night before last a great light was to be seen over towards Acquia Creek. I have a suspicion that the rebels are burning their store-houses, and perhaps are retreating along the whole line of the Occuquan. Mark! when a movement is made it will be a sudden and startling one.

We have had weather cold enough indeed, but not until last night did hoary winter clothe himself in an icy garb, sparkling with chilling transparent gems. About 7 o'clock we had quite a snow storm, with a slight mixture of hail. This morning is beautifully clear; there is "not a cloud to dim the azure of the sky;' the cold is extremely painful. The sensation reminds me of that painful chilliness one feels when sailing to the leeward of an iceberg. It shocks every nerve, penetrates every pore of the skin.

I have learned this moment that the suttler of the 26th Pennsylvania Volunteers has been ordered to close his business instantly. He was detected with a large amount of whisky labelled "Wigwam Tonic." A man belonging to the Excelsior Brigade—I could not find out his name or the company to which he belonged—of Col. Dwight's Regiment drank of this "tonic," and, in a fit of insanity which it occasioned, blew out his brains. The miscreant! the murderer! he should not only be stopped from selling his goods, but should be incarcerated in Sing Sing for life as a felon and a dangerous man to society.

G. E. S.

Headquarters of Hooker's Division,
near Budd's Ferry, Md.,
Jan. 10th, 1862.

Mr. Editor:—Our bitter cold has been succeeded by a season of mildness and sunshine, and any quantity of mud and water is spread out around us, that we may perform laborious feats of pedestrianism. Oh, omnipresent mud! soft, fathomless mud! grey, red, saffron colored. The swine are in extacies, and the negro drivers are joyous; but the soldiers are cheerless. One takes a step, down goes the inevitable left deeper, deeper. One then begins to think, to what muddy depths will the foot descend before it finds bottom; then we move step by step, sounding for bottom with one foot as we walk, like the leadsman on shipboard, we to avoid deep bottom, he the shallow.

The talk of war with England absorbs all other topics of conversation; the enemy in our face is forgotten; the belching cannon are unheeded. The voluminous details of miniature battles remain unrehearsed, all the usual amount of bragadocio, American white men indulge in, burden the ear. To hear them talk, they can whip the whole civilized world, and the barbarous too, including the Southern Confederacy. Of course this is all nonsense, and comes with a bad grace from men who have borne insult upon insult to their national flag; who have been kicked and cuffed by Southern gentlemen (!), whose ephemeral military fame has waned, whose love for liberty has grown cold, and who stand gazing with terror and dread on the entrenchments of an insurgent foe whom they dare not face. But a war with England is, I think the most improbable thing imaginable. It is the old hue and cry to kindle into a flame the scattered embers of Unionism. I have no doubt but that the Administration will magnify all differences between the two governments, perhaps step to the very verge of hostilities to all appearances: but to engage in actual war, never! But a war with England, to the eye of emancipationists is no very calamitous contingency; for the four millions of newly made freemen of the country alone, could defend the United States against any and all forces the other could array against them. I know that the temporizers are tremulous—they know that a war with Great Britain is an ediot for emancipation, or, if not, it is defeat, bankruptcy and a dismembered Union. All of these suggestions show one thing: that is, the negro is a power, and I confess to one thing; namely, I cannot imagine which would be the best for us, Union with emancipation, or disunion without. Where are our black leaders? Why don't they give some light on this subject? Query. Will the Southern Confederacy very soon be recnized as an independent power by the United States authorities?

I learned to-day that the firing heard towards Aquia Creek, mentioned in my last, proceeded from the guns of some of the Federal gun-boats. It is said they attacked the rebel depot at the mouth of the Creek and laid it in ruins, destroying a large quantity of stores and provisions, and peppering the batteries most profusely. These fellows cannot stand the gunnery of negroes, for very many of the boats are manned by them.

The contraband goods trade is still kept up by the rebels down the river. The General received notice of the fact and sent scouts out to arrest any person found engaged in the unlawful practice. They came upon a party of men who attempted to make their escape, when they came upon the goods already piled up on the beach; blankets, shoes, medical stores and flannel. Everything necessary to the comfort of the slaveholder's army were found nicely packed away in boxes. Three army wagon loads were brought over to the Commissary department here on last Monday.

One of the most cruel and atrocious deeds of the barbarous slave-master was perpetrated by one Samuel Cox, living five miles below Port Tobacco, who is said to be an ex-state representative, a returned rebel, the captain of a Cavalry company organized for the rebel army, but disbanded by the Federal troops, and a contraband trader When Col. Dwight, of the Excelsior Brigade scoured that portion of the country with his regiment, Jack Scroggins, a slave, reported to the Colonel that Cox and his confederates had secreted quite a large amount of ammunition and arms, and true enough, these arms and ammunition were found in Cox's house and in an adjoining marsh. The regiment moved down to its present encampment above Hilltop. Jack joined them, and this was about eleven miles from his home. Cox dared to lay claim to his slave, and under the promise that he would not harm the slave he was surrendered up to him, but not without difficulty, for the men protested and forcibly rescued him, when an officer rode up and declared he would shoot the first man that again interfered with the master, and thus was this man returned to bondage by an officer of the United States army. Such was the reward of disinterested loyalty. Cox, the cursed fiend, tied the man to his horse and rode at a rapid rate, the poor slave running to keep up behind him. When he left the regiment he had on a pair of good shoes, but when he reached his master's house his shoes were gone, and his bleeding feet were found to be bursting open from coming in contact with pebbles and stones. He had been dragged eleven miles behind his master's horse! They arrived home in the evening about 11 o'clock on a Friday. He tied him to a tree and called his overseer, Franklin Roby and a man by the name of John Robinson. They commenced whipping him about twelve o'clock and whipped him until three o'clock, three hours, taking turns with the whip, when one was tired and breathless another would apply the lash. The only words he uttered up to two o'clock were, "I shall not live after this." "Oh, no you rascal I intend to kill you!" said Cox. "Mr. Cox," said Robinson "he is dying." "No he is not. He is stout-hearted and able-bodied. He can stand as much more. However, give me the whip, let his blood be upon my head," replied Cox. The lash was then applied until abut two hours before day. Say the narrators about 3 o'clock he was cut down and sank to the earth insensible. He had on a new cotton shirt when they began to whip him, and when they were done there was nothing left of it but the collar-band and wristbands. Then commenced the rubbing down to bring back sensibility, but all of no avail. Their unfortunate victim breathed his last before sun-down on Saturday evening. Thus perished a loyal negro at the hands of a traitor. Oh, what a terrible reward for patriotism; death in its worst, and hideous form, by torture! Yet the villian who did this is at liberty! This is the way United States officers treat traitors. They would plunge all of the country's wealth, learning and prosperity in a vortex of ruin; yes even hurl it from amongst the family of nations. But my dear sir, when I dwell on the diabolism of the deed my hand trembles, my nerves lose their steadiness, my mind its self-possession.

Another of these southern hounds a Dr Smoot, crossed the Potomac last May and returned in the latter part of November He lives in the same neighborhood with Cox. He has a 'safeguard' he says and crosses the river in a professional capacity; plausible is it not? Well he had been home a short time when he felt it necessary to whip one of the children of his slave named Nace Dorsey. The boy managed to get away when Smoot ordered the father to catch him and bring him back. This the father refused to do, when Smoot called for his gun and said he would shoot him The poor man tried to get away, when Smoot levelled his piece and killed him in his tracks! The murderer was arrested but released on his patrol of honor!

A short time before Smoot killed Nace Dorsey he attempted to kill a man by the name of Henry Young. He ordered Young to his barn to get flogged, when the latter told him he would not allow him to flog him. Smoot had a double barrelled gun in his hand, and Young kept close to him, that he might not level it at him, and followed him to the barn. When they reached it Smoot stept back and levelled his piece, when Young with the agility of a cat sprang upon him, wrenched it from him and shivered the breach to pieces over his head. Carrying the stockless barrels with him he fled across the river and was arrested by the Virginians as a runaway slave and locked up in the Rappahanock gaol. He remained there four days with four others beside himself, broke goal, released his comrads, and found his way to the banks of the Potomac, signalled a passing steamer, was taken on board and carried to Washington, and I heard that he had returned to his home within a week or so. He is a brave man, and one of more than ordinary intelligence. There are many of the same sort about here.

I learned to-day that a captain in one of the regiments here is particeps criminis of kidnapping a free colored boy who joined the regiment when at Bladensburg and whose mother lives in Washington city. Should this meet the eye of any friend of the cause in that city perhaps he may be able to forward to the office of the Anglo her address. I know the boy well. He can be found no where. He was spirited away during my temporary absence from camp. We are determined to have him and to bring to justice the guilty parties if there is any justice for them to be brought to.

G. E. S.

LETTER FROM BALTIMORE.

Baltimore Jan. 9th, 1862.

DEAR ANGLO,—I again sit down to drop you a hasty line before mail closes, trusting it may be in time for your paper of this week. Our Fairs have nearly all closed at this time; those which still hang on will not outlast this week. They all seem of the opinion that considering the war times they have done very well. Quite an excitement was created in Bethel fair on Thursday evening by the sudden entrance of a masquerading party of four persons richly dressed, their faces being masked. We, for one, could not see who they were, though some others professed to recognise them. We learn that they afterwards visited the fair at Waters Chapel.

Rt. Rev. Bishop Payne is now in this city. His health has been very poor. It is announced that he will preach in Bethel Church next Sabbath, if his health will permit, which we trust it will. Rev. H. R. Revels, the talented and beloved pastor of the Madison st. Presbyterian Church, has been called to your city, we believe by the illness of a dear sister. We trust that he may find her improved in health. On Tuesday evening last we had the pleasure of listening to a powerful discourse from the Rev. Dr. Kay, of London, delivered in Bethel Church. On Tuesday evening last the installation of officers took place in the rooms of the King Solomon Lyceum. The principal officers for this term are Robt. M. Deaver, President, Jas. T. Bradford, Vice Prest., and Henry Bowser, Sec. Suitable addresses were delivered by the gentlemen on occupying their seats.

We Baltimoreans have this week had such a treat as but seldom falls to our lot, and we have drunken so deep that our heads are not yet clear. The Black Swan and her companions, sweet Madame Brown, Miss Sedgwick and the renowned Signor Mario, gave two concerts at Bethel Church on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week, leading us willing captives by the ears to the power of music, and affording us a greater conception than we ever before possessed of how much meaning is embodied in the word music. But—'Twere vain to tell thee all I feel', and as pens far abler than ours have felt their incapacity to do them justice, so that even when lavishing their highest encomiums t seems to those that have heard them sing as though they were 'damning them with faint praise'—we will not attempt to praise them, but we were perfectly enraptured and greeted them with deafening applause. As for ourself when, while listening to one piece, our next friend incautiously addressed to us some remark in commendation, thus rudely disturbing the Elysian trance in which the sweet voice of the Swan had lapped us, a vigorous dig in the ribs from our dexter elbow, bent to its sharpest angle, pointedly admonished him not to disturb our sweet dream. We applauded, until our hands looked more like pieces of raw beef or boiled lobster claws, than like the hands of a marriageable young man of our age, and our arms felt as though they would drop from their sockets. Well, we might as well bring this letter to a close, for we are so full of 'Concert' that we can think of nothing else at present, so for the present, Adieu.

MAJOR.

It is said that General Lane has already a company of colored men under drill, and in his progress southward will not hesitate to turn against the rebels whatever enginery he finds most effective.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

Washington, Jan. 13th, 1862.

MR. EDITOR,—The Hutchinson family gave a Concert at the 15th st. Presbyterian church, on Thursday evening, Jan. 9th, to a very large audience, although the evening was dark and foggy and the streets overflowing with mud. By the request of the trustees of the church, it will be repeated next Thursday evening.

During the past week we have had two shocking casualties; one of which, as far as I can learn, occurred in this way:

On Tuesday evening last two colored men who were neighbors on the Island, one named Becket and the other Tolbert, had had a friendly boxing match, when getting tired of using the fist they commenced kicking, when Becket being the tallest kicked Tolbert in the abdomen, so injuring him that he died in four hours afterwards. Previous to his death he fully exonerated Becket from all blame. This was a sad occurrence, as both men had always been on friendly terms and were heads of large families. Mr. Tolbert was an excellent mechanic. Although a carpenter, he was capable of performing almost any kind of mechanism. By his industry he had purchased his freedom. His death is much lamented.

The facts in regard to the other casualty are as follows:

On Saturday morning a small covered country wagon containing two females was passing along Pennsylvania Avenue, and when near 1st street, at the foot of Capitol Hill, a government wagon, drawn by four horses, came in contact with it from the horses becoming unmanageable, and the women were thrown out, one of them, by the name of Sweeny, being so badly hurt that she died almost immediately The other woman was but slightly injured. No blame was attached to the teamster.

I regret to say that the smallpox is raging in this city, particularly among the colored people. My opinion is that it it owing to their frequent assembling in crowded places. A few evenings ago, at one of our churches, a number of ladies had assembled around the stove previous to the commencement of services, when the conversation turned upon the prevalence of the smallpox. One of the ladies remarked that the loathsome disease was in the row in which she lived. Immediately a stampede took place from the stove. On the following evening it was reported that the disease had been in said lady's house several days, and she was down with it; also a young man who had stood along side of her at the stove.

Mrs. Adele Wood, the youngest daughter of Mr. Chas. H. Brown, whose marriage was chronicled in the Anglo-African a short time ago, died on the 11th inst., after a short illness. Mrs. Wood was an excellent lady, and was the soul of a large circle of young people. She leaves behind her a sorrowing husband and parents.

Rev. J. P. Hamer on the 9th inst. had the pleasure of uniting in matrimony the following couples: Mr. James Black and Miss Sydney Ann Brown; and Mr. Edward Williams and Miss Mary E. Myers. All parties belonged on the Island. A gay time is expected, as they had a large circle of acquaintances.

BOX.

THE COLORED PUBLIC SCHOOLS, &c., IN CINCINNATI, OHIO.

MR. EDITOR,—I took occasion on Thursday last, in company with an old schoolmate of mine, Mr. William West, formerly of Philadelphia, to visit the Colored Public Schools in this city and I can assure you that the visit was pleasant and agreeable. There are two schools, one in the eastern district, the other in the western. The buildings are large and commodious, each having four departments, large, well ventilated and easy of access. Mr. John Mitchell is principal of the Eastern District School. In the 1st Primary Department the average attendance is 55. Miss Anderson the teacher, is a graduate of the Ursuline Convent, at Cleveland. Ohio. She is the daughter of Mr. Elijah Anderson, who died a few years ago, a martyr to the cause of the oppressed, in the Penitentiary at Frankfort, Kentucky. Miss Anderson is a young lady of fine literary attainments and pleasing address. She is a good disciplinarian as well as teacher. The children in her charge are orderly and well behaved, which is more than I can say of many other schools that I have visited. In the Second Primary Department the average attendance is 45. Teacher, Miss Amelia Williams.

Second Department Higher Branches—Average attendance 20; teacher, Miss Anna E. Ryall.

First Department Higher Branches—Average attendance 18; teacher, Mr. John Mitchel, graduate of Oberlin College.

Western District School—Mr. P. H. Clark, Principal.

First Primary Department—Average attendance 84; teacher, Mr. Wm. H. Parham.

Second Primary Department—Average attendance 50; teacher, Miss Lucy A. Blackburn.

Second Department Higher Branches—Average attendance 34; teacher, Miss Arabella Carter.

First Department Higher Branches—Average attendance 37; teacher, Mr. P. H. Clark.

The school library, located in the building of the eastern district, contains 575 volumes the portion of books given to the colored public schools of Cincinnati, and 127 volumes which constituted the library of the Young Men's Library Association, and makes the whole number of volumes 682.

COLORED UNION LYCEUM OF CINCINNATI.

This association is composed of some of the best talent in the city, and gives evidence of great literary ability; Mr. Marshall Jones is the President. The following subject was discussed on Tuesday evening: Which is the most powerful, Wind or Water. Affirmative—Messrs. Roxborough and Conrod. Negative—Messrs. Groce and Knox. The subject was ably discussed on each side, the speakers occupying fifteen minutes. The judges decided in favor of the affirmative. There is an Editor and Editress connected with the Lyceum, who alternate in reading their papers at each meeting. Essays are also read, and declamations by the members are delivered. Your correspondent was by an unanimous vote made an honorary member, and invited to address the Lyceum. The organization of Literary Associations among our people is a movement in the right direction.

THE DAGUERREIAN ROOMS OF MESSRS. J. P. AND E. G. BALL, AND THOMAS BALL AND ALEX. THOMAS.

For me to attempt to give you a description of these handsomely furnished and beautifully ornamented galleries would certainly be a failure on my part; but permit me to say they are the finest in the city, and are doing the largest business.

COAL YARDS OF MR. ROBERT GORDON.

It is certainly a pleasure for one to visit the extensive coal yards of this gentleman. Mr. Gordon was a slave in Virginia for 33 years, when he bought himself, paying the enormous price of seventeen hundred dollars. He done business a while in Virginia in the coal trade, and subsequently moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, and commenced on a small scale in 1849. His business has increased yearly. He has three yards, and is doing as large, if not the largest, business in this line in the city. But few of our people patronise him; this is natural, and nothing strange. The colored people, as a general thing, will not help each other; they would rather take their money and spend it with their oppressors, and make them rich, than patronise their own people. O shame! where is thy blush?

J. J. CLINTON.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 11th, 1862.

P. S.—I will leave here for Pittsburg, Pa., on the 14th.

LETTER FROM TROY.

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 11th, 1862.

DEAR ANGLO: We have had a glorious time in Troy for this last week and a half We have had the pleasure of hearing the Rev. Mr. Chase, of Baltimore. He delivered a very eloquent discourse to the people of Troy, and which will not be forgotten for a long time, on the 'descendants of Ham.' He handled his subject with masterly effect. He has left us now, but I hope only for a short time, as the people think of getting him as minister of the Liberty Street Church. We have had a fair for the benefit of the church at Harmony Hall, which came off very well. I noticed in the hall a few strangers from Philadelphia, among whom was a young colored gentleman by the name of Mr. Malachi Dunmore, a gentleman well known in New York and Philadelphia as an actor of great ability, and a splendid vocalist. He is also the author of a five act play entitled 'The Malicious Tomahawk, or the Disappointed Scalping Knife.' I had the pleasure of being one of the coterie of gentlemen to listen to some of his Readings; and he is pronounced by some of the best critics to far surpass some of the leading white actors in the United States. He won two prizes when put against two white students to recite Edgar Poe's master poem of 'the Raven,' and for his fine acting in the scene in Macbeth where he is about to enter the chamber of Duncan to murder him, when he says—'Hear it not, Duncan, for it is a knell that summons thee to heaven, or to hell,' which rendition brought down the house. His elocution should be studied by young colored men wishing to excel in that art. I had the pleasure of hearing him sing the beautiful song of 'Take me Home to Die,' which he sang with thrilling effect. This song delighted the ladies so much that he was forced to repeat it three times I hear that he is going to sail for Scotland on the first of March, where I hope he will win laurels. As he intends being in New York shortly, I hope you will have the pleasure of hearing him. He gives parlor entertainments for the amusement of the ladies free. He expects to stop at Mrs. Plant's Brooklyn.

I learn that he is about to dramatise 'Blake, or the huts of America.' I know it will, as a drama from the pen of Mr. Dunmore, far surpass 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.'

SUBSCRIBER.

THAT'S THE TALK.—A negro-hunter came ihto the camp of General Smith, near Paducah, Ky., in search of his "servant," and called upon the General for aid. The old General straightened up his portly form, and with a withering look that caused the slave-hunter to quail, said: "Sir, if you can find your negro, take him, but my men shall not hunt him for you. I have been in the service of my country now thirty-five years, and have never yet been a negro-catcher, and I will not now disgrace myself by it in my old age.,

LET US HAVE A COUNCIL.

MR. EDITOR: I was much gratified in reading a letter in your issue of the 11th inst. from Dr. Delany to Dr. Jas. M'Cune Smith suggesting the calling of a Council. The letter fully expresses my views, as I believe the condition of our people in this country calls for immediate action, and I do not believe there is any way in which our main object can be reached better than through a council composed of good men; and I believe such a council would do our people more good than all the State Legislatures can do for them at this time. One year ago I proposed the same plan to Mr. Frederick Douglass, and he then thought well of it. I also talked, last winter, with the Rev. Jas. N. Gloucester, and he was so well pleased with the idea that he proposed a public meeting to take the matter into consideration. The Reverends Messrs. Miller and Patterson, of Albany, promised to be with us, but circumstances prevented their attendance. I also conversed with the Rev. Mr. Beman and Messrs. W. W. Brown and W. J. Watkins. They all approved of the measure at that time, and then things did not look as dark as they do now.

We are a large body of people, and we might say that we are a nation within a nation, for our people now number near three millions more than all the inhabitants of the United States at the time of the Declaration of Independence.

I believe this Republic is about broken up, or at all events there must be a great change in the Government; and whether it is to be well or ill for our people, there can be no harm in being prepared to meet our fate, whatever it may be; and I know of no better way of preperation than through a council of good and wise men.

I hope such council will be held without delay, for now is the time when the whole nation is in commotion.

ONE OF THE OLD GUARD.

Troy, N. Y., Jan. 13, 1862.

LETTER FROM NEWARK.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 6, 1862.

MR. EDITOR: Permit me to wish you a happy New Year, and to say that the holidays passed off finely here. Many ladies and gentlemen spent most of the season on the ice, giving evidences of their proficiency in the art of skating. We have many skaters among the colored ladies who are acknowledged by all hands to be superior to any of the other class, among whom I would name Miss T——n and Mrs. J——s.

Santa Claus made many calls here, one of which was to a colored coachman with whom he must have been on very intimate terms, for he left for him two pairs of gloves, two pairs of stockings, one of boots, a new coat, two pockethandkerchiefs, two cravats, a feather bed, and numerous articles for his vrow.

The Plane Street Presbyterian Church held their Annual Fair and Festival, commencing on Christmas and ending on the evening of the 2d inst. It was conducted mostly by the young ladies of the church who have been engaged during the long autumn and winter evenings preparing for the affair. The Trustees should tender to them at least a vote of thanks for their praiseworthy efforts. The fair was well managed, and the best of order prevailed. Two beautiful quilts, valued at ten dollars each, were drawn for at twenty-five cents a chance. They fell to the lot of Miss Delia How and Mr. James Hazleton. The amount realised from the fair was one hundred and thirty dollars.

The Bethel Church also held a fair and festival on the 1st inst. in the Union Hall, but I regret to say that the arrangement fell far short of those of previous years.

There were other doings in the city, accounts of which will probably be furnished by other correspondents.

ISAAC TEMBROOK.

COLORED CHILDREN AT FORTRESS MONROE.

Rev. A. B. Fuller, a Unitarian clergyman of Boston, and the able and devoted chaplain of one of the Massachusetts regiments at Fortress Monroe, sends to "The Boston Traveller" a highly interesting narrative of a Sunday-school exhibition of the colored children there on Christmas evening:

'It was indeed different from any exhibition I ever attended before, and I confess it interested me more also. It was touching to see two hundred children, just rescued from slavery, coming before their white friends, the soldiers, whom they regard as deliverers, and exhibiting what they have been able to learn of reading, and of God's Word, and of singing during the last four months. Each child seemed to look pleadingly at the soldierly group present, as if asking, 'Am I not worthy to be free?'

'And it was astonishing how much they had learned in so short a time; their dialect was peculiar and their singing more earnest than cultured, but I know what they were when they came here, and I was struck with wonder. A beautiful little girl, Hattie Peak, four years of age, sang 'I want to be an angel' very sweetly and correctly. She has blue eyes, Saxon curls, and a very fair complexion. I never should have suspected she had a particle of African blood in her veins, yet, four months ago, she was a slave, with oh, what a future before her! She is a great favorite here, and the soldiers call her 'Daisy.' Her father and mother, almost white, are the indefatigable teachers who have done so much to elevate those of their despised lineage here by teaching school. Mrs. Peak is a woman really accomplished, and just one of those characters who are pronounced unreal when described in anti slavery novels.

'One thing let me here record. To my great grief, I saw several soldiers and sailors intoxicated yesterday, though much fewer than I should have seen with the same class of men at home, but I did not see and have never yet seen a single intoxicated colored man or woman.'

THE LECTURE OF WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, at the Cooper Institute, on Wednesday, was every thing that our people could wish. The hall was about half full, the audience appearing to be composed of our most intelligent people. There were very few colored persons present, owing to the fact that they have little or no confidence in city abolitionists from their lack of interest in the material advancement of our people.

The speech was such a one as the great and faithful pioneer of the anti-slavery cause always delivers, but it had the additional advantage of faithlul rebuke to the government, for its miserable pro-slavery course toward the slaves of the south.

All honor to William Lloyd Garrison, our ever true and devoted friend.

NORWICH MATTERS.—A private letter from the lady of Capt. John Johnson, of Albany, dated 'Norwich, Ct., Jan. 13th,' contains the following items of intelligence: 'I think there is a fine society of our people here; but, as elsewhere, they are not sufficiently united. They have one church, but I am sorry to say it is not well attended. I understand that our people get work at their trades. There is one blacksmith here, one stonecutter, one confectioner, two bootmakers, and several engaged in stores. There is at present a much afflicted family here—a Mr. Raymond and mother both lying very ill. The river Thames is frozen over, and fine skating is being had, which is enjoyed much by the colored ladies and gentlemen, in common with others. Mr. Cape Anderson, of New London, a colored gentleman, is said by competent judges to be the best skater here; but I am inclined to award the palm to a young man on our vessel. The white people of this place treat our people very respectfully; I know this has been my husband's experience while here, in transacting business with them.'

COL. JENNISON AND THE EX-SLAVES.—A letter in the N. Y. "Tribune," dated Osawatomie, Kansas, Dec. 29th, states that Col. Jennison is doing a great deal for the fugitive slaves. They have a school at Lawrence of 130 scholars. The Colonel gave them $25, and told those who have charge of the school that if that was not enough to draw on him for $25 per month. He told the elder that he would give him $25 a quarter if he would start a school for the colored people. There will be a school opened next week I think free to all.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, N. Y.

A church meeting of this large and growing congregation was held on last Thursday night, called by gentlemen in authority, for the purpose of reducing the salary of their pastor, the Rev. Henry Highland Garnet, from $625 per annum to $420. The meeting was one of the largest and most influential ever assembled, and by an almost unanimous vote they refused to make the reduction, and thus gave their decided expression in favor of their united determination to sustain their pastor. It can be truly said, to the honor of the church, that it has uniformly treated its ministers with kindness and affection. This renewed evidence of united attachment between pastor and people is both gratifying, no doubt, to Mr. Garnet, and highly creditable to his numerous and intelligent flock.

OLD SHILOH.

THE EX-SLAVES AT PORT ROYAL.

Many facts about the negroes in camp, which I hoped to put in this letter, must be postponed; but I wish to call attention to one subject of immediate interest, and indeed necessary to their comfort. There is no supply of clothing adequate to their wants. Quartermaster-Gen. Meigs, to whom Capt. Saxon urgently represented their necessities, has recently sent 600 suits of clothing to for the men and a small supply of shoes. Before these were received, nothing but second-hand garments left behind by the rebels, and very few of those, had been issued by them. Underclothing for the men, and every description of clothing for women and children are immediately needed, and cannot be had unless private charity will furnish them. The supply of men's suits furnished by Gen. Meigs, will be very soon exhausted by the negroes here and at Beaufort. No kind of second-hand clothing, therefore, will come amiss, and whatever can be sent at once will relieve a great deal of destitution. I am sure the large benevolence of the North will not disregard an appeal made with the sanction of the chief Quartermaster of the fort, and of the Superintendent. They will be glad to recieve every description of clothing, of every quality, for men, women, and children. Nothing is so poor or worn out that it may not be of service. Contributions should be packed in boxes, and addressed to Mr. B. K. Lee, Jr., Superintendent, care of Capt. R. Saxton, U. S. A., Chief Quartermaster, E. C., Port Royal, S. C. They will be forwarded at once by the Quartermaster's Department in New York, of which Col. Tompkins is in charge. If the necessity for this appeal seems strange, it should be remembered that Government has yet adopted no definite policy toward the negro, and has made no general provision for those whom it receives and whose services it uses. A blanket or two, an old coat, food, and five dollars a month, are the rewards it offers for the encouragement of loyalty. Those who come in are generally obliged to leave behind them everything they possess, and arriving often after long marches, exposure by night, hiding in swamps and swimming rivers, are almost completely destitute on reaching the camp. No generosity will be waisted that is bestowed upon them.

It is plain that the arming of the slaves will now become general, on one side or the other. In addition to the accounts heretofore received from different parts of the South, here is a statement of a negro who came into camp on New Year's day; He knows that at a point not far distant from Port Royal, not less than 300 slaves are under arms, organised and officered mainly by whites, and forming a part of the regular force under command of the General of that department. They are treated very much like whites—that is, like the common white soldiers—for whom South Carolina aristocracy has a little more respect than for the blacks. Other companies were forming, in which the proportion of black officers was considerably larger. This negro was asked to take command of a company already raised—the recruiting being probably about as near the volunteer system as elsewhere in the South. When he declined, he was ordered to take it; and threatened with punishment if he refused. Indisposed to fight for the perpetuation of the tyranny that sought to compel him, he fled to our camp, where there seems small chance of his being either compelled or permitted to fight for the flag that protects him. His statements are confirmed by another slave from the same district, who neither knew the other before, nor has seen him since.

The name of this negro and of his former owner, and the plantation from which he came, are all known to me, but there is a reason for not publishing them. He has brought information of great value concerning the rebel force and preparations for defense in a certain quarter, partly confirming and partly extending the knowledge already in possession of Gen. Sherman. I cannot praise too highly his intelligence and honesty, and he gives no mean evidence of millitary capacity in the suggestions which he made for the attack of the rebel defenses. He went down to the wharf, scanned the vessels of war at anchor, and gave a clear opinion as to how many might approach the place, to which he offers to pilot them. When I first talked with him he drew on the sand with the point of his stick a plan of the district from which he came, indicating with perfect distinctness the location of forces, giving their names and strength, and marking the points of approach. Afterward he brought me a piece of board on which he had sketched the same, and its main features corresponded so accurately with the chart that it was impossible to doubt he was right in details. He came to our camp because he was determined he would not fight for slavery, and believed that here he might fight for freedom. Why should he not? How long before we shall believe that a negro can fight as well as work for the flag—that he has courage, capacity, and will for war? Gen. Sherman is expressly authorized by his instructions to arm the slaves if he choose. He will learn sooner or later that the side which first summons the negro to its aid will conquer; that the South will emancipate and disarm her slaves sooner than submit to defeat; that the abolition of slavery is no longer a queston. The only question to be answered is, whether they or we shall abolish it—on which the four millions of blacks shall fight—whether they or we shall inscribe on our banner, "Justice to the negro," and under it advance to success.

[Cor. N. Y. Tribune.

THE ZION CHURCH SABBATH SCHOOL EXHIBITION.—This entertainment came off on the evening of the 9th, in fine style. The house was well filled considering the storm, and those who ventured out seemed to be well paid for their trouble, that is if we judge by the applause bestowed.

The children, both in singing and speaking, gave much satisfaction, and showed that their instructor, Mr. Henry Latham, had put forth his best exertions to prepare them for the occasion. Miss Victoria Price presided at the piano, and afforded much satisfaction by her superior playing.

Special Notices.

A CARD.

The undersigned begs leave to return his sincere thanks to the ladies and gentlemen of Shiloh Church for their unexpected visit at his residence, 290 Bridge street, Brooklyn, in the past week—when they loaded his table with the good things of this life—and more than that—evinced in strong and loving words their sincere gratitude for his brief labors among them, saying that this oken of their kindness was only a beginning of what they still had in reserve for him. Now what I add is, may their strong Christian good will to me,—as it ever has been in the history of that church—never grow less. May each of us so live as ever to deserve and to mutually cherish it.

J. N. GLOUCESTER.

There will be
A TEA
given for the benefit of the
A. M. E. ZION CHURCH,
In Devoe street, Williamsburgh, Rev. M. Manning, Minister, in charge,
On THURSDAY Evening, Jan. 23, 1862,
In the Basement of the Church.

As our object is to assist the Trustees to discharge their indebtedness to their minister and landlord it is hoped that we will receive the liberal patronage of a generous public.

The Committee will use their best endeavors to please all who may favor us with their company on the above named evening.

There will be singing by a company of elderly ladies and gentlemen, commencing at 8 o'clock.

Tickets 25 cents, including Tea, to be had of the following Committee of Arrangements:—

Mrs. J. Brown, South 3d st.
Miss M. Hymers, 49 South 9th st.
Mr. A. Stanley, 129 5th st.
Miss S. C. Wood, c. Marshal and Lorimer st.
Mr. S. Manning, 25 Varet st.

DIED.

RANDOLPH.—In this city, Dec. 19t old age Margarette Randolph, the last of the Cox family of Bedminster, N. J., aged 71 years.

She was long a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Elizabethtown, N. J., and also of the Rev. H. M. Wilson's church, of this city.

MARRIED.

BRADFORD, EDMONDSON.—In this city, Jan. 9th, by the Rev. David Stevens, Mr. William T. Bradford of Poukeepsie, to Miss Elizabeth C. Edmondson of this city.

TIBNER, SNYDER.—In Williamsburg, Jan. 6th, by Rev. M. Manning, David C., Tibner, of Antigue, West Indies, to Miss Anna E. Snyder, of Kingston, N. Y.

ANTHONY, HAYES.—In Jamaica, Jan. 1st. by Rev. Mr. Oakey, Joseph Anthony, Jr. of said place, to Miss Julia Ann Hayes, of New York.

BUTLER, MASON.—At No. 70 Sullivan street, New York City, January 14th, by the Rev. Wm. Johnston Alston, Mr. John J Butler, of this city, and Miss Mary E. Mason, of Philadelphia, Pa.

A. ROBERTS,
120 Clinton Court, 8th st., New York, agent for the Weekly Anglo-African. Copies may be had of him at an early hour after its publication.

GEORGE OTON'S
QUADRILLE BAND
BALLS, PARTIES, &c., furnished with MUSIC at the shortest notice.
MR. GEORGE OTON,
PROFESSOR OF MUSIC,

Would respectfully inform Ladies and Gentlemen that he is now ready to furnish his patrons with all the latest and most fashionable Music, and hopes by strict attention to business to secure a share of the public patronage, by furnishing any number of Instruments.

N. B.—Sociables supplied with the Harp and Violin, at a moderate price.

G. OTON,
45 Elizabeth St., Room 20.

Orders may be left with Samuel Flow, 15 St. John's Lane; J. T. Douglass, 251 Elizabeth St.; T. Snyder, 121 Broome St, and with G. Oton.
18tf

WASHBOARDS! WASHBOARDS!! WASHBOARDS!!!—of the celebrated "Hoagland Patent," equalling in durability and utility three of the old style boards, for sale at the Office of the "Anglo-African." Price 50 cents. Give them a trial.

MASONIC
DIRECTORY,
FOR THE YEAR 1861.
Lodges Working under the Jurisdiction of the R.W.G. Lodge for the State of New York, of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.
ORGANIZED A.D. 1849, A.L. 5849.

Widow's Son No. 1, City of Brooklyn, meets at 166 Fulton St., on the 2d and 4th Wednesdays in every month.

Celestial No. 2, City of New York, meets at Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3rd Fridays in every month.

Meridian No. 3, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 2nd Thursdays in every month.

King Solomon No. 4, City of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-st, the 2d and 4th Tuesdays in every month.

Stone Square No. 5, City of Brooklyn, E. D., suspended.

Western Light No. 6, Lockport, Niagara Co., State of New York, meets every Monday evening.

Covenant No. 7, city of New York, meets at No. 231 West 16th-St., the 2nd and 4th Thursdays in every month.

Mount Nebo No. 8, Elmira, Chemung County, State of New York, meets every Tuesday evening.

Evening Star No. 9, Owego, Tioga County, State of New York, meets every Wednesday evening.

Widow's Son No. 10, City of New Haven, Connecticut, meets on 2nd and 4th Mondays in every month.

Mount Olive No. 11, city of New York, meets at 231 West 16th-st., the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Mount Calvary No. 12, city of Troy, N. Y., meets every Wednesday evening.

Mount Zion No. 13, Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., not working.

North Star No. 14, Tarrytown, N. Y., meets every Monday evening.

Eureka, No. 15, Norwich, Ct., meets every Monday evening.

Excelsior No. 16, Hartford, Ct., meets on the 1st and 3d Tuesdays in every month.

Jeptha No 17, Albany, N. Y., meets every Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Mount Moriah, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dispensated, meets every Monday evening.

Pythagorean Institute for Instruction, meets at 231 West 16th St., on the 2nd Monday in every month.

The R. W. G. Lodge for the State of New York, meets quarterly, viz: March, June, September and December, and an annual Grand Communication for the election of Grand Officers.

Widow's Son Chapter, No. 22, H. R. A. Masons, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth Street, on the First Monday in every month, City of New York.

Mount Calvary Commandery, No. 14. Knights Templars, meets at No. 231 West Sixteenth St., on the 4th Monday in every month.

Riley's Grand Lodge of Perfection meets on the 3d Monday in every month, at No. 231 West 16th Street.

All Communications to the Grand Lodge must be directed to SAMUEL L. TILL, Grand Secretary, No. 66 East Houston Street, New York City.

LECTURES.

THE UNDERSIGNED is prepared to fill engagements to deliver single Lectures, on the following subjects:

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY WITH REFERENCE TO NATURAL THEOLOGY;
THE ADAPTATIONS OF THE EARTH, OR TERRESTRIAL ADAPTATIONS;
MENTAL PHILOSOPHY
THE ANCIENT HONORS OF THE BLACK AND COLORED RACES OF THE EARTH;

—Being a series of popular discourses recently delivered, founded on the following texts:

1. "Look not upon me because I am black." [Song of Sol.—1.6.
2. "Princes shall come out of Egypt." [Psalm 68—31.
3. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin." [Jer.—13.23.
4. "Cursed be Canaan.' —Gen.—9.25.
5. "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus." Philemon.

TERMS—The lecturer's passage both ways, and one-fourth of profits.

[From the Detroit Daily Advertiser, March 1, 1860.]

"Mr. BERRY's lecture last night is stated to have displayed much thought, and to have been in every respect meritorious."

INFORMATION WANTED

Of Mrs. DOROTHA SMITH, formerly Miss Mingo, of Picton, Nova Scotia. Any information in regard to her sent to Mrs. THOMPSON, 4 Catharine Lane, will be thankfully received. 21 2t

WILLIAMSBURG AGENCY.

Copies of the "Anglo-African" can be had at an early hour after it is issued, of Louis Del art, 148 South 6th street, Williamsburg.

NEWARK AGENCY.

Mr. Isaac Tembrook, 143 Newark street, is the regular agent for the "Anglo-African" for the above named city. All orders for the paper left with him will be faithfully attended to.

CHURCH DIRECTORY FOR NEW YORK AND BROOKLYN.

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
REV. H. H. GARNET, MINISTER.
New York—corner of Prince and Marion street, near Broadway.
Hours of Worship:—
Prayer-meeting, 10½ A. M.
3 P. M.
7½ P. M.
Prayer-meeting Tuesday Evenings 7½ o'clock,
Lecture Friday Evenings, 7½ o'clock.
Minister's Residence 174 W. 30th st. near the 8th Avenue.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH,
(PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL)
Wesley Place, between Bleecker and Houston Streets.
Rev. WM. J. ALSTON, Pastor. Residence—70 Sullivan St.
R. C. Shiles, Sexton. Residence—75 Thompson St.
HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . . P. M.
Lecture every Wednesday evening, at 7 1-2.
Applications for interments in S. P. C. Burial Ground, Cypress Hills, to be made 55 West Broadway.
Persons wishing to purchase burial plots, apply as above.

BRIDGE ST. A. M. E. CHURCH.
Rev. Richard H. Cain Pastor, Bridge St., between Myrtle Av. and Johnson St., Brooklyn.
Hours of worship:—
10½ . . . . . . A. M.
3 . . . . . . P. M.
7½ . . . . . . P. M.
Wednesday evenings, regular lectures on various subjects.
Residence of Pastor, No. 7 Fair St., Brooklyn.
13-1y.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.
DeKalb, corner of Hudson Avenue.
REV. ELI N. HALL, Pastor. Residence—160 Degraw St., bet. Hoyt St. and Bond, Brooklyn.
Hours of worship:
10½ o'clock, ... A. M.
" . . . . . . P. M.
" . . . . . . P. M.
10 4t

AFRICAN UNION CHURCH,
28th Street, near 8th Avenue; Rev. John Frisby, Pastor Residence: 69 Madison Avenue.
HOURS OF WORSHIP:
10 1-2 o clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.
12-1y

SILOAM CHURCH,
Brooklyn—Prince Street, near Myrtle Avenue
Hours of worship:—
3 o'clock, ... P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . P. M.
Prayer and Conference meeting, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M.
LECTURE every Wednesday evening.
Rev. CHAS. H. THOMPSON, Pastor. Residence, 148 Jay Street.

AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH,
Second Street, between Avenues B and C
HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.
7 " . . . . . P. M.
Rev. J. D. S. HALL, Pastor. Residence—223 Second St.

ZION BAPTIST CHURCH.
Sullivan St., near Houston.
Rev. JOHN T. RAYMOND, Pastor. Residence—No. 75 Thompson St.
HOURS OF WORSHIP.
10 1-2 o'clock, ... A. M.
3 " . . . . . P. M.
7 1-2 " . . . . . P. M.
Prayer meeting every Tuesday evening.
Lecture meeting every Thursday evening.
Applicants for the use of the Church will apply to the Pastor.

Copies of Anglo-African can be obtained of Mr Samuel Bayard, 61 Union Street, New Haven opposite the Railroad depot.

AGENT FOR WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Caroline E. Jackson, 183 F street, has accepted the agency for Washington City. All subscriptions or advertisements for the paper left with Mrs. Jackson, will be promptly forwarded.

TROY AGENCY.—Mr. Henry Burke, 36 Fulton St., Troy, is the regular agent for that city and vicinity. Subscriptions and advertisements for the paper left with him, will be promptly forwarded.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

NEW MUSIC.—"The Lord doth now to this Nation Speak," "O, Let my People Go," Parody on "Song of the Contrabands," words by Moses, music by Baker. Price 35 cts. including "Contrabands' Song," or 4 pieces for $1, mailed free. Just published by

HORACE WATERS, 481 Broadway.
24 6t.

THE HORACE WATERS PIANOS,
MELODEONS, ALEXANDRE ORGANS,
and
T. Gilbert & Co's. Celebrated Æolian Pianos,

are the finest instruments for Parlors and Churches now in use. A large assortment can be seen at the new Warerooms 481 Broadway, between Grand and Broome streets, which will be sold at extremely low prices. Pianos and Melodeons from sundry makers, new and second hand, to let, and rent allowed if purchased, as per agreement. Monthly payments received for the same. Also, second-hand pianos at great bargains, prices from $25 to $100. Sheet Music, Music Books, and all kinds of Music merchandise at war prices. A Pianist in attendance will try new music.

HORACE WATERS, AGENT.

THE
PEOPLE'S MILITARY ALMANAC.

The undersigned announce in preparation a
MILITARY ALMANAC,
SUITED TO THE
REQUIREMENTS OF THE TIMES.

It will contain about Fifty Pages of valuable statistical and reading matter, among which will be found a statement of the causes and antecedents of the war, with a succinct narrative of its progress and incidents, including the principal battles and skirmishes, by land and sea, to the present time; a list of the leading officers of the Government, political and military, with biographical notices, and the leading officers of the so-called Southern Confederacy; a sketch of the organization of the army, the isignia of officers; an abstract of the articles of war; tables of pay and and rations; national hymns, anecdotes, &c., &c., making a complete

Book of Reference for the Use of the People.

Price 12 cents for single copy—$8 per hundred, with a further reduction on larger quantities.

A limited space will be devoted to advertisements, at the following rates:

One Page,	$30	Quarter Page,	[illegible]
Three-fourth Page,	24	Eighth of Page,	5
Half Page,	[illegible]	Two Pages,	55

Payable on presentation of proof sheet of advertisement for correction, otherwise with an addition of fifty per cent.

It will also embrace a Mercantile Directory containing names of dealers, at a charge of fifty cents to each, payable at the time of subscribing.

To bring this Department more prominently before the general public, copies of the work will be gratuitously suspended for reference in the principal hotels of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other large cities. In addition, each advertiser of half a page or more may specify, at the time of subscribing, twelve hotels in any of the above cities, or such others as may be of convenient access to the publishers, where copies shall be gratuitously suspended.—A copy will also be hung up for public reference in the business place of each advertiser whose bill is promptly paid. Advertisements are to appear in all copies issued previous to December 1st, which the publishers guarantee shall not be less than 3,000 copies, if only for gratuitous distribution. No person authorized to collect without written authorization.

DEXTER & CO.,
Publishers and Printers,
17 Spruce street, New York.
86 Milk street, opposite Pearl St., Boston.
146 South Fourth street, Philadelphia.
23 tf

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HAIR!

For it is an ornament and protection; but how many suffer this crown of beauty to decay and fall off, when a sure remedy is at hand, perfectly safe and pleasant in its application.

We allude to

ANDERSON'S
RESTORATIVE & PRESERVATIVE;
—OR—
Great American Remedy for the Hair,
AND CURE FOR
NERVOUS HEADACHE,

Which has and is performing such wonders upon heads that have been, many of them, bald for years.

Wigs have been thrown aside, and handsome natural hair has taken their place.

Persons whose hair had not grown for years have, by using the Restorative, got it growing finely; and it will restore to the natural color all premature grey hair.

For cleaning the head from scurf and excess of dandruff, it is unsurpassed, and a sure cure for Nervous Headache, no matter of how long standing; and herein is the beauty of the Restorative—that it is perfectly safe for the infant or the oldest person, being free from all minerals, oils, high alcohol, sulphur, or anything injurious.

THE RESTORATIVE IS A PERFECTLY SCIENTIFIC BOTANICAL ARTICLE, approved and used by some of the best Chemists and Physicians in the world.

Hundreds of certificates can be shown, from different parts of the country, that have been sent to the proprietor by individnals that have been benefited by its use, including physicians, clergymen and other public men.

The few following certificates will show that it is a standard remedy, and will so remain long after experiments with high alcohol shall have been forgotten.

CERTIFICATES.

New York, March 28th, 1861.

Mr. William Anderson—Dear Sir: That wonderful Hair Restorative that you sold here a short time ago, has become a favorite with the people. I have repeated calls for it—and here let me say that Mr. E——, who has been entirely bald on the top of his head for some three or four years, has, by using one bottle of your Restorative, produced a fine growth of hair. Please forward me one dozen bottles.

Yours Respectfully,
THOS. R. CROCKER,
Fulton Fish Market.

New York, May 30th, 1851.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Sir: You may send me one dozen bottles of your Hair Restorative, which I will pay for on delivery. The two bottles I purchased from you have been of great service to Mrs. Ingersol.

D. W. INGERSOL,
(formerly in Pearl St.)

New York, May 12th, 1855.

Mr. Wm. Anderson—Dear Sir: Having lost my hair, I was recommended to try your Restorative, and have done so with great and good results. I have now a fine head of hair, when four months ago I was quite bald. I would say to those in the same predicament, that they should try your remedy, feeling satisfied that they will reap a benefit from so doing. Yours, &c.,

JAMES EDWIN HALSEY.
193 Pearl St., N. Y.

I have used in my family "Anderson's Restorative for the Hair and cure for Nervous Headache," and found it valuable for the purposes specified, and recommend it to all who want a good and safe article.

ALBRO LYONS.
20 Vandewater St., New York, Dec. 24th, 1861.

The article may be found at Dr. Smith's, 55 West Broadway; Mrs. Staat's, 78 Thompson St.; Chas. H. Ring's, 156 Fulton St.; Robt. Hamilton's, 48 Beekman St., or of the Proprietor,

WM. ANDERSON, New London, Ct.

Retail price, 25 and 50 cents per bottle, or $2 and $4 per dozen.

BOSTON HOUSE,
MRS. CHURCH, PROPRIETRESS,
105 Park Street, near Mott.
NEW YORK.

This is the oldest Colored Boarding-House in the city, having been

ESTABLISHED IN 1841.

It is centrally located, being within fifteen minutes' walk of the steamboat landings, and of all the principal colored Churches. 19 26t

MRS. SARAH A. TILMAN,
FANCY HAIR BRAIDER,
In all its branches—such as
BRACELETS, EAR-RINGS, WATCH
GUARDS, FINGER RINGS, CHARMS, ETC.,
Residence—120th St., between 3d and 4th Avenues, Harlem.
18 26t

PETER S. PORTER,
GENERAL AGENT FOR
HOUSE LETTING,
170 WEST 29TH STREET,
NEW YORK.

Colored Families furnished with apartments in suits of Rooms or whole Houses, in different parts of the City. 17 13t

TO LET.—THE ROOM ON THE SECOND floor of Masonic Hall, 231 West 16th-street. Inquire at 66 East Houston st., or of the Janitor 225 West 15th-st.

THE BEST DRESSING FOR THE HAIR during warm weather, is White's vegetable extract. For Sale at 19 Sullivan and 40 Grand Sts, 2 tf.

CLOTHING! [illegible]

Gentlemen if you want a [illegible] well-fitted Garment at a much [illegible] can be bought at any other [illegible] in any other city, please call at [illegible] Tailor Establishment,
168 EWEN STREET,
BET. STAGG & WYCKOFF STS., WILLIAMSBURGH,
Where you will find a [illegible] of seasonable goods, as
BROADCLOTHS,
CASSIMERES,
AND VESTINGS
of every description. Also constantly on hand a well-selected stock of Ready-Made
MEN AND BOY'S CLOTHING.
DON'T FORGET,
168 EWEN ST.,
9 1y. Williamsburg.

MASONIC HEAD QUARTERS,
EMPIRE STATE HOTEL
AND
UNION HOUSE,
541 BROOME STREET.
Between Sullivan & Varick Sts., N.Y.

On an improved plan, by widow T. L. JENNINGS successor to Mrs. RAMSEY.

Board by the Day, Week, or Month, on moderate terms.

Please call and see for yourselves.

HATS CAPS & FURS
IN THEIR VARIETY.
First Premium for Misses and Children's
HATS, CAPS AND LADIES' RIDING HATS.
The Clergy supplied at a discount.
KELLOGG, 381 Canal St., N. Y.
10 1y.

AGENTS WANTED.

SOMETHING NEW—WANTED IN EVERY family.—Patriotic Thermometer, Electric Barometer, or Storm Indicator; Unrivalled Coffee Strainer, or Ladies' Friend; Patent Indelible Pencil, for marking linen; Patent Hemmer and Shield, for hand sewing; Transparent Cones, for Kerosene and coal oil lamps; Egyptian Cement, for mending furniture, crockery, &c.; Patent Match-Safe, for vest pocket. Samples 25 cents each. Satisfaction given or money returned. For terms and circulars (inclose stamp) P. RICE & CO., 83 Nassau St., N. Y. 19 13t

MRS. M. E. EDY,
EXPERIENCED LADIES' NURSE.
RESIDENCE—134 Christie Street, N. Y.
26 26t

BOARDING AND LODGING
IN BROOKLYN,
At Mrs. SUSAN HARRIS', 58 Atlantic St., near South Ferry. $3 per week for gentlemen, and $2 50 for ladies. Lodgings 75 cts. per week. 15tf

VALUABLE TOWN LOTS!
For sale in the township of Rye, Westchester Co N. Y. Size 25 by 100 feet.
Apply to L. TILMON, 70 E 13th St., one door east of 4th Avenue N.Y.
10 5t

BOARDING AND LODGING ON THE EAST Side. Mrs. Gant, can accommodate a few Ladies and Gentlemen, at her residence 182 Suffolk Street. Terms very moderate. a19 1y.

MRS. ANDERSON,
CLAIRVOYANT & DOCTORESS
Has Removed from 106 Washington St. to 7½ Prospect St., (up stairs) cor. of Stewart, Brooklyn. 10 5t.

ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH.—Single seats to let in the body of St. Philip's Church (Episcopal). Apply to Peter H. Stevens, 207 Wooster Street. 11—3m

LODGINGS.—MRS. LANE CAN ACCOMODATE a few gentlemen with pleasant apartments at her residence, No. 192½ Green Street, in the rear. Terms moderate. 9 13.

CLOCKS, WATCHES, JEWELRY and Musical Boxes carefully Repaired by Wm. C. H. Curtis, No. 153 Thompson St., N. Y. Silver Plating and Fine Gilding. 6 tf

NEW SAILOR'S HOME. CHARLES M. FORTES, has opened a pleasant home for Seamen, at 199 SOUTH STREET, N. Y., Seamen will find this a very desirable house, as it is in a central location, and every provision made for their comfort.

Boarding by the day or week. Terms moderate. 31y

WANTED AT TILMON'S AGENCY, NO. 70 East 13th Street, one door east of 4th Ave., first class colored help, and none else. Cooks, house-workers, chambermaids, waitresses and laundresses, coachmen, waiters, &c. Now is the time; fall is near and good help wanted for city and country. 5—4t

HENRY G. LEASK,
HATS. CAPS, STRAW GOODS
AND FURS,
COR. PEARL & CHATHAM STS., N. Y.
Shipping Furs Bought. 12-tf

BOARDING IN BROOKLYN.

MRS. S. PLANT (formerly RICHARDSON) respectflly announces that she has opened a first class Boarding and Lodging House at No. 97 HIGH STREET, Brooklyn, where she is prepared to accommodate the public on the most reasonable terms.

Her house being located in a very pleasant part of the city and within 5 minutes walk of Fulton Ferry, makes it a very desirable and convenient place.

WARRANTED TO CURE A HEADACHE in 10 minutes, White's Vegetable extract. For sale at 55 West Broadway, and cor. Gold and Frankfort Sts.

MRS. E. LEONARD,
FASHIONABLE
DRESS-MAKER,
25 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK.
Receives monthly the latest Paris Fashions.

BOARDING AND LODGING
BY MRS. MARY JOHNSON, 120 [illegible] Street, New York. This house is very [illegible] situated in very healthy and convenient part of the city.
Boarding for Ladies, . . . [illegible]
" " Ge . . . [illegible]
Lodging per week, . . . [illegible]

JAMES R. W. LEONARD,
CARD AND JOB PRINTER
219 CENTRE STREET NEW YORK.

BOARDING AND LODGING.
MR. GEO. POOL can accommodate [illegible] and GENTLEMEN with FIRST CLASS [illegible] on reasonable terms, at his residence, No. [illegible] iff Street, a few doors north of Grand. [illegible]

POCKET WATER-FILTERS
AND
DRINKING TUBE.
Indispensable for Soldiers, Travelers, [illegible] men. Weighs one ounce. [illegible] vest pocket. Send it to your [illegible] wanted. Samples mailed on [illegible] by addressing
DAY & CO.
3-13t Box 464 P.O., Newark, N.J.

Poetry.

LET MY PEOPLE GO.

A Song of the "Contrabands."

When Israel was in Egypt's land,
O, let my people go !
Oppressed so hard they could not stand,
O, let my people go !

CHORUS—O go down, Moses,
Away down to Egypt's land.
And tell king Pharaoh
To let my people go !

Thus saith the Lord, bold Moses said,
O let my people go !
If not I'll smite your first-born dead !
O let my people go !

No more shall they in bondage toil,
O let my people go !
Let them come out with Egypt's spoil,
O let my people go !

Then Israel out of Egypt came,
O let my people go !
And left the proud oppressor's land,
O let my people go !

O, 'twas a dark and dismal night,
O let my people go !
When Moses led the Israelites,
O let my people go !

'Twas good old Moses and Aaron too,
O let my people go !
'Twas they that led the armies through,
O let my people go !

The Lord told Moses what to do,
O let my people go !
To lead the children of Israel through,
O let my people go !

O come along, Moses, you'll not get lost,
O let my people go !
Stretch out your rod and come across,
O let my people go !

As Israel stood by the water's side,
O let my people go !
At the command of God it did divide,
O let my people go !

When they had reached the other shore,
O let my people go !
They sang a song of triumph o'er,
O let my people go !

Pharaoh said he would go across,
O let my people go !
But Pharaoh and his host were lost,
Oh let my people go !

O Moses the cloud shall lead the way,
O let my people go !
A fire by night, a shade by day
O let my people go !

You'll not get lost in the wilderness,
O let my people go,
With a lighted candle in your breast—
O let my people go !

Jordan shall stand up like a wall,
O let my people go !
And the walls of Jericho shall fall—
O let my people go !

Your foe shall not before you stand,
O let my people go :
And you'll possess fair Canaan's land—
O let my people go !

'Twas just about in harvest time,
O let my people go !
When Joshua led his host sublime,
O let my people go !

O let us all from bondage flee,
O let my people go !
And let us all in Christ be free
O let my people go !

We need not always weep and mourn
O let my people go !
And wear these Slavery chains forlorn—
O let my people go !

This world's a wilderness of woe—
O let my people go !
O let us on to Canaan go—
O let my people go !

What a beautiful morning that will be,
O let my people go !
When time breaks up in eternity—
O let my people go !

Loyalty of the Slaves.

Wendell Phillips, in his late speech at the Cooper Institute, said :

Looking in another direction, you see the government announcing a policy in South Carolina. What is it ? Well, Mr. Secretary Cameron says to the General in command there, "You are to welcome into your camp all comers ; you are to organize them into squads and companies ; use them in any way you please, but there is to be no general arming." That is a very significant exception. You recollect in Charles Reade's novel, "Never too Late to Mend" (a very good motto), the heroine flies away to hide from the hero, announcing that she never shall see him again. Her letter says, "I will never see you again, Edward. You, of course, won't come to see me at Mrs. Young's, at No. 126 Bond street (laughter), between 11 in the morning and 4 in the afternoon, because I shan't see you (laughter). So Mr. Cameron says there is to be no general arming, but I suppose there is to be a very particular arming (laughter). But he goes on to add, "This is no greater interference with the institutions of South Carolina than is necessary, than the war will cure." Does he mean the war will give the slaves back when the war is over? I don't know. All I know is, that the Port Royal expedition proved one thing—it laid forever that ghost of an argument, that the blacks loved their masters—it settled forever the question whether the blacks were with us or with the South. My opinion is, that the blacks are the key of our position. (A Voice—"That's it.") He that gets them wins, and he that loses them goes to the wall (applause). Port Royal settled one thing—the blacks are with us, and not with the South. At present they are the only Unionists. I know nothing more touching in history, nothing that art will immortalize and poetry dwell upon more fondly—I know no tribute to the stars and stripes more impressive than that incident of the blacks coming to the water side with their little bundles, in that simple faith that had endured through the long night of so many bitter years. They preferred to be shot rather than be driven from the sight of that banner they had so long prayed to see. And if that was the result when nothing but Gen. Sherman's equivocal proclamation was landed on the Carolinas, what should we have seen, if there had been 18,000 veterans with FREMONT, the statesman soldier of this war, at their head (loud applause), and over them the stars and stripes, gorgeous with the motto, "Freedom for all, freedom forever"? If that had gone before them, in my opinion they would have marched across the Carolinas, and joined Brownlow in East Tenessee (applause). The bulwark on each side of them would have been 100,000 grateful blacks ; they would have cut this rebellion in halves, and while our fleets fired salutes across New Orleans, Beauregard would have been ground to powder between the upper millstone of McClellan, and the lower of a quarter million blacks rising to greet the stars and stripes (great cheering). McClellan may drill a better army—more perfect soldiers. He will never marshal a stronger force than those grateful thousands. That is the way to save insurrection. He is an enemy to civil liberty, the worst enemy to his own land, who asks for such delay, or perversion of government policy, as is sure to result in insurrection. Our duty is to save these four million of blacks from their own passions, from their own confusion, and eight million of whites from the consequences of it ("hear, hear!") and in order to do it, we nineteen million of educated, Christian Americans are not to wait for the will or the wisdom of a single man—we are not to wait for Fremont or McClellan—the government is our dictator. It might do for Rome, a herd of beggars and soldiers, kept quiet only by the weight of despotism—it might do for Rome in moments of danger, to hurl all responsibility into the hands of a dictator. But for us, educated rightful men, with institutions modelled and matured by the experience of two hundred years—it is not for us to evade responsibility by deferring to a single man. I demand of the government a policy. I demand of the government to show the doubting infidels of Europe that Democracy is not only strong enough for the trial, but that she breeds men with brains large enough to comprehend the hour, and wills hot enough to fuse the purpose of nineteen million of people into one decisive blow for safety and for the Union (cheers). You will ask me how it is to be done. I would have it done by Congress. We have the power.

Will Of The Late Francis Jackson.

The will of the late Francis Jackson, of this city, has been presented for probate. It is a lengthy document, and was signed on the 28th of January last. His brother, Edmund Jackson, is made executor of the Will.

He gives $100 each to Stephen S. Foster, Abby Kelley Foster, Charles C. Burleigh, Parker Pillsbury, Lucy Stone, Lydia Maria Child, Oliver Johnson, Charles Lenox Remond, Charles K. Whipple and Robert F. Walcut, "as a token of esteem for their fidelity to moral principle, and their devotion to the cause of human freedom."

For a like reason he gives to Wm. Lloyd Garrison the sum of $4000, to be used in support of himself and wife, and the education of Francis J. Garrison at Harvard College, after he shall have left the public schools of Boston.

He appoints Wm. Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Edmund Quincy, Maria W. Chapman, Edmund Jackson, William I. Bowditch, Samuel May, Jr., and Charles K. Whipple, a Board of Trustees, to receive funds designated in the Will to be used to create a public sentiment in favor of putting an end to negro slavery—leaving a bequest of $10,000 in their hands for this purpose.

He constitutes Mr. Phillips as President, Mr. E. Jackson as Treasurer, and Mr. Whipple as Secretary of this Board.

He also gives to this Board $2000, to be used in aid of fugitive slaves, and in this connection speaks as follows :—

"Disregarding the self-evident Declaration of 1776, repeated in her own Constitution of 1780, that 'all men are born free and equal,' Massachusetts has since, in the face of those solemn declarations, deliberately entered into a conspiracy with other States, to aid in enslaving millions of innocent persons. I have long labored to help my native State out of her deep iniquity, and her barefaced hypocrisy in this matter—I now enter my last protest against her inconsistency, injustice, and her cruelty toward an unoffending people. God save the fugitive slaves that escape to her borders, whatever may become of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts!"

He appoints Wendell Phillips, Lucy Stone and Susan B. Anthony a Board of Trustees, and gives them $5000, to be used to secure the passage of laws granting women the right to vote, to hold office, &c.

He says that he has given each of his children $8000 heretofore. The balance of his estate is to be divided into three equal parts.

The income of one part is to be given to a daughter and her children, and at their decease the principal is to go to the Trustees having charge of the Women's Rights Fund.

The income of the other two-thirds to his other children, and their children, and at their decease, the principal is to be given to the Trustees who have in charge the matter of creating a public sentiment in favor of the abolition of negro slavery.—Boston Traveller.

"THIS IS THE WHITE MAN'S WAR ; NEGROES HAVE NOTHING TO DO WITH IT !"—A member of the Indiana 20th Regiment, now encamped near Fortress Monroe, writes to the Indianapolis Journal on the 23d :

Yesterday morning, Gen. Mansfield with Drake de Kay, Aid-de-camp, in command of seven companies of the 20th New York German Rifles, left Newport News on a reconnoissance. Just after passing Newmarket Bridge, seven miles from camp, they detached one company as an advance and soon after their advance was attacked by 600 of the enemy's cavalry.

The company formed to relieve cavalry but the cavalry advancing deployed to the right and left when within musket range, and unmasked a body of seven hundred negro infantry, all armed with muskets, who opened fire on our men, wounding two lieutenants and two privates, and rushing forward surrounded the company of Germans, who cut their way through, killing six of the negroes and wounding several more. The main body, hearing the firing, advanced at a double quick in time to recover their wounded and drive the enemy back, but did not succeed in taking any prisoners. The wounded men testify positively that they were shot by negroes, and that not less than seven hundred were present, armed with muskets.

This is indeed a new feature in the war. We have heard of a regiment of negroes at Manassas, and another at Memphis, and still another at New Orleans, but did not believe it till it came so near home and attacked our men. There is no mistake about it. The 20th German were actually attacked and fired on and wounded by negroes.

It is time that this thing was understood, and if they fight us with negroes, why should not we fight them with negroes too ? We have disbelieved these reports too long, and now let us fight the devil with fire. The feeling is intense among the men. They want to know if they came here to fight negroes ? and if they did they would like to know it. The wounded men swear they will kill any negro they see, so excited are they at the dastardly act. It remains to be seen how long the Government will now hesitate, when they learn these facts. One of the lieutenants was shot in the back part of the neck, and is not expected to live.

BEEF, NEAR AND DEAR.—In the police reports of the "London Star" of Dec. 21st, we find the following :

Walter Newton, a tall, good-humored negro, about 20 years of age, who said he was "raised" in a Southern State, was brought before Mr. Selfe, charged with stealing 4 lbs of fresh beef from the American ship Silas Greenman.

Charles Douglas, a constable in the employ of the East and West India Dock Company, said he met the prisoner leaving the east-end of the South West India Dock, and asked him what he had got concealed under his clothes, to which he replied a piece of beef, and took from his person the piece of beef produced, which he said was given him by the steward of the Greenman.

Mr. Selfe : Is the prisoner the cook?

Douglas : Yes, sir, he is.

The prisoner said he took the piece of beef out of the pantry.

Mr. Selfe : You had no right to do that without the leave of your captain.

The second mate of the Silas Greenman said the captain was at present away from the ship on business, and the prisoner had no right to help himself to any of the stores.

The prisoner said he intended to give the beef to the washerwoman of the ship.

Mr. Selfe : I am afraid the washerwoman is a young woman.

The prisoner : Yes, sir, she is very young and pretty (A laugh).

Mr. Selfe : I thought so. You must not endeavor to win the affections of the washerwoman by presents of the ship's beef. It was found under his clothes next to his skin, I believe?

Douglas : Yes, sir, it was.

Mr. Selfe was afraid the flavor of the meat was not improved by such a mode of concealment. You are fined 10s. for the unlawful possession of the beef.

EXECUTION OF WILLIAMS.

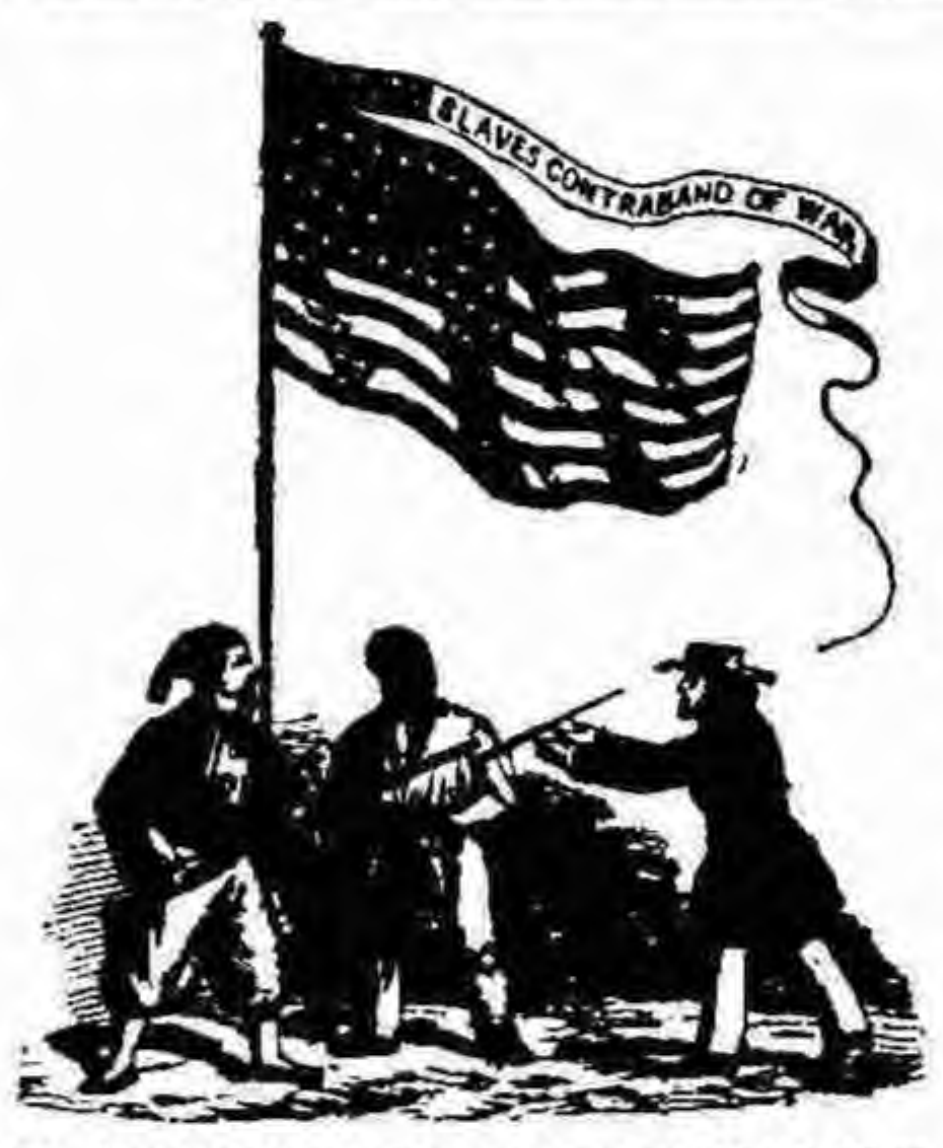
On the 3d instant, George Williams, a colored man, who it will be remembered murdered his wife on the 3d of August last, in the township of Colchester, in the county of Essex, Canada West, suffered the extreme penalty of the law at Sandwich, in presence of about 3,000 people. The following account we extract from the Detroit Advertiser of Saturday :—

On the first day of August last, Williams made a visit to his wife, in Colchester, Essex county, where she was staying, having left him some time before, and who, upon this occasion did not receive him in a very cordial manner. Some unfriendly words passed between them on the evening of that day, and on the morning of the second, while the woman of the house was out, a quarrel arose between the husband and wife, which resulted in the former taking an axe, which was lying near, and beating out the brains of his wife, in a most shocking manner. The cries of the woman attracted some of the neighbors to the house, who, upon their arrival, discovered the murderer—his hands crimsoned in his wife's blood—in the back yard, running from the house. When he found that he was pursued he stopped short for a moment, as if in meditation, and then returned to the house, saying, as he approached it, that he had killed his wife and intended to kill himself. He then drew a razor and cut his own throat, and fell to the ground. He was taken up, however, and removed to Amhersburg, where the wound was dressed, after which he was removed to the Essex county Jail, at Sandwich, and a few days after had so far recovered from the effects of his wound as to be entirely out of danger. He was tried before the Fall Assizes, and on the 12th of of November, was found guilty of murder in the first degree. On the 15th he was sentenced to be hanged.

Before the closing scene of the execution occurred Williams as he was standing on the fatal drop, said to those present :—

'I am glad to see so many persons assembled to see me leave this world. It makes my heart leap with joy, and I trust this will be a warning to every one present. This is a great congregation, but not like the one which I shall soon meet. If you do not understand me the Lord understands me. I am going where he is. He will go with me. May this be a warning to you all. Farewell forever.' During this time not the slightest agitation was discernable, and not a tear was visible in his eye, though many who listened to him wept like children. At the closing of these remarks, the Rev. Mr. Hurst offered up a heart-felt prayer, the prisoner during the time kneeling and covering his face with his hands. After this they all arose, and the prisoner stepped upon the platform, when the executioner entered in disguise, and pulling the cap over the face, he coolly put the noose over the head of the unfortunate man, and drew it up, at the same time receiving the injunction, uttered in a low but distinct voice, 'Not too tight,' then stepping back, the lever was touched, and this misguided victim of passion was ushered into the other world without a struggle. He fell a distance of seven and a half feet, and with such force as to tear open the old gash, made when he had attempted suicide several weeks before, and which, though perfectly healed, was still tender. The spectacle was a horrible one, but the poor man had departed this life, and was no more subject to its agonies.

MISCELLANEOUS.



THE ZOUAVE AND SLAVE ENVELOPE Price per thousand $5; per hundred 60 cents; packages of 25 each, 20 cents.

Orders should be addressed

THOS. HAMILTON
48 Beekman Street, N. Y

MEDICAL.

PAIN-KILLER.

We can recommend on the best authority, PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER, as a remedy unsurpassed for the cure of Sudden Colds, Coughs, DIPTHERIA and Sore Throat, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Headache, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Affections, Chilblains and Frosted Feet, Burns and Scalds, Tooth and Face Ache, Pains in the Back, Joints, Limbs and Side, Felons, Boils, and all kindred diseases.

Dr. Ware, of Columbus, Ga., says, for Neuralgia of the Back, or Lumbago, it surpasses any medicine I have ever used.

Dr. Sweet says it is excellent to remove the soreness after bone-setting.

Dr. Hall recommends it as an excellent linament for Rheumatism.

Dr. Nelson recommends it as a linament.

Dr. Walton writes from Coschocton County, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1860 : "Your Pain-Killer cures this new disease, DIPTHERIA, or Sore Throat, that is so alarmingly prevalent here ; and it has not been known to fail in any instance when used in time. This fact you should make known to the world." [It is used in this disease as a gargle and lotion as well as a tonic and stimulant.]

Rev. H. L. Van Meter, writing from Burmah says : "The Pain-Killer has become an almost indispensable article in my family."

Hundreds of missionaries give similar testimony of its virtues.

Rev. J. G. Stearns writes : "I consider it the best remedy for Dyspepsia I ever knew."

Rev. Jabez Swan says : "I have used it for years in my family, and consider it an invaluable remedy."

Rev. A. W. Curtis : "By its use I entirely cured a felon in a few days."

The Salem Observer says, "It is a medicine every household should have at hand in case of accident or sudden attack of disease."

The New York Examiner says, "We have used the Pain-Killer, and consider it an indispensable article in the family medicine box."

The N. Y. Independent says, "We have used it, and it proves to be all it professes."

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors.

10—13t

TIME, MONEY, AND LABOR SAVED,
BY USING
B. T. BABBITT'S
SUPERIOR FRENCH
CHEMICAL ERASIVE SOAP,

Made and improved by the ORIGINAL INVENTOR of the German and Austrian Chemical Erasive or Detersive Soap, of which the real and genuine article has, since its first introduction to the American public, been most favorably known, as the Best and Cheapest Washing Soap in the market, and with the present improvement, which is not known to any other manufacturer, we CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a better article.

1. One pound of it will accomplish as much as three pounds of any other soap.
2. But one quarter the time and labor are required to do the same amount of washing, as with the best of family soap.
3. It does not injure the most delicate fabric; will tend to set the colors, and wash cleaner than any other soap in use.
4. Clothes need no boiling, and but little rubbing with the hands, thus avoiding their wear upon the wash-board.
5. Paints, Grease, Tar, and stains of every description vanish as by magic, before its wonderful, searching, erasive powers.
6. It is invaluable to Machinists, Printers Painters, and all others using Inks, Oils, etc. or washing hands; it does not chap them (like other soaps) but will cleanse and soften the skin.
7. It may be used in hard or soft water, and is adapted for use in all climates.

Put up in one pound bars, sixty bars in each Box.

For sale by the bar or box by

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman Street.

DENTISTRY.

BEAUTIFUL ARTIFICIAL SETS OF TEETH on gold or silver plate on the most improved style. All other Surgical operations, performed to entire satisfaction, on very moderate terms by

G. H. GRICE, Surgeon Dentist.
79 Thompson St., N.

MRS. E. CLARKE, IS HAPPY TO ANnounce to her friends and the public, that she has opened her new BOARDING HOUSE, and will be very thankful for their patronage, at No. 66 SULLIVAN STREET, NEW YORK. 14-

P. A. WHITE,
Corner of Frankfort & Gold Sts.,
GENERAL
COMMISSION MERCHANT,
KEEPS CONSTANTLY ON HAND
A FRESH AND PURE ASSORTMENT
OF
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS
GENUINE
LUBIN'S EXTRACTS
AND OTHER PERFUMERY,
FANCY SOAPS, FINE HAIR AND TOOTH BRUSHES, PURE WINES AND BRANDIES FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES, FAMILY ARTICLES, HAVANA SEGARS, &C., &C.

All his articles are purchased with great care, and are warranted to be pure, fresh, and genuine.

MEDICINE CHESTS

carefully made up.

All orders promptly attended to, on receipt of the CASH.

Physicians prescriptions carefully prepared.

WHITE'S
VEGETABLE EXTRACT FOR THE HAIR
FOR THE PRESERVATION, BEAUTY, GROWTH,
AND RESTORATION OF THE HAIR.

After many years of study and experiment the undersigned now presents it to the public. This valuable preparation excites the scalp to a new and healthy action, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, prevents the hair from falling off or becoming prematurely Gray.

The question often arises, why the hair turns gray, rusty, and coarse, harsh and unpleasant in appearance, and finally falls off?

Each hair has a root in the skin, and is itself a hollow tube through which there is a constant circulation of blood. By this circulation the hair is nourished, its glossy color is given and preserved, and it is covered with oil. Any thing which injures the skin of the head, or diverts or takes away the blood from it, will prevent or impede the circulation through the tubes of the hair, stop its growth, and cause it to fall off, turn gray, or both. Hence it is that any cause that obstructs or weakens the circulation of the blood through the skin, or that diverts the blood to other parts of the system, will take away the lively, fresh, and youthful appearance of the hair, arrest its growth turn it gray sooner or later, and in thousands of cases cause premature baldness.

For this reason, all kinds of fevers, dyspepsia, low spirits, dissipation, and excessive thought, allowing the hair to grow too long without cutting, long and continued headache, neglected condition of the scalp and hair, great mental uneasiness, etc., etc., will always, unless proper remedies are used, produce general or partial Baldness or gray hair. The cure is perfectly effected by preserving a healthy and brisk circulation of the blood through the skin of the scalp and head ; could this always be done, the hair would never fall off or turn gray.

The EXTRACT will produce this cure, and for the toilet it will be found an admirable article as it gives luxuriant brilliancy to the hair.

Persons taking sea voyages will find this a most valuable assistant for preserving the health of the hair, which at those times is so apt to fall.

Many persons, both ladies and gentlemen, find their hair apt to become dirty and greasy and full of dandruff, so as to soil dresses, caps, bonnets, coats, etc. The use of the EXTRACT as directed will correct all this, and make the hair all that most refined taste could require.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

Let the hair be brushed with a good stiff hair-brush, until the scalp is considerably excited, and the dandruff and dirt removed, this will open the pores of the skin to the direct action of the EXTRACT. Then apply the EXTRACT in small quantities, at the time, rubbing it in with a brush, particularly where the hair is thin or weak, or shows a disposition to fall off, always brushing the way in which it lies, not backward and forward. The EXTRACT should be used at least three times a week. Avoid the use of soaps or alkalies, Alcohol, Cologne Water, Bay Rum or water, as they remove the natural oil, make the hair harsh and coarse, cause it to split and break, and will more or less change its color. Dandruff is the result of a languid, unhealthy condition of the scalp and surface vessels, whereby the perspiration becomes thick and clammy and adheres to the surface, which, drying, forms a scurf or dandruff. The frequent application of the EXTRACT will soon free the head from it.

In conclusion I would add that cases of failure will no doubt occur, arising from causes beyond the reach of remedies. Yet I am convinced that if the EXTRACT were faithfully and perseveringly applied, a large majority of cases of baldness might be cured.

BADEAU'S
STRENGTHENING PLASTER.
AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR
LAME OR WEAK BACK, PAIN OR WEAKNESS IN THE SIDE, CHEST, STOMACH, OR LIMBS. A CERTAIN CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, DYSPEPSIA, ASTHMA, PLEURISY, LIVER OR KIDNEY COMPLAINT,
SPRAINS, BRUISES, &C., &C

Persons disposed will find this plaster particularly servicable

Dyspeptic persons will find a permanent relief from its use, as it keeps a continued heat, acting as a gentle counter irritant, removing the inflamation of the stomach without breaking the skin. Persons engaged in sedentary pursuits should use these Plasters constantly, as they give strength to parts weakened by constant sitting and stooping.

For STRAINS and SPRAINS they are infallible, affording relief immediately and without fail.

For RHEUMATISM there is no external application equal to them, promoting the general circulation, and

PREVENTING A RETURN

of the excruciating pain.

These plasters are prepared with great care, and of the best material, and to prevent fraud the name of the originator is placed on the back of each one. In purchasing ask for BADEAU'S PLASTER. See that the name BADEAU is written on the back, or you will be deceived.

P. A. WHITE, Sole Proprietor.

THE BEST MEDICINES IN THE WORLD!!!

The following invaluable medicines may be obtained of

THOMAS HAMILTON, 48 Beekman St.

DR. CLARKE'S
VEGETABLE SHERRY-WINE BITTERS,

Are composed of Sarsaparilla, Dock-root, Rhubarb Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Prickly Ash, Bark, &c they should be taken not only in the Spring, but at all seasons of the year, as they operate directly on the liver, removing from it all coating of morbid matter, and restoring it to its normal action ; also opening the bile ducts, causing the requisite flow of bile so essential to good health. Their influence upon the kidneys, also, is advantageously felt : at the same time they operate upon the blood, cleansing it from all impurity or taint of any kind. Humors of long standing are eradicated from the blood, thereby speedily curing jaundice, headache, weak stomachs sore eyes, nervousness, and other chronic disease, arising from impurity of the blood.

The palatableness of these bitters renders them agreeable to every one, and being composed entirely of vegetables, they may be used by all classes or people with safety.

Sold for the low price of 25 cents per pint bottle.

DR. CLARKE'S
SUGAR-COATED HERB PILLS.

These pills are made mostly from a valuable herb that grows on the proprietor's farm.

Warranted to cure Bilious Stomach, Bilious Bowels, Bilious Colic, Bilious Fever, and all diseases which arise from a bilious state of the system viz, Jaundice, Headache, Heartburn, Sour Stomach Liver Complaint, Weak Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite, and a host, of diseases too numerous to mention, as their number is legion.

Warranted to cure diseases peculiar to the female sex

Warranted at all times safe and efficient.

Waranted for a gentle family physic not to have an equal in America, operating without pain.

Warranted not to contain calomel, aloes, gamboge colocynth, or other drastic poisonous drugs, which always do the system more hurt than good, and by their continued use are sure to cause a derangement of the liver, bring on costiveness, and its inevitable consequence, piles, and dyspepsia, and finally break down the constitution, and cause the victim to drag out a miserable existence. Touch not, taste not, handle not the wily poison. Your life is your own,—preserve it. Take a simple herb, sure in its effects, but safe and pleasant,—no wrenching pains, no ill effects, and made pleasant to take by a fine coat o sugar. Children love them, ladies admire them, fools and wise men cannot do without them, doctors prescribe them,—and every body takes them. Yes, every body ; from the honest farmer and mechanic to the most learned philosopher. And why? Simply because they are good, excellently good ; and will do you good.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOX.

DR. CLARKE'S COUGH AND CROUP SYRUP.

It is the most wonderful, effective and extraordinary medicine for the lungs ever used by man. It is perfectly safe and pleasant to take, and gives relief immediately. Thousands have been cured by its use, and tens of thousands will be again. All who use it pronounce it to be the best lung remedy ever discovered. Common coughs and colds are dispelled by the use of only a few doses, and children can be cured of croup at once if taken in its first stage. Long-standing diseases require perseverance, but a cure will be guaranteed. No medicine before ever possessed such excellent healing and curative power for the lungs. It seems, with almost magic power, to dispel the most severe cases of cough and throat ail.

Vocalists and public speakers should not fail to keep a bottle on hand at all times. A small quantity taken occassionally renders the voice beautifully clear and the lungs extremely strong. Words cannot fully express the great benefit to be derived from the use of the world-renowned remedy. Delay not, but procure a bottle at once. Use it if needed and if not, keep it till necessity requires its use, as all, sooner or later, are overtaken by some unpleasant affection of the lungs or throat.

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

BOOKS.

A NEW WORK
REPORT OF THE NIGER VALLEY
EXPLORING PARTY ;
BY
M. R. DELANY, CHIEF COMMISSIONER
TO AFRICA.

CONTENTS.

Political Movements.
Succeeding Conventions.
History of project
Arrival and reception in Liberia.
Liberia—Climate, Soil, Productions.
Diseases—Cause, Remedy.
The Interior.—Yoruba.
Topography, Climate, &c.
Diseases of this part of Africa.
Treatment, Hygeine, &c.
Missionary Influences.
What Africa now Requires to Direct Legitimate Commerce.
Cotton Staple.
Success in Great Britain.
Commercial Relations in Scotland.
The time to go to Africa.
Concluding Suggestions.

Complete in sections (chapters) consecutively from I to XVII, being most conveniently arranged in cut-in or side marginal notes, embracing every subject therein treated, so that in an instant any point or paragraph of interest may be at once cited to.

A learned and candid gentleman who has resided many years in Africa, after glancing over the proof sheets, pronounced it the most interesting and instructive work ever issued on that subject, and should be in the hands of every friend of Africa. It is a complete text-book.

The work contains 76 large pages, and will be sold at the low price of

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER COPY.

All Orders should be addressed to the Publisher,

THOS. HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St, N. Y.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, BOUND.

PRICE.—In half Morocco $1,25 ; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. Muslin, $1.00

CONTENTS ;

EMBELLISHMENT.—Portrait of Alexander Dumas.
MUSIC.—By A. J. R. Connor.
Apology.
A Statistical View of the Colored Population of the United States, from 1790 to 1850.
African American Picture Gallery.—Anon.
American Caste and Common Schools,—by J. Holland Townsend.
A Review of Slavery and the Slave Trade,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
A Good Habit Recommended,—by Sarah M. Douglass.
A Chapter in the History of the African Slave Trade,—by Edward W. Blyden.
Anglo-Saxons and Anglo-Africans.—Anon.
A Word to Our People.
Blake ; or he Huts of America,—by Martin R. Delany.
Books &c.
Civilization—Its Dependence on Physical Circumstances.
Colored American Patriots,—by Wm. C. Nell
Comets,—by M. R. Delany.
Citizenship,—by James Mc'Cune Smith.
Claude Brihndas De Salas,—Selected.
Communication from N. Y. Society for the Promotion of Education among Colored Children.
Chess.
Dumas—Alexander.
Effects of Emancipation in Jamaica, by Robet Campbell.
Fragments of Thought,—by D. A. Payne.
Fancy Sketches.—Anonymous.
Gone to God—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Intellectual Culture —by Robert Gordon.
In the Constitution of Man there exists a Religious Element,—by Robt. Gordon.
Lines—Poetry—by Grace A. Mapps.
Mrs. Partlington and Mrs. Freshington.—Anon
Our Greatest Want,—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
Our Duty in the Conflict,—by J. Holland Townsend
On the Fourteenth Query of Thos. Jefferson Notes on Virginia.
On the Personality of the First Cause—by Robt Gordon.
Patrick Brown's First Love.
Poetry—Anonymous.
Selected Items.
Struggles for Freedom in Jamaica—by Robert Campbell.
The Attraction of Planets—by R. Delany.
The German Invasion, by James m'Cune Smith
Trifles, by Mary A. S Cary.
The Coming Man—Poetry—by Wm. J. Wilson
The Educational Wants of the Free Colored People, by Martin H. Freeman.
Thomas L. Jinnings.
The Teacher and his Pupil—Poetry—by Wm J. Wilson.
Thoughts on Hayti, by James T. Holly
The Successive Advances of Astronomy, by G B. Vashon.
The Oberlin Wellington Rescue, by J Pierce Langston.
The Shadows of Intemperance,—by James Fields.
The Dying Fugitive—Poetry—by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Anglo-African and the African Slave Trade.
The Two Offers, by Frances Ellen Watkins.
The Re-opening of the Slave Trade—Anonymous.
The First Colored Convention.
The Self-Redeeming Power of the Colored Races of the World,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Policy that we should Pursue,—by J. Holland Townsend.
The Education of the Colored People,—by Amos Gerry Beman.
The Great Conflict requires Great Faith,—by J. W. C. Pennington.
The Outbreak in Virginia.
The Sentinel of Freedom—Poetry,—by J. Sell Martin.
The Nat Turner Insurrection.
The Execution of John Brown.
The Anglo-African Magazine for 1860.
The Watering Places.—Anonymous.

Orders should be addressed, to

THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman street,
New York

BROWN'S POPULAR RESORT.

The undersigned takes the privilege to inform his Friends and the public generally that as he has recently fitted up his SALOON anew, he is now prepared to furnish them with

Ice Cream, Fruit, and other Delicacies.

BENJ. F. BROWN,
70 Bleecker
between Broadway & Crosby 4t

PUBLICATIONS FOR SALE BY
THOMAS HAMILTON,
48 Beekman St.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE ANGLO-AFRICAN MAGAZINE, Bound,—Price—In half Morocco, $1.25 ; half Morocco, gilt edges, $1.50 ; Muslin, $1.00. CONTENTS : Embellishments—Portrait of Alexander Dumas. Music, by A. J. R. Conner. Articles by Bishop D. A. Payne, James M'Cune Smith, M. D., Prof. Geo. B. Vashon, Dr. Martin, R. Delany, Mrs. Sarah M. Douglass, Prof. Robert Campbell, Prof. Wm. J. Wilson, Rev. J. W. C. Pennington, D. D., Rev. J. Theo. Holly, Mrs Frances Ellen Watkins Harper, Prof. M. H. Freeman, Rev. Edward W Blyden, Rev. Robert Gorden Prof. Chas. L. Reason, Mrs M. A. Shadd Cary, Dr. James Fields, Rev. Amos Gerry Beman, Miss Grace A. Mapps Rev. J. Sella Martin, Wm. C. Nell. Esq. J. Mercer Langston, and J. Holland Townsend Esq.

The Life of Captain John Brown
The Liberator of Kansas, and the Hero of Harper's Ferry. By James Redpath. An elegant 12mo. volume of 400 pages, illustrated and embellished with a superb Steel Portrait of the Glorious Old Man. Price $1.00.

My Bondage and My Freedom.
By Fredrick Douglass, One vol., 12 mo. 464 pp. Illustrated. Price $1.00, postage 22 cts.

Life of Jermain W. Loguen.
The great Underground Railroad King. Price $1.00.

The Martyrs and the Fugitive.
By the Rev. S H. Platt. A thrilling work on slavery and the slave-trade, detailing the capture of a family in Africa by the Slave-dealers, their fearful journey to the coast, the horrors of the "middle passage," their sale in America, and subsequent martyrdom ; the slavery of their son, his terrible sufferings and perilous escapes. Sent, postpaid, upon the receipt of 38 cts.

Twelve Years a Slave.
The Narrative of Solomon Northrup, a citizen of New York, kidnapped in Washington City in 1841 and rescued in 1853, from a cotton plantation near Red River, Louisiana. Seven Illustrations, 336 pp. 12mo. Price $1,00, postage paid.

Our National Charters.
For the Millions. Including—1. The Federal Constitution of 1787–9. 2. The Articles of Confederation, 1787. 3. The Declaration of Independence, 1776. 4. The Articles of Associatian 1775. With notes showing their bearing on salvery, annd the relative powers of the State and National Governments. Also a summary of Legal Opinions collected from the highest authorities, is prefixed to the Constitution. An Appendix contains extracts from State Constitutions and Bills of Rights ; Ordinance of 1787, excluding Slavery from the North west Territory : also, Sentiments of the Revolutionary Fathers, &c. By mail, postage prepaid single copy, 15 cts. ; four copies, 50 cts. ; nine copies $1,00.

The American Slave-Code,
In Theory and Practice : Its Distinctive Features Shown by its Statutes, Judicial Decisions, and Illustrative Facts. 430 pp., 12mo. Price 75 cts postage paid.

Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Lysander Spooner. In paper, 291 pp., 8vo Price 75 cts., or postage paid 86 cts.

Review of Lysander Spooner's Essay on the Unconstitutionality of Slavery.
By Wendell Phillips. Price 25 cts. Postage 5 Cts.

The Revelations of a Slave Smuggler.
Being the Autobiography of Captain Richard Drake, an African trader for fifty years, from 1807 to 1857. The work is handsomely illustrated, with graphic representations of scenes as they actually occur on the slave ships and on shore. Illustration No. 1 is a large cut, 16x23, representing a slave market on the Coast of Africa. Illustration No. 2 represents a scene in the Hold of a Slaver (middle passage). Then there is a large plate, giving views of a slave vessel betwen decks, regulation slave-deck, regulation packing. &c. The work is handsomely printed—contains one hundred large 8vo. pages, and is published at a price which place it within the reach of the masses—viz : 25 cents a copy. When sent by mail the postage (six cents must be added.

The Nat Turner Insurrection.
A full and reliable account. Copies will be sent to any address on the receipt of five cents.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.
By Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Two volumes one. Price, $1,25.

The Kidnapped and Ransomed,
Being the personal recollections of Peter Still, and his wife, Vina, after forty years of slavery by Mrs. Kate E. R. Pickard, with an introduction by Rev. S. J. May, Illustrated. 12mo. cloth $1,25.

Gerrit Smith in Congress.
"Slavery has no right but to die!" A work of over 400 pages, containing all his speeches delivered in Congress ; also, an accurate likeness. Price only 80 cents per copy, and postage paid.

The Dream ;
Or, the true history of Dea Giles's Distillery and Dea. Jones's Brewery. By George B. Cheever, D.D. Price per single copy 10 cents, $1 per doz., or $7 per hundred.

A Summer on the Carribbean Sea.
By J. Dennis Harris. With an introduction by Geo. William Curtis. Sent by mail on receipt of $1.

A Pilgrimage to my Motherland ;
An account of a journey among the Egbas and Yorubas of Central Africa, in 1859-60. By Robert Campbell, one of the Commissioners of the Niger Valley Exploring Party ; late in charge of the Scientific Department of the Institute for Colored Youth, Philadelphia ; and member of the International Statistical Congress, London. Price, 63 cents. When sent by mail, the postage (10 cents) must be added

Turner's (J. A.) Cotton Planter's Manual
Being a compilation of facts from the best authorities on the culture of cotton, its natural history chemical analysis, trade and consumption, and embracing a history of cotton and the cotton gin Price, $1. Postage, 15 cents.

The Manual of the Wardrobe.
80 large octavo pages, in paper, by Mrs. Pullan. Price, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, upon receipt of the price. It comprises a thorough dissertation upon taste in dress, an explanation of the different kinds of stitches made in sewing, remarks upon the various kinds and qualities of fabrics used in the wardrobe, with complete directions for cutting and fitting all kinds of garments for women's and children's wear ; the preparation of table, toilet and bed linen. Illustrated by nearly one hundred fashion plates.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

"MAN MUST BE FREE!—IF NOT THROUGH LAW, WHY THEN ABOVE THE LAW."

VOL. 1. NO. 26

NEW YORK, JANUARY 25, 1862.

PRICE FOUR CENTS.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

IS PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY
BY ROBT. HAMILTON.
NO. 48, BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

Two Dollars per year or Four Cents per copy, payable on delivery.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six Cents a line for the first insertion, and Three Cents for each subsequent insertion.

Notices of Births, Marriages, Deaths, Public Meetings, &c., inserted for twenty-five Cents provided they do not exceed five lines; if more than that, Five Cents for each additional line.

All communications for the paper must be addressed
ROBT HAMILTON,
18 Beekman Street, New York

(Copyright secured in United States and Canada.)

BLAKE. OR THE HUTS OF AMERICA

A Tale of the Mississippi Valley, the Southern United States and Cuba.

BY MARTIN R DELANY

PART II

> Hear the word!—who fight for freedom!
> Shout it in the battle van!
> Hope! for bleeding human nature!
> Christ the God, is Christ the Man!
>
> H. BEECHER STOWE.

CHAPTER III

A GLIMMER OF HOPE

In his conversation with Lotty, Henry had learned of the residence of two families from Louisiana, near Matanzas, when on leaving the hacienda of the Garcias, he went directly in search of the Americans. In his stroll, he kept the great roads, because these a negro might travel without suspicion, besides to have frequently the benefit of the diligence, all of which are driven by blacks, and also because to venture through the plantations would have been hazardous, nearly the whole of which keep negro dogs, or blood-hounds with which to run down the slaves.

On approaching his destined point of anxiety, meeting an old black man whom he addressed and was answered in creole, the following conversation ensued

'Do you live about here?' asked Henry

'I do,' replied the man.

'Where abouts?,'

'On de nex' place.'

'Are you a free man?'

'No, my frien,' I'se a slave!'

'I thought the slaves out this way were not allowed clothes. How's this?' said Henry, speaking knowingly to conceal his being a stranger, by assuming a familiarity with all parts of the Island; as it is indeed a truth, that the slaves in Cuba generally go nude.

'Da's not 'lowed nothin' to put on, on,y wen de wite folks sen' um out.'

'Will you not be allowed after you get home, to keep those clothes on while attending about the house, and waiting on the white folks?'

'No, seh, no; I has to take 'em off, an' go 'long so, no matter who,s dar.'

'What is the name of your plantation?'

Da calls it 'Lucyana Hacienda.'

'What's your master's name?'

'He name Jenkin.'

'Is he a creole?'

'No, he 'Merica man.'

'Is he a good master?'

'Ah, God knows bes'. He wus kine a man!'

'Does he keep an overseer?'

'Yes, bless yeh! 'e got two-three places, and ovehseeh on 'em all.'

'How many slaves has Jenkin in all?

'I do' no', 'e got heap a slaves.

'What does he raise; sugar, coffee or rice?'

''E raise sugar on all on 'em.'

'Are the planters generally good or bad to their people?'

'Bad 'nough, bad 'nough!'

'Do you all get much chance to go out at night?'

'No, no, bless yeh! da all keep blood-houn' to watch arter an' keep us in.'

'What part of America did your master come from?'

'De Lucyana whar I come fom.'

'Are there any other Louisiana planters near here?'

'Da's one some ten-twenty mile, uh sich a mautta.'

'I would like to go and stay with you, or some of your people to-night in their huts.'

'Well, meh frien,' it is very 'dange'ous, case de wite folks al'as lookin' 'roun,' an' da got blood houn' out all night long watchin', and wen strangeh come 'mong us, de dog bay roun' de hut till wite folks come.'

'Then it must be dangerous to go on the plantations at all.'

'Yes, 'ndeed, mighty dange'ous; case da larn de dog, an' sometime 'e so famish', dat 'e break in de hut, an' tare our poo' childen to pieces!'

'I must go with you, let come what will!' concluded Henry.

'Well, me frien,' I try an' do all I kin for yeh! finally replied the old man, conducting him from the main road leading to Matanzas into a road to the right, which led them directly to the place of Jenkin which they reached in safety, sometime after nightfall, the man immediately leaving.

This family proved to be a choice one, on which Henry fixed his memory for future movements, he being then in search of a wife, to him at the time the greatest domestic concern on earth; made no seclusions, nor organized gatherings among his brethren of this class in Cuba. The hut was of superior construction to those of the slaves generally in the colony, the family of a superior order, proved to be native African, having learned English on the coast, French Creole at New Orleans, and Spanish at Cuba; but ten years having elapsed since they were kidnapped, the whole family by chance gettting together Their African name was Oba, the Cuban, Grande. Grande was foreman on the plantation of Jenkin, probably because of his superior intelligence; but most probably because of the fact that from the day of his advent on the place, the blood-hounds were known to fondle with his family, and never could be made to attack or even bay after one of them. This gave them reverence among brother slaves, which must have induced his attainment to this post.

During the night blood hounds were heard yelping, but none approached the old man Oba's hut.

Secrets were exchanged concerning dog charming between Henry and his new friend Grande, and much information was obtained concerning the character of Cuban planters, as well as the designs of the slaves They were ripe for a general rising, said the old man, but God only knew where they would find a leader These things and many more were made known to him during three days secretion in the family

'I have been with you three days and nights, father Oba, and now must think about going,' said Henry.

'How, me son, ye 'scape ovesee, that wat trouble me mos,' replied the old man.

'Your good friend Carl who brought me here, told me that Albertis had a plantation not more than ten miles from here.,

'Yes, me son, he great frien' to Jenkin' They both 'Merican men.

'Then leave the matter with me, father Oba, and I'll risk the chance with the overseer.'

'What you goin' do, me son?'

'I'm going directly to Jenkin himself'

'Sho, chile, he aint goin' to give you a pass.'

'I'll risk the matter, just leave it to me, father'

'Spose he come ax me who you is, what I goin' tell 'im, chile?'

'Just tell him that I called myself a slave from the next plantation, what is the name?'

'Buena Terra Hacienda, is the name, me son; the mausta name Faries.'

'That's enough, father, I must go. Farewell!' said Henry, directing his course across the place towards the mansion some three miles off

'Good bye, me son, good bye! Sorry you go in daylight, but hope you fool 'im good!' concluded the kind old father Oba, gazing after him as far as he could see.

'It was dinner hour when Henry reached the mansion, and inquired of a servant if Mr. Jenkin were in, being answered in the affirmative.

'Can I see him?' inquired Henry.

'He's engaged with company,' replied the servant. 'Sit down here under the verandah.' Henry thanking him, took a seat

The dinner being over, after two hours waiting, the master appeared on the back verandah, preceded by the servant to direct him.

'Well, my boy, to whom do you belong?' saluted Mr. Jenkins.

'I belong to Senor Faries of Buena Terra Hacienda, sir.'

'Senor Feries' boy hey! What is your errand, my boy?'

'To ask, sir, if you have some of the Chinese Sugar Cane seed sent you from the Patent Office in America, that you will oblige him with a small sample.'

'Yes, my boy, you shall have them. Stay and take your dinner with my people.' Henry, politely bowing, resumed his seat at the withdrwal of the master.

On a visit from America was a gentleman by the name of Postlewaite, formerly of Kentucky, his body servant George, a tall, fine looking, manly, intelligent fellow, being quite a favorite with his master.

When called, the servant approached with a dejection and submission of manner, which seemed at the moment to affect even the master himself who had caused it.

'George, hold up your head, and don't look down as if you were condemned to be hung!' said Postlewaite; the servant raising his eyes with a look of irrecoverable humiliation.

'Your negro seems to be pretty well broken; how did you manage it?' remarked Jenkin.

'I did as you advised me; sent him to a professional whipper, who charged him with the misconduct of making free with his master.'

'I always thought him the most confounded forward, impudent negro I ever saw!' said Jenkin.

'You are mistaken, Mr. Jenkin, it was not impudence nor even forwardness, as he was most delicately sensible of what was due to others, especially superiors; but I and he being raised up from childhood together, he was accustomed to look upon and treat me more as a friend and equal, than a master and superior.'

'You may thank me, then, Mr. Postlewaite, for the change!'

'Certain it is, sir, that had you not repeatedly called my attention to it, insisting that I must persist in punishment until he was broken, I never should have noticed his conduct.'

'Do you think he's completely cured?'

'He's completely broken, sir, and as humble as a dog. The last chastisement that Goodman gave, completely reduced him, taking out the last remnant of his manhood, so that he's as spiritless as a kitten!'

'Who was the whipper?'

'Goodman is his name, an American, from Pennsylvania I believe; one of your real poor white men, whom our negro slaves so much despise and hate to have over them.

'He's certainly the fellow for his work, Mr. Postlewaite, he does it well, I assure you!' concluded Jenkin.

Postlewaite was a man of very generous disposition, and always had been indulgent to his favorite servant George, but as a master, by the force of circumstances, was compelled to yield to the whims of those whose judgment, as successful planters, was regarded as superior.

The seed being obtained, with a note directed to 'Senor Faries, Buena Terra Hacienda,' Henry left late in the afternoon, making his way toward the hacienda of the anxiously saught for Peter Albertis.

CHAPTER IV

IMPATIENCE.

'Good evening, my friend! Is this the hacienda of Senor Peter Albertis?' inquired Henry, who had made good speed of some twelve miles distance since leaving the place of Jenkin startling a man who stood at the entrance of a large gateway waiting the approach of a herd of goats from an adjoining open plain

'Dis is his'n,' was the reply

'Is he at home?'

'No, 'e gone way.'

'When did he go?'

'Dis mornin.'

'Where has he gone?'

''E gone to Habana'

'When will he be back?'

'I do'n 'o.'

'Have you an overseer?'

'Yes, my fren', dat we has!'

'Where is he?'

''E gone to 'Tanzas to de bull-fight.'

'To Matanzas When did he start?'

'E jus' gwine long down de road dar now'

'When will he be back?'

'In de mornin'.'

'In the morning: why, when does the fight take place?'

'It take place arly, jus' at daybreak, afteh it oveh den he come home.'

'Who attends to the place when he and your master are away?'

'Black man name Dominico.'

'Is he strict?'

'Ah, my fren', dat 'e is—mighty stric'!'

'Can I see him?'

'I do'no, my fren', if yeh kin or no. Stop, I go see fus!'

'How far is it to his hut?'

'Way up yondeh, 'bout half mile.'

'Do you keep negro hounds on the place?'

'Yes 'ndeed, dat de am, plenty on 'em!'

'Can't I go with you?'

'No, my fren,' betteh stay whar yeh is, 'case de houn 'ont be out dis two hours, sich a matter yit,' replied the herdsman, supposing Henry to be afraid of the dogs, about which he cared but little, having fully learned to subdue the most frocious of them.

The herd, which had been slowly approaching, grazing as they moved, passed through, when the gate was securely locked, and the herdman left with his message for the hut. Half an hour having ensued, the approach of a person was seen at some distance in the clear twilight of a most beautiful West India evening, which appeared like a shadow. As the figure drew near, Henry receded a few paces close in the corner of a hedge-fence near the gateway, partially screening himself by the overhanging branches.

'Who is here?' inquired a voice in intelligent Creole, as the person came to the gate, discovering no one in waiting.

'A friend!' replied Henry, the man starting at the voice.

'If you be what you say, come forth like a man, and show yourself!' was the reply, Henry immediately coming out from the bramble.

'Is this Dominico?' he inquired of a stalwart, fine looking black man, past the middle of life.

'I answer to that name.'

'Can I rest with you to-night?'

'What is your name, and who are you?'

'Jacob, sir,' replied Henry, cautiously concealing his nom de plume of 'Gilbert,' that no traces of his rambling might be detected should he fall in with treacherous blacks disposed to betray him.

'Where are you from, and where do you live?'

'I cannot tell you that.'

'What is your errand, then, that you come here at such an hour?'

'If you'll take me to your quarters and have a little talk till I learn more about you, then I may be ready to answer that question.'

'My friend, I think I understand you; come with me,' concluded Dominico, starting down the lane with his friend.

'Here are my wife Edith, my two sons and two daughters, as true to their people as they are to themselves!' on introducing his family of handsome black people to the discreet stranger he had taken home with him, said the intelligent Domonico.

Henry soon became acquainted with this family, who were true to the cause of their race and people. Dominico and wife were the pride and counsel of all the slaves in their immediate neighborhood. The overseer was passionately fond of sporting, and always sought the absence of the master, who himself resided on the plantation, to indulge in recreation. At such times he left his trust to revel in the games and sports at Matanzas, the most of the master's time being spent at Havana and Principe. The understanding between them seemed mutual, that Henderich might go when he pleased, which gave an opportunity to the Dominico family to counsel and prepare the slaves for the future.

The man who stood at the gate, apparently awaiting the goatherd to pass, was a good and trusty outpost spy, keeping the herd in check as a ruse. By this arrangement of their duty, even in the absence of the master, the privileges of the whole plantation were left entirely to themselves. This evening presented an especial privilege by the occasion of Henry's visit.

'What sort of a master is Albertis?' inquired he of the intelligent Dominico.

'A mighty hard master indeed when he takes it into his head.'

'Does he whip much?'

'When he has been drinking or loses by gambling he is very severe and cruel'

'Does he drink and gamble much?'

'Whenever he's at home and has company. But he's a great deal away, else some of the people wouldn't stand him'

'Where is he from?'

'Louisiana, in America.

'Has he a wife?'

'No indeed; but he's always buying handsome slave girls.'

'Why does he buy so many?'

'They dont seem to like 'im Some wont stay with him, and them that does he soon falls out with. All such he generally sends off to America, where they bring better prices than if he sold 'em here.'

'You say some won't stay with him at all?'

'No indeed they wont. The last one he got was a mighty fine woman, I do assure you, she wouldn't even stay in the great house where he was.'

'Where did she stay?'

'She staid with my family, and he couldn't make her go out.'

'Did he not punish her very severely for such disobedience?' inquired Henry, becoming almost impatient with anxiety.

'He beat her like a dog; and one evening just at dusk he came in and ordered her to leave and go over to the great house; when she refused, telling him she would not, if he killed her. He then struck her in the breast with his fist, knocking her against me, when I kept her from falling. He next gave her a kick in the side, which brought her with a scream to her knees, where for some time leaning against the bed, she was unable to speak from pain, and when she could speak she screamed whenever she drew her breath; when he ordering her with a dreadful oath to get up; and knowing what he was, as she couldn't, she put up her hands to beg him, when he jerked down that piece of iron there, and struck her across the side of the head, nearly splitting the scull, when she fell, we thought, for dead, and he walked indifferently away.'

Henry now became so anxious concerning the fate of his wife, that for a time he suspended the inquiry, dreading the conclusion.

'What was the name of this woman?' after some minutes reflection, which had been observed by the family of Dominico, he inquired.

'Lotty, he called her,' was the reply, when Henry involuntarily started from his seat to the door, returning again as if unconscious of what he did.

'Where is she now—did he sell her?' with great anxiety he inquired, the emotion being such as to almost betray his interest in her behalf.

'He put her with his sister to break her.'

'Who is his sister?' continued Henry with unabated anxiety.

'Madame Garcia, at 'Castilian Hacienda' near Habana,' concluded Dominico, the perspiration breaking upon Henry, who spent a night of torturing impatience

CHAPTER V.

THE DISCOVERY.

The morning came and with its dawn Henry was an impatient waiting spectator. Leaving one of the most interesting slave families, he reached the great road leading to Havana, where taking a diligence without interruption, in three days arrived in the precincts of Castilian Hacienda. On arriving at the mansion, the family were all in the garden, recreating among the shrubbery, enjoying an atmosphere freighted with odor, and vibrating with the melody of the feathered inhabitants.

Late that afternoon, a sultry day, in the bower verging on a stream which fell abruptly into a craggy gully, at the extreme back part of the great thicket, sat Captains Garcia and Paul, Lieutenant Seeley and Past-Midshipman Spencer, Mesdames Garcia, Bonselle, and Seeley. Henry approached them, made his respects to the gratification of the young Madame Seeley, who had been doubtful of his return; then went where the maid and children were, some distance off, though in sight in a rude pathway leading through a ravine under a rugged fence into the adjacent wildwood.

The maid smiled as he approached, reached out her hand which was prevented from taking his by their being simultaneously raised to absorb with a white handkerchief, the tears which, at that moment obscured his sight and dampened his cheeks.

The terribly scourged little Pomp, was dejectedly playing near his young masters Miguel and Ferdinand, and Henry having cast a look upon him, the maid reasonably supposed that his emotion was a manifestation of sympathy for the child. Recovering from the emotion, he quietly stood with eyes fixed upon her.

She had a careworn expression of irreconcilable trouble, unhappiness and sorrow, sunken eyes, a full suit of crimpy hair, but carelessly worn, well mixed with grey, the scar of a deep cut wound on the right angle of the forehead, and her appearance was that of a woman ten years the senior of his wife.

'Have you any children Lotty?' said Henry, the first word spoken, after sometime gazing upon her.

'One!' was the only reply, when she turned away with choking emotion.

'What is it, a boy or girl? I mean no harm in asking you.'

'Boy sir,' she sobbed.

'Where is he?'

'Far enough from here!' she replied, her heart heaving with grief.

'Where is that?'

'In Mississippi, in America.'

'What is his name?'

'Joe! Oh my dear little Joe! she replied convulsed with smothered wailing.

'Have you a husband?'

'Oh! I once had a dear good husband! But oh lord, I'm now a poor wretched woman here in a strange country!'

'Where is your husband?'

'He's there too, in the Mississippi.'

'What was your husband's name?'

'Henry Hol——'

'Oh! my God! is this my wife!' he exclaimed, at the moment when was heard the friteful yelping of approaching dogs, having in chase a large guana,* which rushing pass, brushed the skirt of her dress, when screaming, Maggie stood supported in the arms of her husband.

'Oh, Henry! Oh me, what shall I do! Oh this aint you! Oh what shall I do! Mistress will kill me! Oh Henry! Oh Henry, is this you!'

'Yes, yes, my poor wife! this is your——'

'Do you see that jade!' said Madame Garcia, Henry stopping to catch the words; 'In spite of all I can do, she will put on airs in the presence of white persons, and I'm determined to break her, if I have to break her neck!'

'Poor thing, she could'nt help doing so! I'm sure that ugly creature is enough to frighten any one I'm as afraid of them as death,' replied Madame Bonselle.

'She's not afraid of them; she only wants to show herself before that negro man of Madame Seeley, that's all!'

The game being caught, the baying of the dogs and noisy jabber of the slaves who poured in eager pursuit to the lawn in large numbers, was such that the company retired to the Verandah to escape the annoyance.

'This is your husband, poor outraged suffering one, and he comes to take you, if in doing it, he takes the life of every slaveholder in Cuba!' said Henry, pressing her closely to his bosom.

'O! this cant be you! Oh my God, I have suffered more than death! How did you come? Oh my poor child! Where's Mammy, did she come too? My poor father!'. When with an innocent smile, Maggie gazed in the face of her husband, with eyes immovably fixed.

Gently laying her on the grass under the shade of a tree, the great hearted slave hastened to the rippling stream near by from which to get water to lave her brow and temples to relieve her of the temporary insanity; when sitting over her in discharge of his duty of love and conjugal affection, he found a solice by the intrusion of tears which freely fell from his eyes.

At these scenes the children were surprised and hastened to their mother to tell their childish story, which only tended to aggravate an offence to her already unpardonable.

'Oh, you worst of treated women, I'll have revenge for it!' said the half distracted husband to himself, as he leaned over her applying the water with his handkerchief.

Presently the child, which till then had been quietly playing on the grass aside of her, began to cry—the larger ones having gone to the house—when Henry took it, holding it on his arm, which only increased its fretfulness. The other children just returning, heard the little sister fretting, while the nurse lay unheeding it, when returning to the house, reported again to their mother concerning her conduct.

The mistress now became impatient and sent her severant Dilsey to summon Lotty to appear immediately before her. The girl returning reported Lotty to be sick. The mistress insisted that it was all affectation, and determined on having her whipped by her master.

Poor Maggie's joys on recovering, were blasted by anticipation of the punishment that awaited her.

'Oh lord!' she sighed as the sun declined beneath the horizon; 'I dread night coming on! I wish I was dead, so I do; they'll beat me to death!'

'The villian who dares lay hands on you, I'll send into eternity as quick as my arm can execute the deed! and——'

Here he was suddenly interruped by Dilsey, who was a good girl and a true friend to her people, running hastily into the garden to inform Maggie that Peter Albertis had just arrived from Principe. Clasping her hands and looking Henry in the face, Maggie cried out:

'Oh husband what will I do?'

'Dont be the least frightened Maggie, my child; I assure you not a hair of your head will be hurt!'

'But he'll take my life, and——'

'I'll take his first,' said Henry so determmedly, that she concluded to say nothing more, lest he might be aggravated to an overt act and blast all hopes however furtile they were.

The arrival of Albertis arrested the anticipated proceedings of the evening, Henry taking advantage of which carefully cautioned his wife, who required no such admonishing, to impart nothing that would in the least betray their relation. They separated for the time, when for the first night in many months, both husband and wife could retire to see each other in the morning.

---

*Guanas are run down by dogs and caught—a South American custom, introduced into Cuba by Brazilian slaves, some of whom when sold, carry the young animals with them.

For the Anglo African.

THE NEWSPAPERS—A VISION.

A tumult was rushing abroad thro' the earth—
The time had come for a Nation's birth!
'Mid the clangor of arms and clank of chains,
'Mid greed of wealth and poverty's pains,
'Mid cabinet councils by men of thought,
And a hurly-burly whose souls were bought.
There lay around on the mighty floor,
Of sceptres and crowns a hundred score,
And ships lay idle and out of trade
On a distant ocean I'm afraid
To tell the sequel of what I saw
When God Almighty gave forth the law

* * * * * *

'Twas Universe Hall—the court was set,
And men of all castes and ages met
To list a summons for an agent new,
To do—what the world had failed to do
First came the Orators, men of name,
Who boasted to set the world in flame,
They pointed to armies in battle array
And gory fields where thousands lay.—
The Judge look'd forth with frown severe,—
"'Twas peace he wanted, not dagger or spear!"
Next came a rattling, bustling throng,
And death and hell followed along!
A few were label'd of England or France,
But the latter were mostly intent on the dance,
While the former seem'd only to ask for roast beef
Their greed must be met tho' it came thro' a thief.
Intent on the scene, I saw with surprise,
A snow storm came o'er the earth and the skies;
But as the flakes fell, I thought in my dream,
They changed into writing—on every theme.
Yet chiefly I found the Newspaper press
Had conjured the storm, by way of address.

The one-sided HERALD was there as of course,
It boasted of power it was the great source!
I thought that a shade came over the eye
Of the Almighty Judge, as he made this reply:—
"I am looking for one to raise the oppress'd.
"For one of clean hands, and pure in the breast.
"My Fates have decreed that SLAVERY'S day,
"Forever is o'er on doomed Africa."
Sweet music burst forth like the gushing of rills,
And swept as he spoke o'er the amaranth hills.

The TRIBUNE prefer'd its long standing claim,
Alleged that it only could Slavery tame,
While the TIMES and the WORLD, and ten thousand more,
From every city and town by the score,
Claim'd precedence each, till an uproar arose,
And the hall of audience was order'd to close.
But a wheel was prepared where every name
Should be placed to this mission proposing a claim.
Mute silence pervaded the garrulous throng,
As the wheel man proclaim'd, "It is not to the strong,
"Nor the weak—not the wise nor the fool,
"Jehovah decrees in his counsels ro rule,
"Yet whatever name comes first from the wheel
"Shall bear as its motto the mark of my seal."
Keen eyes were now turned the wheel man to
And bosoms were throbbing the finale to catch;
When lo! a new name, scarcely heard of before,
Was announced as the chosen.—The dream was now o'er—
I awoke—and then saw by the light of my taper,
I was reading THE ANGLO AFRICAN paper.—H.

From The Independent.

JOHN WOOLMAN

BY REV. R. M. HATFIELD.

Probably no one of the delightful essays of Charles Lamb has been of as much real value to the world as the single passage in the 'Quaker Meeting;' in which he refers to the writings of John Woolman, and advises his readers to 'get them by heart.' That commendation has called the attention of thousands to a simple and beautiful narrative that it is almost impossible for any one to read without benefit. The spirit of the modest little volume is as balmy as the breath of June, and fragant as the ointment that was poured upon the head of Aaron. John Woolman was born in Burlington county, New Jersey, in 1720. He was the subject of gracious influences at a very tender age, and tells us that before he was seven years old "he began to be acquainted with the operations of divine love." It was not, however, till he was eighteen or twenty years of age that he "felt the power of Christ to prevail over selfish desires" to such an extent as to give him a settled and permanent peace of soul. The earlier years of his life were passed in his father's house, but on coming to his majority he found employment in a country store at Mount Holly. While living here his employer sold a negro woman to an elderly and reputable member of the Society of Friends, and directed Woolman to write the bill of sale. It was a time when few persons were troubled with any scruples concerning the lawfulness of slavery, and the young man hastily and "through weakness," as he says, wrote the instrument. But his agency in the transaction caused him great affliction, and he felt constrained to bear his testimony against slavery, declaring that he regarded it as "inconsistent with the Christian religion."

From a child he had been remarkably sensitive and conscientious, and as he advanced in years and grew in grace, he became almost "fanatical in tender-heartedness." After spending several years in a clerkship, he began to scruple whether "merchandising" was a business to which he could devote himself without spiritual loss. He had, as he tells us, "through the revelation of Jesus Christ, seen the "happiness of humility, and felt an earnest desire to enter deeply into the spirit of it, and so pass his time that nothing should hinder him from the most steady attention to the voice of the true Shepherd." Influenced by these feelings he decided, when about twenty-five years of age, to learn the tailor's trade, believing that Providence pointed to that employment as a means by which he might get a "living in a plain way," without "outward cumber," or the "burden of great business." He had before this time occasionally taken part in religious meetings, and soon after began to travel extensively, teaching and preaching the Gospel of the kingdom. His journeys carried him through a large part of what are now the Eastern, Middle, and Southern states, and at length to England, where he died in the fifty-third year of his age. During these years he had many and painful "exercises" on the subject of slavery. On his first visit to the South it greatly troubled him to be entertained by people who were living in ease on the hard earnings of their slaves, and he sought frequent opportunities to admonish the masters of the evil of their ways. If all Northern ministers of the Gospel had been equally consistent and faithful we should have had few South-side or rose-tinted views of slavery. It is now more than a century since John Woolman wrote: "I saw in these Southern provinces so many vices and corruptions, increased by this trade and this way of life, that it appeared to me as a dark gloominess hanging over the land; and though now many run into it, yet in the future the consequences will be grievous to posterity." Soon after his return from this visit he wrote a tract entitled, "Some Considerations on the Keeping of Negroes, recommended to the Professors of Christianity of every denomination." This essay is imbued with the charity of the Gospel, but hard and unanswerable arguments are couched under its soft and gentle words. So tender was his spirit that it seemed almost impossible for him to use other than mild and kindly language either in speaking or in writing. I only remember a single instance in which he was betrayed into something like tartness, and that was in replying to the sophistries of a couple of Virginia Quakers, who were defending the slave-trade. They contended that the negroes were the descendants of Cain, marked as objects of God's displeasure, and doomed to a state of bondage. He was "troubled at the darkness of their imaginations, and in some pressure of spirit said: the love of ease and gain are the motives in general for keeping slaves, and men are apt to take hold of weak arguments to support a cause which is unreasonable." During one of his journeys to New England he visited Newport, R. I.—at that time a hotbed of slavery, and the great slave mart of the country. On reaching the place he learned that a large number of slaves had been recently imported from Africa, and were then held for sale by a member of the Society of Friends. This information caused him so much distress "he lost his appetite and grew outwardly weak." After crying to the Lord in secret that he might be enabled to discharge his duty faithfully, he brought the matter before the yearly meeting, and subsequently held a conference with the ministers, elders, and overseers who held slaves. This last service was far from being a pleasant one, but we have no doubt that on similar occasions in other places he "found an engagement to speak freely and plainly" to these masters in Israel. Nor was his concern for the slave occasional or spasmodic. He habitually remembered them in their bonds, and had great heaviness and sorrow on their account, till with David he could say, "My tears have been my meat day and night." His brethren in England, in their tribute to his memory, say that while among them "he was deeply concerned on account of the inhuman and iniquitous practice of making slaves of the people of Africa, or holding them in that state, and that his testimony in the last meeting he ever attended was on this subject." To him more than any other man are we indebted for the influences that made stanch and consistent Abolitionists of the denomination of Friends. Nor does his claim to our grateful remembrance rest solely upon his opposition to slavery. The world is rarely blessed with such an example of whatsoever things are pure and lovely and of good report as was presented in the life of and character of John Woolman.

So tenderly humane was he that he laid to heart the sufferings of the inferior creatures, as well as the afflictions of his fellow-men. When a boy, he once killed a robin, and the thoughtless act filled him with distress and horror. In his mature years he visited England, and while there traveled on foot, refusing to enter the post-coaches, or even to send or receive letters by them. His reason for such a course was that these coaches frequently go upwards of one hundred miles in twenty-four hours, and that this causes injury to the horses and great suffering to the post-boys. He had no sympathy with the hurry in the spirit of the world, that in aiming to do business quickly and gain wealth "doth cause the creation loudly to groan." Such was his simplicity of character that he had scruples against wearing hats or clothes that were dyed or colored. After mature deliberation he discarded colored clothing altogether, being persuaded that "dying to hide dirt," is a custom "not having its foundation in pure wisdom." There was no particle of affectation in all this. He bore his singularity as a cross, trusting that the Lord would support him under it "so long as singularity was only for his sake." He was so convinced of the evil of luxurious indulgences that when he took passage in a vessel for England he went in the steerage, "because there was much superfluity of workmanship in the cabin." This scrupulosity seems to us excessive and quite needless, but it was in keeping with the pure and simple character of the man. He erred, if at all, on the safe side, and succeeded as few men have ever done in minding the things of the Spirit, keeping himself unspotted from the world. I had intended to refer to other traits in his character, and to cull a few choice passages from his writings, but this article grows too long, and I forbear. A single reference must be made to the catholicity of his spirit. He was, according to the straitest of the sect, a Quaker, holding the peculiar doctrines of the denomination with great tenacity. He lived at a time when religious controversies were rife, and when there was little regard for charity or courtesy on the part of disputants. But the meek and gentle spirit of the Gospel filled his heart, and there was no coarseness or severity in his speech or writings. He had put off all malice, and guile, and envying, and evil speaking, and formed "no narrowness respecting sects and opinions," believing that all "sincere and upright-hearted people in every society, who truly love God are accepted of him." And after having served his generation by the will of God, he died as it was fitting that such a man should die. While attending a quarterly meeting in York, England, he was prostrated with disease, of which he died after a sickness of eight or ten days. He was perfectly resigned to the will of the Lord, and said, "This trial is made easier to me than I could have thought. My will is wholly taken away, and my mind enjoys a perfect calm." His brethren who were with him say that "he was supported in much meekness, patience, and Christian fortitude, and that his mind appeared to be centered in divine love, under the precious influence whereof we believe he finished his course and entered into the mansions of everlasting rest." John Wesley once wrote, "I am sick of opinions. Give me solid and substantial religion; give me a humble, gentle lover of God and man, a man full of mercy and faith, without partiality and without hypocrisy; a man laying himself out in the work of faith, the patience of hope, the labor of love. Let my soul be with these Christians, wheresoever they are, and whatsoever opinion they are of." We hope for the time when all Christians will respond to this sentiment with a hearty Amen. If good men retain their distinctive peculiarities in another state of existence, John Woolman and the disciple whom Jesus loved must, we think, be special friends in heaven.

The Weekly Anglo-African.

NEW YORK, JANUARY 25, 1862.

☞ Advertisements for this paper must be accompanied by the cash.

☞ Copies of this paper can be purchased of the news-dealers everywhere.

WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

Events are marching on. There can be no harm in looking at their significance and tendency. We notice a continued expression of hope, almost of certainty, that slavery must perish entire, during, or immediately after, or more or less remotely, in consequence of, this war. We fear that this hope is a case where the wish is father to the thought: it is widely shared by those whose life-long devotion to Anti-Slavery gives weight to their opinions. Of these are Garrison and Phillips and Gay, to say nothing of Greeley and his likes. It must be remembered that only a few years ago Wendell Phillips, speaking for his coadjutors, stated that after quarter of a century of hard and persistent effort on their part, they found the Bastile of slavery stronger than ever. May they not as greatly overrate probabilities to-day, as they under-rated them two years ago.

Besides, these hopeful friends give no sound reason for the faith that is in them. They point neither to the teachings of history nor the reasonings of philosophy in support of their views. They speak of slavery receiving its death-blow, of its perishing with the rebellion: They little know how small a mite of the old leaven would have power to re-leaven the whole lump: and if the leaven were never so small, its vitality and germ-force should warn us of how rapidly and powerfully it would grow, a renewed cancer in the body politic. How much deeper should be our anxiety, how much more careful our expressions of triumph over slavery, when we find it armed in all its old panoply of power in Kentucky, and actually holding command at the White House? For if the republican papers held back the true reason of Mr. Cameron's dismissal, the democratic papers openly rejoice in it as a deserved blow to Anti-Slavery, and a renewed proof of the constitutional (that is Pro-Slavery) conservatism of President Lincoln.

There are said to be in the Cabinet, there are known to be in both houses of Congress, in the army, and among editors, many who are favorable to emancipation as a war measure. We are cheered by the speeches made or said to have been made by many of these. But what does all this amount to? Are these friends of emancipation in a large majority? Even if they were, does not our experience in former cases teach us that they will be cajoled, or brow beat by a pestilent but united minority? Did there ever come before a legislature, or board of white men, a case of justice to a black man, where one opponent failed to rule!

What does emancipation as a war measure mean? It means, less, justice to the black slave than injury to the white slaveholder. It means, if the war can be ended by no other means, then resort must be had to this. And it therefore means, also, that if the war can be terminated without emancipation, then there is no present need of emancipation. This emancipation as a war measure is a heartless, soulless doctrine: there is nothing manly, just, nor fraternal about it. And such emancipation is not worth the having. Let us look at the bills of Trumbull and Blair, which are the very best measures we can hope for. They couple expatriation and apprenticeship with emancipation. They assume that the sacred soil of rebeldom is too holy for the impress of a freed black man's foot. They would rather, in the excess of their negro hate, that the land should run to waste, than be cultivated by freed blacks. And this heartless, soulless scheme receives the support and countenance of the Anti-Slavery men with few exceptions, such as the 'Evening Post,' and true-hearted Gerrit Smith.

Such being the hope of emancipation from the North—what of the South? When Gerrit Smith first announced the probability of emancipation from that quarter we could only give an incredulous smile. But recent circumstances lend probability to his sagacious prophecy. It seems a settled fact that the Southern army contains black soldiers in arms, in companies, soon probably regiments. The step to a black brigade and division is but a short one. And the step from arming free blacks to the arming of slaves is still shorter, because, by theory, in the slave States, all blacks are slaves. And from arming the slaves to emancipating them the step is sure and certain. Indeed this will become a necessity, which will grow the more urgent the more the South is pressed by the federal arms. The emancipation from this source would be of a different kind from that flaunted in Congress by Blair and Trumbull. It would be granted on the part of the masters in recognition of services rendered, and would be held on the part of the freedmen by the strength of their red right arms. There would be no hypocritical expatriation about it. If to-morrow's sun should welcome a proclamation of emancipation from Jeff. Davis, and a decree to arm all able bodied male slaves in defence of their birth-land, would the slaves accept? Yes. And could the South then be subjugated? No. There's no use talking: there are not white men enough born in the free States to overcome such a combination in the slave States.

To sum up. The Northern men are not yet prepared for emancipation as an act of justice and brotherhood towards their black fellow citizens at the South. The Southern mind is prepared to adopt any measure which will secure their political independence from the North. Emancipation and arming the slaves is the only mode by which they can succeed.

Great Meeting at Shiloh Church.

A large and interesting meeting of the citizens of New York was held in the above named church on Friday evening, of the 17th instant, to hear statements from the Rev. L. C. Lockwood, the missionary from Fortress Monroe, in reference to the freedmen at that post and its vicinity.

Mr. Lockwood was accompanied by Mr. William Davis, who was until the landing of our troops at Newport News, a slave in Virginia. Mr. Lockwood occupied but a very short time in his remarks, but there was one point to which he reverted, and to which we wish to call attention more fully hereafter. This was the fact that the government at Washington is gradually becoming slaveholding. This he deprecated more than individual slaveholding, because government slavery is far more dangerous than any other kind. After a few general remarks upon the condition of the "contrabands," he very gracefully introduced Mr. Davis, who was received with loud applause. Mr. Davis having been a very prominent slave, had opportunities for acquiring certain kinds of information which seldom fall to the lot of a slave; and it was this fact that made this address on last Friday evening, of such very deep interest.

Mr. Davis is a very shrewd, and, for one so circumstanced, intelligent man. His address, which occupied about half an hour in the delivery, was of the deepest interest, it being an epitome of his experience since the breaking out of the war. As he is expected to speak in many of our churches we refrain from giving any of his remarks.

Addresses were made by Messrs. Garnet, Downing and Dr. Delany, which were very loudly applauded. Dr. Delany said that as far as this war is concerned, colored people should have a policy, and that ought to be to do nothing to embarrass the government; but if Great Britain or any other power undertook to raise the blockade to assist the South, at the expense of the liberty of the blacks, then let our war cry be "insurrection," and let the government not interfere. This declaration was received with tremendous applause.

HON. OWEN LOVEJOY

On the Destiny of the Colored Race

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18th, 1862.

Mr. Editor:—The Hon. Owen Lovejoy, lectured before our people on Monday evening, (January 13th,) at Israel Church. The subject was, "The Destiny of the Colored Race." At an early hour the spacious Church was filled to excess with an audience of from 1500 to 2000 persons, composed of the beauty, fashion, and intelligence of our city. The speaker commenced his discourse by briefly reviewing the injustice of slavery, and proved conclusively that slavery was against all principles of right, justice, and humanity, and totaly against that sacred of all sacred laws, "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you," and that its advocates could find nothing in the Scriptures to support them in their "peculiar" ideas. For do you think that man, created by a just God, formed from his image, and endowed with all the sensibilities and faculties which distinguish man from the lower order of animals, was intended to be subsirvient to the mad will and caprice of another, or sold upon a block to the highest bidder like so many hogs? No! never. God never intended such a state of things, for the laws of God are based upon the eternal principles of right, and it was impossible for him to deviate from this principle.

Passing from this, the lecturer briefly spoke of the rebellion, expressing a hope that the secessionists would meet the same fate that the great arch leader Lucifer, who rebelled in heaven against his Maker, and who for his pains was thrown over the battlements of heaven into the bottomless pit. The audacity of the rebels in stealing our money, claiming our property, seizing our forts, establishing their bogus confederacy, and waving their dirty "secesh" rag in our face, showed an impudence which was not equaled by the more refined portions of the demons who inhabit the lower regions. This quaint remark brought forth great applause.

The lecturer then came to the basis of his remarks, 'The Destiny of the Colored Race." The subject he said gave rise to three questions of a rather perplexing nature. 1st, Are the colored people to remain as they are, free north of Mason and Dixon's line, and slaves south of it? 2nd, Are they to be emancipated and banished? Or thirdly and lastly to be declared free and remain where they are, and perform the same labor, and instead of receiving no pay to work for wages and receive it according to their work? After ably reviewing the above questions, he said the conviction forced itself upon his mind that the latter case would be out destiny. Our destiny was not to remain in the condition we now are in—slaves, for the reason that slavery was a something which would either distroy the government, or the government would have to destroy it. All nations of the earth who have had any dealings with it had found it a something that "did'nt pay." England had tried it and given it up for a "bad job." France, who formerly believed in its doctrines, had dissolved partnerships with it. Spain was free of it, with the exception of Cuba; and Russia by a recent act had declared all her serfs free.

Passing from this, the speaker came to the 2nd question under consideration. "Are we to be emancipated and banished to some other country?" The speaker said that there was a great many persons who desired to see the slaves liberated, but at the same time did not wish them to remain in this country after their emancipation; and this feeling was so universal, particularly in Congress, that it was almost a matter of impossibility for a member to present resolutions praying for the liberation of the slaves, without he had in the bill a specified place to send them after their emancipation. This sort of freedom he said would of course be better than no freedom at all. Yet this was not the standard desired, and it was also an impossibility to declare us free, and at the same time compel us to seek a home elsewhere. For a man is free only when he can go where he pleases and live in what part of God's earth which suits him best. This is freedom. But to emancipate us and then force us to flee the country would be a conditional freedom. The Brittons inhabited England because they thought by so doing their condition would be bettered. The Irish thought that they could do better in America than they could in Ireland, and it was for this cause that they flocked to the New World. They had a right so to act, and so have we. If we thought our condition would be bettered by emigrating to Liberia, Hayti or Canada, it was our privilege to go, but if we thought we could do as well where we are, we had the imperative right to remain. The speaker also briefly reviewed the African Colonization Society, and proved that it was a total failure, more persons of color being born in one year than they could colonize in four. After giving many more logical reasons to show that our destiny was not to be banished, he came to the third and last consideration: "Be emancipated and remain where we are." This he said would be our destiny, for it was a matter of impossibility for the whites to do without us; and to illustrate this point the speaker related an incident which occurred during his short campaign with Gen. John C. Fremont—God bless him. "I was in Missouri, and being caught out one night, went to a public house, saw the proprietor, and engaged lodgings, and breakfast in the morning. I also instructed him to awake me at a certain hour in the morning. After supper I retired to my chamber. Early in the morning, at a time when I was just turning over for another nap, a knock came to the door, and in walked the keeper. I asked him if breakfast was ready, and if it was not rather early? To which he replied "yes, sir, it is rather early; but I came to tell you that I can't supply you with breakfast this morning." In astonishment I looked at the man; he keeping a public house and couldn't supply a breakfast. I asked him why I could not get my breakfast? His reply was, with his countenance expressing the deep anguish of his soul—"My niggers have all run off!" And this, resumed the speaker, is but a type of the whole; just as much as the "nigger" was missed in this case, just so much would he be missed in other pursuits from the corn fields of Virginia, tobacco fields of Tennessee, and the sugar plantations of Louisiana. The question he said had often been asked what will the negro do without a master? what would become of him? &c. This question, said he, should be reversed, and stand thus: "What will the master do without the aid of the colored man?" The conviction forced itself upon his mind that we could do a great deal better without the masters than they could do without us; for we know how to till the ground and raise produce, &c.; while they, to a great extent, are perfectly ignorant of it, practically.

The lecturer then proceeded to speak of that class of individuals who call themselves 'Conservatives.' Such men as rally under this banner he thought a little worse than secessionists, for they have such a lack of national patriotism in their puny hearts, that they would rather see a 'compromise' under any circumstance, no matter how degrading, than to see the war for the Union and Constitution vigorously prosecuted. And it was for this—not wishing to see the Union arms triumph—that they objected to men of color entering the army and doing the duty of soldiers, fighting for their country's honor. But if the house of one of these very men was on fire and in danger of being consumed, think you they would object to a colored man helping to extinguish it? Ah, no! This is all right and just they would say. Will not the same rule apply to our country? She is in danger of being consumed by a rebellious foe; her national honor and interest are all at stake; yet the colored man could not help to defend his country in the hour of trial—could not help to punish the hydra headed monster who dares raise its polluted hands to strike at the vitals of our government. The speaker in conclusion, said that it was his belief that the government would soon turn the war into a war for emancipation, and if such be the case we would then be called on for succor. He told us to wait patiently our time, and when we were called on and properly mustered into the service, to fight and

> "Strike till the last armed foe expires—
> Strike for our altars and our fires—
> Strike for the green graves of our sires,
> God and our native land."

And strike that blow which would make the rebels know that we could fight as well as work. He said if we were ever called upon to fight he believes there would be found many a Touissant L'Overture amongst us. He had but little doubt that the District of Columbia would be declared free before the close of the present session, and would therefore advise the residents of the District to be sober and industrious, to spend no more money than they possibly could help, and to conduct themselves in such a way that the enemies in Congress could find nothing to say against them.

The speaker retired amidst the wildest enthusiasm; shout after shout of applause came forth from the delighted audience until the church seemed to shake. After the manifestations of approbation had been concluded, which required considerable time, it was moved and seconded that a vote of thanks be returned to the lecturer for his entertaining and profitable lecture. The question was put to the house by the Rev. Mr. Smith, Pastor, and it is needless to add unanimously carried.

After the choir had sung a select anthem, Mr. Lovejoy introduced the Rev. C. W. Denison, Chaplain of the United States Navy. Mr. Denison, whom our people have heard of before, was received with rounds of applause; but as I have intruded on your valuable space to too great an extent already, I will not be able to give you an account of the many good things said.

W. T. M.

DR. DELANY ON AFRICA.

In reply to a letter just received from a distinguished friend, inquiring whether or not the statement made in a letter by a person who visited Chatham during my absence, that I had given up the African movement or in the words of that unprincipled person who must scurrilize his own people and underrate my scheme to please his master.—"the African scheme had blown up?" I simply answer,—not at all, nor never will. I regard it in every possible relation in which it can be considered, touching the destiny of our race as a whole, a thousand to one preferable to any scheme of Emigration from America, and the only one conservative for the African Race.

I, and all those who originally intended to go to Africa, are making vigorous preparations for the consummation of our designs; and I call the attention of all desiring information to read my Report, recently published, of my Travels and Explorations in Liberia and Central Africa.

M. R. Delany.

New York, Jan. 22d, 1862.

Haytian Emigration in New Haven.

A public meeting was held in the A. M. E. Zion Church, New Haven, Con., on Monday evening, January 13th, for the purpose of hearing from Mr. Thomas Griffin—a young man just returned from Hayti, and on his way to his home in Springfield, Mass.—a detailed statement of the true condition of affairs in Hayti, which the youth did in an intelligent manner to the satisfaction of the great audience which entirely filled the house. Truly it was an affecting meeting, as many present having relatives suffering in Hayti could but sob and mourn at hearing of their truly miserable condition from one so recently from them. At the close of the lecture, the letter of Rev. J. T. Holly, published in the 'Pine and Palm,' of Dec. 21, 1861, was read to the audience, that they might give their expressions. After remarks from Revs. J. G. Smith, S. V. Berry, and others, the following resolutions were adopted without a dissenting voice:

Whereas, we, the colored people of New Haven, having a knowledge of the recent emigration scheme proposed by Redpath, Holly & Co. in the year 1859 and '60, by which means, influenced by certain inducements held out by the agents aforesaid, a number of our friends and relatives, notwithstanding being timely warned, suffered themselves to be broken up and transported to the Island of Hayti, one of the Antilles;

And whereas, we learn with deep regret of the sufferings and death of many of our people in that Island, and the utter indifference with which, in most cases, they have been treated by the Rev. J. T. Holly;

And whereas, Rev. J. T. Holly having seen proper, upon the authority of an individual of debased reputation, to write and cause to be printed in the 'Pine and Palm' a letter, the most foul and slanderous upon the colored people of this State ever known to appear in public print, and one big with falsehood, against Rev. S. V. Berry, who knew nothing at all of the matter;

Therefore, Resolved, That it be the sense of this meeting that all persons connected with this infamous scheme, be they Commissioners, Agents, Sub-Agents, or whatever named, shall hereafter be treated as, and rightly considered to be, the real enemies of the colored people in this country, having for their object only speculation, and not the interest of the colored people at heart.

Silas Stockbridge, Chairman.
Rev. Jas. G. Smith, Sec'y.

LETTER FROM NEWARK.

Newark, Jan. 20, 1862.

Dear Anglo: Interesting news seems quite scarce at present, with the exception of the beautiful lecture delivered by our friend Rev. Alexander Crummell, on last Friday evening, at St. Philip's Church. The theme was, "The Progress of Civilization along the West coast of Africa," and the eloquent lecturer held his audience attentively, while he commenced with a description of the state of society during the prevalence of the slave trade along the whole coast; then depicting the effects of the introduction of commercial transactions; and finally showing the vast improvements produced by missionaries labor, in conjunction with commercial traders from all parts of the civilized world, and concluded by impressively portraying the many advantages that active, enterprising colored men necessarily enjoy in our father land over the stinted number grudgingly meted out to us here.

Yesterday (Sunday) afternoon, I am informed, that the Rev. E. J. Adams, assisted by the Rev. James N. Gloucester, hold very interesting exercises in the Plane street Presbyterian Church, bearing on the history and life of the lamented Rev. E. P. Rogers. Probably one of the persons present will send you a full report of the same.

Skimmer.

Ira Aldridge, the great colored tragedian is meeting with triumphant success in Russia. When playing Othello at Odessa at the close of the third act the whole house rose en masse, and the ladies wept and waved their handkerchiefs. It was a scene never to be forgotten. He had one of the best Desdemonas, Mlle. Fabiauski, who shared the applause with him; also an excellent Iago.

A Prize Fight between Bos Tyler, a white man, and Bob Travers, colored, for £200, was to have come off recently at London. The ring was soon got in readiness, the belligerents having entered the lists a few minutes before 8 o'clock. The difficulty now was to select a referee, and in this forty miuutes was consumed without any definite arrangement being made when the police belonging to the station interfered, and the parties returned to town. On Thursday the men again met, and after fighting seventeen rounds in one hour and three minutes, Travers proved the victor.

NEWS FROM JAMAICA.

By our files of Jamaica papers, received by the Cleator, it appears that the desirableness of adopting special measures to attract to Jamaica a portion of the negro emigration now flowing from Canada and the United States to Hayti, was receiving general attention. The Watchman says that the influx of escaped slaves and free negroes from this continent would contribute to the elevation of the people, of Jamaica, as they would prove more energetic, and, on their arrival in the island, institnte the free schools and self-sustaining mode of religious worship to which they have been accustomed in the United States and in Canada. It suggests the appointment of competent and responsible agents of their own race to explain the inducements which are held out to them in Jamaica, and guarantee that each family and single man should have 25 acres of available land at easy terms, say a dollar and a quarter per acre, and long payments.

A bill for the promotion of Immigration by Joint Stock Companies, was introduced into the Jamaica House of Assembly. It was generally objected to, however, on the ground that the land could be purchased on equally good terms of individual proprietors, and that the proposed measure opened a wide door to fraud.

A meeting at Kingston, Nov. 29th, to adopt measures to build a railroad from Kingston to Stony Hill, a distance of ten miles, was numerously attended. The amount of proposed capital is $150,000, and it is expected to pay a dividend of 33 per cent! $30,000 was subscribed at the meeting.—N. Y. Sun.

EX-SLAVES RECEIVING HONORS

